He's a Fakir; Sic Him Tige!

We received the following from the editor of the Michigan Business Farmer relative to a pest who is traveling the country-side up and down, preying on the farmer. Informant don't say how this son-of-a-gun travels; whether by auto, on foot or by plane, but if a fellow with a sporty rake to his jib boom and hat over one eye walks into your yard bent on selling you some decoction to kill lice on your chickens, give him the boot right where it will do the most good. Here is the letter:

"Brother Editor:

I am sure that you are sincerely interested in the welfare of the farmers in your community, just as we are, and for that reason I am coming to you for help—help for yourself, for the farmers and for us.

There is a man going about the State who is deliberately defrauding the farmers and with your assistance I believe we can quickly put him out of business. This man uses the name of "Everett", claims to be representing the "Never Idle Poultry Farm," and selling "Never Idle Poultry Tone." The location of the farm changes often as does the name of the so-called tonic or "tone," according to letters we have received from subscribers in different sections of the State. As far as I know he continues to use the same name, but it would not surprise me if he was forced to change it anytime.

This "tone" he sells to the farmer is supposed to kill lice on poultry if put in the chickens' drinking water, and he charges $10 per gallon for it. I have discussed this with the experts at the M. S. C. and they declare his statements are absurd, while experiments carried on by the U. S. Department of Agriculture prove that internal remedies do not kill external parasites. He also poses as an expert judge of poultry and takes in culls for his "medicine."

We have repeatedly warned our readers against him, but I am well aware of the fact that we do not reach all of the farmers in your county, so I am coming to you to ask that you write up this matter for your next issue and publish it in a conspicuous place in your columns so all of your farmer readers will see it. If you care to mention our part in this work we will be very grateful, but it is not necessary, because our main interest in this matter is to Stop This Man From Defrauding The Farmer. We will appreciate it very much and I know your farmer readers will also

If you decide to help. may I have a marked copy of the issue in which your write-up appears? Thanks.

Any time we can serve you please do not hesitate to call upon us.

Milon Grinnell
Editor."

Further we might say we have consulted Doc. Caswell and he says he never heard of such a thing as doping lice and mites by means of drinking water, and "Doc." thinks the peddler is a little dopey in his canoodle to be claiming any such thing. At any rate if such a one should show up on your premises give bim the once over and call Colonel Kerr.

The Mail Order Joke

Down in a certain town a man went into a lumber yard to buy some nails and asked the price. It was $3.20 the dealer said.

"Good gracious" said the man, "I can buy the same thing from a mail order house for $2.82."

"That's a low price" said the dealer "but I'll sell it on the same terms as the mail order house just the same"

"All right" said the customer, "You can send it along and charge it to my account."

"Not on your life" said the dealer. "No charge accounts. You can't do business with the mail order house that way. Fork over the cash."

The customer handed over the cash. "Now 2 cents for postage and 5 cents for a money order."

The customer, inwardly raving, kept his agreement and paid the 7 cents. "Now thirty-five cents expressage."

"Well, I'll be——," the customer said, but paid it adding "Now hand me it, and I'll take it home for myself and be rid of this foolery."

"Hand it to you? Where do you think you are? You'll have to wait a week."

Whereupon he placed the nails behind his counter. "That makes $3.26." he said. "It has cost you six cents more and taken you a week longer to get it than if you paid the price in the first place.— The Knot Hole.

Clean Up and Paint Up

Death of Nathaniel Smith

Nathaniel Smith commonly known as "Nat" passed away at the home of his son, Ed, in Jefferson township, Wednesday, March 9th, at 5:40. He was 75 years of age and had resided in various parts of Hillsdale county most of his life, having once resided in North Adams. He was born in New York August 24, 1851, When a young lad he came with his parents to Michigan and they settled in this county, he having resided here 43 years. In 1873 he was united in marriage to Miss Olive Miller who passed away 14 years ago. Five children were born to this union, all surviving except one Those surviving are Ed of Jefferson, Bert of Lansing, Mrs. Helen Muncil of Reading and Mrs. Eunice Lett of Waldron.

Nathaniel was a brother of Mrs. Sarah Pierce of Hillsdale, and Mrs. Anna Pearson of this village.

The Gambler

Now is a pretty good time to begin war on the man who persists in taking chances. With the coming of spring the highways will show an increasing amount of traffic, and while the majority of drivers will proceed with caution and safety, there will be those who are always responsible for the long list of accidents that fill up the pages of the newspapers during the automobile season proper.

Half a minute is not a long time but it means the difference between life and death for thousands of men women and children who have failed to obserye the railroad caution signal to "stop, look and listen." Death has been dared to gamble with fate to save half a minute of time, the difference between stopping and starting. It is a criminal indictment against the intelligence and sanity of thousands of overconfident or careless car drivers. There is no excuse that rational people will accept, and while a great wave of public sympathy goes out to the victim, there is a feeling in the background that someone took an unnecessary gamble—lost, and paid the price. You, Mr. and Miss Car Driver, may be the next to get what's coming to you, but you have no right to risk the lives of your companions.

Corn Borer Drive Starts In State

With word from Washington that the ten million dollar corn borer fund was at last available, state and federal agencies in Michigan have started the great fight to be made this spring against the imported pest.

Three different organizations: the federal department of agriculture, the Michigan State department, and the M. S. C., will all have a definite part in the campaign work. Actual control and clean-up work will be under the supervision of the state department working in close harmony with the federal staff. Educational and demonstrational work will be handled by the extention forces of the College, again in cooperation with the different U. S. department bureaus.

H. C. Rather, crops specialist on the M. S. C. staff, has been named assistant extension director for Michigan in charge of the educational side of the corn borer campaign work. He will be assisted by several specialists and by county agricultural agents in the 23 counties of the corn borer area. Demonstrations on how best to follow out clean-up practices will be held throughout the area in order to acquaint farmers with the necessary steps in the work. Rather remarks "Farmers who do a complete and satisfactory job of cleaning up their fields and yards, burning, destroying or plowing under all corn refuse and stalks in which the corn borer might be hiding, will be reimbursed by the U. S. Government,"

"The major part of ten million dollars recently appropriated will go to the farmers in the infested area of five states: Michigan, Ohio Indiana, Pennsylvania and New York. The farmers of these states who already have the dangerous pest to deal with, are not asked to wage the battle alone. The whole country, recognizing the corn borer menace as a national emergency is backing the fight with national resources.', The Michigan counties included in the corn borer area are Bay, Branch, Calhoun, Genessee, Hillsdale, Huron, Ingham, Jackson, Lapeer, Lenawee, Livingston Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, Sanilac, Saginaw, Shiawassee, StClair Tuscola, Washtenaw and Wayne counties, and selected townships in Kalamazoo and St. Joseph counties.

Corn Borer Thrives In Disked Stubble

The sowing of oats or barley on disked corn stubble provides favorable living conditions for the European corn borer and is a menace to corn borer control work, according to M. S. C. specialists. Favorable weather conditions tempt farmers to make early plantings of small grains in corn stubble which has been disked.

The disking of corn stubble land has been found to kill only a small percentage of the borers, and the growing grain furnishes ideal protection and shade as the season advances.

Farmers are warned by A. C. Carton, director of bureau of agricultural industry, State Department of Agriculture, that this practice is in direct conflict with the State Corn Borer Act, and that it will be necessary to clean up fields in the infested area which have been seeded to small grains, in cases where control measures were not taken before, the seeding of the grain.

Mr. Carton states that in order to comply with the State law and to qualify for compensation provided by the Corn Borer Act recently passed by Congress for extra labor performed in clean up work, the following requirements must be met. Farmers within the infested area must either burn or completely plow under all corn stalks, stubble, cobs and trash left in the field; and burn, prior to May 1, all corn stalks, cobs and trash which have not been shredded or made into silage, and which are in buildings, feedlots, barnyards, or elsewhere. The compensation for such extra labor will be not to exceed $2 per acre for field corn, and $1 per acre for sweet corn.

After serving the Grand Trunk railroad for 46 years, more than 30 years of that time as an engineer, Robert Kerr, of Durand, has been placed on the retired list. In recognition of his long service, he was entertained at a banquet which was attended by high railroad and Brotherhood of Engineers officials.

Kerr started working when he was 16 years old, in a furniture factary, but his father had been a railroad man, and he soon yielded to the lure of the road. He got a job as water boy with a work train crew and later was made an engine wiper at Grand Haven. Some years later, he became a fireman and was given the night freight run between Detroit and Grand Haven. He was made an engineer in 1887, and has been at the throttle steadily since.

When Kerr started railroading, wood was burned in the engines. At that time there were no water tanks between Detroit and Grand Haven, he says.

EDDIE COLLINS IS HERO TO BOY 14

Ellsworth Outwin, 14 years old, is one baseball fan and player who has every confidence in the honesty of Eddie Collins.

When the Chicago White Sox played an exhibition game in Muskegon last summer Outwin, who is quite a ball player, was ont in the tield with the Sox. Collins noticed his playing and called him aside.

"Do you play ball much?" asked Collins.

"Not very much,' said the boy. "This is a foot ball town."

"You have fine form," remarked Collins. 'I would continue the game."

Outwin was invited to the Sox bench during the game and here he mingled with the players. He became so excited that he forgot his glove until he reached home.

Then he went to the hotel in search of it. Collins spent 30 minutes going through the players' luggage looking for the glove, but did not find it. Then Collins autographed a new ball and gave it to Ellsworth.

"I will make another search for the glove when we reach Detroit, and if I find it I will mail it to you," said Collins.

A few days later young Outwin received the glove by parcel post from Collins. He had found it with the team's luggage on reaching Detroit.

ANGLEWORM SALE BLOCKED AS BLOW TO BEAUTY PARLOR

"Beauty Parlor.
Marceling
Angleworms for Sale"

This sign over a shop in Benzie seemed so natural to the folks who watched the several businesses arise that they failed to see any incongruity in it until a visiting salesman said he was going to send it to "Life."

Clyde Smith started a newspaper and a real estate office and rented space in his building to a young woman for her beauty parlor. She put up the first two lines of the sign.

Then the "office dog" saw a chance to do a thriving business with resorters, so he added a line to let them know where they could buy bait.

But after the salesman had his attack of unseemly mirth Mr. Smith announced the last line would have to come down lest it drive away trade from the beauty parlor.

PAINT UP TOWN OF BOYHOOD DAYS

He never forgot the Michigan town of his boyhood. He was a little past the prime of life; he han won success, as the world knows success, and his affairs had taken him far away to Georgia and Texas and California. Yet always, deep in his consciousness, there was a longing for the boyhood scenes, a something that drew him home. And he went back.

As night came on, he would fall to dreaming, and memories of the old days would surge over him.

Yet he was not completely satisfied. Somehow the old town was not quite as it had been. In his youth it had throbbed with life and activiti. There had been a half dozen stores, and it had served as a trading center for farmers for miles around.

The years had brought changes. There were but two stores now. Most of the young people had gone away to the cities. The tide of affairs had swept on and left the town living not so much in the present as in the past. That was it. The town was a little down at the heel.

And so the idea came to him, as he sat on the porch of the old home and gazed into the west, where the roofs of the houses, outlined against the sunset sky were touched with crimson Why not help the town to help itself? Why not help it make a future better than its past?

He would buy a little paint and let the people of the town do the rest. He remembered the adage, "Clothes do not make the man." But he remembered also that whenever he had had a new suit of clothes he had stood a little straighter, walked a little faster, smiled a little oftener and whistled a little ouder as he faced the world.

Who could deny that a town with a new coat of paint would straightway assume a new self respect, a new pride of being, a new spirit of neighborliness, a new determination to push ahead on the road of progress toward its ideals?

He bought the paint and the town is doing the rest.

Most of the houses now are spic and span, dressed up like little girls for a party. Fences, chicken coops, barns and other buildings are all now bright and shining. Along the trunk highway, which was relocated through the town, there are several buildings that were moved back and which have not yet been painted. Otherwise new paint glistens everywhere, in red, white, green yellow, brown.

For nearly a century the name McCourtie has been a familiar one to the people of this corner of Hillsdale county. Thomas McCourtie, grandfather of the donor of the paint, took over a 379 acre tract of land in 1835, while Michigan was still a territory. The grandson still has the sheepskin certificate of the grant of land, signed by President Andrew Jackson.

FAMED PIONEER'S NIECE IS RESIDENT OF GRAND RAPIDS

Julia Anne Templeton Qua, twelve-year- old niece of Mrs. Arthur M. Qua of Grand Rapids, had a private thrill all her own when she read in dispatches from Puyallup, Washington, announcing that a statute there had been unveiled to Ezra Meeker, pioneer who crossed the original Oregon trail in 1852.

Ezra Meeker, the only survivor of the men who crossed the continent in '52, and easily the most distinguished pioneer now living in the north west, is Julia Anne's great grandfather.

He is 96 years old now but that doesn't mean he's knocked off work. He was the originator of the once extensive hop industry in the state of Washington, he lived through all the thrills of the days when wheat and five dollar gold pieces were the only money in Oregon, and when the country in Washington began to grow too tame, he joined in the gold rush to the Yukon in 1898, returning only just in time to celebrate his fiftieth wedding anniversary in 1901.

BLAME FOR INJURY TO TOTS PUT ON PARENTS

Responsibility for injuries suffered by children in traffic accidents in Grand Rapids rests with the parents, Safety Director James Sinke told the principals of the Grand Rapids schools.

Neither the stationing of traffic officers at school crossings nor the operation of electric traffic signs will solve the problem of ensuring the safety of the children, he said, following a study of a school safety survey which was conducted upon resuest of the board of education.

OLD APPLE TREE SUBJECT OF SHAFT, STILL BEARS FRUIT

An apple tree so famous that a monument has been built in tribute to it stands in the orchard of W. B. Landis at Peru, Ia., and continues to produce apples at the age of 63.

It is the parent of all apple trees of a famous variety. Last year it produced more than five bushels of sound red, five-pointed apples.

Developed by accident, the tree has been kept thriving by the painstaking efforts of tree surgeons. Doctors and dentists of orchard culture have in the aged veteran their best client.

The decayed wood of its trunk is periodically removed and replaced with a special concrete filling. The trunk has been rebuilt with steel vetebrae, and the roots are watched for symptoms of old age like a dentist searches for cavities.

Limbs and branches are kept cut away so that the limited cadminum layer of the trunk will not exhaust itself in carrying plant foot to the upper tree.

When a pioneer orchardist named Hiatt set out a Bellflower tree in his garden in 1864, the young plant dwindled. But the seeding root remained, and was grafted to another branch. The hybird flourished. After Hiatt died, orcahrdists sponsored a boulder monument in the park at Winterset, nearby county seat, to perpetuate his name and the tree be developed.

MICHIGAN OPENS WITH KENTUCKY

Less than two weeks yet remain before the formal opening of University of Michigan's 1927 varsity baseball season, a contest with the University of Kentucky at Lexington on April 1 inaugurating the coming schedule.

Despite losses suffered through ineligibity at the end of last semester, the Wolverines have high hopes for another championship contending nine with a host of regulars and last year's freshmen on Coach Ray Fisher's squad list.

Thirty-one candidates are at present working out daily within the net enclosure in Yost Field House, and of this number a goodly proportion are members of the 1926 conference championship team. Davis at the backstop position; Miller, pitcher; Oosterbaan, Friedman, Loos, Gilbert, Kubicek and Skidmore, infielders, and Captain Puckelwartz, Fromke and Miller, outfielders, constitute Coach Fisher's aggregation of veterans.

"Red" Davis, stocky substitute catcher on last year's varsity, is the most likely candidate for that position in the absence of "Tess" Edgar, regular of 1926, who was declared inelegible at the close of the first half of the school year. In addition to Davis, Truskowski, varsity tackle on the Maize and Blue gridiron team last fall, and Reichmann, a sophomore, comprise the backstop material.

Only Miller returns for the pitching berth, but there are several prospects among the sophomore group who show promise of developing into real ball players. Among them are Asbeck, Ruetz, Gilmartin, Horowitz, Lowe, Moffett, Neblung, Stern, Sheltner and Gawne, all new comers to the varsity. Gawne was on the squad last season, but failed to some through as expected, although it is generally believed that he will hit his stride when the season opens next month.

Benny Friedman, Loos and Kubicek, first stringers last year, are back and ready to take up the reins at their various infield posts. Friedman will probably hold down third base, with Loos at short and Kubicek at second base. The loss of ex-Captain Wilson at first mase leaves a hole which is difficult to fill, but rumor has it that Bennie Oosterbaan, now completing his work with the varsity basket ball quinettte, will be primed to take over the work at the first sack.

Other infield aspirants include Gilbert, halfback on the varsity foot ball team; Skidmore, a squad member for two years, and Morse, Weintraub, Robbins, Lipman and Heilstadt, the last mentioned all sophomores of more than average promise.

Captain Bill Puckelwartz, stellar fielder and hitter, is back at his old post, left field. In addition, McCoy, center on the varsity court five, is expected to report for an outfield position, as are Fromke, Gilbert, Neblung and Miller, when the last two are not pitching.

As a whole, prospects are more than average for another Big Ten championship team, and with a fair break in casualties and ineligibities, the Wolverines should go a long way towards duplicating their excellent record of 1926.

A woman may win a man's love without trying, but she can't keep it that way.

India's Sacred White Elephant --Now In America

Bowing to you in this photo is Powa, a sacred white elephant of Burma, India now touring this country with a leading circus. He is eight and one-half years old and weighs a modest two and one-half tons.

Special care was given him on his long ocean voyage here to frustrate any attempt to poison him—especially against the possible attempts to do so of fanatically religious Burmese.

WHAT TO EXPECT FROM A RADIO SET.

A long time ago, John and Joe decided that a good way to make money on the radio apparatus they manufactured was to hire an advertising man who was a first cousin to Ananias. This policy created sales, but created misgivings too. People were let to believe that if they purchased a "Super-Sputter," they would be able to pull in anything they wanted to hear at any time they wanted, no matter how for away it was or whether it was being broadcasted or not.

Now if you were buying a tractor and the salesman told you that it would pick out the fields you wanted plowed, go over and plow them, and then when it was all finished would roll down to the creek and get a drink for itself, you wouldn't believe him, and no shame to you for that. But, for some reason or another, when a radio dealer tells you that all you have to do is to turn the dials to 17—17—17 and you will get Los Angeles if it is on the air, you would be apt to buy his set rather than purchase one from a man who was truthful enough to tell you that the set will surely have a 100 mile range and under favorable conditions will pull in stations that are more distant. Remember, radio is a machine just like any other machine, though perhaps it is a little more wonderful than anything else that has come around in this century. But, be satisfied with the possible. The day of miracles has passed You will get on any good modern set, stations within a 100 mile radius regularly and will get distant stations often enough to make it interesting. They will come in particularly well at night.

Your radio is a dependable instrument and can be counted upon to furnish you, with nightly intertainment, provided it receives as much care as you would give any other machine. Keep your batteries charged. Have your tubes tested after about one thousand hours service. See that your antenna and ground are in good condition and it is very unlikely that there will eber be any thouble with your set.

It is seldom that anything goes wrong with a radia set and it is even more seldom that the trouble is in the set and not in the accessories. However, if at last something does give out, don't turn your set over to an amateur "expert," see either the dealer from whom you bought the set or some reliable, recognized radio repair man. You wiuldn't let one of your friends operate on you for appendicitis just because he happened to have read how to do it. Be just as considerate of your radio set and it will give you years of real dependable—day in and day out—entertainment.

I have a diagram which is called the Superdyne. I wonder if you can tell me whether it will be worth making? I have the following parts:

1 Vario Coupler on 4" tube.
1 Fixed condenser .00025 and grid leak 2 meg.
1 Audio transformer 3-1.
4 199 tubes.

Can you tell me whether the 30 ohm rheostat be right, using automatic filaments and what kind of filaments to use with the 199 tubes. Also state which stage should I put the 3-1 and 5-1 transformers, or should i make any changes at all to improve on it. I might mention that one of the tubes is a power tube 199 type which I guess should be in the last stage audio. Also let me know if the tubes will be suitable for this kind of set.

E. SALE.

Mr. E. Sale:

The Superdyne is well worth making. The 30 ohm rheostat is quite all right and your automatic filament contrals should be of the type which will pass .06 ampers at 4 or 4½ ½volts. One automatic filament resistance being used for each of the tubes not controlled by the rheostat, except that the power tube will require an automatic filament resistance that will pass .25 ampers instead of .06.

Use the 5-1 transformer in the first stage and the lower ratio one in the second stage.

I am using a 5 tube Neutrodyne receiver with Uaalad Truphonic amplifier, using U. X. 112 power tube in last stage and C. X. 300-A director tube in the set. I use 9 volts of "C" battery with the amplifier and no "C" battery with the set. Using Majestic "B" supply. About 100 feet of aerial. I have recently purchased the Walbert Peuetrola but when this is added it causes regeneration or whistles. I have tried adjusting the screw of the variable condenser used in Peuctrola and also 2 X. L. neutralizing condensers used in set. I am using R. C. A. 100 drum speaker. If rheostats are turned low, the set does noe escillate or regenerate, bue volume is cut to almost nothing. Is there any way to remedy this?

W. D. COON.

Mr. W. D. Coon:

You have probably succeeded in putting your neutralizing condensers all out of balance. To neutralize the set, tune in a local station as loud as possible, then take one of the tubes and block one of its filament prongs with paper or spaghetti. Put this tube in the first socket of the set and adjust the neutralizing condenser of that stage until the signal is faintest, leaving the auning condensers intact. Then replace the tube with the paper removed. The signal should come in loudly.

This same proceedure should be followed in each of the radio frequency sockets and your trouble should be eliminated.

I am taking the liberty of asking your advice in regard to the enclosed circuit. I would like to add 2 stages of R. F. amplification to this circuit, but am not sure where to connect the same.

R. PREYER.

Mr. R. Preyer:

I am sending you a diagram of how to add two stages of tuned radio frequency to this filter tuner set. I believe, however, that you will have so many controls that the set will be hard to operate and that you will be better off to build a regular tuned radio frequency set.

I should like to have your advice on the following. I have built a 6 tube receiver, two stages of tuned R. F. non-regenerative detector, three stages resistance coupled aduio. I am very well satisfied with the performance of this set, but cannot get the 3 dials to read alike.

Starting at zero on low waves they all keep in step up to 20, then 1 and 3 start to go ahead of 2 and at 50 on 1 and 3, No. 2 dial is 5 degrees behind and at 75 on 1 and 3, No. 2 is 10 degrees behind, etc. 1 and 3 keep pretty well in step, but the center condenser lays behind in the readings which makes it hard to locate stations if you don't know their dial settings. I figured that if I alter the middle coil secondary to make the condenser match the other 2 on the high waves it would be away off on the low waves in the opposite direction. What do you suggest as a remedy? I am using the latest Amco condensers S. L. T., the coils are of the small dia. 1¼ and are all at right angles to one another.

NEIL GALLOWAY.

Mr. Neil Galloway:

Carefully count the number of turns on both the primaries and secondaries on your three coils and make sure that they match. If they do not, match them by adding wire where needed. If they do match, change them around, trying number 2 in place of one of the others. You will most likely find that is behaves as badly when changed as it did in the first place and if so, you will have to send it back to the factory and get one that is all right.

If when the change is made, the middle dial still tunes off, check over your leads. You will probably find that you have considerably longer leads in one or more of the stages than in the others and will be able to balance up by getting the stages more uniform.

1. From the point of selectively and truthful reproduction, which is the better received muitiple stages of radio frequency with improved audio amplification such as the K. H. Twin choke, or the Superheterodyne, such as the Victoreen using the same improved method of audio amplification?

2. Forf reasons of a more general nature, other than the initial cost of these receivers and their upkeep, which of the two is the better for best practical results?

3. Regarding speakers, which is recommended for best results, truthful reproduction, 3' cone types as adv., other smaller cone type or those types employing unites such as the Baldwin Concert Unit, using a horn as a medium for sound?

E. E. BROWN.

Mr. E. E. Brown:

1. As to selectivity, the Super-Heterodyne is to be preferred. For didelity of reproduction, I prefer a tuned radio frequency set.

2. If you are intending to build a set for yourself, I believe that you will have less trouble constructing a tuned radio frequency set. A Super-Heterodyne will give greater selectivity. Either should be sufficiently loud for all practical purposes and either is sufficiently easy to tune, though the tuned radio frequency will probably be slightly simpler.

3. Baldwin concert unit with a 6' horn, made of some nonvibrating composition will give fine results, so will a better grade 3' cone speaker. All I can advise you to do is to listen to each and then suit your own personal taste.

I am taking this liberty in writing you in regard to my Diamond of the Air, 1927 improved. I have on hand a tube such as U. X. 171 which is used in last stage of the audio and would like to know if there is any other changes in the circuit outside of changing amperite.

Should there be a separate "C" battery in the stage with a 171 tube? I have tried it out and it didn't seem to work right. I am using 135 volts on amplifier, 67½ on radio frequency and 45 on detector. All 201-A tubes good. I get a great deal of distortation. I am using 22½ "C" battery with 171 tube and 135 on the amplifiers, using a Western Electric Cone speaker.

Would you advise me to put the new low frequency transformers in the first stage of audio? I have a Thordason transformer 3-1 in there now, but don't seem to pass the low frequencies.

J. J. BURNS.

Mr. J. J. Burns:

For use with your 171 tube, you should have 27 volts of "C" battery with 135 volts of "B" battery.

An out-put impedance, should be used to prevent burning out the windings of your speaker.

If your Thorteson 3-1 transformers do not pass the low frequencies, you might try out one of the larger transformers as are now ebing made by the same company.

STATE ACTS TO SAVE DEE RFROM STARVING IN NORTHERN SECTION

Relief Measures are now being taken by the state conservation commission for the feeding of starving deer in the several yards around Hulbert and other places in Chippewa county.

Word somes from the Hulbert Rod and Gun club that conditions in that vicinity have been deplorable and that numerous dead does and fawns have been picked up in deer years neighboring the one in which they are aiding in the feeding.

This winter has been usually hard with deer due to the early and heavy snow falls. Four weeks before the hunting season closed deer began to come to the feeding yards.

Lumbermen report that as many as 10 deer will stand around and wait for the felling of trees in order to get the browse and that the animals will eat the cedar tops while men are working on the butts.

Wolves also have played a major part in the killing of does and fawns this winter and many out door men of Hulbert and other towns in the country have formed volunteer parties to keep them away from the deer yards.

CONNECTICUT ASPIRES TO TURKEY SUPREMACY

"Roast young Vermont turkey" may soon come from Connecticut instead of Texas.

Birds from the Lone Star state at 10 cents a pound less, have filled gaps in the declining ranks of birds from the Green Mountain state recently, but Connecticut is taking steps to produce volunteers for the holiday axe in quantities.

When a man falls into an error he is likely to be more or less injured in his descent.

GRATIOT ROAD TO FOLLOW RIVER

When the new trunk line highway is built from Midland to St. Louis in Gratiot county, it will make one of the prettiest drives in the whole state and will opn up territory rich in historical lore.

At the time Bethany mission was established just north of St. Louis by missionaries from Frankenmuth, there were no roads in that part of Michigan, although the Indians had a trail running north along the banks of Pine river, past Bethany mission, and northeast towards Midland. Much of the road was impassable at all times, except late in the summer.

A cemetery was established in connection with the mission, where the Indian children who had been converted to Christianity were buried. At first this was located some distance off the trail, but when in after years the mission was abandoned and the Indian trail became a highway, cleared, straightened and improved the old burying ground was all but forgotten.

A small portion of it, enclosed by a picket fence, stands today. It is set back a few rods from the highway, and a few topplink and discolored tomb stones mark the last resting place of one white woman who was buried there Mrs. Johana Meichler, the beautiful wife of Missionary Meichler, who followed her husband from Germany to the then near wilderness of America, and died shortly after her arrival.

The old Indian trail has now become the "river road," so called because it winds and twists along the banks of Pine river. It is seldom out of sight of the stream, over the entire stretch to St. Louis.

MUSKEGON CLERK FIRST ELECTED 55 YEARS AGO

Clerk of Norton township, Muskegon county, for more than 40 of the 55 years since he was first elected in 1872, Edward S. Upton is still one of the most active citizens of the township. He is 77 years old.

Born in Jackson county, October 20, 1850, Upton came to Muskegon county in 1867, and will have been a resident of the county and the township of Norton for 60 years next November.

At the age of 22 he was elected clerk of the township. From then until 1900 he served for all but a few terms. Since 1900 he has been the clerk for 22 of the 26 years.

OLD "THAM" LANGFORD— NEARLY BLIND, FACES POCERTY

Several benefit boxing shows, part of the proceeds of which he was to share, were given down east but somehow or other Langford didn't get the money. Sport writers are aiding him in his ecort to obtain it and are trying to help him stave off adversity.

NEW WEIGHT LIMITS FOR STATE ROADS ADOPTED

A new schedule of limits in the maximum weights on all vehicles, including trucks and trailers, operating upon state roads, in sympathy with the recommendations of representatives from 14 countles, has been sued by Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner.

The changes in the order, which limited the load carried on any wheel to 450 pounds per inch of width of tire, or a total gross load of not to exceed 15,000 pounds, are not great, but are based substantially on the weights carried by the rear axle.

The order affects additional counties including Mason, Lake, Osceola, Clare, Gladwin and Arenac.

UTILITIES CUT AMOUNT OF COAL TO MAKE POWER

While Michigan's jower companies were producing more electricity than ever before in their history during 1916 the steam power plants which produced 76 per cent of the total energy requirements of the state were establishing new records of efficiency in the use of coal, according to computations by the public utility informaiton bureau.

During the year, the general average for all utility power plants in the state was 1.61 pounds of coal burned to produce each kilowatt hour, compared with 2.62 pounds required in 1920. In the early days of the art, generating plants consumed from seven to ten pounds of coal per kilowatt hour.

WINS BUT LOSES IN JINX FOLLOWING STATE TRACK MAN

The old truisms of the long lane having its turning and its attendant one of the worm that diverted itself are losing their appeal for Hugh E. Pfluke, a member of the University of Michigan track squad. Hard luck has followed Pfluke so long that he is beginning to expect it. His experience at Urbana in the Illinois relays was just another of the whims of fate which have been unfavoraole to him as a track athlete.

enough scholastically to be a senior in the medical college, has been a member of the Michigan track squad for four years.

This year Pfluke started the indoor season early and seemed to have about overcome his ancient enemy. He progressed so well that he was chosen as lead-off man for the two-mile relay at the Illinois relays, his first major assignment with the Michigan track team.

Pfluke is so constituted that he is able to realize the ambition of every good athlete and run rimself "all in." He did this at Urbana, only to find when he finished the prescribed half onJ1ilmthedxf 7890$.... 789789789787 mile that someone had blundered and that he must complete another sixth of a mile before being relieved of the baton.

At the end of the regular half he was first. When he and the other runners finished the extra lap, however, he was a bad last and just managed to drag his feet to the finish line.

MAPLE RUN IN LAPEER FOR 1927 WELL STARTED

Maple syrup making got a fair start in Lapeer county during the week, with the majority of syrup makers well started on the 1927 run.

Walter Kingsbury, one of the leading syrup makers will hazzard no guess as to the probable length of the syrup making season this year. "Last year," said Kingsbury, "I told my customers to but the first time they had an ouuortunity from anyone that offered them syrup, as I would not be able to fill all my orders. Then the season stretched out and I made more sydup than ever before.

"The first run of sap," he explained, "makes the light colored syrup—so early colorless that it quite often happens some will declare that it is not pure maple syrup. As the season advances the syrup is dwarker and it tastes more strongly of maple."

The Kingsbury family saves the syrup from the latter part of the season for personal use. However, it the weather should turn warm and dry, the buds may start and the season come to a sudden end with the private needs of the family unsupplied.

6,000 IN PRISON IN DAY RECORD FOR MICHIGAN

All records for the number of persons confined in state penal institutions were shattered, according to A. D. Woods, state pardon and parole commissioner, when the total population rose to slightly more than 6,000—the highest figure in the state's history.

In Jackson about 750 men are confined in the so-called barracks, with nothing but a wire fence and a few guards between them and freedom. About 500 are sleeping on cots in the corridors of the prison. Inmates are to be transferred into the new prison at Jackson as rapidly as units are completed.

Marquette, with accomodations for 500, has 900 inmates. About 250 prisoners are crammed in the rotunda and halls at Ionia and about 200 cots are being used in the corridors of the Detroit house of correction.

MYSTERY CLOTHES LOST BY GIRL WHILE PRAYING

The mystery of the woman's apron and hosiery found on the ice near the Bristol street bridge at Saginaw indicating a tragedy or the possibility of foul play, has been solved. Religious devotion on the part of a young woman, an employe of a hotel, was at the bottom of the whole case.

The police found the apron and the hosiery on the ice near an open spot in the river where the water was about four feet deep, last Sunday. An exhaustive search of the river failed to disclose a body and the police were unable to trace the ownership of the apparel.

Finally a young girl confessed to the police that she had attempted to emulate Christ, whom, she said, "went to the river to pray." When she cut a hole in the ice to perform her religious ablution, she fell in and was drenched.

Vegetable fat gives a delightful flavor to baked foods, and is said to be more healthful than butter or lard.

SLEEVELESS IS MODE FOR FROCK

Originality is the outstanding feature of this season's mode. Fashions have not undergone any extraordinary changes, but the Paris openings, just closed, have shown us some new and sparkling ideas in clothes. Clothes are less standardized as to detail than they were last season. There is o more human, a more "dressmakerish" quality about them.

The sleeveless frock has returned. The simple sleeveless jumper has reappeared, too. This new mode has its beginning this winter on the Rivera and at Paum Beach, where a coat of tan on the arm is worth two sleeves in a frock.

There are hree variations of the short sleeved ensemble. One is the sleeveless frock or jumper frock worn with a sleeveless jacket. This is inevitably a summer costume, that will be more interesting lateh in the season. Another is the sleeveless jacket over a frick with sleeves.

Short jacket costumes are not always sleeveless. Doucet makes cardigan jackets of wool crape worn with pleated crepe skirts and matching scarfs. Short packet suites with contrasting skirts are shown by several of the Paris houses. Short jackets of navy blue wool—and navy blue is extremely smart at the moment—are worn with skirts of checked or stdiped fabrics in blue and white or blue and gray. Often a jacket of this type has martingale or short belt across the back at the hip line.

Eaton jackets and short boleros are used on some of the new spits. These, of course are more extreme and should be attempted only by the young and undoubtedly slender. An example of the type of Eaton suit Paris is making is one shown by Bernard, a bit of extreme but decidedly smart. The Eaton jacket is of black wool fabric the skirt is gray, and the blouse worn with this combination is white.

Printed linens in vividly shader effects are most amusing for summer resort wear. One house featured nuds and pastel rouse beige shades in a group of beautifully tailored linen sports frocks.

Linen accessories are unusually smart. Finest of linen shoes in a neutral nude shade are far more becoming than white, and blen beautifully with any color in the ensemble. One basque linen handbag showed a simple plaided design in rose and yellow, and was matched with a linen crash parasol.

From France comes some beautiful cottons and voiles embroidered in fantastic and lovely designs. One look at these cottons, and one knows the reason for the return of cotton to favor. No slik ever had more charm, no elaborate velvet showed more design and careful workmanship.

Velveteen fashions smart one and two piece sports frocks for resort wear. The tones most emphasized in this are greens, blues, rose and yellow. The velveteen sports jacket or frock has as definite a place in the smart woman's wardrobe as her pajamas, a place that it seems cannot be filled by any other fabric.

Tailored lingerie of celanese ninion, often combining two shades, is a delightful expression of summer underwear. An the cleanese voile! This is lovely, not only for lingerie but for frocks of the afternoon variety. The ambre effects in this are particularly lovely.

The demands of style and esthetics for the flapper of 1927 call for still smaller and daintier feet.

But women not blessed by nature with Trilby like pedal extremities need not be discouraged say the fashion mentors, for the new styles of shoes are designed to make any foot look pretty. Heels will be one-quarter to seven-eighths of an inch higher than the highest that have been in vogue; vamps will be shorter; toes will be rounded like those of French shoes and all of these features will combine to give almost any woman a foot appearance of which she can be proud.

PROPER SPRAY URGED TO SAVE CLEERY CROP

Proper spraying is being urged by Michigan State college experts to save the celery crop of this state from the ravages of the disease known as the "blight" or "leaf spot," which annually takes the toll of from 25 to 50 per cent of the crop, in some seasons entailing a loss of more than $1,000,000.

According to Dr. G. H. Coons, of the college botany department, the disease is controlled by simple measures and these heavy losses, which were unusually severe in 1926, can be avoided this year.

A formula of home made bordeaux mixture for sprays has been prepared by the college experts. According to reports, a large number of celery growers have asked for information on the mixture and on spraying methods.

PRESIDENT MAY GO TO MACKINAC

The possibility that President Calvin Coolidge may spend the summer at Mackinac Island, or some other Michigan resort, was raised again when it was stated definitely at the White House that the President would take his vacation somewhere in the West. The spokesman added that specific locations were under consiredation all the way from Michigan west to the Pacific Coast. The President, he said, particularly desired a place of high altitude where he would be reasonably sure of cool weather.

Last December Gov. Fred W. Green lunched with the President and Mrs. Coolidge and invited them to spend the summer at Mackinac Island. Later Mrs. A. T. Hert, wife of the late Republican national committeeman from Kentucky, indicated that she would be glad to offer her house on the island for the President's use.

BETTER SEED AND CROP TRAIN POUTE IS DECIDED

Joseph A. Jeffery, agricultural development agent of the South Shore railway, has worked out the scheduel for the special better seed and crops train, which will traverse the upper peninsula March 23 to April 20.

Speakers accompanying the train and delivering addresses in the lecture car are G. W. Putnam, superintendent of Chatham experiment station; C. M. McClary, potato specialist, and C. E. Skiver, crops specialist at Michigan State college, East Lansing; E. C. Amos and George E. Bishop of Marquette and others.

March 23, Harvey, Skandia, Chatham; March 24, Munising, Shingleton; March 25, Seney, McMillan, Newberry; March 26, Moran; March 28, Drafter, Brimley, Soo; March 29, Rudyard, Engadine; March 30, Manistique, Cooks, Rapid River; March 31, Trenary, Escanaba; April 1, Felch, Schaffer, Bark River! April 2, Rock; April 4, Nadeau, Stephenson, Menominee; April 5, Hermansville, Norway; April 6, Iron Mountain, Sagola; April 9, Crystal Falls, Iron River; April 11, Wakefield, Ironwood; April 12, North Ironwood, Topaz; April 13, Bruce's Crossing, Trout Creek; April 14, Covington, Herman; April 15, Tapeola, Chassell; April 16, Hancock; April 18, Toivola, Atlantic; April 19, Alston, Pelkie; April 20, Humboldt, Republic.

MARTEN IS EASY PREY OF TRAPPER, FUR HIGHLY PRAISED

The Marten is a hardy, agile animal which loves thick, oldgrowth forest of evergreen, where dead trees lean together and lie along the ground half buried and crumbling to pieces.

Here they live happily among the trees like squirrels, racing along old windfalls and up high among the hemlock and spruce branches, leaping over into the next tree-top like a fox squirrel and so away through the woods on their arboreal highways.

Quick as is the red squirrel he is no match for the marten who chases him about in the treetops and often catches hi medspite his agility. During the summer the marten keeps more to the lowlands and swamp and in the more moist, rain drenched undergrowth where wet leaves lie in the hollows muffling their leaps.

The food of the marten is fish, nuts and berries. They eat beechnuts and mountain ash berries, blueberries and partridge berries in season. They also eat trout but do not like them as well as their larger cousin the fisher cat. They are not difficult to trap and the best bait for them is birds and fowl of any kind.

Usually the trapper sets a deadfall. Properly set a deadfall on a stump will catch them behind the shoulders back of the heart and they die quickly and painlessly compared to the more brutal trap. The marten is the Hudson bay sable of commerce. The fur is a beautiful one and highly prized. It has one pecularity in that it will lie whichever way you press it.

The mother marten has from three to five flittens, which usually come in April or May depending somewhat on the climate. She takes very good car to keep them hidden from the male who would in all likelihood kill them.

CADILAC CLUB LEAVES ROAD ROUTE TO STATE

Exchange club members, Cadillac, voted in favor of leaving the decision of the route of M-13 from Cadillac to Reed City to the state highway department.

The proposed location would save six and one-half miles over the present route. It parallels the west side of the Pennsylvania railroad coming out of Reed City, crossing the railway with overhead crossing south of Leroy and coming into Cadillac on the east side of the rails and entering the city over Cemetery hill. This road goes through Ashton, following the railroad west of the village, goes directly through Leroy, and three-quarters of a mile east of Tustin

WILD BRUSH HIDES $300.000 OF FURS ON VARMINT FARM

Thirty miles northwest of Bay City, near the village of Mount Forest, lies a track of wild bush land, so dense that to one unfamiliar with wood craft it almost might pass as virgin forest. But instead of the great pines of the early days, the land is covered with willows, scrub oaks, a few jack pines and a great amount of underbrush, through which many wild animals roam safer even than in the days before the white man set foot in the country. The place belongs to the Mount Forest Fur farms—the largest of their kind in the world.

Here dwell, in the full security of protection and the assurance of quality food in plenty, several hundred foxes, red, black and sliver; a goodly number of mink, chincilla rabbits, raccoons and several thousand muskrats. A bald headed American eagle stands majestically in his cage at a vantage point in the group, where he can overlook with characteristic superior airs his fellow tenants.

Cold weather means nothing to this bird. During the cold snap in January, when the thermometer reached 22 degrees below zero at the farm, Mr. Eagle spurned the idea of using his shelter house, keeping his nocturnal vigil without once leaving his frigid wind swept perch.

The muskrat, however, probably finds his greatest comfort in the winter season. In his little mound home, hidden from view, he sleeps all day, venturng forth only during the night to get his food. He is rather fussy about his eating, however, for he washes every bit of food before putting it in his mouth. The stock on the farm is valued at about $300,000.

MENOMINEE BOY SAVES TWO FROM DEATH IN BAY

Lawrence Weissgerber, 16-year-old Menominee high school boy, was a hero as a result of his courageous rescue of two children who rad fallen into Green Bay and his futle attempt to save a third child.

The three children, Charlotte, Knutson, 7; her brother, Earl, 5, and Alvin Weissgerber, 5, slipped into an open stretch of water surrounding an intake pipe in the bay. Lawrence heard their cries and plunged in after them. He rescued the girl and after dragging her out, returned to dive for Alvin. A third time he plunged into the icy water to bring up the body of Earl.

Artificial respiration brought Alvin back to life but all efforts to revive Earl were futile.

ALBION WILL SEND TWO TEAMS TO OHIO RELAYS

R. W. Betchel, athletic director of Albion college, announced that the Methodists will spend two relay teams, a 440-yard and a medley combination, to the Ohio relays at Columbus, Ohio, for April 23. Lee Bartlett, of Union City, state javelin champion, also will be entered for Albion in the meet.

UPPER PEN ROAD TO BARE NATURE

Excellent trout fishing, beautiful scenery, hundreds of inland lakes and streams with boating, fishing and camping facilities, will be opened soon to the tourist and globe trotter when a state trunk line is constructed across the southern part of the upper peninsula connecting M-12 with the Roosevelt righway and paralleling the south ern short of Lake Superior. Approval of the road has been given by the state highway department and all the plans except the difinite selection of a route, have been completed. It is expected the initial grading work will be under way this summer.

Two routes have been proposed for the highway, and sentiment in Alger, Schoolcraft and Delta counties which will be affected by the building of the road, is divided. The route meeting most favor runs east of the Indian river, connecting the city of Manistique with Shingleton, a little village in Alger county, through which the Roosevelt highway passes. Another suggested route meets the Roosevelt highway at Wetmore, a small raidroad station three miles to the south of Munising, and leads south across the pine plains to M-12, joining the latter road near Cooks.

Either of the proposed routes will open up what is generall conceded to be one of the most attractive sections of the northern peninsula.

30 MILLION FEET OF LOGS BOUGHT BY FORD MOTOR

The Ford Motor Company, the largest buyer of saw logs in the upper peninsula, has purchased in excess of 30,000,000 feet of logs for delivery at its L' Anse mill yard. Some of these logs will be shipped over its own railroad to the Pequaming mill to be sturned into lumber. The company now is receiving logs daily by the trainload. This presages a buy season for both the L'Anse and Pequaming mills.

Logging contractors and jobbers have experienced a successful season. The majority of them are finishing up their operations, hauling logs, poles, ties, posts, mining timber and pulpwood.

Logs from some distant points will be towed in by water in the spring, particularly big lots purchased by Ford. These will be placed in large booms and towed to L'Anse by Ford tugs.

TEAR BOMB BURSTS AT TEST, ROUTS POLICE

While deputies were experimenting at Pontiac with a project to load night sticks with tear gas, a charge exploded. The entire firsa floor of the building was cleared of occupants for more than ten minutes.

As surmised some time ago the estate of the late Julia Pond of Hillsdale who passed away a few weeks ago, is going to be contested by the relatives. Her residence property has been appraised at $6,200 and she has been found to have $9,000 in the bank besides some very good jewelry to the amount of $200 hence the anxiety of the few distant relatives. A will was found in an old desk in her apartments dividing her belongings among relatives but they say it is so badly defaced by interlinings and markings of peculiar nature that it is doubtful if the document is legal at all. Judge Guernsey has in his possession a will which the old lady made later bequeathing her property to Hillsdale County, but this will was never executed by her as she at once changed her mind. Prevailing opinion seems to be that the old lady in later years was not responsible and hence a lawsuit will have to determine her rightful heirs.

All Are Finger Printed

In Argentina there is a national finger-printing law, and as a result the 10,000,000 or more inhabitants are all recorded by this system. It is this regulation which makes Argentina the one country in the world, it is said, where one may not lose his or her identity.

The Service That Counts

More than 6,000 engines, 275,000 freight cars and 5,200 passenger cars are in service on the New York Central Lines to meet the traffic needs of the thirteen states through which they run.

But each shipper's interest is not so much in the total amount of equipment owned or operated as in those units that must deliver the kind of service he wants—when he wants it. For to him each freight car or train moving his products is the most important on the line.

And in accordance with their leadership in modern railroading, New York Central policies call for performance that will furnish every shipper, large or small, with the best possible service New York Central men and methods can produce.

Both Jerome and Hanover as we understand it are about making their debut as electric lighted villages. The Consumers Power Company of Jackson having about completed their lines to these towns. We sometimes wonder if ancient and honorable Moscow which was a stalwart grown up village when Chicago was only an Indian settlement, will not endeavor to get a wire and listen in. "Moscow on the Pike" queer old bog town, place of a hundred memories with its ever murmuring town creek and its crowded little cemetery on the marsh where lie the bones of many a settler of the territorial road. Maybe the day is coming when Chicago and Detroit will see the glare of Moscow's electric lights on the night skies. Atta Boy!

Corn Borer Meetings

Four district plowing demonstrations for showing methods of controlling the corn borer will be put on next week in the county as follows:

Tuesday, April 5—Litchfield, A E. Ferry farm, 2 miles south and one and one-ealf miles west.

Wednesday, April 6th—Waldron, Ernest Gilbert farm, four miles west.

Thursday, April 7th—Reading Leon Quackenbush farm, two miles north one-half mile east.

There will be various kinds of plows used including horse drawn plows fitted up to successfully turn under corn stubble and standing corn, also tractors using the latest plows for this purpose. Stubble beaters will also be shown.

Fields will be put in condition so they will pass inspection of the State Department of Agriculture. Farmers who plow and fit their land in such a manner as to pass this inspection will be re-imbursed by the Federal Government. These demonstrations are to assist in showing farmers how this is most easily done and explain any questions that they may have concerning methods to be used in controlling corn borer

Representatives of the Michigan State Department of Agriculture are expected to be present at these demonstrations.

Frank Holcomb Passes Away

Frank W. Holcomb, a resident of this village for about ten years, passed away at his home on Tuesday morning about 7:00 after an extended illness. Mr. Holcomb was 61 years of age and had been engaged in various activities since coming to North Adams, both in village and township affairs. He was township clerk at the time of his demise, and a member of the Methodist church for many years He was known as one whose valuable services to the community cannot be over-estimated.

Surviving are his wife, one brother, George, one nephew, O. C. Holcomb, of this vicinity, his sister, Mrs. Joanna Large, having preceded him in death by twenty days. Mr. Holcomb was prominent in fraternal circles, having been past patron of Alpha Chapter, O. E. S., No. 288, a member of Adams F. & A. M., member of Eureka Commandry, Hillsdale Knights Templar and member of Detroit A. O. Shriners.

Funeral services will be held at the Methodist church in this village under auspices of Eureka Commandery Rev. H. E. Wylie officiating, Friday (to-day) at 2:30 p. m., interment will be in the local cemetery. We shall miss Frank in his accustomed walks of life but his span of work here is finished and we can truthfully say with the psalmist "well done, good and faithful servant, enter thy eternal rest."

Let Us Help You With Your Fence Work
WHETHER you are going to put up boundary, cross or temporary fences see us first. We can save you a lot of hard work and valuable time. We'll show you how one man can do a week's fencing job in one day and get a fence line that will last for many years—one that in the long run gets the most years of service from the fence and proves to be the cheapest investment in fencing that you ever made.
The secret of it is RED TOP Steel Posts—that can be driven into any condition of soil any time of the year—that can be driven at the rate of 200 to 300 a day by one man and aligned perfectly—that cost less in the long run by outlasting 4 or 5 ordinary posts, saving cost, valuable time and expensive labor—that get the most years of useful service out of any fence by holding it in steady security year after year.
Red Top
GUARANTEED
Steel Fence Posts
Because we handle nothing but the best merchandise we handle RED TOP posts. We know it to be made of tough, springy, long-lived railroad steel—that none is better no matter how much you may pay for it—that thousands of RED TOPS are giving this extraordinary service today after many years in the fence lines of American farmers. And RED TOPS can be easily withdrawn and re-driven in a new location, making the changing of a fence line comparatively easy.
Come in and let us show you how you can save money on fencing, and make it a quick and easy job.

SPRING STYLES CATER TO YOUTH

Youthfulness is the keynote of spring styles each year because youth and spring time go hand in hand. Pastel colors and floral designs, the girlish bolero and jaunty coat suit express the mood of the season. It is not necessary to be young in years in order to wear youthful styles, providing one's face is without lines and however, milady's face and form are those of a mature woman she should not attempt to copy fashions that have been designed for the 'teens or early twenties. To do so will destroy her individual charm and make her into a caricature of youth.

On the other hand the woman with an ample figure and the story of years on her face should not deliberately choose old fadfied clothes. Solid black or black wth a white collar is unbecoming to any woman whose skin is not smooth and frtsh in color. Black is a smart shade, however, and makes attractive costumes for the mature woman if its somberness is relieved by some colorful trimming.

Deep cream, soft, dull pink or peach, lavender, Delft blue and gold may be used at neck, vest or yoke and cuffs.

Embroidery in soft greens, pinks, peach, blue and yellows may be used to a truly "springlike" touch to a black dress. Soft tan fur may be used on the black coat and the hat may have a crown of tiny flowerlets. In general gray is not becoming for the woman over 40 unless her skin is unusually fair and rosy.

Green is a typical spring like shade, but it should be used only in soft, dull tones by the mature woman. She will find that warm colors like pinkish tan are more flattering to her skin tints.

Touches of fairly vivid green are, however, permissible in a figured scarf, stitching on gloves and embroidery on handbags. For a light spring suit a warm tan or light brown may be used with footwear, hat and gloves in a lighter or darker shade.

Mahogany and brownish reds shading upward in the new compose effect to a very dull rose are becoming. Trimming of henna or rust may be used to brighten up a navy blue costume since dark blue alone is trying to a faded complexion. Dull rose and gold or silver may be used with deep marine hues.

The striped silk sports frock that usually finds a place in milady's wardrobe may be of a brighter color than her other clothes. The stripes used vertically or on the bias will make her hips seem slimmer. Rose, brown and cream is a pretty combnation for such a sports dress. Yellow, green and black may also be used. Rust, medium blue and cream or orange, tan and brown are effective. Ivory white with a wide stripe of dull rose or mauve is pretty, too. Footwear may be white or any other color that s in keeping with the dress.

The junior life saving crew ofOwasippe Boy Scout Camp, near Whitehall, has been awarded the coveted Lockwood cup. The trophy is conferred annually by the American Red Cross on the Junior Red Cross team enrolling the largest number of life savers during the year. The Owasippe crew won with a total enrollment of 295 during 1926. All passed the tests.

Second honors were won by the crew of the Recreation department of Grand Rapids, which won the cup in 1925.

AIRPLANE CLOTH TO BE USED FOR STATE GRID UNIFORMS

A foot ball player's equpment should not weigh bore than 10 pounds, Michigan State college coaches say. To get the weight of playing apparel down to the minimum something new is going to be tried out during the spring foot ball practices.

Silk, the material used by many college coaches last year for foot ball pant material, has not proved quite satisfactory. Purdue and Notre Dame had squads equipped with silken pants last fall. Silk, it is said, rips easily after it has become wet and replacement is costly. The State college coaches have hit upon airplane cloth as foot ball pant material. The new cloth is txtremely light and tough. It is said that it will stand up under rough usage. Light but effective pads are tied in the new pant.

Head guards and shoulder pads also are to be lighter. Instead of the usual leather bracing, figre wil be used with sponge rubber for padding. Boots are extremely light weight. Jersey knit socks instead of the usual heavy woolen ones and especially built shoes round out the equipment. A few outfits will be tried out this spring and if satisfactory orders will be placed for the entire squad for next fall.

UPPER PEN GIRDS FOR FOREST FIRES

The upper peninsula of Michigan is girding itself for its spring and summer campaign against that insidious menace—the forest fire. Reorganization of the fire fighting forces of the peninsula, under the direct supervision of John A. Vizena, of Munising, assistant state game and fire warden, aided by his corps of district chiefs, is under way.

New and more effective equipment will be tried out in the northern peninsula this year. The lookout force will be enlarged by the stationing of a keyman in each surveyed township. Additional lookout men will necessitate the construction of more towers in dangerous areas.

The erection of ten new towers of the closed type, which will be from 75 to 100 feet high, is planned. Ten of the old wooden towers also will be replaced by modern steel structures. Two trucks will be introduced for the first time in Michigan this year, one in each peninsula. They will be stationed at convenient points and will be on call for emergencies in any district. Besides the regular equipmet of spades and axes, they will carry 300 gallons of water and eight hand pumps. Gasoline pumps with 1500 feet of hose will be provided for use were water in lakes and streams is available. In addition, six tractors with plows, discs and other equipment for laying fire lines, may be tried out in the upper peninsula this year.

SOIL SURVEY SHOWS MILLION ACRES OF LAND NOT UTILIZED

Michigan agricultural experiment station has just completed the first soils inventory ever compiled in the state. The work has been carried on by the Michigan State college soils department. The inventory shows relative fertility in various areas and offering definite information regarding amount and location of fertile, intermediate and unproductive lands.

Of the total area of nine to ten million acres of arable, highly productive land in Michigan, one million acres are not utilized or reclaimed, it is indicated by results of this all-state soils classification, just com pleted by J. O. Veatch, field expert in the department. This land is known as Class A.

Class B, or the land of intermediate fertility, has 15 to 16 million acres in Michigan, of which 10 to 11 million are not under cultivation. There are 11 to 12 million acres of swampy and drough land, under the Class C or land low in productivity.

"The unbelievably large area of fertile land that is idle and unreclaimed, stands out as one of the most important discoveries of our soils classification," said Dr. McCool. "There is also a considerable amount of unproductive land which could be used for reforestation."

EAGLE DECLARED SEEN BY PAIR NEAR ALBION

I. R. Orwig and F. A. Hills of Albian claim to have seen an eagle recently while driving four miles out on the river road. Mr. Orwig, who has lived in regions where there are eagles, states that he is certain that it was one of the species, having a wing spread ob about four feet.

Every married man thinks he would be rich if he had remained single.

HAMTRAMCK MAN HAS VARIED LIFE

It isn't every man who has at some time or other been a laborer, newspaper man humorist, editor, publisher, traveler, business man, office holder, song writer, actor, playwright, producer, poet ,novelist, member of the national guard, and a four-minute man in the Liberty loan drives.

And of the few men there may be who have engaged in as many fields, it is more than likely that they are all well advanced in years. But Stanley A. Klukowski, deputy clerk of the courts at Hamtramck, who lays claim to having been identified as all the above, is but 32 years old.

Klukowski came to America in December, 1912, at the age of 17. As he tells it, it was his intense desire to get away completely from the Russian school that predominated in Poland at that time; and alyso his wish to "live in a free and democratic country where a man can talk and sing in any language he desires and think as he pleases, and where opportunities are great for everybody."

At the beginning Klukowski engaged in considerable traveling, but serious illness and an operation cut this short. Soon after, Klukowski took out his first citizenship papers and attempted to join the navy, but was told he was not a full fledged American citizen.

Klukowski found himself in Chicago, which he had heard was called the "fourth part of Poland." Here he became an actor with a Polish stock company. Shortly after he organized a stock company of his own.

Turning from the theatrical field to the newspaper field Klukowski became editor and business manager of the Chicago edition of one of the largest Polish publishing houses in this country.

PYTHON NEARLY READY TO EAT AFTER 3 MONTHS

Three months without a meal is the fasting record established by the giant python at the zoo on the Lakewood farm of George Getz, near Holland. Early last December the big snake consumed a dozen chickens, milk and other articles on that occasion. The python then went to lseep and has not awakened. It is now shedding its old skin and growing a new one.

Attendants believe the "nap" is almost over; also the fast. Choice fowls are held in reserve to be consumed, feathers and all, at the next snake breakfast.

The animals on the show farm of the Chicago millionaire are doing well this winter. Two minor operations have been performed on monkeys and special care has been used to see that they do not contract colds. A cold is fatal to a monkey.

POSTMASTER ON LAKE VESSEL FOR 38 YEARS

Meet one of the few sailors perhaps, who has entered public life after quitting his job behind the wheel of a ship. Captain George W. Weaver sailed the lakes for 38 years, became a landsman in 1914, was elected treasurer of Charlevoix county and served four years, was chosen sheriff and held that job four years, and now has been postmaster four years.

Captain Weaver's first vessel was the Lucy Graham, a sailing schooner. Since he left her he was put in charge of tugs, freighters and passenger boats. At one time he piloted the Columbia, the boat that carried the mail from Charlevoix to Beaver Island.

"When I came to Charlevoix 38 years ago," he says, "we hunted rabbits north of the bridge."

North of the bridge in Charlevoix is merely the beginning of a residence section thronged by tourists during the summer months.

PICKLERS PLAN TO GROW OWN SEED IS REPORT

Seed interests in the Middle West and West are greatly concerned over rumors that the National Pickle Manufacturers Association proposes to grow its own supply of cucumber seed as soon as the Michigan State College releases new strains developed by Professor George Starr, vegetable plant breeder.

The pickle manufacturers are partly financing the experimental work at the college through a desire to obtain better strains. The college is interested in the project because the pickle industry is a $3,000,000 business in Michigan.

It is understood the manufacturers propose to grow their own seed to preserve the purity of the new strains. Some canning factories find it necessary to grow their own seed to insure a seed supply of known origin and of the varieties desired.

RUM SMUGGLERS' PATH IS ICE PERIL

During the day the St. Clair River is but a white expanse of ice, bearing no human freight other than that of an Indian trudging over from Walpole Island for supplies; or Robert Lambert, the Algonac conservation officer, who patrols the whole Flats region on skates. But at night—well, ask the Border Immigration Patrol and prohibition agents what happens at night.

At night the automobiles of rumrunners make quick dashes from Canada to the American shore, loaded heavily with Canadian and foreign whiskies. These automobiles are painted white and, with their headlights extinguished, they move like ghosts against the background of snow and ice. All night long the river and the adjacent region of marsh, barren and desolate during the day, throbs with life as a highway for the rum trucks, whose wheel tracks tell epic stories of danger and high adventure.

One seems hundreds of wheel tracks over the ice, and nearly every one tells a story of contraband cargo. Some times the wheel tracks take queer twists and turns as they dodge air holes or places where the ice has been torn to a dangerous thinness by the current. Some times they come straight as an arrow to, say, Point Timbre; and then, again, they seem to sig zag over the whole river—the driver had a hunch authorities were waiting for him, and lost his nerve.

The wheel tracks tell part of the story, not all of it; for some of the drivers got through with their loads and realized big profits, while others were nabbed by the officials who lay in wait along the principal roads.

Although a game of high profits, rum running over the St. Clair River is very uncertain. In addition to the hazards existing in the law, the runners must gamble with the condition of the ice. A shifting current, a thaw, the formation of air holes in places were the ice was sound a day or two before, any of these could cause the driver and his load to go plunging into the river in the midst of the dash for the American shore. And this, in addition to financial embarrassment, might result in death by drowning.

But the run runners met along the Canadian shore, farmer boys, most of them, who formerly trapped a few musk rats during the winter, are not particularly worried over the ice. The air holes are quickly spotted during the day and the whole fraternity is notified of the locations by a grapevine elegraphy. Then, too, they have traveled so much in the dark they have developed a sort of sixth sense, one that seems to guide them unerringly past the natural hazards. It is the law the runners worry over, and there is plenty of reason for such a state of mind.

POWER FOR ADRIAN NOW COMES FROM TOLEDO

The Citizens Light and Power company of Adrian is now receiving power from Toledo, Ohio, over a power line built in the fall and early winter. The power is brought from the plant of the Toledo Edison company, a distance of abont 40 miles. Power is being fed into the circuit which connects Adrian with Morenci and Hudson. The Toledo current also is being supplied to the Toledo and Western Electric railroad, which operates between Adrian and Toledo. The line was erected at a cost of more than $500,000.

COLLEGE ATHLETIC NEW RECORD SET BY OOSTERBAAN

Winner of five gold charms for participating on a like number of Big Ten Conference championship athletic teams, Bennie G. Oosterbaan, Michigan's all-American end and higher scorer in the Western Conference basket ball race this season, has established a record without equal in the Two foot ball championships, two basket bal titles and one in base ball is the record set by Wolverine teams in the past year and a half and, on all of the varsities, Oosterbaan has been an important cog.

As a sophomore, Bennie began creating a sensation with his remarkable forward pass receiving on the championship Wolverine gridiron eleven of 1925. That year the team was defeated but once during the season and almost half of its success was due to the remarkable defensive and offensive work of the Wolverine star. As a reward for his efforts, he was elected end on nearly every All-Americal selection made by prominent sport critics throughout the country.

In the basket ball race last season, was not given a regular berth on the first five. However, he proved himself a capable substitute and, at the termination of the season, Michigan succeeded in tying with Iowa, Indiana and Purdue for the conference title. Oosterbaan thus won his second gold charm.

Baseball next drew the attention of the Wolverine ace. He was placed in the outfield by Coach Ray Fisher and by virtue of his capable performance, was given the permanent right field position for the season. Aided by some excellent work on the part of his team mates and by some remarkable timely hitting on his own part, Oosterbaan was able to win his third consecutive gold award, the Wolverine nine winning the Big Ten title after a hard struggle.

Again, last fall, Oosterbaan displayed the same genius at snaring forward passes shot into the air by his team mate, Benny Friedman, and for the second time, won All-American honors at the end position. This time, Michigan was able to go through the conference season without defeat, but Northwestern duplicated the Wolverine feat, thus earning a tie for first place and the title. This made Oosterbaan's fourth straight gold charm.

And with the close of the cage-season, Michigan again proved master of the situation, this time winning the title after only half as many defeats as last season. By virtue of his high scoring and amazing under the basket shooting, Oosterbaan was given an honorary position on the all-conference basket ball quintette. And thus came the fifth cold charm.

Never in the history of Wolverine athletics has there been a man who Big Ten championship teams. The has participated on fice consecutive closest approach to Oosterbaan's record is that made by Harry Kipke, who was one of Michigan's first nineletter men, but Kipke's performance is vastly inferior to that made by the redoubtable Bennie.

CLOSED OGEMAW BANK PAYS DIVIDEND IN APRIL

A dividend of 20 to 25 per cent will be paid the depositors of the Ogemaw County bank in West Branch in April, according to the First National bank of Bay City, receivers of the Ealy & Company banks whch closed their doors November 1. Approximately $43,000 of the institution's assets has been collected, it was explained.

HIGHEST RAIL SPAN IN WORLD FINISHED AFTER FOUR YEARS

The largest highway bridge in the world, containing a double cantilever span which ranks among the four longest ever built, is nearing completion across the treacherous waters of Carquinez Straits, on the northern arm of San Francisco bay.

Crews have been toiling four years on the structure, which as an engineering project presented difficulties that were greater than those of the spanning of the St. Lawrence at Quebec or the Delaware between Philadelphia and Camden, according to engineers.

The two cantilever spans of the Corquinez bridge are each 1132 feet long. The only cantilever spans that are longer are in the Quebec bridge, the famous Firth of Foy crossing in Scotland, and the New York Queensboor structure across the East river.

The huge central pier on which one end of each cantilever span rests presented the most difficult problem. Located in the middle of the straits, where the water is 99 feet deep, menacing water dumped from two of California's great drainage systems, the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, their mouths just a few miles above the bridge, buffeted the pier at either side.

From the bed of the straits it was necessary to bore 50 feet through rock formation to provide a base for the pier's foundation.

The bridge towers 350 feet in the air, equalling the height of a 12-story building. It is 42 feet wide, permitting four automobiles to pass abretast. The largest ship afloat could pass beneath it, as it has a 135 foot clearance above the water.

POTATOE'S USE GROWING; MICHIGAN SPUDS GO FAR

Residents of the United States are eating more potatoes than ever before according to the Bureau of Railway Ecenomics, which has just completed a stury showing that the per capita production for the period from 1920 to 1925 was 3.58 bushels, as compared with a per capita production for the period from 1870 to 1879 of 2.98 bushels.

The potato crop now ranks sixth in value and eighth in acreage among the agricultural products of the United States. As a table food, potatoes are second only to wheat.

With the increase in the importance of potato production, the study further shows a mide distribution of potatoes in the United States. Idaho potatoes, for example, enter 35 states, while those from Maine and Virginia go into 28. Alabama, Wisconsin and New Jersey each furnish potatoes to 26 states, Michiman sends them to 25 states and to the Province of Ontario.

During the year ended with October, 1926, the stury showys that of 36 of the principal cities in this country, 25 actually received potatoes from one-third or more of the states. In some instances, potatoes were shipped to those cities in larger quantities from far distant states than from large producing areas close at hand.

FOUR MILLION FOR OAKLAND ROADS

A 1927 program of road building unprecedented in Oakland county is announced by Leon V. Belknap, eng[illegible]eer of the Oakland county road commission.

New road construction, including all the concrete and gravel roads to be built either by the county or under the Covert Act, will total $4,310,000, according to Mr. Belknap, and include 81 miles of concrete and 31 1-2 miles of gravel road.

Included in the program are two super highways. These are Northwestern highways, extending from Wayne into Oakland County in a northwesterly direction, and the Eight Mile road. Both are planned at a width of 204 feet, but for the present there will be constructed on them only two 20-foot strips of pavement. ern highway from the Eight Mile road or the Wayne county line, into Oakland county to the Orchard Lake road. This would make a new trunk line highway from Detroit into the lake district in Oakland county located approximately half way btween Woodward and Grand River avenues.

It is planned to improve the Eight Mile road for five miles from Division road to John R. road. It will be built under the Covert Act and the construction will be supervised by the Statt Highway department.

Other important arteries on which 20-foot concrete pacements are to be laid are: Commerce road from Orchard Lake road to the northerly limits of the village of Commerce, eight miles; Lake road between Elizabeth Lake road and the Dixie highway, six miles; Ten Mile road from Southfield to Orchard Lake road, seven miles; Twelve Mile road from Novi-Farmington township line to the Grand [illegible]ver road, five miles; Crooks road, from Royal Oak city north to Dodge road in Avon township, 11 1-2 miles; Fourteen Mile road from Woodward avenue east to Macomb county line, six miles; John R. road from Big Beaver north to Dodge Park, 7 1-2 miles; Dequindre road from the Eight Mile road following the Macomb-Oakland county line north to Auburn avenue, 13 miles.

Seven improved gravel roads nine feet wide are to be built in several sections of the county to connect county trunk lines.

PEKINESE CLIMBS TREE TO ROUT OUT COONS FOR HUNTERS

Dr. M. B. Wilkinson, a veterinarian of Saranac, Mich., claims to have the only Pekinese coon dog in the world.

Recently the pup, called "Chink," accompanied William "Doc" Frey on a hunting expedition. "Doc" is a veteran coon hunter, and figured that the dog would help him locate coon territory.

It wasn't long before "Doc" missed the dog, but after a careful search he found him with a coon cornered in a hollow stump. A little later Chink was seen to enter a hole at the base of a big beech tree. A minute later Frey saw a coon stick his head out from a hole at the top of the tree and, taking careful aim, brought him down.

A wait of a few minutes ensued and a second one showed up until Chink had chased five racoons from this hole and as Frey was about to take a shot at what he thought was a sixth coon he discovered it was Chink.

With the air of Frey the dog was brought back safely to earth from his lofty perch.

FIVE GREAT LINES MAY TAP DETROIT

Detroit may become an important shipping point on each of five great railroad systems, proposed to absorb all of the lines east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers, if the latest proposal for railroad consolidation is effected.

Concersations between the leading eastern roads, looking to a wholesale consolidation, which were broken off a year ago, have been formally resumed and with considerable hope of success on the part of the participants. The systems proposed would center around the New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, and Pennsylvania lines, which already reach Detroit; the Van Swigtringen (Nickel Plate) combination which proposes to reach Detroit by way of the Pere Marquette from Toledo, and a fifth system, projected by L. F. Loree, which would reach Detroit by way of the Wabash railroad.

Resumption of negotiations has been brought about, it appears, but a decision to admit Mr. Loree to the conference as projector of the fifth railroad system. A year ago, when an attempt wasc made to work out an agreement, it was broken up by the flat refusal of Mr. Loree to put his roads into any four-system plan, his insistence on a fifth system of his own and the united oposition of the four other groups named to such a plan. Loree now has induced at least the Pennsylvania to back his demands.

The trade which has brought Loree into the conference is said to involve use by the Pennsylvania of the Lehigh Valley Railway, controlled by Loree, to effect a second entrance to New York City.

The significance of the agreement admitting Mr. Loree as a fifth consolidator, is that establishment of his system would give the New York Central two powerful competitors on the route from New York to Chicago by way of Buffalo and Detroit. Both the Lree system and the Pennsylvania would be in position to bid for traffic on this route. On the other hand, the New York Central's agreement with the Van Sweringens and the Baltimore & Ohio would make it a competitor in the territory bounded by Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Norfolk.

FARMS DRAW SETTLERS TO KEEP TRAINS GOING

The Pennsylvania railroad's tetempt to abandon the Adris Junction-Merritt branch line in Eastern Missaukee county in 1925 has roused the fighting blood of farmers and residents in the community and started an agricultural development boom which may defeat any future plans to abandon the road.

The Eastern Missaukee County Development Bureau was organized at Merritt to develop the region agricultually and advertise its possibilities. An effort will be made to bring in new settlers, thereby increasing the railroad's revenue and permanetly forestalling any attempt to abandon the branch line.

SHOOTING WHISTLERS ORDERED STOPPED WHEN DIET IS REVEALED

Leigh J. Young, director of conservation, has ordered deputy game wardens to stop shooting whistlers upon the Au Sable and other rivers where organized patrols are now waging a campaign against American mergansers.

Stomachs of several whistlers shot by conservation officers were sent to Ann Arbor for analysis and a report showed that ths variety of wild duck was innocent of the charge of eating trout.

Many sportsmen protested shooting of the whistlers on the ground that this duck was valuable to the sportsman and that such action by the conservation officers was illegal. The officers are empowered to shoot mergansers by an agreement with the United States Biological Survey at Uashington, but no other species of wild duck is mentioned in the agreement.

Many whistlers wintered on the Au Eable this year. Their presence on the trout pools caused anglers to thnk they were eating fish with the mergansers.

FISHERMEN RISK LIVES FOR CATCH AS ICE BREAKS

With the break up of ice on Green Bay imminent, 100 or more fishermen out of Menominee are risking their lives in an attempt to save their fishing rigs.

The ice is going fast. The entire surface is honeycombed while the warm currents have worn the ice from beneath. Cracks have occurred.

While most of the fishermen were intent only on getting their nets and shanties ashore, more venturesome ones continued to fish with hooks and declare they will stay on the ice as long as it holds together.

LAST TIMBER IN THUMB DISTRICT BEING LOGGED

What is believed to be the last piece of standing timber in the Trumb district to be logged is now being cut in Deerfield township, Lapeer county, owned by E. E. Hodges.

Lumbering in Lapeer county was carried on considerably less than half a century ago, but it has been many years since work of that character of any importance has taken place.

Many old timers in the vicinity have visited the scene of operations just to revive memories of the old days when the lumber jacks thrived as far south in the state as the Thumb.

MANY PATENTS ARE GRANTED WOLVERINES DURING THE WEEK

Inventions ranging from a razor blade sharpener to an automatic stoker for steam boilers were patented during the week. The full list of patents granted Michigan residents follows:

ANN ARBOR NEAR CENTURY IN AGE

Each year when the first hints of frost are noticeable in the air, Ann Arbor rouses from its summer slumbers and awakens to a new rush and bustle of life. Ten thousand students coming from all states of the union and 37 foreign countries, from city and farm, from Piccadilly and the steppes of Russia, throng the university town within a few hours. Train after train empties its crowded Pullman cars at the stations and a continuous stream of automobiles crosses the city limits.

An up to date university campus meets the eyes of the newcomer; he finds 57 buildings on or near the campus, representing a plant valued at more than $27,600,000.

A greatly different scene presented itself to the first students who came to the University back in 1841, according to Wilfred Shaw, general secretary of the alumni association and editor of "The Aluminus," who has written a very complete history of "The University of Michigan." The celebration of the nintieth anniversary of the founding of the University brings to mind the early struggles which the university had in its development from an institution with a student body of but six to the present, when it annually undertakes the education of nearly 12,000 persons.

Practically within a life time it has conferred graduation degrees upon 46,672 persons, while 34,906 others have attended its sessions without graduating. Its alumni members are scattered far and wide, some in the frigid climate of Northern Russia, others in sunny India. Loyal graduates, numbering 37,658, still hold fond memories of their college days spent at Ann Arbor.

With the plans of the university to celebrate this anniversary has arisen a controversy as to whether the institution actually should date from the year 1837, when the legislature of the new state passed the enabling law for the foundation of the university, or whether it should go back to 1817, when a university was established in Detroit. The first mention of such an educational institution in Mchiigan is found in an act of cogress adopted on March 26, 1804, by which one township of land was appropriated for A "seminary of learning."

12 RULES GOVERN SEASON'S FROCK

The satin frock—the sheer frock—the frock of satin-and-sheer crepe combined—the tailored frock of heavier crepes—the printed frock—the compose theme—the ensemble idea—the jacketed frock—over and over 1927 tells this fashion story—it's the season's litany, and the introduction to her "twelve rules for smartness!"

Tucked—pleated—shirred—scalloped—holero—coat-like or suit-like—jacketed—compose—caped—two-piece—side-draped—ensemble in feeling—these twelve types of smart frocks prove that the spring mode is rich in variety, and the shops are full of new things! Which shall it be?

Daytime and evening frocks are new, if they are satin, glowing, gleaming qualities of satin that catch and play with light, whether they are pleated, shirred or draped—that's 1927's first pronouncement. Satin frocks for evening are tailored, and link a strong contrast of color with black, are very often trimmed with huge bows, or are sidedraped or chic examples of the vogue of front-caught fullness. A flower, a rhinestone ornament, a bow of the satin—here is simplicity.

Printed sheer crepe, plain color sheer crepe, chiffon in tiny prints, large prints and exquisite, soft, plain colors—here's to the frock that might inspire any poet—the sheer frock. Tailored sheer frocks are important for stret wear, and many are being coats.

In tulle frocks and crispy taffeta frocks—the evening mode grows pictorial, and becomes "inches longer." Basque-bouffant in type are these pictorial frocks that youth wears with so much grace.

Tiny frocks, many tucks geometric tucks, tucks that release their fulness in pressed and unpressed pleats—tucks in daytime frocks of heavy crepe, sheer crepe and chiffon; tucks in tailored evening gowns of gleaming satin—1927 emphasizes tucks, and thereby keeps its frocks slender at ease and in motion.

We'll wear pleats from morning to night. For daytime are frocks of printed crepe, heavy crepe, sheer crepe or chigon—each morning showing another variation of the pleated vogue; for evening there are pleated chiffon frocks, and tulle frocks with pleated ruffles of tulle to make them stand sheerly away from slender legs and ankles. Pleats, many pleats, forecast a graceful season.

CAPTIVE BIRDS FED BEST IN WINTER

A winter visit to the state game farm at Mason will dispel some of the lament summer visitors some times express over the existence in captivity of birds ordinarily wild and free. For there's larlor, bedroom and bath, so to speak, for the state's feathered charges, with hot meals, freedom from fear of the hunter's gun and plenty of space for roaming thrown in for good measure.

Far more attention is required to feeding in winter than in summer to prevent the contracting of riseacec. The visitor here in winter is rare, tho thousands visit it during the summer. To witness the winter feeding operations is of greatest intrest—partly because it displays several hundred appetites at their peak and lots more enthusiasm in the birds to cash in on the treat.

Well cooked corn in the morning with a rich scratch food at night is a "preserved" pheasants' menu. Tho ducks are fed corn and the deer receive a ration of oats and alfalfa with a little salt thrown in for good measure.

Ceattered over the farm are numerous corn stalk shelters, made of pole framing and covered with hay and corn stalks. These are enclosed in a huge fenced field. Under these 1400 Ring Neck, Golden, Lady Amherst, Silver and Reeves pheasants dodge the cold winds and drifting snow. The more pugnacious breeds are cloistered in long narrow pens.

3 OFFERS FOR PRESIDENT TO SUMMER IN MICHIGAN

Western Michigan has bid for the permanent summer White House.

At least three offers have been sent to President Coolidge to spend his summer in Western Michigan communities.

The Muskegon Chamber of Commerce tendered an invitation to the President that he take over the Spring Lake summer home of Ross W. Judson of Detroit, president of the Continental Motors Corporation. At the same time, the Grand Haver Chamber of Commerce, offered the president the summer home of Hunter Robbins at Spring Lake.

The Holland Chamber of Commerce planned to offer Lakewood Farm, the show place of Western Michigan, owned by George Getz of Chicago and New York. It was at the Getx Farm that Gov. Al. Smith of New York, spent several days last summer.

An invitation previously had been sent the president to establish the summer White House at Mackinaw Island.

YOST SEES NEW GRID RULES OPENING FOOTBALL AS GAME

Opening up of the game of foot ball wil result from the rules committee's legislation upon barkward passes, says Fielding H. Yost, who is waiting for the actual wording of the new ruling on this pass before determining just what the new regulation allows. If it allows a backward pass after crossing the line of scrimmage, coaches will have a powerful offensive weapon not permissible in the past.

Something of the same view of the new rules is taken by Assistant Coach E. E. Weiman, who thinks the spread play and similar so called freak formations will return to the game.

"The changes made by the rules committee will very materially change the general aspect of the game, especially from the spectators' standpoint," says Coach Yost. "There will not be the same uncertainties, either to the spectator, coach or player. Many of the thrills that have happened will not happen under the changed rules, but new styles of attack will be encouraged.

"No one, so far as I know, has ever suggested that all or any shifts should be prohibited in foot ball. The 'timing' placed in the rules by the rules committee on shift plays is in line with what was agreed to in the western conference. The 'running start' following the 'hop' was the source of all the controversy and misunderstanding about shift plays. The 'four court' or one-second full stop, as suggested by the rules committee, and the change of penalty for violations of this special rule from five to fifteen yards should be effective in eliminating the running start.

"The removal of the goal posts from the goal line 10 yards back to the outside end zone line will make quite a change in the appearance of the field and radically lessen the chance of field goals being made from the field of play. This will not materially affect good goal kickers after touchdown making their goal. It will result, however, in many more point victories, as the good kickers will continue to get their goals after touchdown, while the poorer ones will miss more of them."

If your luck isn't what it should be, "write a "p" in front of it and try again.

DETROIT FIREMEN RESCUE CATS, HUNT GAS, SAVE BABIES

When in doubt—call the fire department!

That is what more than 10,000 Detroit citizens did during the past year when an emergency arose. Midnight or morning, noonday or evening, when help was needed they ran to an alarm box or to the telephone and appealed to the fire department.

An overwhelming odor of mothballs, rats running wild in the ceiling, a kettle of beans scorching on the stove, a roast being burned to a crisp in an oven, a cat self marooned in a tree, a child locked in the bathroom, a horse with its hoof caught in a hole in a stable floor—these are some of the things that brought firemen from their beds and sent the heavy apparatus rumbling down the street with sirens wailing.

During 1926 the Detroit fire department responded to 11,329 alarms, and the fire fighters found but 9,000 actual blazes.

The remainder of the alarms were divided among false alarms, calls for the rescue crews to use the pulmotor on new born babies, would-be suicides and drowning victims; and miscellaneous calls.

When box No. 6157 was pulled one night it sent Ladder Company No. 5 from Russell and Erskine streets, Engine No. 5 and Rescue car No. 2 from the Alexandrine avenue station, Engine No. 13 from Russell street and Ferry avenue and Engine No. 30 from Rivard street and Livingstone avenue, with a total of 33 men, speeding to answer the alarm.

On Warren avenue east, the cause for the alarm was found. An excited citizen declared gas was escaping in large quantities from some where.

The firemen began an investigation. Sure enough, there wae a powerful odor in ths air. Here and there they searched until the cause for the alarm was found—a large sack full of mothballs. But it might have been gas, Fire Marshal Goldwater points out.

CCURT MAY BE ASKED TO FINE LETTER WRITER

Friends of the Rev. Thomas J. Edwards plan to appeal to the courts to settle the question of who wrote the anonymous letters to officers of the First Baptist church of Birmingham which split the congregation six months ago and resulted in the resignation of the pastor.

Leland Bunyon, chairman of the church board of directors; P. W. Parmenter, church treasurer, and Charles Todd, a member of the board, each received a letter. The three communications, which were unsigned, attacked the character of Parmenter, the officers said.

tAlhough the letters were submitted to Francis B. Courtney, Detroit handwriting expert, in an effort to determine their authorship, Courtney's opinion that the pastor's wife, Mrs. Anna Edwards, wrote the letters, is questioned and the two factions accuse each other of being responsible for them.

FORSEES RADIO AS FARM SERVANT

Has the use of mechanical and electrical power on the farms of America only just commenced?

Is the revolution in agricultural mearods of the last century but a prelude to greater and more startling changes still to come?

Is the farmer of the future going to raise food with as little physical effort as the average factory worker or apartment house wife puts forth today?

Less than one hundred years ago [illegible] would have [illegible] a prophet [illegible] who predicted that some day [illegible] great grandsons might produce food in quantity without the aid of horses. He would have stared pop eyed and open mouthed f the prophet had talked about mowers, binders, threshing machines, milking machines, tractors.

Yet all these are commonplace today. In less than a century they have transformed farming. Where once a few simple facts about tilling the soil and tending the crops were all that a farmer needed to know, now he must be an engineer as well. Where once people on the farms produced little mor than they needed themslvs, today thre are seven persons in the cities eating the food and wearing the clothing produced by three persons on farms.

Now agricultural engineers are saying that no farming practice followed today is to be accepted without question. They are reexamining all old theories. They are perfecting new machines to perform tasks that people had thought could never be done except by hand. They declare that the agricultural revolution has just begun.

While at present many new implements are being developed to be used with the tractor, the most striking changes in the future may be brought bauot by the utilization of electrical power, suggests Prof. H. H. Musselman, head of the department of agricultural engineering of Michigan Statt college.

"Electricity is an infant, even in manufacturing industry," he said, "but it is an infant of lusty size and is growing like a dairy fed youngster Once get it out into the open air of the country and who can predict its possibilities? I do not mean the possibilities of the next year or the next ten years, but the possibilities of a generation or a century of experience.

"Moth the horse and the tractor are cumbersome as compared to electricity. Doesn't the tractor seem so when it is necessary to roll 5000 pounds over and over the field to draw a light harrow, or drill, or other impdement? carried through a wire or perhaps shot through space as radio waves now are, can deliver many times the amount of power at the desired point than is now furnished by the ponderous horse or tractor."

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

The Bible and Prohibition

Is prohibition of the liquor traffic contrary to the teaching of the Bible, as is asserted by some of the opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment?

If by prohibition we mean the right to forbid certain practices there can be no question that the Bible sanctions prohibition. The Decalogue is sufficient proof of that. "Thou shalt not" are the notable words in what was the basic moral law of Israel. Whatever modifications may have taken place in later times, nothing can be found in the Scripture to justify the assumption that the principle of forbidding certain forms of behavior was abandoned. Indeed it was carried over into the Christian church where the apostolic authority definitely prohibited practices which it believed were perilous to the moral welfare of Christians under the circumstances then existing. It is interesting to note that one of these prohibitions had to do with the matter of what should not be eaten. Christians were forbidden to eat food sacrificed to idols.

There are many reasons why the making of alcoholic liquor was not specifically forbidden in Bible times, even though the abuse of it was sternly denounced and emphatically forbidden. If Israel had faced the problem which America faced in the growth of the licensed liquor traffic, in its terrible demoralization of life, destruction of health and corruption of politics, we cannot doubt there would have been a "Thou shalt not," no less vigorous and comprehensive than the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law.

The apostolic authority which forbade the eating of meat sacrificed to idols would not have hesitated to forbid the drinking of alcoholic wines had there been as grave a danger in that practice then as there has come to be in our days.

It is true, of course, that Paul recognized a higher principle than prohibition, although he yielded deference to the latter. He said boldly: "All things for me are lawful, but all things are not expedient." Paul took strong ground in advocacy of what may be called "personal liberty." It is ground which only those may take who are fully yielded to Christ's law of love. In his stout declaration of freedom Paul yet boasted that he was the "bond-slave of Jesus Christ." And among the things which he considered "not expedient," was disregard for law. He enjoined on all obedience to the civil authorities and himself obeyed them. He recognized the need of law—the need of forbidding behavior which was socially dangerous. We can find nothing in Paul's attitude which runs contrary to Christian support of any law, any prohibition which the conditions of the time demand for the welfare of mankind.

It would be as reasonable to argue that prohibition of the sale of narcotic drugs is counter to the Bible as to argue this of prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors.

There are two big ideas which run all through the Bible, Old Testament and New—human value and human responsibility. God is portrayed as holding human personality of supreme importance among all the things which He created; He is also portrayed as holding men reponsible for their own conduct and for the welfare of their fellows.

The only question affecting prohibition that need concern the believer in the Bible is whether the traffic in alcoholic liquors constitutes as great a menace to the human values of American manhood womanhood and childhood as the idolatrous worship of false gods did to the people of Israel in the days when it was written "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image." An affirmative answer to this question should set his mind at rest about Scriptural sanction.—Editorial, Chicago Evening Post.

Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also. Hab. 2-15.

Woe unto him that buildeth a town with blood and establisheth a city by iniquity. Hab. 2-12.

Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink, which justify the wicked for reward and taketh away the righteousness of the righteous from him. Isa. 22-23.

Thou shalt not kill. Ex. 20-13.

Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine—when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpant and stingeth like an adder. Prov. 29-32.

Who will rise up for me against the evil doers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity? Prov. 94-16.—National W. C. T. U. Publishing House.

We Need A Straight Route to The Atlantic

Every year we can plainly see the tremendous necessity of a better and more direct outlet for these middle states of Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, to the Atlantic Ocean. New York City and Boston have both been fighting us with tooth and nail since the most remote time when the canal was mentioned. Casper J. Lingeman of Detroit, realtor, has made many talks on this important subject and you remember the last time we spoke of him he was comparing the Eastern propaganda to dragging a red herring across our trail. Well, you can call it what you wish, there is certainly system and sound sense in his motives. While it is more than likely something else beside the waterway and its benefits to the farming population of Michigan is behind Lingeman's spasmodic efforts to influence public opinion, yet about five minutes of deep thought will convince most any citizen of this community that we need the canal and are needing it worse every season. Lingeman tells us that in one short year after it is put into commission the St. Lawrence sea cut will pay its first cost in reductions of actual carriage rates for the shippers of the middle west. Seems like a wild speculation doesn't it? We are not conversant with the entire cost but will guarantee it would run into the millions and many millions and we are being kept out of this because a few narrow minded bigots in New York and other Atlantie ports propose to keep all this business slipping through their wharves and terminals.

Now we don't wish to annoy our readers by repeatedly calling attention to a matter which seems commonplace but so help us, we're going to keep it before you somehow until you realize how badly we need it and what a gigantic harvest of profits it would reap for the wheat, potatoes, hay, corn and fruit shippers of these states. Let us compare the matter if you please.

Here we are, four million industrial people—farmers and producers of the necessities of life so much needed on the eastern seaboard and at foreign ports like London and Amsterdam, Paris and Berlin. Here we are, marooned inland far from any visible shipping port, and we are the slaves of the two great railroad systems which connect us with the Atlantic. We must pay their rates or our valuable produce will rot in the fields. Noboby wants it unless it is delivered to their door. After we have paid the railroad freights to New York City or Boston we must fix selling prices 25 percent higher. Then after our consignments reach the port we must in addition pay the ridiculous expense of longshoring it into the ships whence it will eventually reach its consumers across the ocean in the English Capitol and at Paris and Berlin. When we have added this all to the original price of production on our farms can we undersell the competitors in other countries nearer the market? Certainly we cannot. The result is the American farmer is held between two mill-stones and while he feeds the Nation and is the only known citizen whom we cannot do without, yet he is in a condition where his crops are practically subject to the highest bidder and under no circumstances can he make his own prices. Now if it is possible to cut off a big percent of this cost of getting to our customer the middle west farmer is going to ride in chaises before many moons. Neighbor, let us say with Casper Lingeman don't wait any longer, but sit yourself down this day and pen a few lines to our magnificent President and just call his attention to the fact you are one of four million souls who knows the St. Lawrence Sea Cut is absolutely necessary to the prosperity of the country and urge him for humanity's sake to take immediate action with Congress to bring Canada into touch with America and set the steam dredges humming. We want to start at once—because you must know this great project cannot be built in a single year, but will require many of them.

Chancery Notice

State of Michigan, The Circuit Court for the County of Hillsdale, In Chancery:—

Thompson Savings Bank, Plaintiff
Defendants

It appearing to the court by affidavit on file that the defendant Louis A. Aschbeck is not a resident of the State of Michigan, but is a resident of the City of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, on motion of B. D. Chandler, attorney for plaintiff, it is ordered that the appearance of the defendant Louis A. Aschbeck be entered in this cause within three months from the date of this order, and that in case of his appearance he cause his answer to be filed to the bill of complaint, and a copy to be served upon the plaintiff within fifteen days after service upon him of a copy of said bill, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed.

It is further ordered that the plaintiff cause this order to be published in the North Adams Advocate, a newspaper published and circulated in said county, to be commenced within twenty days from this date, and to be continued therein once in each week for six weeks in succession, and that plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be served upon defendant Louis A. Aschbeck by registered mail within the time prescribed by law.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 24th day of September, A. D. 1912, executed by Paris Brewer; a single man, to Cyrus L. Wilcox, which said mortgage was, on the 25th day of September, A. D., 1912, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, State of Michigan, in Liber 144 of Mortgages, on Page 147, and which said Mortgage is now owned by the estate of said Cyrus L. Wilcox, he being now deceased, and upon which there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($900) past due principal, FOUR HUNDRED TWENTY TWO and 64-100 DOLLARS interest; taxes in the amount of One Hundred Fifty-Five and 85 100 Dollars ($155,85) paid by said estate for the protection of its said mortgage interest, together with an attorney fee provided for in said mortgage and by the statute in such case made and provided of THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS, and which said sum, together with said attorney fee, is the whole amount claimed to be now due on said mortgage leaving however, a balance of principal still due thereon at a future date, in the sum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, foreclosure and sale hereunder being subject to such unpaid principal.

And whereas, on the 21st day of November A. D., 1918, by a partial release recorded in Liber 159 of Mortgages, page 421, as appears by the records in the Register of Deeds office of said county, the following lands were released from said mortgage; Ten acres off the south end of the east half of the north-west quarter of Section Twenty-Three: in Town five south, of range two west, Moscow Township, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and leaving the land hereinafter described as security for the payment of said indebtedness.

And whereas, no suit or proceeding, either in law or equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of June, A. D. 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county because of said defaults in the payments of said sums of principal and interest, and taxes amounting in all to Fourteen Hundred Seventy-eight Dollars, forty nine cents [$1478 49] and by virtue of power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale at Public Auction to the highest bidder of the said premises therein described, except the premises heretofore released as herein set forth, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage as above set forth, with interest thereon, and the costs, charges and expenses allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including the said attorney fee.

Said premises now covered by said mortgage are described as follows; All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Moscow, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan, viz. The North-east quarter of the south-west quarter of Section twenty three, Town five south of Range two West.

MORE HORSEPOWER FOR FARM RELIEF

All proposed plans have thus far failed to provide the farmer with farm relief by increasing his selling prices. Industry, however, met a somewhat similar situation by lowering the cost of production. A similar solution can be successfully applied to agriculture.

The increasing of production per worker on the farm is being met to a certain extent by using larger units of power, whether horse or mechanical. Where one man was using a single horse or team he is now using from 3 to 8 horses, thus increasing the ground covered from two to five times. By the use of larger power units hired labor can be reduced or eliminated.

Land	50 percent
Labor	20 percent
Power	20 percent
Miscellaneous	10 percent

Of these items one can be considered stationary, namely, the land cost. Labor and power are variable and have been the main obstructions – lower production costs. Larger power units are doing much to decrease labor factors. Also, largor power units if used over larger farm areas can do much to lower the power percentage.

Professor J. B. Davidson, senior agricultural engineer, United States Department of Agriculture, summing up investigational work in 36 states, offers this equation for farming:

$$I = (S - C)Q$$

When "I" equals income
"S" is selling price
"C" is cost of production
"Q" is the quantity of production

Professor Davidson states: "Where quantity of production is held uppermost one finds prosperous farmers who plan to farm more acres without increasing the overhead."

Corn controls central western agriculture. In that area the acreage one man can farm is dependent on the number he can cultivate. With the single row cultivator he was unable to cultivate more than four to seven acres per day. The two row cultivator doubled this amount. Three and four row cultivators are now on the market—even six row were used this season. It cultivates fifty acres per day

PAINT-UP CLEAN-UP

Sheriff's Weekly Report. Week Ending March 26th, 1927

Leonard Reasoner, arrested Saturday for "switching" plates, was fined $25 and costs, or 25 days in jail. He chooses the jail.

James Venata, the Alvordton Ohio, boy who thought a little liquor was a necessary adjunct to a good time at Bird Lake, now thinks differently. He paid Justice Aldrich $20 and costs for the lesson.

In Circuit Court, Monday, Carl E. Halberg, late of Chicago was sentenced by Judge Chester to 9 months in Ionia and a fine of $200 and costs of $100. Halberg also lost his liquor, for which he paid $720, and his car. It may be strange, but we just can't see any profit in this transaction. We wish some others that we know of would borrow our spectacles and take a look too. Halberg was taken to Ionia by the Sheriff on Wednesday. Carl A., the father of Carl E. arrested at the same time, was sentenced to pay a fine of $300 and costs of $100 for carrying concealed weapons. He paid it.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker, Cambria Township were arrested Wednesday by the Sheriff's Department and charged with forgery. Investigation later disclosed that only the wife was implicated in the check deals, so Baker was released, to be immediately re-arrested for violation of the Motor Laws, (switching plates) He was arraigned before Justice Aldrich, Thursday, and sentenced to pay $20 and costs and spend 20 days in jail. The plates he was using were confiscated and returned by the Sheriff to the State Department. Mrs. Minnie Baker was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons on Friday, for forgery, and waived examination. She was bound over to the present term of the Circuit Court, and held in default of $500 bail.

George Mowrey, Hillsdale, was arrested on West street of this city, Friday charged with drunkenness. He was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons Saturday forenoon plead not guilty and trial was set for April 2. Later in the day he thought better of it and changed his plea to guilty. Sentence, $20 and costs.

Two farms were sold at auction by the Sheriff, in front of the Court House, Saturday forenoon. One, about 40 acres in Hillsdale Township sold for 3c more than the mortgage.

In Circuit Court, before Judge Chester Saturday forenoon Earl Lawrence, Jonesville's late brewer was sentenced to 6 months in Ionia. Before the same Court, Floyd Howell from the same place drew a sentence of $100 fine, $50 costs, and 9 months in Ionia for possessing and selling liquor. Again we have looked closely and we don't see where, everything considered, these chaps have made any money.

Chas L. Marriott, Jefferson township changed his plea on Saturday to "guilty of driving an auto while drunk", and was sentenced to 60 days in jail and to pay the costs of prosecution.

Floyd Parks, who donated a month of his life to Hillsdale Co. for Petty larceny, was on Saturday surrendered to the Commissioner on Pardons and Paroles, on a Governor's Warrant, for parole violation. He was returned to Jackson Prison, where he must finish his original sentence, (1 to 5 years), of which he has served but 1.

No of Prisoners in the County Jail 10. Under sentence 8. Awaiting sentence 2. Total 10.

Col. Earl H. Kerr, Sheriff

Most of the horticulturists do not want to spend the time necessary to care properly for colonies of bees; so they rent swarms from nearby apiaries. The owner of the bees moves them to the orchards and takes them away again as soon as the blossoming season is over.

Prof. R. H. Pettit, M. S. C. entomologist, has recently issued a pamphlet urging beekeepers to cooperate with the fruit men.

Clean Up and Paint Up

Your Boy's Vacation

It used to worry father and mother in days gone by as to how Johnnie or Jimmie were going to spend their vaction after the wind-up of school. Many of the worthy parents did not expect Johnnie and Jimmie to remain back on the old "forty" plowing, sowing, reaping, haying and threshing through the live-long summer, with no change of surroundings. It was too much for a modern young man, and mother or father usually insisted they both go to some near-by lake or resort where fishing and camping possibilities were good, and the lads might replenish their supply of acumen after a tedious round of schooling.

To-day its slightly different. The U. S. Government in its great wisdom has taken up the task of making men out of the splendid red blooded material of every country side town and community. The parents know where their boys can go now and spend a profitable thirty days having a wonderfully good time and at the same time building up their athletic bodies, increasing their knowledge, and securing the benefits of discipline. Any boys between the ages of 17 and 24 years in this vicinity who would like to take this unique experience at the expense of the state of Michigan can do so by applying at the Advocate office or to Dr. McFarland examining physician for this precinct. There is absolutely no strings to this offer. From the time you leave your own dooryard until you return you are on the expense of Uncle Sam. He clothes, feeds and does the whole trick of taking care of you. If you are by chance taken ill you are furnished the best of care and medicine. Over at Camp Custer they are building a splendid cinder track and a boxing ring. You will at certain hours be free to enjoy base ball, basket ball, hiking, entertainments, shooting and tennis, and your Uncle Samuel wants every boy who goes to Custer to be able to say candidly when he gets home. "I certainly have had the time of my life."

We hope this article will serve to wake up some of our boys and young men. The old home town is good enough to stop in part of the year but as a steady diet it gets you nowhere. After the close of school boys are more or less open to the call of the wild for adventure and mischief. A little of this is perhaps well enough but often the whole season through amounts to little to the boy who spends his vacation at home. They often tell you he is needed on the farm, but Alas! too often he finds too much time to be away and it is this particular time which should be improved. Late advices state that Wayne county has already gone over the top with 95 entries, Oakland county 10, Jackson county 12, Bay county 38, and many of the far counties of the upper peninsula are coming in surprisingly. Poor old Hillsdale county as far as we know has not a single entry as yet. What's the reason? Well its hard to diagnose exactly but we should think the young men were a little slow. They need pepping up.

A Place For Your Boy

Young men planning to spend their vacation at one of Michigan's summer training camps conducted by the C. M. T. C., at Camp Custer and Fort Brady this summer ought to get their applications in immediately, as Michigan has money to train but 1878 young men this summer, and when that number is obtained enrolling will stop. Everything for a 30 day training period including uniforms, food, clean bed linen, transportation to camp and back home again medical and dental care are all furnished without cost to the boys enrolling.

Every boy in Michigan between the ages of 17 and 24 years, physically sound and of good moral character is eligible to attend one of Michigan's two camps. The physical examination is furnished free, and no boy or parent should pay one cent to a physician or surgeon for this examination, as there are physicians and surgeons in every community who will perform this service free of charge. In every county in Michigan there is a county committee headed by a chairman and medical examiners who will enroll the student and give him his physical examination free. The enrollment for 1927 camps began on March 1, and 25 percent of the state's quota has already been enrolled with applications coming in every day from all parts of the state.

There will be a new innovation at this year's training camps in Michigan. All young men in both camps will wear the overseas cap instead of the campaign hat, and each company will have its own non-commissioned personnel taken from the C. M. T. C. students. This is an entirely new proposition and it is believed by the War Department that it will prove satisfactory to the boys and the instructors. Each boy selected as a leader will be furnished the insignia of his grade and he will have the leadership of his squad, platoon or company according to his grade. This will also give all of the students something to work for as the grade is given them in reward for their efforts.

Bees Insure Fruit In State Orchards

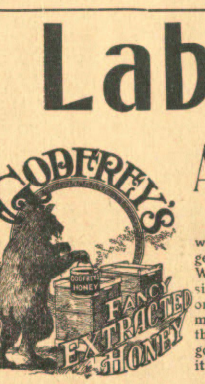
Many of the best varieties of fruit which are grown in Michigan will not produce profitable crops unless provision is made for cross pollination. H. D. Hootman, M. S. C. specialist in horticulture, believes that the simplest way of insuring the cross-pollination is to place hives of bees in the orchards at blossoming time.

Some of the popular fruits which need pollen from other varieties are: Northern Spy and Rhode Island Greening apples; Barlett and Kieffer pears; the J. H. Hale peach and Windsor sweet cherries. Pollen from blossoms of the Bosc and Flemish Beauty pears, Jonathan and Wealthy apples, Banner and Elberta peaches, and Dykman sweet cherries will fertilize the blossoms on the self-sterile varieties.

Except in very favorable seasons, wild bees and other insects are not present in sufficient numbers to pollinate enough of the flowers of the self-sterile sorts to produce a worth while crop of fruit By placing a swarm of bees on each acre of ground in the orchard adequate pollination is insured. The bees may be removed before poisonous sprays are used.

Labels

Auction Bills



This is auctton bill time and we print any size. It is also getting close to syrup label time We can fnrnish any style. any size; any color. We do not recommend gummed labels as the moisture loosens them soon and they drop off. Shellac is a real good adhesive for tin cans and it is non-soluble in moisture.

We can turn out a fairly good job of Auction Bills on short notice, and in the better grades of printing we do not takc a back eat.

FINDS ONLY MINE OF SILLIMANITE

Like the old man who had been talking in prose all his life without knowing it you have probably been a steady consumer of sillimanite without knowing it.

The sillimanite that you have been spending your money for and the rest of the sillimanite used throughout the world all passed through Detroit on its way to the market. That's because a Detroit man discovered the only known mine of sillimanite in the world and because his factory utilizing this rare mineral is located there. The porcelain core of one of the most widely sold brands of spark plugs is fused out of the crystaline rock named after a Yale geologist, Prof. Benjamin Silliman. (1779-1864).

It was because he felt an uncomfortable lump in his bed on the ground when he was camping out that the Detroit man, Dr. J. A. Jeffery, chanced to find the only known deposit of sillimanite.

During the war the government felt the need of better spark plugs. A porcelain core was desired that was stronger, that had a higher electrical resistance at high temperatures and a greater heat conductivity.

Microscopic analysis showed that the highly desirable properties were due to compact masses of sillimanite crystals in the cores. But such a great heat was requred to produce this sillimanite artificially that is looked doubtful as a commercial venture.

The thought occurred to Dr. Jeffery: "Why not look for a deposit of this rare form of aluminum silicate?"

But the geologists all discouraged Dr. Jeffrey. All the sillimanite that had ever been found consisted of isolated specimens about the size of a watch fob. Sillimanite was only a "museum" mineral. There was just enough of it to show that such crystals existed, usually, as tiny pockets in other rocks.

Dr. Jeffery began a search of all the literature relating to sillimanite and corresponded with geologists all over the world.

His next search was based on a "hunch." If there was any sillimanite, he reasoned, it would be found in regions where great natural convultions had occurred, where hot gasses and solutions of minerals had been most active.

He went over the reports again and decided that the Inyo mountains of California, one of the highest regions in North America, had come through about the hottest time and the greatest volcanic disturbances.

Dr. Jeffery and a hired companion had spent fruitless day in crawling up the face of cliffs and zig zagging up mountain walls, when twilight fell. It was usually a problem to find a big enough flat surface to sleep on. On this eventful evening Dr. Jeffery saw a bed of pine needles on a small rocky shelf that looked pretty good to him. In smoothing down this natural couch his hand bumped against a sharp rock about as big as the crown of a man's hat.

When he dug out this rock with his fingers to hurl it down into the canyon below, he was impressed by the unusual weight of the rock. "Just feel how heavy this rock is for the size of it," he remarked to his companion. The other man also thought it was curious.

It was too dark to examine the rock closely, so it was laid aside for later inspection by daylight. The next day Dr. Jeffery discovered that the rock, though entirely different in appearance from the museum specimens, was the sillimanite he was looking for.

Behind them a perpendicular cliff rose up, part of the face of White Mountain, 14,250 feet high. By straining his eyes Dr. Jeffrey thought he could detect an area that looked bluer than the rest of the cliff.

Business called Dr. Jeffher back to Detroit, but he instructed his man to get assistance, to climb to the top of the cliff and lower a man by rope down the face of the cliff until he reached the differently colored spot.

A week later Dr. Jeffery, in Detroit, received a telegram bearing the news that his suggestion had brought success beyond anticipation. A deposit of several million tons of sillimanite, the "non-existant" meneral, had been located.

MANISTEE HIGH SCHOOL TO COST $400,000 IS READY

Manistee's new $400,00 high school building is now completed after more than six months of construction operations. Equipment is being moved from the old central high school and by April 21 it is expected that all the classes will be held in the new edifice.

DR. MANETTE'S MANUSCRIPT

By Charles Dickens

"I always observed that their pride bitterly resented the younger's brother's (as I call him) having crossed swords with a peasant, and that peasant a boy. The only consideration that appeared to affect the mind of either of them was the consideration that this was highly degrading to the family, and was ridiculous. As often as I caught the younger brother's eyes, their expression reminded me that he disliked me deeply, for knowing what I knw from the boy. He was smoother and more polite to me than the elder; but I saw this. I also saw that I was an incumbrance in the mind of the elder, too.

"My patient died two hours before midnight—at a time, by my watch, answering almost to the minute when I had first seen her. I was alone with her, when her forlorn young head drooped gently on one side, and all her earthly wrongs and sorrows ended.

The brothers were waiting in a room down stairs, impatient to ride away. I had heard them, alone at the bedside, striking their boots with their riding whips and loitering up and down.

" 'At last she's dead?' said the elder when I went in.

" 'She is dead,' said I.

" 'I congratulate you, my brother,' were his words as he turned round.

"He had before offered me money, which I had postponed taking. He now gave me a rouleau of gold. I took it from his hand, but laid it on the table. I had considered the question and had resolved to accept nothing.

" 'Pray excuse me' said I. 'Under the circumstances, no.'

"They exchanged looks, but bent their heads to me as I bent mine to them, and we parted without another word on either side. . . .

"I am weary, weary, weary—worn down by misery. I canont read what I have written with this gaunt hand.

"Early in the morning, the rouleau of gold was left at my door in a little box, with my name on the outside. From the first, I had anxiously considered what I ought to do. I decided that day to write privately to the minister, stating the nature of the two cases to which I had been summoned and the place to which I had gone; in effect, stating all the circumstances. I knew what court influence was, and what the immunities of the Nobles were, and I expected that the matter would never be heard of; but I wished to relieve my own mind. I had kept the matter a profound secret even from my wife; and this, too, I resolved to state in my letter. I had no apprehension whatever of my real danger; but I was conscious that there might be danger for others, if others were compromised by possessing the knowledge that I possessed.

"I was much engaged that day, and could not complete my letter that night. I rose long before my usual time next morning to finish it. It was the last day of the year. The letter was lying before me just completed when I was told that a lady waited, who wished to see me. . .

"I am growing more and more unequal to the task I have set myself. It is so cold, so dark, my senses are so benumbed and the gloom upon me is so dreadful.

"The lady was young, engaging and handsome, but not marked for long life. She was in great agitation. She presented herself to me as the wife of the Marquis St. Evremonde. I connected the title by which the boy had addressed the elder brother, with the initial letter embroidered on the scarf, and had no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that I had seen that nobleman very lately.

"My memory is still accurate, but I cannot write the words of our conversation. I suspect that I am watched more closely than I was, and I know not at what times I may be watched. She had in part suspected and in part discovered, the main facts of the cruel story, of her husband's share in it, and my being resorted to. She did not know that the girl was dead. Her hope had been, she said in great distress, to show her, in secret, a woman's sympathy. Her hope had been to avert the wrath of Heaven from a house that had long been hateful to the suffering many. She had reasons for believing that there was a young sister living, and her greatest desire was to help that sister. I could tell her nothing but that there was such a sister; beyond that I knew nothing. Her inducement to come to me, relying on my confidence, had been the hope that I could tell her the name and place of abode Where as to this wretched hour I am ignorant of both. . . .

"These scraps of paper fail me. One was taken from me, with a warning, yesterday. I must finish my record today. She was a good, compassionate lady, and not happy in her marriage. How could she be? The brother distrusted and disliked her, and his influence was all opposed to her; she stood in dread of him and in dread of her husband too. When I handed her down to the door, there was a child, a pretty boy from two to three years old, in her carriage.

" 'For his sake, Doctor,' she said, pointing to him in tears, 'I would do all I can to make what poor amends I can. He will never prosper in his inheritance otherwise. I have a presentiment that if no other innocent atonement is made for this, it will one day be required of him. What I have left to call my own—it is little beyond the worth of a few jewels—I will make it the first charge of his life to bestow, with the compassion and lamenting of his dead mother, on this injured family, if the sister can be discovered.' She kissed the boy, and said, caressing him, 'It is for thine own dear sake. Thou wilt be faithful, little Charles?' The child answered her bravely, 'Yes!' I kissed her hand, and she took him in her arms, and went away caressing him. I never saw her more. As she had mentioned her husband's name in the faith that I knew it, I added no metion of it to my letter. I sealed my letter, and, not trusting it out of my own hands, delivered it myself that day.

"That night, the last night of the year, towards nine o'clock, a man in a black dress rang at my gate, demanded to see me, and softly followed my servant, Ernest Defrage, a youth, upstairs. When my servant came into the room where I sat with my wife—O my wife, beloved of my heart! My fair young English wife!—we saw the man, who was supposed to be at the gate, standing silent behind him.

" 'An urgent case in the Rue St. Honore,' he said. It would not detain me, he had a coach waiting.

"It brought me here, it brought me to my grave. When I was clear of the house, a black muffler was drawn tightly over my mauth from behind, and my arms were pinioned. The two brothers crossed the road from a dark corner, and identified me with a single gesture. The Marquis took from his pocket the letter I had written, showed it me, burnt it in the light of a lantern that was held, and extinguished the ashes with his foot. Not a word was spoken. I was brought here, I was brought to my living grave.

"If it had pleased God to put it in the hard heart of either of the brothers, in all these frightful years, to grant me any tidings of my dearest wife—so much as to let me know by a word whether alive or dead—I might have thought that He had not quite abandoned them. But, now I believe that the mark of the red cross is fatal to them, and that they have no part in His mercies. And them and their descendants, to the last of their race, I, Alexander Manette, unhappy prisoner, do this last night of the year 1767, in my unbreakable agony await the times when all these things shall be answered for. I denounce them to Heaven and the earth."

SAVING LAKES FISH IS NATION'S AIM

The conference to consider means of checking depletion of Great Lakes fisheries is described as having had "gratifying" results in a statement by Henry O'Malley, commissioner of the Federal Bureau of Fisheries.

Mr. O'Malley expressed himself as particularly pleased with the conference's decision to establish a permanent organization to be known as the International Fisheries Conservation Council of the Great Lakes, declaring that "good results are bound to follow from the work of this council." The present condition of lake fisheries, he said, is "alarming."

"The Great Lakes have been noted for centuries for their abundance of fish, unequalled on any continent,' says the statement. "The whitefish catch declined from 21,000,000 pounds in 1889 to 4,000,000 pounds in 1922, and during the same period the sturgeon catch dropped from 7,500,000 to less than 100,000 pounds. The very existence of a number of other species is threatened.

"The problems of the Great Lakes fisheries are not alone state problems but national and international. Lake Michigan is bordered by four states and Lake Erie by four states and one province. If the fisheries are to be saved there must be co-ordinated and co-operative, as well as prompt, action."

OLD CHURCH GIVES WAY TO PROGRESS

Another landmark of Detroit is being demolished. It is the old Scotch meeting house at Bates and Farmer streets, and it will be replaced by the three-story store and office structure to be known as the Ponchelon Building.

The Scotch Presbyterians of Detroit held several meetings in the Council Chamber of the old City Hall at the head of Cadillac Square in the fall of 1842, and on November 10 effected an organization. Two weeks later they bought the lot at Bates and Farmer streets for $500 and erected on the site a wooden church somewhat after the fashion of the old New English meeting houses. It was fully completed in October, 1844, at a cost of $3,500, and it had a seating capacity of 600.

Colin Campbell and Thomas Linn of Campbell & Linn, merchants then at the corner of Congress and Woodward avenue, bought the old church building and donated it to a group of members of the First Christian Church who had withdrawn from the church at the southwest corner of Jefferson avenue and Beaubien street. This group purchased a lot on Washington boulevard, now occupied by the Book Building and formerly owned by John Hale. The wooden church was moved up Bates street to Monroe and then up Michigan to Washington.

At that time Washington avenue resembled a forest of elm trees with a narrow driveway through the middle of it. This passage was so narrow that it was impossible to move the church through the driveway until ropes had been fastened to the tops of the trees and they were swung back from the road each way. It was a laborious task, getting the old church upon the new site, but at last it was accomplished, and it was set well back from the street at the rear of the lot. Then it remained until the middle of the 90's, several years after it had been abandoned and given over to decay.

On the old site a brick church was begun, and it was ready for dedication in the fall of 1871. The old church at Bates and Farmer streets later was remodeled into the Liberty Theater, and now it is being demolished to make place for a modern building.

VOTERS OF OTTAWA SQUABBLE OVER BAN ON INMATES' SMOKE

Voters of Ottawa county have started a campaign to force the ditting of the ban on tobacco at the Ottawa county infirmary. Petitions are being circulattd and tht issut is to be fought out at the spring mteting of the Board of Supervisors. Some of the supervisors have indicated they will order the ban lifted.

The ban on tobacco was placed at the infirmary six years ago by Lewis H. Peck, the superintendent, but it was only a few weeks ago that the matter was brought to the attention of the public. The three county superintendents of the poor are standing behind Mr. Peck.

Much feeling has been created in Ottawa county over the ban which forces the aged inmates of the poor house to bootleg their tobacco and then smoke it sub rosa. Ottawa county newspapers are making a fight against the rule. Many women have enlisted in the campaign and have started circulating petitions to present to the supervisors. Two churches at Holland have named committees to oppose the tobacco ban.

No question in years has caused so much feeling in the county. Countless letters are being written to the newspapers, demanding that if the building is a fire trap that it be replaced and until that time a room be provided for the inmates where they can smoke in safety and peace.

MARSHALL M. C. SHOPS GO ON 6-DAY WEEK BASIS

General Foreman George Rushford, of the Michigan Central car shops, announced the shops at Marshall will hereafter operate six instead of five days each week. The Flint foundry plant, which has been closed since October, resumed operations with 100 employes.

12,000 HORSES IN AUTO METROPOLIS

A veteran auctioneer of 40 years, shouts their good qualities and admits their bad points, and at the end of the year, even in these days of motor transportation, sells 6000 a year.

Detroit, he says, has become the horse buying center for Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. "Sfunny thing, when you come to think of it," he declared, "this being a horse center with all the world looking upon Detroit as the automobile center."

Approximately 500 men, all interested in horses, attend the auction sales every week. Some come with trade-ins, offering their own for sale and buying up the offerings of others. The big out of town buyer is just as much in evidence as he was 20 years ago.

"Yes, they're still buying horses," said the auctioneer between sales. "More than ever. Did you ever stop to realize there are 12,000 horses in Detroit?"

Some society snobs doubtless pity Adam because he had no ancestors.

YOUR CHANCE TO EARN MORE MONEY

The Auto Business Needs You

Are you ambitious? Are you seeking a better job or a business of your own? If so, here's your chance—a chance to really cash in. There are more amazing money-making opportunities in the automobile business now than ever before. Follow the lead of the thousands of "Michigan State" graduates. They have already proved what real training will do for an ambitious man. They are making big money. You can too! This school has over 20,000 graduates. Come to Detroit, a fine city. Big business, pleasant climate all year around. Come now, and fit yourself for a better job or to run a garage business of your own. Thousands of battery shops, auto electrical shops, tire and welding shops are needed now. Only trained men can run them. Good work is what car owners want, and it takes a trained man to do it.

Without any previous experience—just a liking for mechanics—you can learn the auto business from A to Z in a few weeks at the Michigan State Automobile School—the factory-endorsed school in Detroit—the heart of the industry. Then step out, equipped with knowledge and training, to a future of certain, big money making. You have great advantages, learning the business here. It's the fountain head of the automotive industry. You are taught under factory-endorsed methods. You learn both theory and practice on latest equipment. Go through the great Ford plants. Visit the other automobile factories. Learn their methods first hand—and it all means greater opportunities and more certain success. The Michigan State Automobile School, in Detroit, the automobile center, is the logical place to learn the auto business.

Home Study Course

For these who can not come to Detroit for their training, we have a special Home Study Course. This course covers the same subjects in detail as our Residence Course.

$2 Starts You

Under new plan, $2.00 will bring first two lessons of your Home Study training. Act at once.

Decide Today

Auto factories endorse "Michigan State" training methods. Because they are thorough, practical. Because they put knowledge in your head and in your hands. Because they really fit you to make good. Harold Grenert (Mass.) says, "Two years ago I left a $20 a week job. Now I earn $70 as auto electrician, thanks to M. S. A. S." If necessary we can assist students to part time work to help pay living expenses. Or students who wish to take our evening course will be assisted to full time day jobs. Ask for details, and when writing please explain your circumstances fully.

$100 Business Course FREE

A practical, money-making Business Course, supervised by a former Packard service manager, is FREE to all students. Tells you how to locate a garage, about equipment, systems, financing, selling, advertising. Worth $100 alone. NO EXTRA CHARGE.

Come to Detroit

Of course Detroit is the place to learn autos. Over three-fourths of all cars come from here. Detroit training is practical training. Stick this in your memory,—the Detroit Trained man has an immense advantage over all others. So come here as soon as you can. Come now if possible, and prepare yourself for the big profit to be made this summer from the repair and service business. If you can't come now, start to learn under our Home Study plan. (This does not cost anything extra). Then plan to come here later to finish and get your diploma. W. J. Anderson (Minn.) writes: "I used to be a blacksmith's helper at $15 a month with board. Now I take in $300 a month in my one-man garage. Soon I'll have a bigger shop and earn more."

How To Start!

A Forest Betrothal

By ERCKMANN-CHATRIAN

One day in the month of June, 1845, Master Zacharias' fishing basket was so full of salmon trout, about three o'clock in the afternoon, that the good man was loath to take any more; for as Pathfinder says: "We must leave some for tomorrow!" After having washed his in a stream and carefully covered them with field sorrel and rowell, to keep them fresh; after having wound up his line and bathed his hands and face; a sense of drowsiness tempted him to take a nap in the heather. The heat was so excessive that he preferred to wait until the shadows lengthened before declimbing the steep ascent of Bigelberg.

Breaking his crust of bread and wetting his lips with a draught of Rikevir, he climbed down fifteen or twenty steps from the path and stretched himself on the moss covered ground, under the shade of the pine trees; his eyelids heavy with sleep.

A thousand animate creatures had lived their long life of an hour, when the judge was awakened by the whistle of a bird, which sounder strange to him He sat up to loog around and judge his surprice; the so called bird was a young girl of seventeen or eighteen years of age, fresh with rosy cheeks and vermillion lips, brown hair which hung in two long tresses behind her. A short poppy colored skirt, with a tightly laced bodice, completed her costume. She was a young peasant, who was rapidly descending the sandy path down the side of Bigelberg, a basket poised on her head and her arms a little sun burned, but plump, were gracefully resting on her hips.

Mr. Zacharias was all emotion—a rush of hot blood, which made his heart beat as it did at twenty, coursed through his veins. Blushing, he arose to his feet.

"Good day, my pretty one," he said.

The young girl stopped short—opened her big eyes and recognized him (for who did not know the dear old Judge Zacharias in that part of the country?)

"Ah!" she said, with a bright smile, "it is Mr. Zacharias Seiler!"

The old man approached her—he tried to speak—but all he could do was to stammer a few unintelligible words, just like a very young man—his embarrassment was so great that he completely disconcerted the young girl. At last he managed to say:

"Where are you going through the forest at this hour, my dear child?"

"I am returning to my father's house, the Corporal Yeri Foerster. You know him without doubt, Monsieur le Juge."

"What, are you our brave Yeri's daughter? Ah, do I know him? A very worthy man. Then you are little Charlotte of whom he has often spoken to me when he came with his official reports?"

"Yes, Monsieur; I have just come home."

"That is a very pretty bunch of Alpine berries you have,55 exclaimed the old man.

She detached the bouquet from her belt and tendered it to him.

"If it would please you, Monsieur Seiler."

Zacharias was touched.

"Yes, indeed," he said, "I will accept it, and I will accompany you to your home. I am anxious to see this brave Foerster again. He must be getting old by now."

"He is about your age, Monsieur le Juge," sair Charlotte innocently, "between fifty-five and sixty years of age."

This simple speech recalled the good man to his senses and as he walked beside her he became pensive.

What was he thinking of? Nobody could tell; but how many times, how many times has it happened that a brave and worthy man, thinking that he has fulfilled all his dutiesfi finds that he has neglected the greatest, the most sacred, the most beautiful of all—that of love. And what it costs him to think of it when it is too late.

Soon Mr. Zacharias and Charlotte came to the turn of the valley where the path spanned a little pond by the means of a rustic bridge, and let straight to the corporal's house. They could now see Yeri Foerster, his large felt hat decorated with a twig of heather, his calm eyes, his brown cheeks and grayish hair, seated on the stone bench near his doorway; two beautiful hunting dogs, with reddish brown coats, lay at his feet, and the high vine arbor behind him rose to the peak of the gable roof.

The shadows on Ramelstein were lengthening and the setting sun ahd spread its purple fringe behind the high fir trees on Alpnach.

The old corporal, whose eyes were as piercing as an eagle's recognized Monsiuer Zacharias and his daughter from afar. He came toward them, lifting his felt hat respectfully.

"Welcome, Yeri,' replied the good man, "I am belated in your mountains. Have you a vacant corner at your table and a bed at the disposition of a friend?"

"Ah," cried the corporal, "if there were but one bed in the house, should it not be at the service of the best, the most honored of our ex-magistrates of Stantz? Monsieut Seiler, what an honor you confer on Yeri Foerster's humble home."

"Christine, Christine; Monsieur le Juge Zacharias Seiler wishes to sleep under our roof tonight."

Then a little old woman, her face wrinkled like a vine leaf, but still fresh and laughing, her head crowned by a cap with wide black ribbons, appeared on the threshold and disappeared again, murmuring:

"What? Is it possible? Monsieur le Juge!"

"My good people," sair Mr. Zacharias, "truly you do me too much honor—I hope——"

"Monsieur le Juge, if you forget the favors you have done to others, they remember them."

Charlotte placed her basket on the table, feeling very proud of having been the means of bringing so distinguished a visitor to the house. She took our the sugar, the coffee and all the little odds and ends of household provisions which she had purchased in the town. And Zacharias, gazing at her pretty profile, felt himself agitated once more, his poor old heart beat more quickly in his bosom and seemed to say to him: "This is love, Zacharias! This is love! This is love!"

To tell the truth, my dear friends, Mr. Seiler spent the evening with the head forester, Yeri Foerster, perfectly oblivious to the fact of Therese's uneasiness, to his promise to return before seven o'clock, to all his old habits of order and submission.

Picture to yourself the large room, the time browned rafters of the ceiling, the windows opened on the silent valley, the round table in the middle of the room, covered with a white cloth, with rep stripes running thru it; the light from the lamp, bringing out more clearly the grave faces of Zacharias and Yeri, the rosy, laughing features of Charlotte and Dame Christine's little cap, with long fluttering streamers. Picture to yourself the soup tureen, with gayly flowered bowl, from which rose an appetising odor, the dish of trout garnished with parsley, the plates filled with fruits and little meal cakes as yellow as gold; then worthy Father Zacharias, handing first one and then the other of the plates of fruit and cakes to Charlotte, who lowered her eyes, frightened at the old man's compliments and tender speeches.

Yeri was quite puffed up at his praise, but Dame Christine said: "Ah, Monsieur, le Juge! You are too good. You do not know how much trouble this little girl gives us, or how headstrong she is when she wants anything. You will spoil her with so many compliments."

To which speech Mr. Zacharias made reply:

"Dame Christine, you possess a treasure! Mademoiselle Charlotte merits all the good I have said of her."

"Let us drink to the health of our good and venerated Judge Zacharias Seiler."

The toast was drunk with a will.

Just then the clock, in its hoarse voice, struck the hour of eleven. Out of doors there was the great silence of the forest, the grasshopper's last cry, the vague murmur of the river. As the hour sounded, they hose, preparatory to retiring. How fresh and agile he felt. With what ardor, had he dared, would be not have pressed a kiss upon Charlotte's little hand! Oh, but he must not think of that now! Later on, perhaps!

"Come, Master Yeri," he said, "it is bed time. Good night, and many thanks for your hospitality."

"Oh," he replied gazing at Charlotte, "I am an early bird. I do not feel my age though perhaps you might not think so. I rise at five o'clock."

"Like me, Monsieur Seiler," cried the head forester. I rise before day break; but I must confess it is tiresome all the same—we are no longer young. Ha! Ha!"

"Bah! I have never had anything ail me, Master Forester; I have never been more vigorous or more nimble."

And suiting his actions to his words, he ran briskly up the steep steps of the staircase. Really, Mr. Zacharias was no more than twenty; but his twenty years lasted about twenty minutes, and once nestled in the large canopied bed, with the covers drawn up to his chin and his handkerchief tied around his head, in lieu of a nightcap, he said to himself:

"Sleep, Zacharias! Sleep! You have great need of rest; you are very tired."

And the good man slept until nine o'clocsk. The forester returning from his rounds, uneasy at his non-appearance, went up to his room and wished him good morning. Then seeing the sun high in the heavens, hearing the birds warbling in the foliage, the Judge, ashamed of his boastfulness of the previous night, arose, alleging as an excuse for his prolonged slumbers, the fatigue of fishing and the length of the supper of the evening before.

"Ah, Monsieur Seiler," said the forester, "it is perfectly natural; I would love dearly myself to sleep in the mornings, but I must always be on the go. What I want is a son-in-law, a strong youth to replace me; I would voluntarily give him my gun and hunting pouch."

Zacharias could not restrain a feeling of great uneasiness at these words. Being dressed, he descended in silence. Christine was waiting with his breakfast; Charlotte had gone to the hay field.

The breakfast was short, and Mr. Seiler having thanked these good people for their hospitality, turned his face toward Stantz; he became pensive, as he thought of the worry to which Mademoiselle Therese had been subjected; yet he was not able to tear his hopes from his heart, nor the thousand charming illusions, which came to him like a late comer in a nest of warblers.

By autumn he had fallen so into the habit of going to the forester's house that he was oftener there than at his own; and the head forester, not knowing to what love of fishing to attribute these visits, often found himself embarrassed at being obliged to refuse the multiplicity of presents which the worthy ex-magistrate (he himself being very much at home) begged of him to accept in compensation for his daily hospitality.

Besides, Mr. Seiler wished to share all his occupations, following him in his rounds in the Grinderwald and Entilbach.

Yeri Foerster often shook his head, saying: "I never knew a more honest or better judge than Mr. Zacharias Seiler. When I used to bring my reports to him, formerly, he always praised me, and it is to him that I owe my raise to the rang of head forester. But," he added to his wife, "I am afraid the poor man is a little out of his head. Did he not help Charlotte in the hay field, to the infinite enjoyment of the peasants? Truly, Christine, it is not right; but I dare not say so to him, he is so much above us. Now he wants be to accept a pension—and such a pension—one hundred florins a month. And that silk dress he gave Charlotte on her birthday. Do young girls wear silk dresses in our valley? Is a silk dress the think for a forester's daughter?"

"Leave him alone," said the wife. "He is contented with a little milk and meal. He likes to be with us; it is a change from his lonesome city life, with no one to talk to but his old governess; mhilst here the little one looks after him. He likes to talk to her. Who knows but he may end by adopting her and leave her something in his will?"

The head forester, not knowing what to say, shrugged his shoulders; his good judgment told him there was a mystery, but he never dreamed of suspecting the good man's whole folly.

One fine morning a wagon slowly wended its way down the sides of Bigelberg loaded with three casks of old Rikevir wine. Of all the presents that could be given to him this was the most acceptable, for Yeri Foerster loved, above everything else, a good glass of wine.

"That warms one up,' he would say laughing. And when he had tasted this wine he could not help saying:

"Mr. Zacharias is really the best man in the world. Has he not filled my cellar with wine for me? Charlotte, go and gather the prettiest flowers in the garden; but all the roses and the jasimine, make them into a bouquet, and when he comes you will present them to him yourself. Charlotte! Charlotte! Hurry up, here he comes with his long pole."

At this moment the old man appeared descending the hillside in the shade of the pines with a brisk step.

As far off as Yeri could make himself heard, he called out, his glass in his hand:

And Zacharias smiled. Dame Christine had aleady commenced preparations for dinner; a rabbit was turning at the spit and the savory odor of the soup whetted Mr. Seiler's appetite.

The old Judge's eys brghtened when he saw Charlotte n her short poppy colored skrt, her arms bare to the elbow, runnng here and there n the garden paths gathering the flowers, and when he saw her approaching him with her huge bouquet, which she humbly presented to him with down cast eyes.

"Monsieur le Juge, will you deign to accept this bouquet from your little friend Charlotte?"

A sudden blush overspread his venerable cheeks, and as she stooped to kiss his hand, he said:

"No, no, my dear child; accept rather from your old friend, your best friend, a more tender embrace."

He kissed both her burning cheeks. The head forester laughing heartily, cried out:

"Monsieur Seiler, come and sit down under the acacia tree and drink some of your own wine. Ah, my wife is right when she calls you our benefactor.'

Mr. Zacharias seated himself at the little round table, placing his pole behind him; Charlotte sat facing him, Yeri Foerster was on his right; then dinner was served and Mr. Seiler started to speak of his plans for the future.

He was wealthy and had inherited a fine fortune from his parents. He wished to buy some few hundred acres of forest land in the valley, and build in the midst a forester's lodge. "We would alwaye be together," he said, turning to Yeri Foerster, "sometimes you at my house, sometimes I at yours."

Christine gave her advice, and they chatted, planning now one thing, then another. Charlotte seemed perfectly ontented, and Zacharias imagined that these simple people understood him.

Thus the time passed, and when night had fallen and they had a surfeit of Rikevir, of rabbit and of Dame Christine's "koechten" sprinkled with cinnamon, Mr. Seiler, happy and contented, full of joyous hope, ascended o his room, putting off until tomorrow his declaration, not doubting for a moment but that it would be accepted.

About this time of the year the mountaineers from Harberg, Kusnacht and the surrounding hamlets descended from their mountains about one o'clock in the morning and commence to mow the high grass in the valleys. One can hear their conotonous songs in the middle of the night, keeping time to the circular movement of the scythes, the jingle of the cattle bells, and the younf men's and girls' voices laughing afar in the silence of the night. It is a strange harmony, especiaaly when the night is clear and there is a bright moon, and the heavy dew falling makes a pitter patter on the leaves of the great forest trees.

Mr. Zacharias heard nothing of all this, for he was sleeping soundly; but the noise of a handful of peas being thrown against the window waked him suddenly. He listened and heart outside at the bottom of the wall, a "scit! scit!" so softly whispered that you might almost think it the cry of some bird. Nevertheless, the good man's heart fluttered.

"What is that?" he cried.

"Charlotte, Charlotte—it is I"

Zacharias trembled; and as he listened with ears on the alert for each sound, the foliage on the trellis struck against the window and a figure climbed up quietly—oh so quietly—then stopped and stared into the room.

The old man being indignant at this, rose and opened the window, upon which the stranger climbed through noiselessly.

"Do not be frightened, Charlotte," he said, "I have come to tell you some good news. My father will be here tomorrow."

He received no response, fror the reason that Zacharias was trying to light the lamp.

"Where are you, Charlotte?"

The young man who stood before him was tall and slender, with large, frank, black eyes, brown cheeks, rosy lips, just covered with a little moustache, and a large brown, felt hat, tilted a little to one side.

im to immovability. But as the judge was about to cry out, he exclaimed:

"In the name of Heaven, do not call. I am no robber—I love Charlotte!"

"And—she—she?" stammered Zacharias.

"She loves me also. Oh, you need have no fear if you are one of her relations. We were betrothed at the Kusnacht fast. The finances of the Grinderwald and the Entilbach have the right to visit in the night. It is a custom of Unterwald. All the Swiss know that."

"Yeri Foerster—Yeri, Charlotte's father never told me."

"No, he does not know of our betrothal yet," said the other, in a lower tone of voice, "when I asker his permission last year he told me to wait—that his daughter was too young yet—we were botrothed secretly. Only as I had not the Forester's consent, I did not come in the night time. This is the first time. I saw Charlotte in the town; but the time seemed so long to us both that I ended by confessing al lto my father, and he has promised to see Yeri tomorrow. Ah, Monsieur, I know it would give such pleasure to Charlotte that I could not help coming to announce my good news."

The poor old man feel back in his chair and covered his face with his hands. Oh, how he suffered! What bitter thoughts passed through his brain; what a sad awakening after so many sweet and joyous dreams.

And the young mountaineer was n t a whit more comfortable, as he stood leaning against a corner of the wall, his arms crossed over his breast, and the following thoughts running thru his head:

"I old Foerster, who does not know of our betrothal, finds me here, he will kill me without listening to one work of explanation. That is certain.

"What is your name?"

"Karl Mmnant, Monsieur."

"What is your business?"

'My father hopes to obtain the position of a forester in the Grinderwald for me."

There was a long silence and Zacharias looked at the young man with an envious eye.

"Oh, yes, Monsieur; we love each other devotedly."

"Yes, she ought to love him; he is young and handsome."

And his head fell on his breast again. All at once he arose, trembling in every limb, and opened the window.

"Young man, you have done very wrong; you will never know how much wrong you have really done. You must obtain Mr. Foerster's consent—but go—go—you will hear from me soon."

The young mountaineer did not wait for a second invitation; with one bound he jumped to the path below and disappeared behind the grand old trees.

At seven o'clock, having regained his usual calmness of demeanor, he descended to the room below, where Charlotte, Dame Christine and Yeri were already waiting breakfast for him. The old man, turning his eyes from the young girl, advanced to the head forester, saying:

"My friend, I have a favor to ask of you. You know the son of the forester of the Grinderwald, do you not?"

"Karl Imnant, why yes sir!"

"He is a worthy young man, and well behaved, I believe."

"I think so, Monsieur."

'Is he capable of succeeding his father?"

'Yes, he is twenty-one years old; he knows all about tree clipping, which is the most necessary thing of all—he knows how to head and how to write; but that is not all; he must have influence."

"Well, Master Yeri, I still have some influence in the Department of Forests and Rivers. This day fortnight or three weeks at the latest Karl Immant shall be assistant forester of the Grinderwald, and I ask the hand of your daughter Charlotte for this brave young man."

At this request, Charlotte, who had blushed and trembled with fear, uttered a cry and fell back into her mother's arms.

Her father, looking at her severely, said: "What is the matter, Charlotte? Dou you refuse?"

"Oh, no, no, father—no!"

"That is as it should be! As for myself, I should never have refused any request of Mr. Zacharias Seiler's. Come here and embrace your benefactor."

Charlotte ran toward hm and the old man pressed her to his heart, gazing long and earnestly at her, with eyes filled with tears. Then pleading business he started home, with only a crust of bread in his basket for breakfast.

Fifteen days afterward, Karl Immant received the appointment of foresterfi, taking his father's place. Eight days later, he and Charlotte were married.

The guests drank the rich Rikevir wine, so highly esteemed by Yeri Foerster, and which seemed to him to have arrived so opportunely for the feast.

Mr. Zacharias Seiler was not present that day at the wedding, being ill at home. Since then he rarely goes fishing—and then, always to the Brunnen—toward the lake—on the other side of the mountain.

LAKE GIVES UP ITS FORTUNE IN COAL TO OIL FURNACE USER

For many years Mr. Simansky has watched the snow and ice banks disappear in the spring to reveal the white sand of the meach that comprises a large part of his back yard. But this year the spring thaw disclosed a black shore line.

The black substance proved to be tons of coal. It was deposited there by the lake, in which the coal has rested for several months since it was carried from the wrecked coal dock of the Riley Hilker Co., not far from the Simansky home. The wrecking of the dock cast $15,000 worth of coal into the lake. Additional tons are being freighted by the current toward the Simansky property. The merchant will have enough coal to last a lifetime.

But all is not gold that glitters, Mr. Simansky says. He has an oil burning furnace.

TOMATO JUICE RICH IN VITAMIN C SAY DOCTORS

Tomato juice may be used the same as orange juice for feeding babies because both are sources of vitamin C, the vitamin which makes children grow properly. Grapefruit juice also may be used and lemons, tomatoes fresh or canned, supply the same vitahmin, so any baby, whether breast fed or bottle fed, need not be without this necessary substance at any time of the year.

Lemon, orange or tomato juice may be given to a baby as young as three weeks. The juice should be strained and diluted with an equal amount of boiled water and the feeding should begin with a teaspoonful of this mixture once a day. As the child grows older the amount should be increased and by the time the baby is a year old the fruit juice may be divided by the number of the feedings during a day, and added to each bottle just before feeding time.

"ORIGINAL MITZI" RETURNS TO BATTLE CREEK STAGE

Miss Ione Wlber, of Charlotte, coloratura soprano, the original Mitzi in Schubert's "Blossom Time," and who suffered a nervous breakdown two years ago after her company had been chosen to appear n London and the continent, is planning to resume her nterrupted stage career. At the second annual minstrel show staged recently by the Charlotte commandery, Knights Templar, Miss Wilber's singing was one of the features of the program. She has been broadcasting and now has engaged to appear in a song group in a Battle Creek theater.

12,900 ACRES IN NEW GAME HAVEN

Sanctuaries and reservations are becoming more popular and numerous in the country as civilization progresses. First the native races were given wide areas suited to their ways of living, where the intruder and improver were for bidden, and the natural man could continue in the usages that to him were natural. Then, as game animals and birds diminished under gun fire, lands and waters were set apart as refugees so that the creatures might replenish their numbers in peace. Sportsmen desired these sanctuaries in the interests of their pursuit and the public repoiced in their establishment because no one wished the wild life to be exterminated.

When the state of Michigan approved the purchase of 12,900 acres of land in Otsego and Cheboygan counties, it authorized the securing of the largest area of land ever acquired by the state for game refuge and public hunting ground purposes.

Here is a region in the plateau country of the southern peninsula of Michigan that is estimated to be 1400 feet above sea level. The air is pure, clean and inviporating. In Otsego county alone there are sox trout streams heading in the gravel beds of the high hills and flowing in all directions. They are the Pigeon, the Black, the Au Sable, the Manistee, the Sturgeon and the Boyne. Each is a trout stream par excellence, and if properly protected and restricted at the headwaters, will furnish all fishermen sport with fly rod or cane pole.

The ney state owned reserve will make possible free fishing on about 11 miles of the Pigeon River and five miles on the Black. Both streams drain north of Gaylord, the Piegon emptying into Mullet Lake in Cheboygan county, and the Black into Black Lake in the same county.

From 1913 to date the state of Michigan has established several refugees through dedication of state land, and by purchase of privately owned land selected for the purpose. They are as follows:

Refuges on private lands throughout the state created by act of 1913, 29,176 acres, made up of 163 parcels of private land. On most of this property there are plenty of deer, small game, fur animals, ruffed grouse and water fowl. Also a tract of 12,800 acres was leased in 1912 in Corwith township, Otsego county. There are some elk on this preserve.

A gift of $3200 to the Manistee public schools with which to purchase manual training and domestic science laboratory equipment for the new $400,000 high school just completed by Manistee has been made by Mrs. Robert R. Blacker of Pasadena, California, wife of a lumber millionaire whose money was made in lumber and timber business in Michigan. Mrs. Blacker gave $3000 to start the vocational department of Manistee 15 years ago when there were only a handful of students. Now 680 boys and girls use the equipment she spplied and that purchased since by the board of education.

Nominees For Superintendent of Public Instruction

Most of our voters who are going to the polls next Monday to sanction their choice of candidates for the different offices in township and state should remember the importance of the occasion. Just put yourself upon your honor, as it were, for you have a solemn and highly responsible duty to perform. Bear in mind that your vote may help to make or break the law enforcment system of Michigan. We wish to call your attention to the candidates for Superintendent of Public Instruction who are to be voted on next Monday. They are Prof. Pittman of the Ypsilanti Normal College (democratic) and Prof Pearce, (republican) of Ann Arbor. Superintendent R. C. Young informs us that both of these men are acquaintances of his and Mr. Young is positive both of them are without fault as far as the duties of office might be concerned—both capable, highly trained and conscientious to a large degree. Further than that, we want to drop a small hint. Don't let your party affiliations bother your conscience when it comes to voting for the man whom you know to be honest and efficient, but let politics go to the dogs In Adams township we have some mighty good timber on both ballots, and some who are not so good. The fact that they are Republican or Democratic, is a picayune. Away with it!

It may interest some of our readers to know how the diphtheria toxins are manufactured at the biological department at Lansing. In the first place choice carcasses of veal calves are carefully dressed and all fat portions removed. These veals are then put into a boiler and boiled to extract the juices producing a high grade of broth. This broth is carefully refined and taken care of in such a way as to exclude all unwanted germs, in fact it is practically germless and sterilized. Here are bottled germs of diphtheria by the million laid away in the laboratory for future use. To this broth carefully sterilized are added a certain portion of germs, again the mixture is boiled and after proper time it becomes virulent diphtheria toxin. It is given a final test to determine its strength and freedom from other germs after which sealing air tight is accomplished by means of wax. These little glass containers are the ones sent to physicians for use in treatment of the disease. Manufacture of other toxins for other diseases is conducted in the same manner, so it will be seen that science has progressed quite noticeably in the past few years.

WHEN a food outgrows the stage of being a delicacy and becomes so universally used as to be a staple, a demand is created for various forms of that food on the market. Not so long ago, tomatoes grew in old-fashioned gardens as "love apples," to be looked at but not eaten. Later it was discovered they were good to eat. The first tomatoes canned were a delicacy, but today, tomatoes can be bought in some dozen different forms — ranging from whole tomatoes to tomato paste.

Pineapple used to grow in royal gardens under glass. When it was discovered that Hawaii could grow better pineapple in the open fields and ship it, sun-ripened in cans, pineapple was a delicacy. Today, with the discovery that pineapple is a complement to meat and vegetables, it is known, also, that it contains valuable food elements. It is not only a delicacy but an important food product and is packed in a variety of forms, ranging from sliced pineapple to the pineapple juice.

The most popular forms in which Hawaiian pineapple is available are sliced, crushed, "tid-bits" and broken slices, and pineapple juice. Both sliced and crushed pineapple may be had in what is known as "fancy," the choicest pack, and "standard," almost as choice but costing less, and very delicious.

Crushed pineapple is primarily a culinary ingredient. It is just as choice as the slices—in fact, it is even better as far as flavor is concerned as it comes from the outer portion of the pineapple, nearest the shell and this shell is nearest the sun.

The juice is pure juice of the pineapple, unsweetened so that it can be mixed with other liquids in sundaes, pudding sauces, etc. It contains all of the rich mineral properties and vitamins which make pineapple so vital a part of the health diet.

Pineapple is put on the market in various size cans. They are: Buffet can, containing five slices of pineapple or nine ounces of the crushed product; No. 1¼, a slightly larger flat can containing six larger slices; No. 2, a tall can, containing ten slices, or one pound of crushed; No. 1, a tall can, containing nine slices of pineapple, or eleven ounces of crushed; No. 2 ½ can, containing eight large slices of pineapple or one pound five ounces of crushed pineapple.

Pineapple tid-bits and pineapple juice are obtainable in No. 2 tall cans. These tid-bits are especially suitable for salads or any dish in which small pieces of pineapple are needed.

This is one of the living testimonials to the benefits accruing from sanatorium treatment of the state of Michigan for tuberculosis. Miss Rogers was discovered to be slightly afflicted with tuberculosis and was at once placed in the sanatarium where she was completely cured and has the testimony of the best physicians in Michigan to that effect. After visiting in North Adams she left Thursday morning for the home of Eugene Rogers and wife in Churubusco Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Randolph and daughter, Jane and Mr. and Mrs. Roland Randolph attended the debate at Hillsdale Tuesday night between the University of DesMoines Iowa, and Hillsdale College. Theron Randolph was one of the speakers to represent Hillsdale and the subject of the debate was: "Resolved—That the United States should pass a law embodying the essential features of the McNary—Haugen Bill" and Hillsdale took the negative side of the question. The judge, a teacher of debating from Kalamazoo College, decided in favor of the negative.

Base Ball Team Starts Work

The High School base ball team started its preparation for this year when Coach Radabaagh and all the candidates made their way to the diamond. Upon arriving at the ball field they found it in better condition for swimming than for a base ball game. Due to the wet grounds here, a practice game has been arranged at Prattville for Friday afternoon

This season will find many familiar faces missing from the line up. Coach Radabaugh has a tough job on his hands to replace such men as Thornton, Wilcox, Williams and Roberts who are lost by graduation. These men were more or less responsible for the County championship coming here last year, and will be greatly missed.

Of the men who have had experience are Hersh, last year's first baseman, and Hansen who guarded second, Collyer and Gordon, last year's outfields, are also available.

Of the new men who played good ball last fall in a few practice games are Meyer, catcher; Roberts, Wertz and Paul Williams infielders. Franklin Kempton and Burton Holcomb should be able to make the outfield. Russell Wattles can be relied on to pitch along with Gordon Cook the freshman who pitched a no-hit, no-run game last fall.

APRIL FOOL TRICK

FOR SOME TIME past one of our Garages and other business places have been invaded in the night hours by marauders and various articles stolen, and while a large amount of the loot taken has been such as would indicate juvenile work, the annoyance has become unbearable at times and when the garage of Ray Walters was broken into last week Friday night Mr. Walters while recognizing the mirthful spirit of the joke, decided nevertheless, that the fun had been slightly overdone because his iuvestigatioh showed a bunch of approximately $125 worth of new tires had disappeared. Crater & Edinger also complain of losing a Firestone tire and Wertz' store had also been the victim of premature April fool jokes. Officers were at once put on the job of unraveling this April foolishness, a part of which had occurred in March. Entrance to the Walters garage had been through a back window which the joker left slightly raised. He obligingly tarried until after the snow storm, and he had joked himself into buying a new pair of rubbers, whereat the Sheriff followed his tracks across a back lot and decided the joke would keep until it was needed.

Deputation Here For The Week End

The deputation team from Hillsdale College visits here this week and plans are being made for a fine time. The churches and school will be open for use, and some very interesting meetings can be looked forward to. It is the duty of all interested in the welfare of the community to attend the discussions that are to be held. A social time is planned for Friday evening in the parlors of the Congregational church and a hike will take place Saturday afternoon. In the evening a community supper will be held in the parlors of the Methodist church. Each family will bring sandwiches and one passing dish. Milk will also be needed but potatoes and meat will be furnished. Sunday will find the members of the team occupying the pulpits at the morning at all the churches, and Congregational church where a real union meeting at 7:30 will wind up the doings of the week.

The success of the work depends upon the support it gets, so we should all do our part. The members of the team will be guests in the several North Adams homes during their stay with us.

GRAVES & FORD LUMBER COMPANY

MAN, 95, BLIND SEEKS FORTUNE

A poor farm boy, who made two fortunes and lost both, is now at the age of 95 setting out after a third.

Richard G. Peters of Manistee, who owned more good timberland than any one idividual ever has owned in Michigan, started with nothing, amassed more than $2,000,000, lost it, made another fortune almost as large and let that get away from him, so that now he has reached advanced old age with just enough to last him the rest of the way, provided his newest scheme does not succeed.

What this new scheme is he will not state, except that it has something to do with a patent granted him for a salt rfining device. Thime enough to talk about the chickens after they have broken their way through the shell, Mr. Peters says. A year ago he thought he was on the high road to wealth, but the company that was boring for oil under Manistee fuond more salt than oil.

In 1850 young Richard Peters came to Monroe, Mich., from New York state and entered the employ of the Michigan Southern railroad, which operated from Detroit to Monroe. The original strapiron track was being torn up and replaced with iron rails and Peters obtained work as a surveyor's rodman. Later he came into western Michigan, building logging railroads by fhich to bring logs to the rivers or directly to the mills, and then became intereshted in lumber.

In 1855 Peters entered the employ of Charles Mears at Big Point Au Sable, between Manistee and Ludington, where he operated a water mill for Mears. He saved a small sum of money and purchased a small tract of government land. He logged this and then went to work for James Ludington as superintendent of lumber operations at the mouth of the Pere Marquette River.

By 1866 Peters had saved $5000. He quit Ludington and entered into partnership with M. S. Tyson and G. W. Robinson, taking over mill and timber property on Filer and Tyson on Manistee Lake. A large portion of the site of the present city of Manistee was included in this purchase. The three dissolved partnership just 18 months later, and Peters' $5000 had grown into about $75,000.

In 1871, when disastrous fires swept away the gerater portion of Manistee and many other western Michigan towns, Mr. Peters was mayor. He led the work of reconstruction with the same energy he put into his business.

At the time of the fire Mr. Peters was one of the wealthiest men in Michigan, and holder of more uncut timber than any other lumber man in the state. But branching out into a number of other ventures, he became so involved, financially, that creditors closed down upon him. At a memorable meeting in the old Morton Hous in Grand Rapids on October 10, 1890, he checked over his assets and liabilities, and assigned everything to satisfy the creditors. Then he set about to recover what he had so nearly lost.

In just six years Mr. Peters had paid back to his creditors two and one-third million dollars and his holdings were re-assigned to him, leaving him with logging railroads and equipment worth a few hundred thousands.

With this he built up a fortune of a million dollars or more in a few years. But again he plunged too deep and this time his property was taken from him.

But he still dreams of the third fortune which may be his. And though he is blind, it would not surprise many Manistee people if he won out.

MANY ARE ENROLLED FOR GARDEN COURSE

Housewives and businessmen from Lansing, East Lansing, Grand Rapids, Detroit and several other towns of southern Michigan are enrolled in the special short course for the amateur gardener, sponsored by the college short course and horticultural departments.

The course, which appeals especially to those interested in the beautification and upkeep of home grounds, is practically the only one of the winter short courses which lists women on its enrollment records.

SAGINAW TO REALIZE OLD DREAM OF WATER PLANT

With the plans of Saginaw's new water plant up for final consideration by the city council, the deliberations of that body were suddenly terminated when Mayor Albert W. Taussig suffered an attack of acute gastritis and was removed to Saginaw General hospital. The council was reorganized later in the day and approved the plans for the waterworks. Specifications will be drawn by the city water engineers, after which bids will be sought to complete the work that the residents of Saginaw have been anticipating eagerly nearly half a century.

HOUSEWIVES MAY FIND A B C'S OF NUTRITION EASILY REMEMBERED

"Many housewives find it difficult to keep up with the constant research in new vitamins. To some women the array seems as bewildering as if every one of the twenty-six letters in the alphabet represented a vitamin" says Miss Lydia M. Broecker, nutrition specialist of the National Dairy Council's Philadelphia unit.

"The fact that nutrition researchers seem to have skipped from D to X in naming these important measures of food values only makes it more confusing to many, but the A. B. C's. of nutrition—are easy to remember."

Mary Swartz Rose, the well-known authority on nutrition, in a recent address in Chicago, is quoted by Miss Broecker to prove her point, that the A. B. C's. are made quite simple by knowing that milk stands first in food needs. The quart a day for growing children and at least a pint for each grown-up is the correct amount for proper growth and development.

"There is no way," says Mrs. Rose, "of solving your nutritional problem so well as to build your diet around milk. With the addition of two or three vegetables, two or three fruits, being careful to select those fruits and vegetables that are high in vitamin C, you have a diet around which you can add other things for energy and heat. You may depend upon it—your wear depends upon your nutritional care."

Five vitamins are now recognized by science, as essential in a diet for proper body maintenance. Vitamin A, commonly known as fat-soluble A, is essential for growth and health. Vitamin B was the first of these experiments with substances to be discovered, its absence causing beri-beri. Vitamin B is indispensable for growth and the maintenance of the body's "pep." Vitamin C prevents scurvy. It is to be found abundantly in citrus fruits and leafy vegetables especially. It is called the anti-scorbutic substance. Absence of Vitamin D is one of the causes of rickets, hence the need for children especially to have an abundance of dairy products, since butter-fat contains considerable amount of this growth-promoting substance. Recent studies have developed that the fifth vitamin E, is necessary for reproduction. With this convenient system of naming, the A. B. C's of nutrition are quite easy to remember.

NEWAYGO SEED CORN SHOWS WIDE VARIANCE

There is a wide variance in the germination of seed corn in Newaygo county, it has been revealed by recent tests taken by the agricultural department of the Fremont high school. Tests by the students of the department show an average germination of about 60 per cent.

The lowest percentage of germination was in corn selected from the crib, while the highest was in corn selected in the field early last fall, which was dried and stored in a dry room. The high school, through its instructor, Elmer F. Miner, is offering the farmers of the surrounding community the benefit of its equipment for the purpose of testing seed corn for spring planting. The laboratory is equipped to test about 100 bushels a month. The corn will be dried down to a low moisture content and kept in this condition until the farmer is ready to use it.

FENTON IZAAK WALTONS RESTOCK WOODS, LAKES

Fenton's Izaak Lalton league is planning an extensive program of activities for a coming spring and summer.

Arrangements are being made for a shipment of pheasants to be liberated in the woods and swamps. A large quantity of perch, bass and bluegills will be planted in the lakes and rivers.

A shipment of pine and spruce seedings will be received for distribution and planting.

Trap shooting grounds with equipment are to be laid out at Swanee Beach on the Schwanebeck farm, south end of Lang Lake, with frequent contests held. It is also being planned to construct an observation tower on the highest point of Denton hills.

Justice of the peace at the age of 92 years, Oscar Beedy, who has resided in Sparta 45 years, is actively engaged every day in the discharge of his duties which he has handled 40 years.

Enjoying the best of health, a regular attendant at church services and Sunday school, Justice Beedy looks forward with considerable expectation to many more years of usefulness.

He was born in Central Square, N. Y., in 1835 and came to Spata in 1882.

WRITES OF AMPLE GAME LONG AGO

Back in 1702, when Detroit was a fortification, a French visitor described the plentitude of wild life in a letter to "folks bask home." Undreamed of quantities of game roamed Michigan, according to the writer, whose letter contracts to today. The letter is owned in Memphis and follows:

"I have observed nearly 20 kinds of plums. There are three or four kinds that are very good. Others are large and pleasant to look at. The apples are of medium size but too acid. There are a number of cherry trees, but their fruit is not very good. There are a large quantity of hazel nuts, filberts, six kinds of walnuts and stretches of chestnuts.

"On all sides the vine is seen. There are white and red grapes which are full of good juice. I have planted some of these near the fort, as I have no doubt that they will be good for the purpose of making wine.

"I have seen a number of girds of rare beauty. Some have plumage of a beautiful red fire color, the most livid it were possible to see. They have a few spots of black in the tail and at the tips of their wings, but this is only noticeable when they are flying.

"There are others, all yellow, with tails bigger than their bodies, and they spread their tails as peacocks do.

"There are many cranes, grey and white, which stand higher than a man. Game is very common; wld geese, ducks, qual, woodcock, rabbts, partrdges, hazel hens and a stupendous number of pigeons. Wild turkeys are so plentiful that a great number can be killed with one shot.

"Stags and hinds are seen by the hundreds, roebuck, black bear otters and other ful bearing animals. The wolves, of which there are numbers, find abundant food.

"There are wood rats which are as large as rabbits, but some are as white as snow. The female has a pouch which opens and shuts, as she requires, so that she can carry the little ones to safety."

FARMERS' NIGHT SCHOOL AT MORRICE NEARS END

A night school for farmers, one of very few in the United States, is drawing to the close of its first term at Morrice, 12 miles south of Owosso. The pupils are of ages ranging from 20 to 60 years.

The school was organized by C. J. Shufelt, superintendent of the Morrice Consolidated Schools, aided by Professors from Michigan State College. Sessions are held every Tuesday night, beginning at 7 o'clock. Professors deliver lectures on various subjects of interest to farmers, and then submit themselves to a barrage of questions. The professors have to return to Lansing on the inatrurban and he farmers keep them until the las minute. Then the farmers discuss their questions among themselves.

Soils and fertilizers, markets and marketing, poultry raising and dairying, are among the subjects taught and discussed.

Wilber Barker, city mail carrier, who organibed the Boy Scouts of Grand Ledge in April, 1917, believes his troop it the oldest troop in the state not under council. Grand Ledge has four troops, but Barker's was the first organized and he has been in charge of it since its origin.

Barker began his work as city mail carrier 13 years ago, when the postoffice was first put in second class and was given free mail delivery.

He has been a member of the orchestra and the brass band since their organization. He recently directed a demonstration of Boy Scout work in the First Baptist church.

NEW MEASURE FOR FISH MEANS FEWER ON STRING

During the recent conference held in the interest of commercial fishing in the Great Lakes, at Lansing, it was definitely decided that all fish taken from these waters calling for a length limit must be measured from the tip of the nose to the fork of the tail.

Heretomore this has been from the tip of the nose to the tip of the tail and the change will cause many fish that were once considered of legal length to be returned.

When the question was put to Director Youg upon how this ruling would be applied to uor sport fish he stated that no decision had been reached on this matter and its importance would be carefully weighed.

Capt. Zachery Lansdowne's Widow to Wed

At the right is a recent exclusive picture of Mrs. Zachary Lansdowne, widow of the late Capt. Zachary Lansdowne, U. S. N., who was killed in the wreck of the naval dirigible Shenandoah on September 3, 1925. With her is her finance, Mr. John Caswell, Jr., of Boston and New York. The couple is to be married some time this spring at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Caswell is a graduate of Harvard and prominent in New York and Boston society. He served in the World War, returning from France as a first lieutenant.

CARE OF BEES IS KEY TO SUCCESS

In every colony of bees there is a certain amount of routine work that has to be done no matter whether there is a crop of nectar awaiting to be gathered from flowers or not. The amount of surplus honey any colony can be expected to store will be in direct proportion to the number of bees it has over and above those required to perform the route of that colony.

These extra bees are known as the field force and to produce them at the right time and of the right age requires skill and knowledge of bee behaviour on the part of the beekeeper.

The field force must be as large as possible and ready for work at the commencement of the main flow of nectar and to be of the right age must be produced during the six or eight weeks just before the flow. The first step is to have each colony headed with a good, prolific queen during the spring and early summer, as the queen is responsible for laying the eggs that will produce the workers.

The second step it to have each colony strong enough in bees to take care of the maximum amount of brood the queen can produce. Weak colonies can be strengthened by any of the following methods, given in order of performance. By uniting to them combless packages of bees imported early in the spring. By giving combs of sealed brood from extra strong colonies; by shaking into them some bees from extra strong colonies; and by placing the weak colonies over strong colonies with a queen excluder between and leaving them there for from two to three weeks.

Remember also that it requires food to rear bees and that protection from cold influences the rate of expansion of the brood nest.

STATE ASKED TO VOID MACKINAC FERRY FEE

The Chippewa county board of supervisors has passed a resolution asking the state administrative board to rescind the order compelling passengers in automobiles to pay fare across the straights of Mackinac. The resolution, which received the unanimous approval of the board, declared such an order would harm the tourist business and further isolate the upper peninsula from lower Michigan.

PLAN IS REVIVED FOR SIXTH LAKE

Although other engineers have ridiculed the proposal to create a sixth Great Lake in Canada, to be formed by damming of two now non-navigable rivers, as an impracticable scheme, this plan, now several years old, was offered again by representatives of the Chicago sanitary district to compensate for the lowered lake levels caused by lake drainage and natural means. The suggestion bobbed up again before the Detroit Engineering society.

"The diversion of lake water by the Chicago drainage canal and its effect on the general lowering of lake levels has been greatly exaggerated," H. P. Ramsey, assistant chief engineer of the Sanitary district, said.

"There are many other water diversions which each year take almost as much lake water as does the Chicago drainage canal," he declared. He cited, as examples, the Welland canal, the New York barge canal and the development of navigation at St. Clair Flats.

The speaker maintained, as did his colleague from Chicago, G. Deberard, that the past six or seven years have brought a lower level in the waters of the Great Lakes than ever before. The weather was blamed in this connection, because it was contended, the annual precipitation each year in the lake regions has been decraesing.

GRANDMOTHER AT 27, IS BATTLE CREEK RESIDENT

A 15-year-old mother and a 27-year-old grandmother entitle small Edward Rogers, weight 9½ pounds, to special distinction. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charley Rogers, and his youthful grandmother is Mrs. Dolly Hutchinson, all of whom moved to Battle Creek recently from Bonar, Tenn., a Blue Ridge mining town. Mrs. Rogers, small, fair-faired and blue-eyed looks no more than her 15 years. Rogers himself is 21 tall and fair. They ran away to be married. Until their exodus to Battle Creek bpth had lived always in the Tennessee mountains, where early marriages are the rule rather than the exception, and they were mildly surprised at outside interest.

DEATH REVEALS ORGANS I NEVERY ROO MIN OLD HOME

The late Mrs. Nettie Van Wag[illegible]er, aged recluse, who lived in the center of Lapeer, must have had an ear for organ music, in the opinion of several hundred visitors at the estate sale held in the old home across from the court house.

Sale attendants were astonished to find that in practically every one of the 30 rooms of the dark weather-beaten family home was an old-fashioned organ standing open, ready to be played. The instruments brought from 35 cents to $3 each at the sale, and were bid in mostly because of the valuable wood of which the cases were composed.

Mrs. Van Wagoner, who was found dead in her room by a deputy sheriff when his notice was attracted by the front door standing open a few days after Christmas, at one time conducted a music store in Lapeer. Formerly of a wealthy family, she continued to occupy the huge house alone, having contact with but few residents. She was almost 80 years old.

Don't put in too much time standing on dignity or riding a hobby.

A clock is wound up to make it run, but when a business is wound up it stops.

YOUR CHANCE TO EARN MORE MONEY

The Auto Business Needs You

Are you ambitious? Are you seeking a better job or a business of your own? If so, here's your chance—a chance to really cash in. There are more amazing money-making opportunities in the automobile business now than ever before. Follow the lead of the thousands of "Michigan State" graduates. They have already proved what real training will do for an ambitious man. They are making big money. You can too! This school has over 20,000 graduates. Come to Detroit, a fine city. Big business, pleasant climate all year around. Come now, and fit yourself for a better job or to run a garage business of your own. Thousands of battery shops, auto electrical shops, tire and welding shops are needed now. Only trained men can run them. Good work is what car owners want, and it takes a trained man to do it.

Without any previous experience—just a liking for mechanics—you can learn the auto business from A to Z in a few weeks at the Michigan State Automobile School—the factory-endorsed school in Detroit—the heart of the industry. Then step out, equipped with knowledge and training, to a future of certain, big money making. You have great advantages, learning the business here. It's the fountain head of the automotive industry. You are taught under factory-endorsed methods. You learn both theory and practice on latest equipment. Go through the great Ford plants. Visit the other automobile factories. Learn their methods first hand—and it all means greater opportunities and more certain success. The Michigan State Automobile School, in Detroit, the automobile center, is the logical place to learn the auto business.

Home Study Course

For those who can not come to Detroit for their training, we have a special Home Study Course. This course covers the same subjects in detail as our Residence Course.

$2 Starts You

Under new plan, $2.00 will bring first two lessons of your Home Study training. Act at once.

Decide Today

Auto factories endorse "Michigan State" training methods. Because they are thorough, practical. Because they put knowledge in your head and in your hands. Because they really fit you to make good. Harold Grenert (Mass.) says, "Two years ago I left a $20 a week job. Now I earn $70 as auto electrician, thanks to M. S. A. S."

If necessary we can assist students to part time work to help pay living expenses. Or students who wish to take our evening course will be assisted to full time day jobs. Ask for details, and when writing please explain your circumstances fully.

A practical, money-making Business Course, supervised by a former Packard service manager, is FREE to all students. Tells you how to locate a garage, about equipment, systems, financing, selling, advertising. Worth $100 alone. NO EXTRA CHARGE.

Come to Detroit

Of course Detroit is the place to learn autos. Over three-fourths of all cars come from here. Detroit training is practical training. Stick this in your memory,—the Detroit Trained man has an immense advantage over all others. So come here as soon as you can. Come now if possible, and prepare yourself for the big profit to be made this summer from the repair and service business. If you can't come now, start to learn under our Home Study plan. (This does not cost anything extra). Then plan to come here later to finish and get your diploma. W. J. Croisilles

By ALFRED DE MUSSET

At the beginning of the reign of Louis XV., a young man named Croisilles, son of a goldsmith, was returning from Paris to Havre, his native town. He had been intrusted by his father with the transaction of some business, and his trip to the great city having turned out satisfactorily, the joy of bringing good news caused him to walk the sixty leagues more gaily and briskly than was his wont; for, though he had a rather large sum of mone in his pocket, he travelled on foot for pleasure.

He was a good tempered fellow, and not without wit, but so very thoughtless and flighty that people looked upon him as being rather weak minded. His doublet buttoned awry, his periwig flying to the wind, his hat under his arm, he followed the banks of the Seine, at times finding enjoyment in his own thoughts and again indulging in snatches of song; up at daybreak, supping at wayside inns, and always charmed with this stroll of his through one of the most beautiful regions of France.

Plundering the apple trees of Normandy on his way, he puzzled his brain to find rhymes, for all these rattle pates are more or less poets, and tried hard to turn out a madrigal for a certain fair damsel of his native place.

She was no less than a daughter of a fermier general, Mademoiselle Godeau, the pearl of Havre, a rich heiress, and much courted. Croisilles was not received at M. Godeau's otherwise than in a casual sort of way, that is to say, he had somtimes himself taken there articles of jewelry purchased at his father's. M. Godeau, whose somewhat vulgar surname ill fitted his immense fortune, avenged himself by his arrogance for the stigma of his birth, and showed himself on all occasions enormously and pitilessly rich.

He certainly was not the man to allow the son of a goldsmith to enter his drawing room; but, as Mademoiselle Godeau had the most beautiful eyes in the world, and Croisilles was not ill favored, and as nothing can prevent a fine fellow from falling in love with a pretty girl, Croisilles adored Mademoiselle Godeau, who did not seem vexed thereat.

Thus was he thinking of her as he turned his steps toward Havre; a as he had never reflected seriously upon anything, instead of thinking of the invincible obstacles which separated him from his lady love, he busied himself only with finding a rhyme for the Christian name she bore. Mademoiselle Godeau was called Julie, and the rhyme was found easily enough.

So Croisilles, having reached Honfleur, embarked with a satisfied heart, his money and his madrigal in his pocket, and as soon as he jumped ashore ran to the paternal house.

He found the shop closed, and he knocked again and again, not without astonishment and apprehension, for it was not a holiday; but nobody came. He called his father, but in vain. He went to a neighbor's to ask what had happened; instead of replying, the neighbor turned away, as though not wishing to recognize him. Croisilles repeated his questions; he learned that his father, his affairs having long been in an embarrassed condition, had just become bankrupt, and had fled to America, abandoning to his creditors all that he possessed.

Not reailzing as yet the extent of his misfortune, Croisilles felt overwhelmed by the thought that he might never again see his father. It seemed to him incredible that he should be thus suddenly abandoned; he tried to force an entrance into the store; but was given to undersand that the official seals had been affixed; so he sat down on a stone, and giving way to his grief, began to weep piteously, deaf to the consolations of those around him, never ceasing to call his father's name, though he knew him to be already far away. At last he rose, ashamed at seeing a crowd about him, and in the most profound despair he turned his steps towards the harbor.

On reaching the pier, he walked straight before him like a man in a trance, who knows neither where he is going nor what is to become of him. He saw himself irretrievably lost, possessing no longer a shelter, no means of rescue and, of course, no longer any friends. Alone, wandering on the sea shore, he felt tempted to drown himself, then and there. Just at the moment when, yielding to this thought he was advancing to the edge of a high cliff, an old servant named Jean, who had served his family for a number of years, arrived on the scene.

"Ah, my poor Jean!" he exclaimed, "you know all that has happened since I went away. Is it possible hat my father could leave without warning, wihout farewell?"

"He is gone," answered Jean, "but indeed not without saying good-bye to you."

At the same time he drew from his pocket a letter, which he gave to his young master. Croisilles recognized the hand writing of his father, and before opening the letter, kissed it rapturously; but it contained only a few words. Instead of feeling his troubled softened, it seemed to the young man still harder to bear. Honorable until then, and known as such, the old gentleman, ruined by an unforseen disaster (the bankruptcy of a partner), had left for his son nothing but a few commonplace words of consolation, and no hope, evcept perhaps, that vague hope without aim or reason which constitutes, it is said, the last possession one loses.

"Jean, my friend, you carried me in your arms," said Croisilles, when he had read the letter, "and you certainly are today the only being who loves me at all; it is a very sweet thing to me, but a ver sad one for you; for, as sure as my father embarked there, I wil throw myself into hte same sea which is bearing him away; not before you nor at once, but some day I will do it, for I am lost."

"What can you do?" replied Jean, not seeming to have understood, but holding fast to the skirt of Croisilles' coat; "What can you do, my dear master? Your father was deceived, he was expecting money which did not come, and it was no small amount either. Could he stay here? I have seen him, sir, as he made his fortune, during the thirty years that I served him; I have seen him working, attending to his business, the crown pieces coming in one by one. He was an honorable man, and skillful; they took a cruel advantage of him. Within the last few days, I was still there, and as fast as the crowns came in, I saw them go out of the shop again. Your father paid all he could, for a whole day, and, when his desk was empty, he could not help telling me, pointing to a drawer there but six francs remained: 'There were a hundred thousand francs there this morning!' That does not look like a rascally failure, sir? There is nothing in it that can dishonor you."

"I have no more doubts of my father's integrity," answered Croisilles, "than I have of his misfortune. Neither do I doubt his affection. But I wish I could have kissed him, for what is to become of me? I am not accustomed to poverty, I have not the necessary cleverness to build up my fortune. And, if I had it, my father is gone. I took him thirty years, how loni would it take me to repair this disaster? Much longer. And will he be living then? Certainly not; he will die over there and I cannot even go and find him; I can join him only by dying."

Utterly distressed as Croisilles was, he possessed much religious feeling. Although his despondency made him wish for death, he hesitated to take his life. At the first words of this interview, he had taken hold of old Jean's arm, and thus both returned to the town. When they had entered the streets and the sea was no longer so near:

"It seems to me, sir," said Jean, "that a good man has a right to live and that a misfortune proves nothing. Since your father has not killed himself, thank God, how can you think of dying? Since there is no dishonor in his case, and all the town konws it is so, what would they think of you? That you felt unable to endure poverty. It would be neither brave nor Christian; for, at the very worst, what is there to frighten you?

"There are plenty of people born poor, and who have never had either mother or father to help them on. I know that we are not all alike, but, after all, nothing is impossible to God.

"What would you do in such a case? Your father was not born rich, far from it—meaning no offence—and that is perhaps what consoles him now. If you had been here, this last month, it would have given yiu courage. Yes, sir, a man may be ruined, nobody is secure from bankruptcy; but your father, I ake bold to say, has borne himself through it all like a man, though he did leave us so hastity. But what could he do? It is not every day that a vessel starts for America. I accompanied him to the wharf, and if you had seen him sad he was! How he charged me to take care of you; to send him news of you! Sir, it is a right poor idea you have, that throwing the helve after the matchet. Every one has his time of trial in this world, and I was a soldier before I was a servant. I suffered severely at the time, but I was young; I was your age, sir, and it seemed to me that Providence could not have spoken His last word to a young man of twenty-five. Why do you wish to prevent the kind God from repairing the evil that has befallen you? Give Him time, and all will come right. If I might advise you, I would say, just wait two or three years, and I will answer for it, you will come out all right. It is always easy to go out of this world. Why will you seize an unlucky moment?"

While ean was thus exerting himself to persuade his master, the latter walked in silence and as those who suffer often do, was looking this way and that as though seeking for something, which might bind him to life. As chance would have it, at this juncture, Mamemoiselle Godeau, the daughter of the fermier general, happened to pass with her governess. The mansion in which she lived was not far distant; Croisilles saw her enter it. This meeting produced on him more effect than all the reasonings in the world. I have said that he was rather erratic, and nearly always yielded to the first impulse. Without hesitating an instant, and without explanation, he suddenly left the arm of his old servant and crossing the street, knocked at Monsieur Godeau's door.

II.

When we try to picture to ourselves nowadays what was called a "financier" in times gone by, we invariably imagine enormons corpulence, short legs, a gigantic wig, and a broad face with a triple chin—and it is not without reason that we have become accustomed to form such a picture of such a personage. Everyone knows to what great abuses the royal tax farming led, and it seems as though there were a law of nature which renders fatter than the rest of mankind those who fatten, not only upon their own laziness, but also upon the work of others.

Monsiur Godeau, among financiers, was one of the most classical to be found—that is to say, one of the fattest. At the present time he had the gout, which was nearly as fashionable in his day as the nervous head ache is in ours. Stretched upon a lounge, his eyes half closed, he was coddling himself in the coziest corner of a dainty boudoir. The panel mirrors which surrounded him, majestically duplicated on every side his enormous person; bags filled with gold covered the table; around him, the furniture, the wainscot, the doors, the locks, the mantle piece, the ceiling were gilded; so was his coat. I do not know but that his brain was gilded, too. He was calculating the issue of a little business affair which could not fail to bring him a few thousand louis; and was even deigning to smile over it to himself when Croisilles was announced. The young man entered with an humble, but resolute air, and with every outward manifestation of that inward tumult with which we find no difficulty in crediting a man who is longing to drown himself. Monsieur Godeau was a little surprised at this unexpected visit; then he thought his daughter had been buying some trible and was confirmed in that thought by seeing her appear almost at the same time with the young man. He made a sign to Croisilles not to sit down but to speak. The young lady seated herself on a sofa, and Croisilles, remaining standing, expressed himself in these terms:

"Sir, my father has failed. The bankruptcy of a partner has forced him to suspend his payments and unable to witness his own shams he has fled to America, after having paid his last sou to his creditors. I was absent when all this happened: I have just come back and have known of these events only two hours. I am absolutely without resources and determined to die. It is very probable that, on leaving your house, I shall throw myself into the water. In all probability, I would already have done so, if I had not chanced to meet, at the very moment, this young lady, your daughter. I love her, from the very depths of my heart; for two years I have been in love with her, and my silence, until now, proves better than anything else the respect I feel for her; but today, in declaring my passion to you, I fulfill an imperative duty, and I would think I was offending God if before giving myself over to death, I did not come to ask you Mademoiselle Julie in marriage. I have not the slightest hope that you will grant this request; but I have to make it, nevertheless, for I am a good Christian, sir, and when a good Christian sees himself come to such a point of misery that he can no longer suffer life, he must at least, to extenuate him crime, exhaust all the chances which remain to him before taking the final and fatal step."

At the beginning of this speech, Monsieur Godeau had supposed that the young man came to borrow money and so he prudently threw his handkerchief over the bags that were lying around him, preparing in advance a refusal, and a polite one, for he always felt some good will toward the father of Croisilles. But when he had heard the young man to the end, and understood the purport of his visit, he never doubted one moment that the poor fellow had gone completely mad. He was at first tempted to ring the bell and have him put out; but, noticing his firm demeanor, his determined look, the fermier general took pity on so inoffensive a case of insanity. He merely told his daughter to retire, so that she might be no longer exposed to hearing such improprieties.

While Croisilles was speaking, Mademoiselle Godeau had blushed as a peach in the month of August. At her father's bidding, she retired, the young man making her a profound bow, which she did not seem to notice. Left alone with Croisilles, Monsieur Godeau coughed, rose, then dropped again upon the cushions and, trying to assume a paternal air, delivered himself to the following effect:

"My boy," said he, "I am willing to believe that you are not poking fun at me, but you have really lost our head. I not only excuse this proceeding, but I consent not to punish you for it. I am sorry that your poor devil of a father has become bankrupt and has skipped. It is indeed very sad, and I quite understand that such a misfortune should affect your brain. Besides, I wish to do something for you; so take this stool and sit down there."

"It is useless, sir," answered Croisilles. "If you refuse me, as I see you do, I have nothing left byt to take my leave. I wish you every good fortune."

"And where are you going?"

"To write to my father and say goodbye to him."

"Eh! the devil! Any one would swear you were speaking the truth. I'll be damned if I don't think you are going to drown yourself."

"Yes, sir; at least I think so, if my courage does not forsake me."

"That's a bright idea! Fie on you. How can you be such a fool? Sit down sir, I tell you, and listen to me."

Monsieur Godeau had just made a very wise decision, which was that it is never agreeable to have it said that a man, whoever he may be, threw himself into the water on leaving your house. He therefore coughed once more, took his snuff box, cast a careless glance upon his shirt frill, and continued:

"It is evident that you are nothing but a simpleton, a fool, a regular baby. You do not know what you are saying. You are ruined, that's what has happened to you. But, my dear friend, all that is not enough; one must reflect upon the things of this world. If ou came to ask me—well, good advice, for instance—I might give it to you; but what is it you are after? You are in love with my daughter?"

"Yes, sir, and I repeat to you, that I am far from supposing that you can give her to me in marriage; but as there is nothing in the world but that, which could prevent me from dying, if you believe in God, as I do not doubt you do, you will understand the season that brings me here."

"Whether I believe in God or not, is not business of yours. I do not intend to be questioned. Answer me first; where have you seen my daughter?"

"In my father's shop and in this house, when I brought jewelry for Mademoiselle Julie."

"Who told you her name was Julie? What are we coming to, great heavens! But be her name Julie or Javotte, do you know what is wanted in any one who aspires to the hand of the daughter of a fermier general?"

"No, I am completely ignorant of it, unless it is to be as rich as she."

"Something more is necessary, my boy; you must have a name."

"We! my name is Croisilles."

"Your name is Croisilles, poor wretch! Do you call that a name?"

"Upon my soul and conscience, sir, it seems to me to be as good a name as Godeau."

"You are very impertinent, sir; and you shall rue it."

"Indeed, sir, do not be angry; I had not the least idea of offending you. If you see in what I said anything to wound you, and wish to punish me for it, there is no need to get angry. Have I not told you that on leaving here I am going straight to drown myself?"

Although M. Goreau had promised himself to send Croisilles away as gently as possible, in order to avoid all scandal, his prudence could not resist the vexation of his wounded pride. The interview to which he had to resign himself was monstrous enough in itself; it may be imagined then, what he felt at hearing himself spoken to in such terms.

"Listen," he said, almost beside himself, and determined to close the matter at any cost. "You are not such a fool that you cannot understand a word of common sense. Ahe you rich? No. Are you noble? Still less so. What is this frenzy that brings you here? You come to worry me; you think you are doing something clever; you know perfectly well that it is useless; you wish to make me responsible for your death. Have you any right to complain of me? Do I owe a sou to our father? Is it my fault that you have come to this? Mon Dieu! When a man is going to drown himself, he keeps quiet about it—"

"That is what I am going to do now. I am your very humble servant."

"One moment! It shall not be said that you had recourse to me in vain. There, my boy, here are three louis d'or; og and have dinner in the kitchen and let me hear no more about you."

"Much abilged; I am not hungry; and I have no use for your money."

So Croisilles left the room, and the financier, having set his conscience at rest by the offer he had just made, settled himself more comfortably in his chair, and resumed his meditations.

Mademoiselle Godeau, during this time, was not so far away as one might suppose; she had, it is true, withdrawn in obedience to her father; but, instead of going to her room, she had remained listening behind the door. If the extravagance of Croisilles seemed incredible to her, still she found nothing to offend her in it; for love, since the world has existed, has never passed as an insult. On the other hand, as it was not possible to doubt the despair of the young man, Mademoiselle Godeau found herself a victim, at one and the same time to the two sentiments most dangerous to women—compassion and curiosity. When she saw the interview at an end, and Croisilles ready to come out, she rapidly crossed the drawing room where she stood, not wishing to be surprised eavesdropping, and hurried toward her apartment; but she almost immediately retraced her steps. The idea that perhaps Croisilles was really going to put an end to his life troubled her in spite of herself. Scarcely aware of what she was doing, she walked to meet him; the drawing room was large, and the two young people came slowly toards each other. Croisilles was as pale as death, and Mademoiselle Godeau vainly sought words to express her feelings. In passing beside him, she let fall on the floor a bunch of violets which she held in her hand. He at onese bent down and picked up the bouquet in order to give it back to her, but instead of taking it, she passed on without uttering a word, and entered her father's room. Croisilles, alone again, put the flowers in his breast, and left the house with a troubled heart, not knowing what to think of his adventure.

Scarcely had he taken a few steps in the street, when he say his faithful friend Jean running toward him with a poyful face.

"What has happened?" he asked; "have you news to tell me?"

"Yes," replied Jean; "I have to tell you that the seals have been officially broken and that you can enter your home. All your father's debts being paid, ou remain the owner of the house. It is true that all the money and all the jewels have been taken away; but at least the house belongs to you, and you have not lost everything. I have been running about for an hour, not knowing what had become of you, and I hope, my dear master, that you will now be wise enough to take a reasonable course.'

"What course do you wish me to take?"

STATE ROAD IS ON ANCIENT "BEACH"

One of the oldest sea beaches in the world, formed more than a billion years ago, is located in the upper peninsula of Michigan, according to Professor W. A. Seaman of the department of geology of the Michigan College of Mining and Technology. The ancient sea bottom, folded, crushed and changed by the forces of nature working through the millions of centuries of geological time, is still preserved in the hardest rocks.

The shore of the now lifeless Huronian sea is discernible at several points in state trunk line M-15 from Marquette to Champion. Leaving Marquette, it is first perceptible at the low rocky point near the state branch prison. There it stands, tilted up on edge, bue with the ripple marks formed a billion years ago.

From Marquette to Negaunee M-15 follows close to the old shore line. To the left are the crumpled ancient sediments, and to the right portions of that immense granite mass extending hundreds of miles northward. This granite formed part of the shode of the Huronian sea, but still more of it was formed by that dark greenish sheared rock seen in so many low ledges and rock-cuts along the road.

Just before entering Negaunee on the contrete detour the shore line again crosses the state trunk line. In the rock cut north of Mass mine is the same sea beach, according to Professor Seaman, tilted steeply to the southward. The character of the bottom of the sea, part of which is shown in this same rock cut, indicates that there was life in it, life very simple in nature and microscopic in size, life in its beginning.

Crustal movements on a gigantic scale warped the sea bottom, according to Professor Seaman, and innumerable volvauic2 '* „:;xzfiflffffiffliffi erable volcanic islands appeared. Many remnants of these volcanic plugs, often butte-like knobs of crystalline dark rock, are discernable between Negannee and Ishpiming.

Near Champion one of the largest, and at one time one of the most active, voncanis, which ceased to erupt nearly a billion years ago, is located. The low ridges to the left on entering the town are made of coarser ejecta, irregular fragments of all sizes mixed with the finer ash and since consolidated. The core or remnant of that one time great volcano lies a little west of Champion and may be seen from the highway as a low hill on the east side of beautiful Lake Michigamme.

Absence may increase true love, but it's hard on the counterfeit.

GROUSE DISEASE BAFFLES SCIENCE

Scientists have yet failed to discover the disease that has caused a tremendous scarcity of ruffed grouse in the country.

Although over shooting and the presence of vermine is believed by some to account for the disappearance of the "thunder bird" sportsmen generaly agree that some mysterious diseast is to blame. They point to the fact that the grouse is as secarce in covers where no shooting takes place as in the well hunted districts.

Various investigations have been made to determine the cause of grouse depletion and the results are varied. Dr. Arthur A. Allen of oCrnell University, who investigated ruffed grouse throughout the United States, discovered a small round worm in the glandular portion of the stomach, which was thought to be the origin of the so-called grouse disease. The stomach worm did kill a great many grouse but only a percentage of those examind.

A summary of parasits and diseased conditions found in ruffed grouse gave crop worms, round worms, stomach, gizzard and intestinal worms, old gunshot wounds, enlargement of the spleen, bird pox, or external parasites, such as the blood sucking Hippoboscid fly, as the reason for death. In certain localities, the grouse suffered from one of the above disorders, while in another locality they were made victims of another. None was found to be of general distribution, proving, it is believed, that the grouse are suffering from a variety of ills instead of one disease.

CZAR'S GRANDDAUGHTER NOW A SALESWOMAN

Traveling about Germany with the models of a perisian fashion house, is the fate of Countess Olga Loris-Melikov, granddaughter of Czar Alexander II of Russia, and also of the Russian Poet, Alexander Pushkin.

Had the fortunes of war been different she might today be crown princess of the kingdom of Flanders, the creation of which was planned by the Germans in 1916. Countess Melikov, nee Merenberg, goes to Germany from time to time to show the models of a house owned and run by Russian emigre aristocrats living in Paris.

She makes regular stops in Berlin, Frankfort and Wiesbaden, besides paying occasional visits to other centers and everywhere manages to dispose of orders running into high figures.

OHIO FARMER RULES CORN KINGDOM TWICE

The commendation of a president has been added to the honors heaped upon Ira C. Marshall for his feat of growing more corn on an acre of land than any fo his fellow farmers.

For two successive years Marshall, whose farm is near Ada, Ohio, has been the world's corn king. He grew 168.66 bushels of corn to an acre on a ten-acre plot to earn the title for the second successive year after winning the 1925 world title with a yield of 160.1 bushels to the acre.

The award was bestowed by Ihio State university with aprpoval of the department of agriculture, and Marshall was summoned to Washington to tell President Coolidge of his feat.

The secret of big corn production, Marshall says, is good seed, heavy application of fertilizer, and the rate of planting.

CITY CAN'T FIND OWNER OF TWO DETROIT LOTS

Two perfectly good residential lots on the east side of Detroit are "going begging," apparently ownerless, Guy L. Ingalls, city treasurer, revealed. They are Detroit's own "No Man's Land."

No taxes have been paid on them since February, 1911.

"I have been attempting to find the owner," Mr. Ingalls said, "but have been unable to find the slightest trace of him. The last entry appearing in the records of the Wayne county tract index department shows a transfer of title from George A. Patterson to A. J. Des Barres in 1899. But Mr. Des Barres is nowhere to be found."

The lots seem to be mislaid.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

The Citizens Military Training Camp

The boys who will go to Camp Custer this summer for one month at the expense of the Government will surely have no cause to complain that they were ill treated. This season most of the non coms are to be chosen from the boys themselves and the honors will go to some boy who has shown especial aptitude in the assimilation of military drills and the setting up exercises. As to the progress of the drive in the state twenty counties have not yet been heard from and only three of the countries in the state have already filled their quotas for men.

We fail to understand why Lenawee county which adjoins us on the east and is in most respects under the same conditions as ourselves, has already secured nine applications for Camp Custer while Hillsdale county has none. With the number of eligible young men in this county we are surprised that they fail to see the advantages of this month of recreation and physical improvement which comes at the most delightful time of year

County committeemen authorized to take enlistments are as follows: North Adams—Merton Wolcott, John Williams, Everett Williams, L. V. Harvey, Mrs. Grace Williams. Jonesville—Victor Hawkins, Lieut. Henry Varnum, Dr. Ditmars. Pittsford—S. B. Brant, Mrs. Phoena Eldridge, Paul Davis Fred Leonardson. Reading—Geo. Schermerhorn, G. V. Davis, G. U. Gage. Montgomery—Clyde Adams Mrs. M. Betts, C. E. Aukerman, Howard L. Carl, William B. Lash

Most parents cleave to the idea that the United States Government is trying to secure cannon fodder by soliciting their boys, while as a matter of fact nothing is further from the truth. The American Government is earnestly hoping and taking every precaution known to man to side-step all wars in the future, but it also realizes too many of our young men go out in the world unprepared for the battle of life. Nothing in this world will take off that molly-coddle milk-sop appendage like an association with a thousand other boys in like circumstances at some camp where the best athletic directors can be secured, where every appliance for track work and developing the physical body is at hand. Then outside the athletic purpose entirely lies the advantage of military discipline and training. The term "Makers of Men" is very pat for these camps, because they surely do much to take the callow habits and the stay-at-home ideas out of your sons and put them on the square with the great world—at large.

The Detroit Edison Company will expend a round 23 millions of dollars to extend its lines in Detroit and suburbs this season. This means that Detroit—Edison poles will be seen on every street in all the sub-divisions and practically every dweller within the city limits can receive service off this line. When you stop to consider what this means and the vast amount of capital necessary to carry on the business you are astounded. Where in do these companies get a reimbursement for such enormous outlays? You ask. Here is the answer By tens of thousands people are flocking to Detroit for employment and for a place to live. In some sub-divisions as many as five hundred homes have been built and sold to new comers within a short space of two years and when we tell you Detroit is bound to become the metropolis of the West we expect you to sneer and laugh. But watch developments. Detroit is going to be connected with the Atlantic within a few years, and already the work has started to build the approaches to a magnificent new suspension bridge like New York City's bridge to span the river to Canada. While this bridge is building you can depend upon one thing—emigration to Detroit will come right along lively. Already Detroit has a lot of features of Chicago and New York. If you have not been to Detroit recently you would be very much surprised.

Ypsilanti Normal 75 Years of Age

You may possibly be ignorant of the fact that Ypsilanti State Normal College was the first Normal College to be established west of the Alleghany Mountains and it was started in 1852. The school is celebrating its diamond jubilee this year.

The first normal school in the country was founded in Lexington Mass. in 1839, and the same year found a second at Barre, Mass. In 1840 the school of Bridgewater, Mass., had its birth, and four years later came that at Albany, N. Y. The fifth was founded in 1849 at New Britain, Conn.

It is regarded as an extremely significant fact that a state as far west as Michigan, which 75 years ago was almost on the frontier, should have foreseen the need of trained teachers of its young even before the middle Atlantic and southern states, a region which because of its proximity to the ocean and to foreign influences, was of a high order of culture and intellectual accomplishments.

Plans are now under way to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee year of the college by a gift from the alumni and friends of the college to the institution of a $500,000 Union Building that will be to the college as great an addition as is the University of Michigan's new union building to that group of students. The money will be raised in a campaign starting April 20 among the 11,500 alumni and former students in the state and outside of it. Clarence E. Gittins, mayor of Highland Park is general chairman of the campaign.

Creamory Institute says Alfalfa Will Cut Hillsdale County's $268,685 Feed Bill

The $268,685 spent annually by Hillsdale County farmers, as part of Michigan's $14,599,000 yearly feed bill, can be reduced to a mere fraction of that amount if the farmers in this country will plant alfalfa this spring, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute.

The average farm in this section has less than 2.5 acres in alfalfa and more than 11 acres in less profitable forage crops. Alfalfa is yielding 2.2 tons to the acre, the others only one ton. Data compiled by the Institutes chemists show that one acre of alfalfa produces as much protein as three acres of clover or nine acres of timothy.

The scarcity of farm produced protein is costing Michigan farmers millions of dollars a year, Even after piling on every cost item such as labor, fertilizer, seed, taxes and interest on the land, it has been found that by growing alfalfa protein can be "produced at home" for one-third its cost in certain purchased feeds. It was the striking increase in profits on average farms growing alfalfa which led the Institute to undertake the establishment of 10,000 Acre Alfalfa Clubs throughout the Mississippi Valley in cooperation with leading farmers, bankers and business men. The Institute's experts estimate that one of these clubs increases the returns from the farms in the community where it is established by $300,000.

Find New Test For Fertilizer Needs

A new test which can be used in the field and which will show whether or not a soil needs fertilizer rich in phosphates has been perfected by the soils department at M. S. C.

Professor C. H. Spurway, the man who developed Soiltex, a device which is now universally used to determine the lime requirements of the state's farm lands, is reponsible for the latest contribution to Michigan soil improvement.

The new test is the result of two years of experimentation, and a further check of the efficiency of the test will be made this summer. The old methods of testing a soil for phosphorous required that the samples be taken to a laboratory, the use of a quantity of laboratory equipment, and the time of a skilled chemist.

Soil samples can now be tested rapidly in the field, and the only apparatus needed is two bottles and some slips of waxed paper.

Michigan soils are generally deficient in phosphorous, and thousands of dollars are spent annually for phosphate fertilizers. Much of it is money is wasted, as most farmers do not vary the amounts of fertilizer sown on different fields Michigan soils vary widely, and adjoining fields may need entirely different amounts of fertilizer.

With the new test, it is expected that an accurate estimate of the amount of fertilizers needed can be determined.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 24th day of September, A D. 1912, executed by Paris Brewer; a single man, to Cyrus L. Wilcox, which said mortgage was, on the 25th day of September, A. D., 1912, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, State of Michigan, in Liber 144 of Mortgages, on Page 147, and which said Mortgage is now owned by the estate of said Cyrus L. Wilcox, he being now deceased, and upon which there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($900) past due principal, FOUR HUNDRED TWENTY TWO and 64-100 DOLLARS interest; taxes in the amount of One Hundred Fifty-Five and 85 100 Dollars ($155,85) paid by said estate for the protection of its said mortgage interest, together with an attorney fee provided for in said mortgage and by the statute in such case made and provided of THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS, and which said sum, together with said attorney fee, is the whole amount claimed to be now due on said mortgage leaving however, a balance of principal still due thereon at a future date, in the sum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, foreclosure and sale hereunder being subject to such unpaid principal.

And whereas, on the 21st day of November A. D., 1918, by a partial release recorded in Liber 159 of Mortgages, page 421, as appears by the records in the Register of Deeds office of said county, the following lands were released from said mortgage; Ten acres off the south end of the east half of the north-west quarter of Section Twenty-Three: in Town five south, of range two west, Moscow Township, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and leaving the land hereinafter described as security for the payment of said indebtedness.

And whereas, no suit or proceeding, either in law or equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of June, A. D. 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county because of said defaults in the payments of said sums of principal and interest, and taxes amounting in all to Fourteen Hundred Seventy-eight Dollars, forty nine cents [$1478 49] and by virtue of power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale at Public Auction to the highest bidder of the said premises therein described, exceptt the premises heretofore released as herein set forth, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage as above set forth, with interest thereon, and the costs, charges and expenses allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including the said attorney fee

Said premises now covered by said mortgage are described as follows; All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Moscow, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan, viz. The North-east quarter of the south-west quarter of, Section twenty three, Town five south of Range [illegible] west

In Argentina there is a national finger-printing law, and as a result the 10,000,000 or more inhabitants are all recorded by this system. It is this regulation which makes Argentina the one country in the world, it is said, where one may not lose his or her identity.

This is one of the beauty spots of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia. The exposition celebrates the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The view shows the tower of one of the main exhibit buildings rearing its head up from among the gorgeous landscape which artists have built around the giant structures which house exhibits from forty-three nations of the world. The Exposition continues until December 1.

Potato Train Very Popular

The New York Central's Potato train which visited Hillsdale recently proved very popular as 2300 bushels of seed potatoes were distributed to the farmers, 250 miles were traveled and 11 counties visited.

The Peck Exhibit (32 potatoes) Contest was well taken as was shown by forty seven entries along the route. Local prizes were awarded in many instances and the best peck was taken from each town. At the conclusion of the tour the sweeptakes for the best peck exhibited on the entire trip was awarded to George Andrews of Lawton who exhibited Russet Rurals. The award was a silver loving cup donated by the Michigan Potato Producers Association.

The total attendance for the trip was 5165 with Three Rivers leading with an attendance of 410. Coldwater was second with 290 and Hillsdale third with 265. Other attendance records are as follows: Buchanan 260, Sturgis 260, Jackson 255, Litchfield 230, Allegan 215, Marshall 210, Gobles 205, Eaton Rapids 200. Battle Creek 195, Kalamazoo 190, Augusta 175, Quincy 175, Concord 175, Lawton 170, Eau Claire 165, Cassopolis 155, Bronson 150, White Pigeon 150, Niles 145, Plainwell 140, Union City 135, Dowagiac 130, Centerville 115.

He's Got The Coin

Julius Rosenwald, president of [illegible] Roebuck, the largest mail order house in the world, located in Chicago, has offered the city the vast sum of $500,000 to build a community auditorium in Chicago to seat 50,000 persons at a time, and the same Semitic gent recently donated $3;000,000 to them for an industrial Museum. Well, this is good to read about—and yet we can't help thinking and wondering where that money came from.

Did you ever stop to think of the vast sums of money from the township of Adams alone that went to Shears—Sawbuck, and is still going to them? Now we speak of charity beginning at home, etc., and it occurs to us to inquire, "what does Adams township get from a vast auditorium in Chicago?" Nothing. If Herr Rosenwald were born of a contrite heart and a spirit of gratitude instead of a bull-headed desire for notoriety and a marble shaft commemorating his demise, one would suppose he might establish a mammoth museum somewhere in Hillsdale county, possibly at Milnes or Hoxie's corners, in the neighborhoods where his firm has garvered in so many dollars!

No: Julius wont do this. He prefers to enrich the already glutted and cloyed great municipality of Chicago to make it still more opulant and more decayed. Herr Rosenwald is much the same as Herr Sapiro. Both get while the getting is good and repay by means of the nose thumb trick, and having waxed tremendously rich—tney invite the customer to flirt with their dollar day sales some more.

This ought to be a hint to all our readers to let the Semitic gent alone severely in the future and buy of your home merchant who helps pay your taxes and don't care a whoop even if Chicago were off the map. Practically every dollar you send to Chicago remains there, and never will again figure in the commercial life of Hillsdale county.

Geo. Mowrey, who was arrested in Hillsdale for being drunk, paid his fine and costs and was released on the 27th.

Bert Wirick who was arrested on the complaint of David Mowrey for drunkenness, plead guilty before Justice Aldrich and was sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and costs of $15. He paid.

Court Hutchins, late of Mosherville, was arrested in Cement City on the complaint of Mr. Warner, for driving while drunk. He plead guilty before Justice Fitzsimmons and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs of $13.10. He also contributed.

On Wednesday, Arthur Chapman of Scipio, was brought to trial before Justice Fitzsimmons, for drunkenness in the Jail Office, etc. on the complaint of the Sheriff. The jury decided that Mr. Chapman was not guilty, so the Sheriff and 3 of his officers who saw the man must have been mistaken.

The undersheriff and Chief Deputy escorted Lawrence and Howell to Ionia, on Wednesday, where they will begin their respective sentences imposed by the Circuit Court for Liquor Law violation.

Wednesday forenoon the Sheriff and two State Troopers took the 120 quarts of Halberg liquor out to be destroyed.

Harry Collins, Hillsdale who wandered away from home to Sturgis, was returned to Hillsdale on Thursday by the Sheriff's Department. He was placed before a Board of Physicians, found to be insane, and taken to Kalamazoo Friday by the Sheriff.

On Thursday, Clyde Hayden Lansing was arrested by the Sheriff on complaint of the Reading Auto Co. for disposing of a mortgaged car. He was placed under $500 bail to appear at the May term of the Circuit Court, and is being held in default of same.

Lewis B. Warner, wanted by the Automotive Acceptance Co. of Cincinnati, for fraudulently disposing of a Ford Coupe, was arrested Thursday night by officers from the Sheriff's Department. He is being held for Ohio authorities.

John Keefus, of North Adams, was arrested there Saturday evening by the Chief Deputy. He was brought to Hillsdale and charged with the burglary of 2 garages in North Adams. After a search by members of the Sheriff's Department, part of the stolen goods were found and John was forced to admit his guilt. The Sheriff is conducting a thorough investigation of other recent robberies in the vicinity.

Late Saturday evening, the liquor joint owned and operated by Victor Fish, on M-23, about one mile east of Moscow, was raided by the Sheriff and some of his officers. A large quantity of various kinds of liquor and some booze paraphernalia was confiscated. Fish was arrested snd brought back to Hillsdale and several others found in the house at the time of the raid were also "jugged." More news later.

No of prisoners in the County Jail 14. No under sentence 3. No awaiting trial 11. Total 14.

Col. Earl H, Kerr, Sheriff,

Out Door Exposition

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love", a famons poet once wrote. However, spring means much besides thoughts of love to thousands of men and boys in the crowded cities of the middle west, according to Milo E. Westbrooke, Manager of the Out-Door Life Exposition, May 9 to 14, at the Coliseum Chicago.

To the hundreds of thousands of men and boys—and women too—who crowd the Out-Door Show each year spring means the call of the wild, that restive urge to hit into the north woods and mountains and get back to nature.

Already more than two and one half acres of floor space have been reserved for exhibitors in the show and the middle west, and particularly the north woods, is being scoured for wild life exhibits of interest to the shut-ins of the big cities. Everything that the out-of doors world has to offer the so-called cliff dwellers of the city will be on view at the show.

That Michigan will make a strong bid for its share of attention at the Out-Door Life Exposition is shown by the fact that a number of communities have exhibits in the show. Ironwood, Escanaba, Dowagiac, Muskegon, and a number of other communities will be on hand at the show to advertise the wonderful scenic and recreational assets of the state, And, such companies as the Greyhound Motor Coach Lines. which link Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin Indiana and Ohio are quite generally interested in the work.

Governor Zimmerman of Wisconsin has invited Governor Fred W, Green and the governors of several other middle west states to join him at the conference with a view to an intelligent study of the states' mutual conservation problems. The unification of game laws in particular will be taken up at the conference with a hope of some forward steps being taken in regard to game hogs, forest fire prevention, beautification of state highways, and regulation for tourist camps.

Book State Potato Tour For August

A big state-wide potato tour, with delegates from outside Michigan joining the local members of the caravan for the inspection of leading producing areas, has been announced for the second week in August this summer.

Starting at M. S. C. the tour will make Greenville the first major stop. Greenville is generally recognized as one of the great potato markets of the United States, and those on the tour will be given time to go over the producing areas and markets carefully.

At Cadillac, the tourists will be largely under the care of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange. Both seed and table stock fields will be studied in this area, before the party swings on up to Antrim County. A jump across the state will bring the tourists to Cheboygan and Alpena counties, to take in the eastern potato areas.

Those interested in Upper Peninsula potato seed production will leave the main party at Alpena, according to the plans as announced by Prof. J. F. Cox, of the college crops department, and go north across the straits. Southern states have shown great interest in U. P. seed stocks in recent years, and many will want to see the producing area.

The college, the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, and the Potato Growers Exchange are the chief cooperators in putting on the tour, with the state department of agriculture also invited to join in the plans.

Hymnbook Is Owned By Olivet Library

One of the most valued possessions in the Olivet College Library here is a hymnbook. Ordinary hymnbooks in a Congregational College should not be a curiosity, nor are they here. This one, however, is unique outside of the greatest libraries of the country.

The person who could hold and sing from the hymnbook would also be unique, for it is written in Latin, weighs nearly 20 pounds, is three feet in length by two in width, and is over four inches in thickness. It is a marvel of bookmaking, its covers being of heavy walnut boards nearly an inch thick and these covered with heavy leather. The pages are of heavy and almost indestructible vellum.

The book is a relic of the middle ages, and was used when books were so rare that it was necessary for a chanting choir to share one large book rather than each singer to have his own hymnal. It is bravely illuminated in brilliant colors, the musical staff being in red, with the notes square instead of oval as today. The words of the chants are in Latin.

The past of the book is rather in doubt, but what is known of it is as unusual as the book itself, for it was found in Peru, to which place it is supposed to have been brought from Spain by the Jesuits. The date of 1694 in the book is probably the date of the completion of what must have been a life long task of illumination and beautification. It has about 80 pages.

While the book naturally shows the marks of age, it is in excellent state of preservation, its one mutilation being the removal of one of the gorgeously colored initial letters. James W. Ellsworth of Chicago was the donor of the book of Olivet. He was advised that the Olivet College Library was the best depositary for this treasure, by Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus of Chicago.

Although the students at Olivet are naturally interested in the wonderful hymnbook, it is one book which has not yet been borrowed for light reading.

A LOTTERY WITHOUT A WINNER

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

(There is presented herewith the first of a series of articles exposing the wiles of sharpers who are after your money.)

W. R. MOREHOUSE

ALMOST unbelievable amounts are lost to the American people annually from unwise ventures. This loss, estimated at nearly one billion dollars a year, is accounted for when you take into consideration that practically all of the money "invested" in numerous fake schemes and half-baked projects is forfeited by the investors. In presenting this series of articles regarding sharp practices and various kinds of swindles we hope to prevent thousands of people from falling into the traps already set for them by irresponsible and unscrupulous promoters.

Through the use of only actual cases selected from several thousand, it is hoped to prove conclusively the futility of taking a "gambler's chance" with your savings, for as in a lottery without a winner you are bound to lose. Much of the material here used has been supplied by the Better Business Bureaus throughout the United States which are non-profit organizations serving the investor without charge and acting wholly in the public interest. Read these cases and then file them away for future reference, for sooner or later you may find yourself on the verge of "taking a leap in the dark",—of speculating with your savings as the people here told about were inveigled into doing

A "good front" has put over more crooked deals than any other one thing. Every irresponsible promoter specializes in putting on a "good front" in his dealings with those whom he fleeces out of their savings. Whether or not he is successful is due to a large degree on how good a front he is able to put on. In motion pictures, the sets, or "props" as they are called, supply the setting for the scenes. They are used to portray things that seem large, things that seem grand and beautiful. Peer behind those sets and what do you see there? You see that the attractive fronts are supported by braces made of the cheapest, knottiest and poorest timber imaginable.

They serve their purpose in the world of make-believe, but in real life you cannot afford to buy only good fronts. Your house must have real rooms behind it, your purchases and investments real values. In the field of wild-cat financing if you peer behind the "good front" which the promoter puts on you will find that it is supported only by deception, dishonesty and fraud.

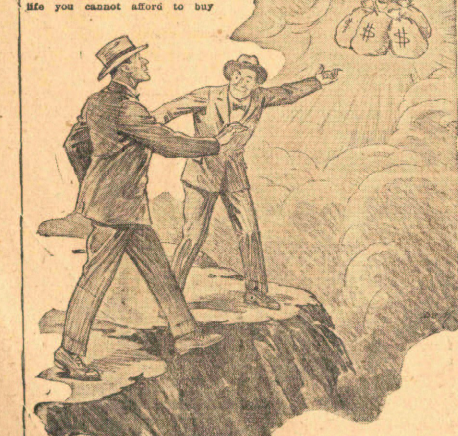
Unscrupulous persons of the "good front" type are expert actors in the role of "big brother" to inexperienced investors with money at their command. As protector and advisor to the widow and the inexperienced, which they claim to be, they are in reality wolves in sheep's clothing.

Gaining the Victim's Confidence

In personal appearance they are impressive. As conversationalists they are convincing. As students of the traits of human nature they rate high. In short, they know how to stalk their prey successfully. With Satanic cunning they fall in line with their intended victim's likes and dislikes, his viewpoint and his hobby, and when they have gained his favor and trust they grow more and more confidential, presently taking a great interest in his welfare and happiness. Before long they are offering advice and pointing out how he can better his own interests by making a new disposition of his available cash or by selling his present good securities and buying others recommended by them.

Your promoter will draw upon your imagination and paint a picture of a scheme by which you can make thousands of dollars without effort or risk,—he may describe some invention selling for an astounding sum, or depict the prospects of a fabulous mine or oil company that is going to double and treble in value over night. As a climax he may paint the picture of a vine-covered cottage which is to be yours in your old age, with its radiantly burning fire on the hearth and with all the luxuries that go with a happy home. And finally, he may paint you sitting before this fire, happy and contented—independent for life, as the result of an investment made according to his advice.

But there is a great difference between what you get and what the wild-cat promoter paints in the imagination of his victims. By the lure of easy money he leads them over the precipice of financial ruin. Instead of old-age ease and comforts there usually results poverty and privation.



The Lure of Easy Money

(The next article in this series will tell of a clever scheme practiced in many parts of the country by which the unwary are robbed of their money.)

Auction Bills

This is auctton bill time and we print any size. It is also getting close to syrup label time We can fnrnish any style. any size; any color. We do not recommend gummed labels as the moisture loosens them soon and they drop off. Shellac is a real good adhesive for tin cans and it is non-soluble in moisture.

We can turn out a fairly good job of Auction Bills on short notice, and in the better grades of printing we do not takc a back seat.

POLICE SAY FEW CRIMES MYSTERY

Probably a great many, say Detroit criminologists, for the list of unsolved killing mysteries is a growing one and the percentage of those who are cheating the prison is in proportion to the populations of the great cities.

Cases are known where detectives pass slayers on the street of Detroit, Chicago, New York, or, say Boston, and remain powerless to arrest them. For the majority of cases of unsolved murder mysteries, says Chief of Detectives Edward H. Fox, are mysterious to the public alone—the police know.

"A crime is committed, he illustrated. "The suspect is arrested. The police examine him and within a few minutes know he is guilty. But this is not enough for judges and juries. The police must get the evidence, for their man must be convicted beyond reasonable doubt. This is the reason, probably, why so many guilty men walk the streets and their cases become mysteries.

"Im there are more unsolved cases today than there have been over similar periods in the past," the chief continued, "the greatest contributing element is the automobile. In crimes roughly defined as banditry, involving killing as a sort of an incident to the robbery, the ability of the criminal to dash up from some unknown place, commit the crime and lose himself in the traffic in a car that possibly has been stolen from some peaceful owner, presents a problem to the police which has, as yet no effective solution."

Lieut. Fred Frahm, at present the head of the Detroit homicide squad, believes that there are but very few killings that are mysteries to the police.

"Naturally one would think that a stray bandit who kills his victim in the process of a holdup and then hurries away without being seen, is almost certain to escape," said the lieutenant. 'But the fact is that such killers generally are apprehended.

"It's the incidental killings—the slaying of a wife by her husband, or husband by wife—that are sometimes puzzling. Some slayers plan their crimes months and even years in advance—such as the Le Roy case. But, there is always some clue that is as clear as print for the modern detective. Maybe it's only the look in a murderer's eye—vertainly no evidence for the jury—but the detective knows. It's not mere suspicion, either. The mysteries remain unsolved in the eyes of the public, but not to the intelligent officer. He may know that man's hands are red with blood, but he dare not act."

LARGE ALFALFA SEED YIELD MARKS LAST YEAR

Large yields of alfalfa seed were obtained by Michigan farmers in 1926.

Alex Langsburg, of Deckerville, harvested 110 bushels of Grimm seed from 20 acres. The seed and $325 worth of alfalfa straw netted Langsburg $2,500.

Similar yield was obtained by Herbert Gettel, of Pigeon, from a smaller acreage. Wesley Motz, of Huron County, and Emil Faden, of Tuscola County, are reported to have obtained yields of four bushels of Grimm seed per acre. Dorr Perry, a THuscola farmer, reported a yield of six bushels per acre with a variegated variety of alfalfa.

ALL BUT ONE VICTOR IN STOCK JUDGING MICHIGAN YOUTHS

Winners in the special live stock judging contests held at the Michigan State College at the conclusion of the agricultural short courses were Michigan boys in all but one instance.

The judging events are held annually at the end of the winter's work in live stock study, and practically all of the men in the short course classes take part. The standard of judging is high and the winners are regarded as having achieved an honor in scholastic achievement.

Sheldon E. Markle, of Albion, won first place in the all-events class, scoring 845 points. Albert E. Holtforth, of Fenton, was second with 835 points, and Carl M. Haskins, of Ovid, took third place, scoring 825.

Winners of first place in the special classes were: Horses, Forest J. Brown, Ironton; beef cattle, H. C. Blakely, of Romeo; sheep, Edwin M. Krauss, of Bay City; dairy cattle, A. E. Holtforth, of Fenton; swine, Arthur J. Hagerman, of Tekonsha.

FEW THRIVE WHEN PAYROLL CAST OFF

It's a proud day for the man who has worked for wages when he can make that boast to his friends. Thousands say it every year in Detroit; every day sees dozen become their own bosses. But how many succeed? How many make a mistake when climbing down from the weekly payroll?

"I'll cite two instances," replied a business chance office manager.

"Three months ago a man 60 years old came to us. He explained that he had saved $2,200 as an automobile factory worker. The timehad come, he said, when he wanted to be his own boss, to go into business for himself.

"What sort of business do you want?" I asked him. 'I'd like a confectionery store,' he replied. 'One that I can buy for $2,200 and there will be no balance due.'

"Well, this fellow's hands naturally were seamed and cracked. His nails were blunted and one could scarcely imagine him dishing out bonbons. Yet, he insisted: said he knew just what he wanted.

At the time he had a store listed that had been a success for years. Two men who owned it before had cleaned up and were owners of bigger places. Here, it seemed, was a surefire bet for the old man. We gave him a little advice about wearing a white coat, keeping his hands clean and so on and started him up. Within three months he was absolutely broke. Now, he is trying to get along on a job working three nights a week, his $2,200 gone with last year's snow.

"That is one case. Here is another: A Japanese, Ben Hamamura, and his wife came to see me to buy a small business. But they had no money whatever, nor could they speak English fluently. One could tell, however, that they meant business and that all they needed was a toe hold on something. We decided to take a chance and put them in businesss in a small restaurant. There were living rooms in the rear of the place. You ought to see the way this couple did things! The place was cleaned from top to bottom. Customers same and discovered a lunch room where unusual courtesies were extended. They came again and brought their friends. Hamamura and his wife cleared approximately $100 a day, before they sold for a big profit.

The veteran in the business chance business, declares that when husband and wife go into business, the latter running the business and the husband retaining his job, the chances for success are 99 out of 100.

John S. Curtis, 81 years old, and Charles McCracken, 87, sat in the dimly-lighted bachelor apartment of the former at Buchanan, "swapped" stories of the big war and quietly celebrated the sixty-vfth anniversary of the departure of the "Fighting Twelfth" Michigan regiment for Dixie.

There are but four survivors of company C of this regiment, which was entirely recruited in Buchanan. The other two who complete the quartet are Ben Wynn, 86, former postmaster of the village of Eau Claire and Charles Palmer, 84, of Butte, Mont. Illness kept Wynn at home and distance prevented Palmer from attending the reunion. So the two veterans, clad in faded blue uniforms of the Grand Army of the Republic, relived the battle-scarred, bloodshot days of Shiloh, Antietam and Vicksburg.

He's Landed And Has The Situation Well In Hand!

Hey, fellers—don't you envy our uniformed friend above, in the midst of such a bevy of beauties? Hard luck for him, isn't it? Yes, it is—NOT.

But he had the treat coming. He's bill Clanton, a Marine who was named the most handsome man amongst 7000 enlisted men at the Brooklyn, New York, Navy Yard. Some honor. And SOME reward.

CHANGE IN DEER SEASON ASKED BY SPORTSMEN

Pentwater, Michigan, sportsmen have petitioned the conservation commission asking that the open season on deer be made to read November 5 to November 20.

They reason that snow is not likely to be as deep during that period and that lack of snow, while a hindrance to the hunter in tracking, has a conserving influence for the deer in order that it permits them more easily to elude the hunter, which they set up should, after all, be one of the objects of protective seasons.

The sportsmen claim that the hunter would rather be permitted to enjoy the woods when pleasant days are possible when deep snows and later winter storms chill the ardor of the chase. They also point out that an earlier season would prevent the likelihood of deep snows stalling automobiles which was the case last season when hundreds of them had to be abandoned in the snow.

STATE MAKES WAR ON HEAVY TRUCKS

Never before has the State Highway department taken such pains to enforce the loading restrictions on trunk line highways. With the worst break-up of highways in the history of the state, the highway department took steps at once o enforce the loading restrictions of 450 pounds to the tire inch for trucks. At various places in the state, men have been stationed to weigh all trucks. At Ferrysburg in Ottawa County, the junction point of two of the trunk lines of Michigan M-11 and M-16 all trucks have been stopped night and day since the regulations went into effect. Every truck is weighed. If the trucks are found to be overweight the drivers are made to unload. No arrests have been made but the order to unload is considered sufficient punishment. In many cases the truck operators have been forced to distribute the load so that too much weight will not be placed on one axle.

The weighing is done quickly at the scene where the truck is stopped. Load meters are used. The wheels of the truck are driven on the load meter and it records the weight on each wheel.

When it comes to painless extraction of fines, Lieut. A. A. Ferguson of the Kalamazoo traffic bureau, as the saying goes, "knows his groceries.'

In the person of Miss Irene Lewis, a pretty blond with large blue eyes, rosy and dimpled cheeks, and a ready smile, Ferguson has a human forceps with which he operates on traffic violators' pocketbooks with extrarodinary success.

It is never a pleasure to be arrested, never a privilege to be permitted to pay a fine, but Lieutenant Ferguson through his traffic bureau clerk, has made as agreeable as possible the experience of being "pinched" for minor violations of the code. Miss Lewis, whose unfailing cordiality and smile is extended to each violator as he steps up to the desk to square himself with the law, takes some of the sting out of the "pinch."

NEW LIGHT MAY TURN LEAD GOLD

Can modern science, equipped at last with instruments of which the ancient alchemists never dreamed, win the secret of the Philosopher's Stone and end the age-old quest?

Will the new Coolidge "hundred billion dollar" tube accomplish, among the other wonders expected o fit, the transmutation of lead to gold?

Physicists at the University of Michigan, like their colleagues throughout the world, are dealers in fact and not in finances. They prefer to maintain complete silence with their particular task has been completed and the results discussed in detail with those of the inner circle. Then, perhaps the laity may know what it is all about. And perhaps not.

They are funny fellows, these scientists. Down in one of the subbasements of the physics building, they are engaged in setting up the sheet-lead cabinet and complicated system of vacuum pumps for the installation of one of the new cathode-ray tubes, capable of throwing off as great quantities of Beta rays as a ton, or hundred billion dollars' worth of radium—capable of causing crystals to glow for hours with cold light, capable for changing acethylene gas into a mysterious yellow power, turning sugar to acid, solidfying castor oil, burning hair from a rabbit's ear and then replacing it with long snow-white fur.

Pressed back to the wall of your argument, the physicists will admit, grudgingly and in fear of being quoted, that the changing of lead into gold is "theoretically possible." Next instant, they are hastening to take refuge in all the well-known phrases that a Bachelor, Master or Doctor of Science employs when quizzed by a layman.

No one, not even the inventor, Dr. William D. Coolidge, has the slightest idea of what the new tube, demonstrated publicly for the first time last October, is capable of doing. Turning on the switch is like turning the key and throwing back the gate to some strange and undiscovered land. Out of its purple shadows there have flashed from time to time and for a fleeting moment, glimpses of wonders yet to be revealed. Within the X1ray tube there have lurked these mysterious Beta rays, a comparatively small number of which were lured outside by the German physicist, Lenard.

To Coolidge goes the honor of perfecting a tube like no other in the world which, shooting the Beta rays from a metallic window, permits them to influence directly any selected substance.

SUNSHINEY WINTER AIDS IN FERTILITY OF EGGS

The mild winter, with abundance of sunshine, is reflected in the high percentage of hatchability of eggs placed in incubators this season. Early hatches, ordinarily the poorest, were near normal this year.

Fifty to 75 per cent of all eggs placed on the incubators since the first of February have hatched, hatcheries reported. Ordinarily the February and March hatches are 40 to 50 per cent.

Hatcherymen attribute the good hatches to favorable weather conditions which have made it possible for the hens to keep active most of the winter.

SCHUBERT CLUB THRIVES DESPITE JAZZ MUSIC AGE

The Schubert club, Grand Rapids' veteran musical organization, which recently opened its 1927 season, has passed its 43rd anniversary.

Established in Grand Rapids long before the phonograph and the radio were in existence, the club has continued to prosper and has provided the city with excellent concert and operatic programs. Back in 1884, when the club was formed, there were numerous organizations operating with similar purposes and it has been said "Grand Rapids was a seething center of musical ambition." The business of the organ manufacturer, the music teacher, the sheet music dealer was the envy of the less prosperous and nighboring mtrcantile establishments. Everyone was interested in music and the city had a number of bands, each ready to answer the challenge of the best harmony production.

GRAND HAVEN GIRL WEATHER PROPHET

Miss Enid Rice, 17 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Rice, of Grand Haven, Mich., has her heart set on becomming a full-fledged United States weather bureau ogserver. To do that, Miss Rice must overcome the objections of the Government against women holding the position of observer.

Miss Rice is young, ambitious, and she believes that she will just naturally force the Government to drop its bars against women for the position. Of course, women are not barred, exactly, for the application blanks contain the statement, "Open to men and women." Yet, on the same application blank is the note, "Male applicants desired."

Miss Rice is employed in the United States weather bureau at Grand Haven, where she is becoming efficient in the work. In fact, Miss Rice is becoming so proficient that she is prepared to take the examination for a junior observer.

"I am going to pass a perfect examination and then they can not very well turn me down just because I am a woman," said Miss Rice. "But gee, my own regret is that I am not a man."

GRAND HAVEN CHIEF DRIVES AMBULANCE MENDS CITY AUTOS

Anthony Pippel likes to serve the public. That explains why he has a corner on all the official posgitions in Grand Haven. Some of his public jobs are chief of the fire department, chief of police, superintendent of poor, traffic bureau judge, truant officer and operator of the city tourist information bureau.

As Chief Pippel is a willing worker, the Grand Haven city council has added to his tasks yearly. In addition to the routine of his official positions, Chief Pippel finds time to save the city thousands of dollars through his ability as a mechanic.

One of the two city fire trucks was worn out and the council was talking of buying a new one.

"You buy the chassis and I will make the truck," said the chief.

The city purchased the chassis for $2200 and with th eaddition of $276 Chief Pippel rebuilt the chemical and pumper. That apparatus in valued at $6500 on the city books.

The city was without an ambulance. An undertaker donated an old hearse and Mr. Pippel, who was a cabinetmaker before he turned to public service, built the ambulance at a cost of $160. Then another job as ambulance driver was wished on the chief.

CO-EDS BARRED BY DILL PICKLE CLUB

The old question of intellectual equality of the sexes threatens to become a serious problem for founders of the newest and most liberal organization on the Michigan State college campus, the Dill Pickle club, that has pust held its first two meetings and plans to convene once a week for "frank discussions."

Although the club is open to any student on the campus who is tolerant to the point of listening to ideals of others without bursting into bitter denunciation, and as members say, "Come one, come all," the Dill Picklers are, nevertheless, hostile to co-ed invasion. Among the few tenets of the organization which boasts of having neither creed, officers, by-laws, records or dues, appears the express statement that every student or faculty member at State college may attend the open meetings.

But the Dill Pickle club has proved, at the sessions held thus far, as frankly masculine as the "bull sessions" of fraternities. The opinion of individuals who are sponsoring the new movement is that a markedly chilly reception would be accorded any co-eds who ventured to join the charmed circle.

Foolish sayings now and then are uttered by the wisest men.

BUSINESS METHOD ON FARMS URGED

Dr. Kenyon S. Butterfield, president of Michigan State college, declared that it is the purpose of the college to project a state wide program to promote the most efficient farming methods possible.

According to Dr. Butterfield, the distress of the farmer has developed a new interest among business and industrial interests in the plight of agriculture.

"The distress of the farmer has brought about a new interest on the part of business and industrial groups and because of this interest a high degree of mutuality has grown up between business and agriculture," said Dr. Butterworth. "It is now time that agriculture be placed on the same basis as a large business enterprise.

"It is our intention to play a state wide program to secure the co-operation of the farmer and develop the highest possible efficiency in farming. Agriculture must do that thing, and we want Michigan agricultural lands to be one large farm, operated on the same basis asany large corporation, with all farmers working together.

"The value of the land in fertility far exceeds that of all other resources and it must be kept up. That is a problem that is fundamantal. The problem of a market is vital, but the most important problem is to keep the typical American farmer on the farm, so we will still have the same hardy stock on our farms as we had 150 years ago."

TRADE EXPANDS ON SPRING BUYING

The expansion of busines was accelerated during the past week by the opening up of spring retail trade. The weather conditions in most sections of the country were ideal, and the few unfavorable reports came from rural districts where bad roads exerted a retarding influence.

Wholesale trade, on the other hand, was subject to the seasonal slacking of, ,spring deliveries having been practically completed, while the movement of later goods was not yet well under way.

Most of the so-called indices of business were of a favorable order. The steel industry showed continued improvement both as to production and price. The industry was reported close to 90 per cent of its ingot production capacity. An excess of current requirements is being piled up as a reserve against curtailment which would be brought about by a cessation of mining in the union bituminous fields. Demand for structural steel was reported on the up grade and a more optimistic note was heard in inquiries from the automobile trade.

Bank clearings in the leading financial centers of the country advanced approximately 10 per cent over those of a year ago, and the daily average of the first two months of 1927. Credit conditions continued easy and significance was seen in the fact that the first quarterly payment of income taxes was accomplished on March 15 without any noticeable depletion of the surplus supply of money.

Car loadings showed further increase, although the gain was largely made up of heavy coal shipments from the union bituminous fields. Grain and merchandise movements were above last year's figures, while love stock and forest products showed a falling off.

Coincident with the advance of the season, dry goods conditions improved, particularly in the lines of cotton, rayon and silk. At the same time the wool industry displayed signs of faltering and the closing of some of the mills in that field was an advense feature of the week.

Agricultural reports varied. Wet weather in the south interrupted work in the cotton fields, although preparations for seeding went steadily forwar, particularly along the northern fringe of the cotton belt. Climatic conditions in the middle west were excellent and good progress was reported in most of the winter wheat regions. Spring oats sowing has been delayed by wet soil.

Mild weather brought about the usual seasonal cut in coal prices a little earlier than is ordinarily the case.

A slight decrease in unemployment was noted, but this was largely due to growing activity in out of door occupations, advancing with spring. Farming and building lines claimed a share of the increase in the total of workers, while others were taken in by expanding automobile plants.

MAY 1 OPENS WAR ON CORN BORER

Besides being notable as the day when children hang baskets of flowers on the door knobs of their neighbors and the Socialists of the world celebrate their annual holiday, May 1 will be significant this year as the last approved day of execution for the European corn borer.

Before that day, according to the detailed regulations by Herbert E. Powell, State Commissioner of Agriculture, all corn stalks, corn cobs and remnants of stalks and cobs must be fed to livestock, placed in silo, tramped into manure, finely ground or otherwise destroyed.

The regulations will be enforced in the counties of Monroe, Wayne, Lenawee, Washtenaw, Macomb, Oakland, Livingstone, St. Clair, Lapeer, Genesee, Sanalac, Tuscola, Huron, Hillsdale, Branch, Jackson, Calhoun, Ingham and Shiawassee.

They will be enforced also in the township of Fawn River, Burr Oak, Colon and Leonidas in St. Joseph County; Walkeshima, Climax, Charleton, Ross, Brady, Pavilion, Comstock, Richland, Portage, and Schoolcraft in Kalamazoo County; Firch Run, Frankenmuth Bloomfield, Taymouth, Bridgeport, Buena Vista, Zilwaukee, Maple Grove, Albee, Spaulding, Saginaw, Kochville, St. Charles, James, Chesaning and the city of Saginaw in Saginaw County; Merritt, Portsmouth, Hampton, Frankenlust, Monitor, Bangor and the city of Bay City in Bay County.

Regulation One reads: "All corn stalks and remnants of corn stalks, all corn cogs not being stored for the grain attached thereto, and all remnants of such cobs, of each year's corn crop, in fields or feed lots, around canning factories and grain elevators, in or about stock yards, stock pens, loading chutes and similar places, if not fed, made into ensilage, shredded or finely ground, or if not tramped into manure, shall be destroyed befo.e May 1 of the year succeeding the growth of that corn."

The interpretation explains that feed lots, feeding sheds, feeding floors, barnyards, manure bins, manure piles, stock paths, lanes, exercise pens, barn floors, mows, corn fodder stacks, shelters, coverings over sheds and shelters and all similar places on farms art included under Regulation Two. Likewise the "premises around and within canning factories, grain elevators, seed houses and the premises around and within the shipping and receiving points of livestock and grain, and the premises around and within buildings or other property used in the processing of livestock and grain products" are included.

Fields already seeded, which contain on the surface corn crop remnants in form to harbor living borers, should be worked with a stubble pulverizer, in case the remnants are in the form of stubble; or if the remnants are in the form of loose trash, all such trash should be gathered up and destroyed.

If any trash in condition to harbor living borers appears on the surface of fields which contained corn the previous year but which already have been plowed, disced or harrowed for the succeeding crop or if such trash appears within the "fissures between the clods of soil," it becomes a "decided menace," says the department.

There's a reason why the percentage of European corn borer infestation is greater in some fields than in others in the same community, often on adjoining farms, according to E. C. Mandenburg of the State Department of Agriculture.

State and Federal entomologists have discovered Mr. Mandenburg says, that the time of planting corn has an important bearing upon the percentage of infestation. They have found that the moths have a keen sense of smell and that they are attracted to certain fields by the odor carried by the winds.

Early planted corn has the highest persentage of infestation. Entomologists believe this is due to young corn giving off a sulphurous odor which repels the moths, while older corn gives off a sweet odor which lures the insects.

If this theory is supported by further experiments, Mr. Mandenburg believes farmers will be able to reduce the percentage of infstation by planting trap patches of corn early and delaying the planting of field corn abolt three weeks.

MOVIE HAS GLASS ROOM FOR BABIES THAT CRY

A crying room is the innovation adopted by a Port Huron movie theater just opened. When mothers with the babies attend the shows and the infants start to cry the mothers can take them into the crying room, the stage side of which is of glass. There, in comfort and without annoyance to other patrons, the mothers can enjoy the show.

WILD REGIONS AS STATE PARKS, AIM

Four beautiful regions in the northern peninsula of Michigan, still as wild as in the days when the Objibway Indians roved the forests, may be converted into state-owned parks, if a project underway by the state conservation commission is successful. Three of the sites which residents of the upper peninsula are bending every ecort to have preserved in their natural state lie along the southern shore of Lake Superior, and the other is located on the northern coast of Lake Michigan, near Manistique.

The unbroken silence of the primeval forests broods over the famous chief led his redskin followers centuries ago, according to popular tradition. The famed hunting grounds of Hiawatha, immortalized by Longfellow, have changed little since the redmen roamed the woods. The advance of civilization has halted at the fringes of the three regions, and the tall trees, tumbling streams and waterfalls protect the traditions of the past,. Man has built a path to the other site in the northwoods, but its unusual charm warrants its conversion into a public playground.

To the north of Hiawatha land lies Lake Superior, the Big Sea Water, in solemn majesty. To the south stretch the watery plains of Huron and Michigan. Between these fresh water seas, whose very waters are reminiscent of the Inlian days, lies the magic wand that waves above the hand of southern Michigan, the Fairy Isle, known as Michilimackinac by the Objibways.

Scattered across the far reaches of Hiawatha land are dozens of smaller lages, whose wooded shores are attracting the attentoion of resorters, and iron and copper mines pour out their riches in never-ending volume. Ninety per cent of Michigan's remaining forest covers the hills and valleys within this district, protecting what is left of its wild life.

The Tahquamenon, or "Black Water" falls, are the largest in northern Michigan, 50 feet high and 200 feet wide. Remote in their solemn grandeur they roar and tumble in their deep wood recesses, accessible only by ater from Newberry.

The Pictured Rocks, parading in colorful splendor along the southern shore of the Big Sea Water, and covered with the unvarying green of untouched wilderness, hold their Indian secrets and charm intact. Uo passable road leads to them, and they can be reached only by a long journey on foot through the dense woods.

It is the same with the Porcupines, whose peaks, crowned with the last remaining pine in the north country, stand in majestic aloofness above the landscape.

The Big Spring, called the "Great Boiling Cauldron," by the Indians, is accessible, and is visited annually by thousands of persons. The spring is 100 feet deep, seething with sparkling clear water.

Around these four regions are woven the romantic legends of the Indians, told in the "Song of Hiawatha." Munising, situated near the Pictured Rocks area, is said to have been the spot where "The little Hiawatha," while the dark forest of pines brooded in the back-ground.

REED CITY RENEWS ITS FIGHT FOR COUNTY SEAT

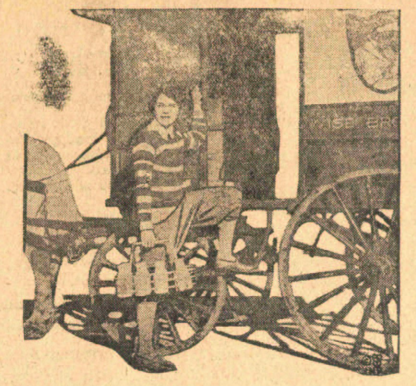
Reed City has renewed its long fought battle to bring the Osceola county seat from Hersey to Reed City. The removal of the county seat has been a point of contest for 30 years, Reed City being arrayed against the eastern part of the county.

Now the leaders in the new movement are attempting to enlist the support of the village of Tustin, Leroy and Ashton but the western part of the county remains solid, with the villages of Marion, Evart and Hersey opposed to the removal of the county seat.

FIND HUNTING COYOTES ON GRAND ISLE USELESS

The three state trappers assigned to the job of ridding Grand Island of its coyotes have given up the task after having discovered that evidence of only three coyotes was found over the entire island, and the freshest of the tracks led to the water's edge, where the animals made their escape over the ice coverd bay to the mainland. Practically every year the Grand Island herd of deer is threatened by coyotes, who find it extremely easf to heach the island from the timber fastness of the upper peninsula via the ice route. An occasionalkill is made, but nothing to compare with the days when timber wolves practiced the same game.

Delivering Milk Keeps Her In Trim For Basket Ball



Odd methods of keeping in physical trim for athletic activities are not necessarily confined to the masculine gender. Red Grange worked on an ice wagon, to star on the gridiron, 'tis true, but then he had nothing on pretty Miss Lucille Limbach of Washington, D. C., pictured above. Miss Limbach finds that working a milk route every morning keeps her in perfect shape for basket ball. She's a star guard with the "Arcadians," an all-girls team so proficient at the overhead tossing game that it books battles with boy opponents only.

SMITHY'S ANVIL RINGS OUT TUNE

"By chisel is busted, Mr. Kirby," says the young man who has pushed aside the sliding doors of the village smithy at Charlevoix and has let himself into the semi-gloom of the blacksmith shop. "Can you fix it for me?"

The much older man who is working the bellows steps forward into the shaft of sunlight pencilling the dark interior. He inspects the broken instrument a moment and replies: "There isn't much I haven't fixed in 61 years of blacksmithing. Perhaph I can make that as good as new."

"How long will it take, Mr. Kirby?"

"Why, if I loaf as hard as I can I guess I can spend all of three minutes on that job."

John Kirby, 75 years old and a blacksmith since the age of 14, bends to the bellows till the dull red glow becomes a circle of yellow rodiance. The broken chisel is thrust into its hot bath. Then, red-hot, it is placed on the forge as a victim's neck is placed on the executioner's block.

Hammer strokes make a brisk rhythm. Hidden in the clanging cadence is the armorer's song—all the songs ever written about one of the oldest occupations in the world. When the sparks have ceased flying the owner of the chisel thrusts forward a pair of calipers to test the measurements of the "just as good as new" instrument, still glowing from its fiery bath.

A generation of school children learned from Mr. Longfellow that under the spreading chestnut tree the village smithy stands and are still cognizant of the fact that the smith a mighty man is he with large and sinewy hands. But in Charlevoix the village smithy stands by the side of Charlevoix Lake, and during the summer tourists by the dozen and the score crowd into what to them is the absorbing novelty of a blacksmith shop operating in the Motor Age.

But M .rKirby does more nowadays than shoe horses. He hammers glowing iron into hinges for doors that are to be hung in the expensive cottages common around Charlevoix. Because he has been a member of the Masonic order since 1888 he put the loving care of the fast disappearing hand craftsman into the shaping of a pair of Masonic andirons.

Last summer a costly car, with a uniformed chauffeur in the front seat and a wealthy industrial magnate reclining on the rear cushions, drove up to the humble shop.

Mr. Kirby was asked, through the chauffeur, if he could produce some hand-wrought hardware for the summer home of the costly car's owner. Question and answer were relayed to the rear seat through the chauffeur. Then John Kirby gave the liveried driver a message to deliver to his master.

"Tell the gentlemtn behind you," said the village smith in the drawling softness of the man who is sure of his own right to speak for himself "that we are living in democratic America, where all men are created free and equal, where it is our good fortune to be able to meet on a friendly basis as men. Also tell him, if you will be so kind, that if he wishes to talk to me he must speak to me friendly, since we bothtalk English and do not need an interpreter to translate for us."

Future negotiations were carried ut oon that basis. On many later occasions residents of Charlevoix marked the handsome car parked before the blacksmith shop while the wealthy owner, seated familiarly on an empty box chatted in friendly fashion as John Kirby, American citiben, caused the bellows to transform the dull red glow of the smoldering coal into a circle of yellow radiance.

MYSTERY BONES IN FORD MUSIEUM

Several objects of mystery, including a silver bracelet encirculing the bones of a human forearm, were added to Edsel B. Ford's private museum recently.

The bracelet, a lisver cross and a lower jaw bone believed to have been that of an Indian Princess, were uncovered in the 700-acre setate at Gaukler's Pointe, Grosse Pointe Shores, under two feet of earth, by a landscape gardner engaged in blasting on the site for the new Ford home under construction.

The discovery was classed as one of great importance by Mr. Ford, according to Capt. Orville Ingalsbe of the Grosse Pointe Shores police, who was notified at the time of the find, and declared the silver cross and bracelet indicated that the person was of high rank.

"It's not the college girl and flapper who are most concerned with the 'perfect 36'. The woman who does the most harm in starving herself to become beautiful and graceful is the married woman between thirty and fifty, the woman who is trying to retain her youth, and, through her own frank admissions, her husband's love," believes Miss Catherine Hanly, nutrition specialist of the National Dairy Council's Philadelphia unit.

"Woman's greatest desire is to be slender," continues Miss Hanly, "and when she is trying to be slender, and then more slender, to a degree often beyond that which is best for good health, thousands of our American women are throwing away money on reduction treatments that are either dangerous or worthless.

"Our observations indicate that most people have become obese before they start to take precautionary measures. It is much easier to keep slender than to become slender after the weight has been added in considerable amount.

"Perhaps," adds Miss Hanly, "I should not admit that my own sex often disregards common-sense measures, but my constant observation and study of this question uppermost in the minds of women leads me to the belief that most older women are expecting doctors or other artificial means to accomplish what they themselves are too prone to disregard.

"I mean that the success of reducing depends upon the individual's willpower. The woman who persists in exercising regularly and in moderation, who is both mentally and bodily alert, who chooses her foods wisely, is much more apt to have the graceful figure and 'mountain dew' complexion which we all place uppermost than the woman who abuses her health by severe reducing methods."

Charles J. Petersen, a lonely Swede of Washington, D. C., who came to America at the age of 14 and prospered materially, gave his life for his dog, Bob, an Airedale.

The dog ran into the street, Petersen after it. The dog escaped an oncoming automobile, but Petersen was struck.

"He always said he'd give his life for that dog," said Mrs. M. T. McNally, the Swede's landlady.

WARNED BY U. S. AGAINST BIG CROP

Farmers were warned by the department of agriculture that their intentions to plant this year larger areas of certain crops, as indicated by the March 1 report, are not warranted by the general agricultural outlook.

"The slightly larger acreage of the principal crops," said the department statement, "is not desirable in view of the general agricultural outlook, but some of the shifts in acreage contemplated may be beneficial.

"Farmers' plans to plant as much corn as last year would result in a continuation of the present level of corn prices. The intended reduction of about 2 per cent in acreage in the corn belt would still produce a larger crop than in 1926 if average yields are obtained.

"Intended increases of acreage of oats and barley would produce larger crops of these grainsfi and this is not considered desirable except where the grains are needed for feed to be used on th farms where producd.

"The slight increase in hard red spring wheat acreage appears desirable in viey of the probable increase in harvested acreage in winter wheat. In areas not well adapted to durum wheat, farmers should hesitate to repdace hard spring wheat with durum, though it may pay to substitute some durum for cash oats or barley.

"Flax growers intend to reduce the acreage, but may be more profitable than other spring grains on land that returns good yields. The proposed reduction in rice acreage seems desirable.

"Growers' intentions to increase potato acreage by 15 per cent with a favorable season and good yields might lead to a larger crop than can be sold at profitable prices."

Tame oats are diffe ent. A man can sow them all by himself.

OPPORTUNITY SEEN IN POTATO GROWTH

Potato growing offers farmers in southwestern Michigan a golden opportunity for profit, in the opinion of Michigan State college specialists traveling abard the special potato train in its swing through 12 counties in the southwest corner of the state.

The train's first stop was in Eaton Rapids, where more than 250 Eaton county farmers inspected the exhibits and listened to two talks on potato culture by Prof. H. C. Moore and Prof. C. M. McCrary, both specialists.

The counties traversed by the train now produce approximately one-seventh of Michigan's potato crop. This production is grown upon a large acreage, but the yield per acre is low and the quality of the crop is not the best.

In view of the proximity of these counties to large industrial centers, like Detdoit, Lansing, Jackson, Kalamazoo, South Bend, Fort Wayne, Indianapolis and Chicako, Prof. Moore believed it would pay far more to improve the yield and quality of their tubers, and take advantage of the market within driving distance over paved highways.

The specialists emphasized the importance of close spacing of the seed pieces in the rows to control hollow heart, and cited experimental data to show the yields as well as the quality can be improved by planting on alfalfa sods. Growers may expect an increase of 40 bushels per acre in their yields if they spray their crops with bordeaux mixture, the specialists said, and another 40 bushel increase per acre may be expected from the planting of northern grown certified seed.

CLASS MATES OFFER TO GIVE BLOOD TO ILL CHUM

Loyalty to their school chum came to the fore when class mates of Burton Marchback, aged 17 years, Richmond high school senior, volunteered blood transfusion shoulr his condition necessitate it. Marchbank is in the oPrt Huron City hospital. Marchbank submitted to a nasal operation, the result of a fracture suffered years ago. His blood will not coagulate, attending physicians say. Marchbank is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. David Marchbank.

LAST OF ROUGE BONDS ARE RETURNED TO FORD

Liberty bonds worth $600,000 were withdrawn from the office of the clerk of the federal court Detroit, by the Ford Motor Company, representing the last of $2,000,000 worth of bonds deposited by the company to guarantee property holders on the banks of the River Rouge compensation for land condemned. The government condemned the land so that the River Rouge could be widened and deepened to permit ocean-going steamships to reach the Rouge plant. The deposit was made in 1920.

NEW ATHLETIC BOARD WIDENS ALUMNI SAY-SO

Complete reorganization of the Michigan State college athletic board, to give wider alumni representation, will be effected immediately, it was announced, following approval of the project by the faculty.

The plan for expanding membership recently was approved by the state board of agriculture and has been submitted to the state college faculty. According to recommendations of the special investigations committee, that will be put into practice, the board will be termed the "athletic council" and will be composed of the following: Four members of the faculty, appointed by the president; three alumni, two appointed by the alumni executive board, and one by the graduate varsity club; two students, one selected by the varsity club and the other by all-college vote at the annual elections; president of the college, director of athletics and the alumni secretary, who will be an ex-officio member.

ARMED CITIZENS WILL GUARD ST. CLAIRE BANKS

Police Chief Hugh E. Stronger of Port Huron and Sheriff D. C. Turbin of St. Clair county, expressed approval of the proposed plan to organize armed vigilantes to guard the banks of the county. The plan also is proposed in other counties. Careful selection of the personnel of such a committee was urged.

The plan contemplates an organization of citizens armed with rifles and pistols and trained in their use.

Fast automobiles will be stationed within sort distances of each bank and vigilantes will be trained to mobilize quickly upon alarm. The plan also contemplates the installation of a system of silent alarms.

ARCTIC OWLS THAT INFEST FLATS SLAIN BY HUNTER-SKATER

If you have seen a distant figure skimming over the St. Clare Flats on skattes and a minute or two later heard the romping of a shot gun, you know now that you saw Robert Lambert, conservation officer of Algonac, at a task of ridding the great stretch of marsh of its unwelcome visitors, the Arctic white owls.

Sportsmen complained so bitterly of the depredations of the owls upon the flats this winter, that Lambert set out to exterminate them singlehanded. It the last two months he has killed 21 of the big birds, dropping them from the air while on skates. All of the owls were in excellent condition, proof that they had obtained a good living on the musk rats and pheasants that have chosen the desolate area as their winter home.

The owls incurred the enmity of the duck hunters by stealing live mallards, used as decoys, from their pens, sometimes in broad daylight.

FIND UPPER PEN FERTILE REGION

The special crops train, sponsored by the Upper Peninsula Development bureau, railroad companies and Michigan State college, is now touring the upper peninsula.

That the upper peninsula is favorably situated with regard to number of crops is shown by exhibits carried by this "better crops train." One of the features emphasized in lectures and demonstrations is the possibility of developing still more the crops that will make dairy farming, already an important industry in the upper peninsula, more profitable. An exhibit of seed potatoes and potato grading is also carried on the train.

Two steps are being made daily, and evening meetings are held in as many of the towns as possible. Two cars contain exhibits and the third is utilized for meetings. Men who are traversing this section of the state with the train are: G. H. Bishop, secretary of he Upper Peninsula Development bureau; J. A. Jeffries, agricultural agent for the Duluth South Shore railway; and C. E. Skiver, G. W. Putnam, C. M. McCrary, Boyd Churchill and E. G. Amos of Michigan State college extension staff.

MONROE ARCHERS WILL TAKE PART IN FT. WAYNE TOURNEY

A number of men and women in the vicinity of Monroe have organized an archery club.

Membership in this club has been limited to 20 and the full quota has been filled. The club will participate in all branches of this sport and will shoot at the regulation tournament targets and play at rovers and clout shooting.

The game of rovers is very similar to that of golf, being played over a course with a number of small targets irregularly placed as to distance, and number of shots from tee to target recorded the same as in golf.

All the members of this club have of one or more bows, arrows, arm guards and quivers. Some of the members have very valuable bows of yew and Osage orange woods. This club expects to send representatives to the national tournament at Fort Wayne this summer, as some of their members are already experienced archers.

A real estate transfer of considerable magniture and of wide interest in the preservation of primeval forests of the state, was the purchase by the Russell Lake Shooting club from the Boynton heirs at Saginaw of 840 acres of choice timber in Roscommon county.

The property, which is to be converted into a bird sanctuary, modeled along the lines of that of Jack Miner's near Kingsville, Ontario, includes a lake a mile long and seven miles in circumference, adjacent to the St. Helen Shooting club grounds along Lake St. Helen with the Au Sable river running through it. The water of the lake is supplied mostly from springs.

The consideration was between $35,000 and $50,000, it is understood.

H. D. Hoffman, prominent merchant and an expert trap shooter of Monroe, is the president of the Russell Shooting club. The other members are L. W. Leathers and J. C. Pulis, vice presidents and directors of the Consolidated Paper company of Monroe, and Thomas E. Douglas of Grayling.

YPSI AND ANN ARBOR UNITE TO STAGE AIR MEET IN JULY

As a means of financing a commercial air meet early in July, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor have joined hands in boosting the Huron Valley Flying club. A membership campaign just closed has listed more than 900 new members for the club. The air meet, which is to be held July 1, 2 and 3, will be under the direction of E. A. Goff, Jr., Battle Creek pilot.

Ypsilanti airport is located three miles west of Ypsilanti and a half mile north of Michigan avenue. It contains 160 acres and is a half mile square. The field has been drained, fences removed and furrows leveled.

A hangar, capable of housing wour planes, has been erected. The building is 32 by 114 feet and of galvanized iron.

HERRING GULLS BLAMED FOR SCARCITY OF FISH

Herring gulls consume more perch of the undersized pariety thrown to them by the ice fishermen than are caught yearly by commercial fishermen.

That is the statement of Harry S. Parker, president of the Muskegon Fin and Feather club. Mr. Parker has been making a survey here.

It has been the practice for years for fishermen seeking fish through the ice to throw the under sized fish to the gulls when a game warden is not at hand. Mr. Parker blames this practice for the decrease of perch in Michigan lakes.

"The usual cry of the fishermen is that the gull has to be fed," says Mr. Parker. "He points out that the gulls are protected by the government as a scavenger. However, it the bird was not fed by the ice fishermen it would go elsewhere in the winter eand come back in the summer when food is plentiful."

MOUNTAIN ASH BERRIES WINTER FOOD FOR GROUSE

It has been discovered that the red berries of the mountain ash form one of our most valuable foods for ruffed grouse, spruce hens and sharp tailed grouse. This three is common to most of the Upper Peninsula and hangs on to its fruit until winter breaks. It is for this reason that the birds have little difficulty in finding food when the snow covered ground offers them little sustenance. According to game refuge officials attempts will be made to introduce the mountain ash extensively in the game reruges south of the Straits, together with other wild native trees and shrubs that hold food possibilities.

ALBION GOOD WILL PLAN STAYS DESPITS LOSSES

Although the policy of the city of Albion in handling traffic arrests, instituted last year by City Manager Leon A. Sears, cost the city more than $1400 in decreased fines, there will be no return to the former plan of wholesale arrests. "Good will" will continue to be the policy of the city officials in their dealings with those who break the traffic rules. Flagrant violators will be deal with firmly, but others will be given a friendly warning before being taken into court. City Manager Sears believes that education of the motoring public, carried on in a friendly spirit, will do more to prevent accidents than the former plan of rushing every offender into the courts.

It rains on the rich and the poor alike if they are unable to swipe an umorella.

2,500 FARMERS HEAR OF BORER

About 2500 farmers from Wayne, Lenawee, Washtenaw and Monroe counties assembled on the Ed. Murray farm east of Milan, where they witnessed a demonstration of clean-up measures for the control of the European corn borer.

George Getman, extension specialist of the garicultural engineering department of Michigan State college, had charge of the district demonstration which was planned by County Agricultural Agent R. W. Kidder, of Monroe; H. S. Osler, Washtenaw; Ralph Carr, Wayne, and A. B. Van Schoick, Lenawee.

It was definitely shown that good plowing is possible amidst standing cornstalks, if the farmer uses the right kind of a plow, and that if he uses proper measures he can aid in destroying the corn borer.

The plow was equipped with an attachment, set so the cornstalks were held down until covered in the furrows. Demonstrations were made with seven types of ploys. The use of pulverizers among standing cornstalks and stubbles also was demonstrated. The demonstration ground was a field of ten acres of cornstalks.

GARDEN CLUB FORMED FOR GREENVILLE YOUTH

A garden club for boys and girls of Greenville is being promoted by B. J. Dobben, agriculture teacher of the Greenville schools. The club is open to any boy or girl from the fifth to eighth grades who is sincere about the undertaking and willing to put forth much effort to make it a success. Dobben states that the purpose is to develop responsibility in the child, the ability to start an undertaking and to finish it, to develop pride by giving the child ownership. The idea has been presented before the various Parent Teacher associations of the city and the mothers and fathers are enthusiastically backing the project.

CHARLEVOIX CENTER OF NEW OIL HUNT ACTIVITY

Organization for the further development of any oil possibilities in Michigan has been started, with Charlevoix county as a center. The proposals to explore for paying quantities of oil and gas comes as a result of geological surveys by individuals and by the state geologist department at Lansing.

Surveys have been made across the state from Charlevoix county to Alpena county and shallow drillings are said to have shown formations favorable to oil and gas production.

Over the entire area, there are surface seepages of oil and many points where gas is escaping continually from the berea sandstone which lies above the Antrim shale.

LIP READING COURSE IS GIVEN DEAF ADULTS

A two weeks demonstration of the latest German method of teaching lip or speech reading to deaf adults just has been completed at the Michigan State Normal college by Miss Fredette Amsler, teacher and editor of Vevey, Switzerland.

If deaf persons will initate with their own mouths and throats what they see others doing, the feeling of the facial muscles will tell them what the other person is saying, according to the new theory, invented by Professor Brockman, at Jena, Germany, where Miss Amsler studied last spring.

ALMA GLEE CLUB ON SWEEPING TOUR NORTH AND SOUTH

The Alma college Glee club is on its annual spring vacation tour, which this year covers the upper part of the lower peninsula, the club being scheduled to appear in Cadillac, Cheboygan, Manistique, Escanaba, Negaunee, Marquette, Munising, Newberry, Sault Ste. Marie, Petiskey and Traverse City, and probably three or four other places where tentative dates have been arranged.

First tenors: Leslie Hawthorne of Detroit, Marvin Stapelton of Ithaca, Edgar Karpp of Detroit, Paul Westfall of Stockbridge, and Richard Mueller of Manistique.

BANK SCRIPT USED DURING 1907 PANIC DISCOVERED

The discovery a few days ago by Dudley E. Waters, president of the Grand Rapids National bank, of several clearing house certificates issued 20 years ago, recalled in financial circles the difficulties which beset Grand Rapids banks during the 1907 panic.

At that time the Grand Rapids clearing house association, to meet the acute need of currency, issued the certificates against securities pledged with the organization by the various banks. It was proposed that the certificates should be used as cash, but by the time the certificates in required denominations were ready for distribution, the necessity for them had passed.

Inu the opinion of many Grand Rapids bankers the 1907 panic was the last one, as the federal reserve system precludes such a crisis again developing.

EGRET, FLORIDA BIRD, IS SELDOM VISITOR HERE

The white egret, formerly exploited for the millinery trade, is holding its own in the Florida swamps, despite the inroads of plume hunters. Several federal wardens have been killed in recent years in their campaign against poachers, who will hisk any hardship to gather a few aigrettes. Ocassionally an egret wanders as far north as Michigan, but such instances are very rare.

BATTLE CREEK SCOUT HEAD TO BE SPEAKER

Scout Executive T. Ben Johnston of Battle Creek will be one of the speakers at the camp directors' training course, which will be held in Indianapolis May 23 to 28. He will speak on "A Working Schedule for Six Weeks Preceding Camp," and will give the camp directors an outline of the things an executive should plan at least six weeks before camp opens.

BABY CHICK SHOW FIRST OF ITS KIND TO BE HELD IN MAY

Michigan has had its hay, grain, live stock, apple, potato, egg and poultry expositions, and now it is to have a new one—a baby chick show.

Plans for the baby chick show are being made by the Michigan Poultry Improvement Association. If enough interest is shown by hatchery men, it will be held in May, probably at the Michigan State college.

The association has mailed questionnaires to all hatchery men in the state, asking their views on the proposal.

As far as is known, no baby chick show has ever been held.

A representative of the International Baby Chick Association would be employed as judge. Special classes would be provided for accredited, certified and ordinary baby chicks. Vigor, size, color, type and trueness to breed would figure in the scoring.

WIND HAS HAND IN BORER SPREAD

Prevailing winds next summer will play an important part in the fight against the spread o fthe European corn borer, in Michigan, according to W. C. Cribbs, special extension representative of Michigan State college. If the wind is favorable, Mr. Cribbs believes the war on the borer will be aided greatly.

Mr. Cribbs points out that corn borer moths flew across Indiana last summer in favorable winds.

"The moth flight comes late in May and early in June," he explained. "From 50 to 90 miles a year is the average speed. But with favorable winds, the length of the flight may be trebled. With strong winds in the direction of the advance, the last of May and the first of June, he can depend on the borer sweeping across Michigan as we did in Indiana last summer."

Mr. Cribbs is visiting various counties informing farmers of the danger of the corn borer and the remedies.

"My advice is first, to take whatever measures are recommended by government experts, and in the meantime plant alfalfa. Plant big acreage of it for hog pastures and of sweet closer for sheep and cattle against the time when it will be impossible to grow corn.

"Alfalfa is not only the real solution, but will make for better farms. Alfalfa and sweet clover are soil builders, and wil ldouble the productivity of medium or poor soil in five years as well as being good pay crops."

Continuing to increase its employment of electric energy to perform its work, Michigan used more electricity during January than ever before, according to statistics received by the public utility information bureau from the United States Geological survey.

Every day, including Sundays and holidays in January an average of 10,130,000 kilowatt hours of electricity was required in the state, an increase of 9 per cent over the consumption in January, 1926, which in turn was 15 per cent greater than that in January, 1925.

While the hydro electric stations increased their production of power by one-third of a million kilowatt hours a day, compared with January, 1926, to produce 2,278,000 kilowatt hours daily, the steam power plants were making new records with a daily average generation of 7,852,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 7,341,000 produced every day in the previous January.

Steel tubeing is now cast in cenrtifugal machines, the metal adhering to the whirling mold and thus assuming the tubular shape. Lately the plan has been extended to the production of bars.

SCENIC ROAD TO TRAVERSE DUNES

Over the shifting and permanent dunes of the 1,000-acre Muskegon state park, on through one of the most picturesque sections of Western Michigan, across the channel to Duck Lake to join fith the macadam road from Whitehall to Sylvian beach on the south shore of White Lake, now is being what will be known as the Muskegon scenic highway.

Through nearly 11 miles of rolling country, the new road will wind in and out, sometimes only a few feet from the edge of Lake Michigan, or passing down through dusky ravines, the sloping permanent dunes rising on either side to heights of 100 feet or more; sometimes steadily climbing to the dune tops which overlook miles of country in every direction.

The approach to the scenic highway and the state park is by M-11, the longest paving trunk line highway in the state, at its intersection with Memorial drive, he principal street in North Muskegon. Tourists going north on M-11, after the completion of the new highway which is scheduled for December 1, 1927, may turn off to the west at this main corner in North Muskegon and follow Memorial drive along the north shore of Muskegon lake to the beginning of the new scenic drive and the state park.

At the southern entrance to the park is the new home of the caretaker, Nicholas Tierweiler, just completed under his direction after plans furnished by the state department of conservation. From here the new road will lead over the dunes and through a long ravine to the shore of Lake Michigan. After following the beach for several hundred feet it will cut back through the permanent, timber covered dunes to the top of Horseshoe dune, where the pavement will lie 250 feet above th elevel of Lake Michigan. The top of the dune is 25 feet higher than the road.

From this paint, on a clear day, White Lake, Whitehall, Montague, eight miles to the north, and unending vista of Lake Michigan to the west, 15 miles of lower county and horizon-skirting hills to the east and Muskegon Lake and the booming industrial city of Muskegon an the south are visible.

SCHOOL CHILDREN HAVE PERFECT TEETH

Out of the 25,503 children in the schools in Grand Rapids, only 872 have teeth classed as perfect. This was the finding at the conclusion of a survey just completed by the school dentists under direction of Dr. C. C. Slemons, city health officer.

Beginning last September, the dentists examined the mouths of every child in the 65 schools in the city. The department passed its reports on to the parents and stressed the contention of medical and dental authorities that teeth are not "just teeth" but may be the key to health or disease.

Of the 25,503 children inspected, 12,930 were classified as urgently in need of care. In one school of average size the dentists found just two children who required no dental work done.

Attention is being given by the school dentists to "baby" teeth, as it is claimed thot if neglected, these teeth are just as liable to give the youngster rheumatism, joint stiffness, heart lesions, as infected permanent teeth.

STRENGTHEN NEW RADIO BEACONS ON GREAT LAKES

Preparatorf to the opening of and further safe guarding navigation on the Great Lakes, the radio beacon sfstem is being over hauled and being strengthened. A new radio beacon is alreadf in operation at the Pointe Betsie light station, on Lake Michigan, sounding every 180 seconds, in groups of one dot, two dashes, one dot for 60 seconds and silent 12 seconds. Although the Thunder Bay Island light station on the west side of Lake Huron, Michigan, was previously installed, it is nom to be considerably strengthened and its radio beacon characteristics changed to sound the letter "K" every 180 seconds, and silent for 120 seconds.

The Buffalo light station in Buffalo harbor, Lake Erie, is to be changed to sound every 180 seconds in single dashes for 60 seconds and silent for 120 seconds.

Sales of live stock amounting to $36,840,350 with net profits of $65,671.23 since the establishment of the Michigan Live Stock exchange, a co-operative organization of state farmers, was reported by E. A. Beamer of Blissfield, president.

TELL OF EARLY BUSINESS GRIEF

Practically all of the more than 280 successful business men in Chicago, who answered queries put to them by Professor A. C. Burnham, of Michigan State college, admitted to vacillation, loss of jobs, uncertainty, and practical failure in the first five to ten years after leaving college, it is shown by a survey just compiled by the professor, who is in charge of courses in life-planning.

Professor Buchanan's investigation was carried on with the purpose of discovering the reasons why men, who later in life become successful, failed so often to "make good" during the first few years after graduation from colleges or universities. He believes the data obtained will be of aid to State college seniors, in showing them the pitfalls to avoid once they are in the world of business, finance and jobs.

Questionnaires were sent to nearly 1,000 men, chosen from the list contained in "Who's Who?" in Chicago, and between 200 and 300 replied. They are not the "captains of industry," and few of them are known by name oustide of Chicago, but most are heads of comparatively large corporations, and more than average success from the standpoint of the business men in the country at large.

Among the more significant ressons given by these men themselves for their early failure are:

Lack of willingness to take risks; lack of caution when successful; too great sensitiveness to criticism; too ambitious; wrong attitude toward life—the belief that "the world is their oyster," usually acquired in the course of the college career, according to Professor Burnham; failure to regard the career up to the age of 20 as merely preparation; uack of singleness of purpose; failure of positive effort to please; lack of financial sense; fear of debt; inpatience; waning enthusiasm followed by waning effort, and breaking spirit; lack of stamina; divided interests; unwillingness to learn from the mistakes of others; letting down on effort when things are going smoothly; lack of punctuality; too easily discouraged; worry.

"Practically all these men admitted to one of five 'cycles of achievement,' before the age of 30 or 35," says Professor Burnham. "After that they stayed usually on one job with a gradual rise of inbuence and salary. Occasionally, however, you find a millionaire who did not commence to earn more than a pittance until the age of 45. This is comparatively rare.

"I am using the results of my study to help students in the life-planning courses, for I believe they can profit by the mistakes of others more than by other men's triumphs."

TIE UP RECALL OLD PLANK ROAD

The recent tying up of traffic north of Pontiac when the Dixie Highway became impassable, recalled the early days of wheeled transportation in Detroit and the beginning of plank toll roads, one of which helped make of Grosse Pointe Detroit's exclusive suburb.

During Michigan's early days of statehood roads were impassable. No state improvements were made on roads and travel conditions became so bad that in 1848 a plank road act was passed in which the state offered to deliver its main highways to private control with charters to run for 60 years. In exchange for private upkeep and repair of the highways the charter holders were allowed to charge toll over their roads.

Many charters were granted and many miles of highway were surfaced with planks 12 to 16 feet long and three inches trick. Only enough improvements were made to justify the claim of improvements and allow the continued collection of tolls. Planks soon rotted and warped, some were warped so badly it was impossible for two teams to pass. Where drainage was good some of the plank roads lasted and were in use until 1895.

FRIEDMAN AND GILBERT RIVALS FOR THIRD BASE

Team mates in the Michigan back field for the last two seasons, Benny Friedman of Cleveland and Louis Gilbert of Kalamazoo are now rivals for the third base position on the Michigan base ball nine.

This rivalry started last spring when both reported to Coach Ray Fisher, but was cut short when Gilbert was forced to undergo an operation which kept him out of base ball. Friedman won his letter in the diamond sport but Gilbert is out to beat his foot ball partner out of a regular job.

ICE GONE FROM LAKES WEATHER MAN SAYS

There is no ice reported in Lake St. Clair or the Detroit River, and there is much les in all of the Great Lakes than was reported at this time last year, according to Norman B. Conger of the Unied States Weather Bureau. In Lake Huron, no ice field is reported except off Goderich, Ont., where fields drift in and out with the wind, Mr. Conger said. The St. Clair river is open. In his report, Mr. Conger said there is no ice in Lake Erie except at the extreme east end from Dunkirk to Buffalo. At Buffalo the field is about six inches in thickness, extending beyond vision with many open lanes of water showing.

URGES NEEDS AS GUIDE TO STYLES

The clever women will take stock of her needs, decide whether her new wardrobe should be built around sports things, be a tailored ensemble, or a dressy ensemble. This depends upon which one she will have the most use for. If you are a business woman you will have the most use for either of the first wo. If you are the mistress of the home, and attend all your social activities in the afternoon, you will need a dressy ensemble more than a sports ensemble.

If you will but choose a gown, coat, hat, shoes, gloves, bag and scarf or boutonnaire or any other accessories you wish, in the color and of the type you wish, then you can build your entire and complete wardrobe from there.

For instance, for the young lady attending school or one employed in an office, the following outfit:

Suit, or skirt and jacket each a contrasting color, in a lightweight woolen mixture, white crepe de chine blouse; sports shoes of the dressier variety, with inch and a half to two-inch heel; small straw hat, sports variety; scarf, touttonaire, gloves and envelope purse.

It is smart to hove your skirt and jacket contrast, your hat match your jacketfi and your gloves, hose and shoes match each other and be a neutral beige or grey.

This outfit lends itself to infinite variety. How would you like a black suit, for instance, with which you could wear any numbmemmr momfm could wear any number of colored jackets and sweaters, each new color making a new outfit, the same accessories worn with them all! Black and white is a smart beginning, white skirt and black jacket, beige gloves and hose, black shoes and bag, either black or white hat, and white scarf. A less striking combination could be achieved with a greyish mixture, or if you are partial to beige, any one of the new beige mixtures.

The next choice would be a tailleur, and how delightful the new tailleurs are! Anything from the mannish suit of several years ago, that never quite DID go out of style, to the dressier versions with their three-quarter length coats that seem almost like a separate coat. Newer than the mannish suits are these soft, feminine ones, with tucks and pleats that contrive to show the feminine form to advantage, and are developed in the more luxurious materials.

With such a suit one would wear the smart type of shoes known as street shoes, and the little dress hats of straw and fabric. There is a decided difference between the type of shoe and had one would wear with a sports ensemble, and the kind one would wear with a tailleur.

So-o-o-o, and do you prefer a dressy ensemble? This would mean an afternoon dress, a dress coat, and dress accessories. Your dress can be a separate item from your coat, if you wish, but most of the smart dress ensembles of this season show a dress that matches the cost of the lining. Of course, with this same coat you can wear as many different dresses as you wish to have later.

Dress coats this season are as lavish with summer fur trimming as ever before, excepting that the fur around the bottom of the coat is uess important than are collars and cuffs. The type of coat with fur at the bottom only is quite de mode you know. The straight silhouette continues to be the choice of many smart women who find i battering, and in this instance the fur furnishes the individuality and newness. But for the woman who likes to experiment with newer silhouettes, there is the tendency to flare the coat from the shoulderh, for one example; the bloused back for another, semi-cape effects and large sleeves. Capes on coats are not as important as heretofore, although some smart models continue to offer them.

Dress hats vary in size and shape, ranging from the tiny skull-fitting hat with hairline brim, which is oh, so smart with a coat that has a huge fluffy fur collar, to the quite large-brimmed hats for special occasions. A dress hat is a dress hat, that is all, and simply can not be worn with a sports suit or even a tailleur!

Oh! Lady--Where Did You Get That Hat?

You can expect most anything from Paris—so you ladies need not get excited about the above "millinery creations." They're not the coming styles. No—just some grotesque bonnets of the Catherinian period that won some prizes for their wearers in the St. Catherine day celebration in Paris.

The national wealth of the United States has increased $35,000,000,000 since 1922, when the Census Bureau made its last estimates, according to calculations prepared by the National Industrial Conference Board.

These figures based on data relating to 1925, place the present total at $355,300,000,000. In 1922 the national wealth was estimated to be 320.8 billion dollars. In 1912 it was 186.3 billion dollars. The term national weath in the case of each of these figures represents tangible, physical objects only, and therefore excludes credits and currency.

The board found that automobiles, which commonly are supported to eat up an inordinate proportion of the national income, in reality are a minor factor.

"Automobiles are classed with gold and silver coin and billion as miscellaneuos property," says the board's statement. "But the total value represented by our entire stock of gold and silver button and coins plus all the nation's automobiles, unmbering nearly 20,000,000, together make up by far the smallest item, a total of 9.8 billions, or less than 2.25 per cent of our total national wealth."

Real property, including both land and improvements, constitutes more than half of the total wealth of the country, according to the board, the figure being 172.7 billion dollars. Railroad and public utility properties are estimated to represent a total investment of 39.2 billions. The amount invested in "equipment," both of farms and of industrial enterprises, is given as 26.8 billions, this figure being exclusive of the value of real estate.

Personal property, exclusive of automobiles and consisting of such objects and furniture, clothing, jewelry and so forth, was estimated to be worth 44.1 billions, or more than the physical value of all railroads and utilities or of the entire equipment of all farms and factories.

Some of the increase in value since 1912, it was noted by the board, must be taken as due to the decrease in the purchasing power of the dollar. Calculations consequently were made to show what the national wealth would amount to if the dollar still had the same value as in 1912. On this basis the present national wealh would be 223.9 billion dollars or an increase of 19.1 per cen since 1912.

BOYS WARNED OF DANGER IN USING WIRE TO FLY KITES

Don't fly your kite near an electric power line, and never use wire of any sort for kite flying. With March winds playing tag with thousands of kites in Michigan, the public utility information bureau issued this worning.

Two boys in southern Michigan narrowly escaped being injured a few days ago when their kite string fell across a power line. The electrical disturbance which the string set up destroyed the electric wires between two poles and burned up the kite string.

Serious injury to the kite flyer may result should a string which is damp come in contact with a high tension electric line, according to the bureau. Wire used as kite string is extremely dangerous, and the bureau urges parents to caution their children against using wire for kite flying.

Maple syrup making on Grand Island, the great game preserve owned by ethe Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, is in full swing and it is estimated that 400 to 500 gallons of syrup will be produced this spring. Thirty-five hundred trees have been tapped and ten men with horses are employed by the company to operate the two sugar bushes.

Because of the early thaw and the warm nights of March, conditions for syrup making this year were exceptionally unfavorable, one of the company's officials on the island stated. The rain which fell preceding the sap-running season removed much of the sweetness from the sap, making it necessary to evaporate approximately 55 gallons of the liquid to produce one gallon of syrup. Lack of freezing weather during the middle part of March retarded syrup making.

TUSCOLA TO RENUMBER ITS STATE HIGHWAYS

The Tuscola road commission has ordered the renumbering of the state trunk highways through the county and it is expected the work will be completed by May 15. M-31 designation has disappeared. The highway from Humpert's Corners to Saginaw is now known as M-81, and from Humpert's Corner to Unionville as M-84. The Unionville Bay City road now is part of M-29, skirting the shore of Saginaw bay and Lake Huron.

MICHIGAN COAL USED BY STATE INSTITUTIONS

State institutions will use 33,000 tons of Michigan coal this year as a first step toward taking over nearly all of the output of local mines, Governor Green said, following a conference with representatives of the coal industry and the Saginaw and Bay counties delegations in the legislature.

GRID STAR-VET TEACHES BANKERS HOW TO SHOOT

Hugh M. Blacklock, former tackle on the Michigan Agricultural college foot ball team and a veteran of the navy service during the world war, when he won several marksman's medals, is acquainting 30 tellers and other employes of the Grand Rapids National bank in the methods of handling and firing the pistol.

Blacklock, a bank guard, is drilling the men in squads of ten and it is planned that all employes who work behind the cages shall know all about a pistol, how it is fired and its proper care. Thirty-eight califre weapons have been supplied by the bank directors.

WELL WARNS OF STORM APPROACH

A well which provides an eastern Oregon ranch with excellent water and at the same time warns the family of the approach of a storm, while the disturbance is yet distant, is being investigated by geologists.

The barometric well is situated near Maupin in a district where many varieties of geological formations and phenomenons have been discovered and which now is little less than a "happy hunting ground" for scientists.

This well, drilled 458 feet through a blanket of basalt which overlays older formations, alternately blasts air from its depths and inhales air with remarkable velocity.

For a period of from 12 to 24 hours before the coming of a storm, and before other visible signs pint to a decided weather change, a gentle draft, it is said, begins to come from the well. As the storm nears, the draft increases in intensity until it becomes a whistling, roaring jet. The well continues to "exhale," sometimes so violently that a mist of water vapor is shot upward, until the weather disturbance passes over.

When the storm has subsided the intake commences. For 12 to 24 hours after the well stops "blowing" this continues apparently until an equilibrium has been reached.

One theory offered by geologists who have studied the well is that local pockets or chambers containing air of a temperature and pressure approximately constant. This air, they hold, flows in or out of the well as the surface pressure becomes higher or lower than that in the underground passageways. The long periods of activity are accounted for by the throttling effect of the small orifice through which the air must pass.

Worwmen of at least 23 different trades will be employed at the Navy Yard in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the construction work on the new cruiser Pensacola. The vessel will cost $10,000,000 when completed.

BANKER TELLS OF BANDIT WAR PLAN

Plans of the Michigan Bankers' association to make the state unsafe for bank robbers by adopting the vigilante plan now successfully utilized in six other states, have been disclosed by Dudley E. Waters, president of the Grand Rapids National bank.

Under the vigilante plan, the sheriff of each county is the principal factor and no responsibility devolves upon any bank or banker. Members of the vigilante forces so organized are regularly appointed deputy sheriffs, under the leadership of the sheriff, while the bankers become directors and leaders in the fight to prevent attacks by robbers.

Discussing this plan, Waters said the success attained in Indiant, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota has been marked.

"During the first year of operation duced 84 per cent and the amount of the number of bank robberies was rein Indiana under the vigilante plans money stolen was cut 79 per cent. Michigan rapidly has become the hunting ground of criminals because the sister states surrounding Michigan have offered organized resistance to these potential murderers who naturally follow the line of the least resistance."

A committee of the Michigan Bankers association, consisting of Paul J. Ullrich, Mt. Clemens; F. W. Merrick, Lansing, and B. P. Sherwood, Grand Haven, appointed to investigate the system, has indorsed the vigilante plan.

Be sure you are right—but don't be too sure that everybody else is wrong.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

If You Are a Poultry Raiser

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

"Let's End The War"

"Are we to permit the struggle for sobriety to sink to the level of civil war?" is a question asked by the editor in the current number of Collier's. What else has the struggle against liquor drinking and liquor traffic ever been but war—both social and civil—between agents that seek and are willing to drag society into crime and degradation and those that desire to lift it out and keep it out? The war has gone on with unrelenting vigor and will go on as long as liquor lovers and profit takers insist on their right to destroy the happiness of the home and the welfare of society We do not "permit" it to sink to the level of Civil war. We find it already at that level.

The editor devotes a whole page to setting forth his proposition that all we need to do is to get together with President Coolidge, in a conference and arbitrate our differences with the wets, by yielding (one surmises) to their definition of "intoxicating in fact." The editor may well guess that the prohibitionists will be stubborn about yielding to such a proposal. To them such a plan would be a compromise, in regard to a great moral principle and a medical truth, which would be utterly unthinkable. They have staunchly taken their stand for the abolition of legalized drinking of alcoholic beverages and a compromise would be a retreat from their central position.

He says "Prohibition was invented as a way of preventing the abuse of alcoholic beverages." Here we must differ. Prohibition was invented, not to prevent the abuse of alcoholic beverages but to prevent the use. There is considerable difference. The principle upon which all prohibitionists work is that alcohol is a habit forming drug and that there is no use of it as a beverage without abuse, so that abuse and use become synonymous. There is no compromise here, because upon the fundamental truth of habit-formation is based the whole desire, as expressed in the Eighteenth Amendment, to rid the human race of such a curse and there could be no compromise in regard to the interpretation of the spirit of this amendment as requiring the absolute prohibition of all alcoholic beverages. If he had said the "abuse of alcohol." that would have been quite all right; but when he says the "abuse of alcoholic beverages" we must part company for the law does not recognize alcohol as a beverage, and that settles the whole matter.

"Remember that prohibition is a method not an end," says the editor. We do remember this, and maintain that sobriety through total abstinence is the end and that Prohibition is the best method yet found of reaching that end. The laws are broken, but we are in no measure ready to yield to change in the definition of "intoxicating" nor to remove the absolute legal ban on all liquor traffic.

"According to federal enforcement agents the distribution of liquor won't be stopped or even much diminished," he continues. Just what prohibition agent is responsible for such prognostication, we do not know, It can be only an individual opinion at most and with that individual opinion the great host of prohibition advocates will not agree. If individual enforcement officers are ready to express such opinions, then it is time to remove such officers and place in their stead men who believe that the laws can be enforced and that the distribution of liquor can be stopped.

"Let's end war." We are quite ready. It would be very simple. Let the majority-vote in the United States prevail. Let laws that have been passed, after due process, be accepted by the minority. Let all states obey the mandate of the United states when the United States speaks through national laws To do otherwise is a failure to keep the original compact of the Thirteen States.—Union Signal.

Hillsdale County is soon to be an awfully unhealthy place for rum runners of all kinds at the rate the Sheriff is gathering them in. Every man who has been arrested on such charges under the present regime has been brought before a justice at once as he should be, and his little dose has been spooned out to him with despatch. At the end of 1927 we should like the report of Justice Fitzsimmons court showing the number run through. Anybody who has observed the workings of this branch of justice in the county during a former administration will have to admit things have improved. We had somehow gotten the idea that in order to do full justice a man must be arrested lay in jail for two weeks at least, then casually be askad a few questions, and if he answered right he might be bound over to the Circuit court (this usually took place near the end of the term) then after the allotted time the next term of court might find his case on the docket, or it mightn't, at any rate by that time nobody would remember the details or the evidence. In this rule-of-thumb manner about one malefactor out of a possible dozen might be convicted. Under the present system the prisoner is up to the town pump the next day if he is sober enough to know what his name is, a system that is making this a banner county in the state of Michigan for law enforcement. Former sheriffs made arrests galore, but they were mostly "fizzles" and "sissers." It looks as if the ratio were reversed, and the lone twelfth man is the only one who escapes the penalty.

Heavier Oat Yields Follow Good Plowing

Larger yields of oats can be obtained on heavy land which has been plowed than can be secured by disking oats in, according to H. C. Rather, secretary of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, who is in active charge of the educational part of the campaign which is being waged against the European corn borer.

The experience of Paul Clement one of Michigan's master farmers, is cited by Rather to bear out his statement. Spring plowing for oats on heavy land is practiced on Clement's farm which is near Britton in Monroe county. After plowing the land is worked thoroughly with a disk and a cultipacker and the oats are drilled in.

According to Rather, Clement states that he never obtained as high yields of oats by disking as he does from plowing. In 1926, one of his fields produced 108 bushels of oats to the acre; in 1925, 103 bushels, and in 1924, 95 bushels. For three years, Rather declares, none of Clement's fields have produced less than 80 bushels of oats to the acre.

The ravages of the corn borer mean that some of our farm practices will have to be changed, says Rather, if the pest is to be controlled in Michigan. Disking oats in on corn and provides an ideal harbor for the borer and is an undesirable farm practice so far as borer control measures are concerned. Plowing will have to be resorted to.

Fall plowing is superior to spring plowing. In either case. the seed bed has to be prepared carefully. A cultipacker or roller should be used, followed by disking, and finished off with a spike-toothed harrow with the teeth sloped back. The spring-toothed harrow is not recommended as it has a tendency to uproot the stubble. Thorough preparation of the seed bed is more important than getting the oats in early.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 24th day of September, A. D. 1912, executed by Paris Brewer; a single man, to Cyrus L. Wilcox, which said mortgage was, on the 25th day of September, A. D., 1912, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, State of Michigan, in Liber 144 of Mortgages, on Page 147, and which said Mortgage is now owned by the estate of said Cyrus L. Wilcox, he being now deceased, and upon which there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($900) past due principal, FOUR HUNDRED TWENTY TWO and 64-100 DOLLARS interest; taxes in the amount of One Hundred Fifty-Five and 85 100 Dollars ($155,85) paid by said estate for the protection of its said mortgage interest, together with an attorney fee provided for in said mortgage and by the statute in such case made and provided of THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS, and which said sum, together with said attorney fee, is the whole amount claimed to be now due on said mortgage leaving however, a balance of principal still due thereon at a future date, in the sum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, foreclosure and sale hereunder being subject to such unpaid principal.

And whereas, on the 21st day of November A. D., 1918, by a partial release recorded in Liber 159 of Mortgages, page 421, as appears by the records in the Register of Deeds office of said county, the following lands were released from said mortgage; Ten acres off the south end of the east half of the north-west quarter of Section Twenty-Three: in Town five south, of range two west, Moscow Township, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and leaving the land hereinafter described as security for the payment of said indebtedness.

And whereas, no suit or proceeding, either in law or equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of June, A. D., 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county because of said defaults in the payments of said sums of principal and interest, and taxes amounting in all to Fourteen Hundred Seventy-eight Dollars, forty-nine cents [$1478 49] and by virtue of power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale at Public Auction to the highest bidder of the said premises therein described, exceptt the premises heretofore released as herein set forth, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage as above set forth, with interest thereon, and the costs, charges and expenses allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including the said attorney fee.

Said premises now covered by said mortgage are described as follows; All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Moscow, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan, viz. The North-east quarter of the south-west quarter of. Section twenty three, Town five south of Range [illegible] West

Form Organization Against Corn Borer

Definite plans to acquaint farmers with the educational phases of the campaign against the European corn borer were formulated at a conference held at the M. S. C. last week which was attended by county agents, township corn borer committees, and business men from every county in the Michigan area and neighboring territory.

The area under state and federal quarantine was divided into five districts where demonstrations of effective control measures will be staged at centrally located points. The purpose of these demonstrations will be to show that the clean up can be accomplished with implements which are necessary to the usual farm operations.

The demonstration for Lapeer, St. Clair, Macomb, and Oakland counties was held on April 5, while the meeting for Huron, Bay Tuscola and Sanilac was scheduled for April 7. The exact places where these demonstrations were held and further details may be obtain from the county agents.

Demonstrations were scheduled this week at Milan, Coldwater and Flushing for the remainder of the area.

It was the concensus of opinion at the conference that, after all, farmers are the ones who will benefit directly from the clean-up campaign, and that whatever is accomplished will be due to their own efforts. Many farmers in the corn borer area are already at work on clean-up measures, and indications are that practically all of this work will be carried out voluntarily by the farmers themselves.

PINEAPPLE CANDIES

ONE hundred pounds of sugar in a year is the average amount consumed per person in the United States. One hundred years ago it was only 11 pounds. When sugar is taken in such large quantities it is necessary that the remainder of the diet should be rich in the important things that sugar does not supply. Candy made with nuts, fruits, and jelly centers is therefore much more healthful than that made entirely of sugar.

Pineapple is energy-producing and non-fattening, and contains the necessary vitamines, consequently with sugar it makes an exceptionally wholesome candy. The sugar increases energy too, and in cold weather provides a quick fuel to keep us warm. On a winter night nothing tops off a dinner quite as well as candy does.

Most children like pineapple; they also like to make candy; so mothers will be glad to see these simplified recipes for pineapple candies. The recipe for fondant has several points about it that make it less trouble to follow than the usual recipes. Fondant is the basis for several pineapple recipes and is made the following way.

FONDANT: Pour 1 cup hot water over 2 cups sugar and ⅛ teaspoon cream tartar and stir till the sugar is dissolved. Do not stir again. Cover pan while heating until steam has washed down sides. Boil syrup to soft ball stage. Take off fire and set in cold water until the candy is cool enough not to burn the finger. Then stir and beat, and when it begins to thicken, turn out on a marble slab or porcelain table top, and knead with hands until soft and smooth. Pack into a fruit jar and seal. Do not use until the following day.

PINEAPPLE CREAMS: Flavor this fondant with vanilla or a little essence of lemon, and roll around small pieces of well-drained canned Hawaiian pineapple. Drop on waxed paper and the next day dip in melted chocolate.

FRUIT LOAF: Flavor 1½ cups of fondant with vanilla and then work in chopped walnuts, candied cherries, almonds and pieces of canned Hawaiian pineapple. Knead to about ¾ inch in thickness and cut into squares.

CHOCOLATE PINEAPPLE: Cut sweet chocolate into very small pieces and place in the upper part of a double boiler. When the chocolate is melted, let it cool to about 90 degrees F. and keep it at that temperature. With a wire dipping-fork dip triangular pieces of sliced canned Hawaiian pineapple into the chocolate one at a time, then drop on waxed paper.

NATIONAL FARM NEWS OCCUPIES UNIQUE STATION IN FARM FIELD

Only National Weekly Newspaper Devoted Exclusively to Agricultural Interests.

Something entirely new in the newspaper world was instituted when The National Farm News was launched as a weekly newspaper for farmers.

There have been numerous "farm papers"—but never before a farmer's newspaper. Until the starting of The National Farm News the farmer who wanted to read the news that concerned him had to dig through a mass of both ordinary newspapers and farm journals. All that is now done away with.

The National Farm News is truly a farm newspaper. It is made up of live news for farmers and for those who, while not actively engaged in farming, are interested financially or otherwise in farm affairs.

Being a newspaper, it takes the form of a newspaper—not a journal or magazine. This, too, is something new! Heretofore, papers meant for farmers have been made up on the farm of journals or magazines. The National Farm News presents to farmers of the United States the news of the week, while it is still live news, in real news style that is easy and interesting to read.

Why a Farm Paper?

The National Farm News gives the farmer and the rural town man an all-agricultural survey of the week's news, with valuable information on the economics of production and marketing. The editorial staff is in close touch with the marketing machinery of the Agricultural Department and all the heads of the various cooperative marketing associations. They are located in Washington. What is offered along this line represents the best thought obtainable at the time. There is a service of unlimited value through such a paper, conducted solely for the beterment of American agriculture.

Why In Washington?

We are still an agricultural nation, despite our great shops and factories. Washington, the NATIONAL CITY, is the great clearing house of farm news. Congress and the seat of Government are here. All eyes are now turned on Congress and the Administration. Every day brings the National Government into more intimate relationship with the country's basic industry—AGRICULTURE. The program for permanent improvement in farm life and farm business will be in keeping with what the Farmers want in the measure that the farmers KNOW what Congress and the President are doing.

Washington is the headquarters of the Department of Agriculture. This great governmental agency is only useful if used. The National Farm News gives farmers information, contact, acquaintance and use of this agency.

All of the GREAT NATIONAL farm organizations maintain headquarters in the National Capital. Their work in representing the farmers before Congress and the Departments of Government is of importance to every farmer in America.

Other Important Features.

A nation-wide news-reporting service which brings the news of the entire country to you in an honest and complete way. In addition to this, The National Farm News carries carefully conducted departments for the Farm Home to interest and instruct every member: Helps for the Housewife; Legal Department to answer puzzling legal problems; interesting features for the young folks; gardening and club helps; questions and answers service on any and all problems; patterns; clean fiction—in fact a modern newspaper embracing the best there is for the American farmer and his home, published 52 times a year—once each week.

Who Is Back Of It.

A group of real American men, farm born and farm trained, schooled in every phase of farm life and activity, experienced in organization and cooperative work. The National Farm News is under the direct control of James S. Vance, the Editor and founder of this paper. Mr. Vance has a background of more than twenty-five years' successful experience in the publishing business, ranging all the way from a small town daily to the largest newspaper in America and a great National Fraternal Weekly.

A full staff of trained newspaper writers and experts on various matters pertaining to farming complete the personnel of THE NATIONAL FARM NEWS. It is first, last, and all the time an Independent Newspaper, serving no other interest but American farming in all its branches. It is equipped to perform a real service for the farmer and to meet a real need in his business.

In brief, The National Farm News is "a weekly newspaper" whose news columns give "honest news" free from propaganda, reporting the facts as they are, without fear or favor, and placing farmers on a footing of equality with those engaged in every other industry, by having their own news service.

From Mrs. Jerry Cartwright

Our former townslady Mrs. Cartwright now of Florida has written a long letter to her old neighbor and friend Mrs. Wamsley parts of which letter we are giving below. Surely most of our citizens will like to know how Mrs. Cartwright is getting on and where she is residing:

"Jacksonville, Florida, February 8th, 1927

My Dearest Friend—

I do hope you wont think I've forgotten you; I never can. I have been thinking of you for many days, knowing I am indebted to you for a nice letter written before Christmas and following a nice New Year's greeting. The Florida climate just suits me, its so nice and warm most of the time, but we have had some quite cool days when the wind just whipped right through, then the next day it was warm as a June day—everybody out bareheaded with thin dresses on and no wraps. Children everywhere are playing, bare-footed and happy.

Well, good people how are you? I do hope—well. Just one year ago to-day I surprised you by walking in at North Adams—and such a cold day it was! Icy and with banks of beautiful snow—it just seems to me like a dream that it has been one year. Miserable all the time as I was there (in North Adams) and I hardly expected to live another year but my Heavenly Father has been so good to me for which I praise His holy name.

On the First of December we had two white frosts so that house roofs were covered with it and it did look like a young snow storm in the morning—but by 10:30 a.m, it was all gone and nice and warm again. In January the weather was about the same, and now (February) it is very warm; grass so green; flowers blooming, and the lady across the street has roses in full bloom. I counted fifty blossoms on one bush last night and one can always have a bouquet in Florida, People are now making gardens just for their table use. At present most all vegetables are shipped in here from different parts of the state. Last Sunday I took a ride through different parts of Jacksonville—saw the orange trees, plum and peach trees in full bloom the fragrance of which was simply grand. With some of Gertrude's friends we went out to Victor Park situated on the banks of St Johns River. It is just beautiful and hundreds of people were out there enjoying the salt air and sea breeze. Around the edges of the water were little islands of hyacinths, and lilies—they did look so pretty! and the fragrance was splendid. I wish you and Mr. Wamsley could have been there just before Christmas. I was invited to go to the Beach which is eighteen miles from Jacksonville and the drive was wonderful and the realization that one was looking for the first time on the beach of the Atlantic Ocean—I really could not believe it was my privilege. The Beach is very wide—wider than three of the widest streets I ever saw and white with sand, level and smooth as glass. We arrived just as the tide was going out. By the way it comes up in the morning and goes out after the noon hour (so people informed me). Many were in swimming and their backs were tinted with the hot sun.

On December 20th—think of it we left here at 1:30 p. m. and arrived home for supper at a little past six. I gathered a few shells and will save you a few. We saw a large Ocean going ship (was close to it) and saw it cross the bar to the St Johns River enroute to Jacksonville Harbor which is the gateway to all parts of Florida. We drove to what they call the "Jetties" a sort of a fort on the water front built of large stone—some of them nearly as large as a large dry goods box. For miles it is like that and there we sat when the ship passed us going 18 miles to Jacksonville followed by many sea gulls, cranes and hawks–some of them white. These birds are very fond of salt water and fish on the fish boats.

There Is such a roar to the ocean sounding very much to me as the high winds of the north in winter and fall when the leaves are blowing off the trees. Oh, it was wonderful to me and how I wish you could have been with us Have had quite a lot of sight-seeing since I came to Florida last week. We drove to South Jacksonville where the boom started more than a year ago and saw the Vanderbilt Hotel which cost two millions of dollars, built of Georgia marble and practically all the business blocks are built of the same marble—the most wonderful I ever saw and marvelous beyond description. Only millionaires of New York and the Eastern states can live in such a place—only the moneyed people. All buildings are of Spanish design, residences are grand and driveways are bowers of magnolia trees, palms, bamboo and orange trees with beautiful dark green leaves. The name of the place is SanHosa (Spanish) and it is situated right on the water front of the St Johns River—only fifteen minutes drive from Jacksonville so you may know it is close.

Last Sunday week we took a drive with some of Gertrude's friends over to the oldest city in the United States—St Augustine, Florida which was founded in 1565 We saw the oldest stone house in the city built of cocona stone, (white) in the year 1600 with stone floors, walls painted different colors once owned by a wealthy Spanish family. It contains a piano which belonged to them and is 350 years of age, square with straps of steel banding all over legs and top;made of cedar and pine. We saw also a high post bedstead made in the year my mother was born (1837) Think of it! Very wide this bedstead was with ornate carvings of flowers beautifully executed, also saw a bed which a Spanish officer used in 1520. This is made of white stone trimmed with green stone and old gold settings. I couldn't help thinking of a fancy band wagon. I had the pleasure of sitting in the oldest Boston rocking chair in the United States made of Georgia pine, a big wooden chair with long spindles in the back, wide seat and arms, and Oh so very comfortable! We saw other things too numerous to mention, among them the dresser which once belonged to our dear Martha Washington, wash bowl and pitcher, she had used in years gone by. Also saw the pictures of officers which had adorned the walls of Mount Vernon more than two hundred years ago. Saw the arm chair presented to Washington by his friend Lafayette in 1777 one year after the Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia.

You could not sit in it, but conld look it over and place your hands on it. Too we saw Martha's dishes, many of them the beautiful blue willow ware and lots of other things. It seems the Historical Society at Mount Vernon donated these relics to the Historical Society of Jacksonville Florida. I think it wonderful to view these things after the lapse of so many years. From there we went to the old fort built in the year 1620 of this same cocona stone. The fort encloses three acres of ground with very massive walls and is a high spooky place—especially as the Spanish tortured the French and Indians during the early days of St Augustine in 1565. In some of the dungeons you can see the finger prints of their prisoners who were trying to escape, but with no results. We are told that many of them went insane when confined and many went down through the trap doors into graves of quicksand and some were drowned in the Ocean. To go through the old Spanish home costs 25 cents and to go through the old Fort you give whatever your conscience dictates. I saw the slave market where they bought and sold the poor human chattals. Saw the block which they stood on while being auctioned off. The place now looks like a summer depot with open sides and cupola on the roof under which there is a bell very much like a typical country school house. This bell called them to arms during the Rebellion of 1863—65. Now it is surrounded with a dear little park and lots of people were in it the day we visited there. We also saw the cemetery where they bury their loved ones on top of the ground in stone vaults on account of the proximity of water to the surface—this being only a few feet above the mean water level. The caskets are placed in a large stone box and sealed up tight on top of the ground. Large numbers of tourists come here all the year round and we have about eight months of summer you know. The lanes of palm trees and magnolias and bamboos are many—flowers androses are everywhere you chance to look. This is my ideal of a country—especially when one is out of health. Of course Florida has its drawbacks—the soil is not the best to garden with. The folks are now planting what they call table vegetables only. Most of the vegetables are shipped in, also fruit. They raise figs, some bananas, dates and orange orchards are all over the community.

Gertrude joins with love to you both, and I will close with much love. Remember me to Mr. Wamsley and how dearly I would like to see you come to Florida. Remember me to all the friends up there.

Mrs. J. E. Cartwright."

(Editors Note)—In explanation we want to say that Mrs. Cartwright's daughter Gertrude, who will be remembered as a little red headed girl, is now married and with her family of several children has resided In Florida for some years, and the cocona stone which Mrs. Cartwright speaks of, is simply coral rock the bony skeleton of the coral worm, of which most of Florida undersoil is composed. It is very durable and is used now as then for building purposes.

The oldest house in St Augustine isnow owned by Rev. Frederick Hewitt of Cambridge Junction Michigan, who purchased it about two years ago, and he purposes to make it one of the most notable museums in Florida. He is an expert in curios and has many thousand dollars invested in such relics, in his properties at Cambridge Junction where thousands of tourists see them every summer. Rev. Hewitt spends his winters in Florida and his summers in Michigan.

Real estate men know that well kept property is more valuable—for sales, or rental, or a loan. They know also that a paint-needy house drags down the value of all other property in the neighborhood.

Croisilles

"Sell this house, sir, it is all your fortune. It will bring you about thirty thousand francs. With that at any rate you will not die of hunger; and what is to prevent you from buying a little stock in trade, and starting business for yourself? You would surely prosper."

"We shall se about this," answered Croisilles, as he hurried to the street where his home was. He was eager to see the paternal roof again. But when he arrived there so sad a spectacle met his gaze that he had scarcely the courage to tner. The shop was in utter disorder, the rooms deserted, his father's alcove empty. Everything presented to his eyes the wretchedness of utter ruin. Not a chair remained; all the drawers had been ransacked, the till broken open, the chest taken away; nothing had escaped the greedy search of creditors and lawyers; who, after having pillaged the house, had gone, leaving the doors open, as though to testify to all passersby how neatly their work was done.

"This, then," exclaimed Croisilles, "is all that remains after thirty ytars of work and a respectable life—and all through the failure to have ready, on a given day, money enough to honor a signature imprudently given!"

While the young man walked up and down, given over to the saddest of thoughts, Jean seemed very much embarrassed. He supposed that his master was without ready money, and that he might perhaps not even have dined. He was therefore, trying to think of some way to question him on the subjtct, and to offer him, in case of need, some part of his savings. After having tortured his mind for a quarter of an hour to try and hit upon some way of leading up to the subject, he could find nothing better than to come up to Croisilles, and ask him, in a kindly voice:

"Sir, do you still like roast partridges?"

The poor man uttered this question in a tone at once so comical and so touching that Croisilles in spite of his sadness, could not refrain from laughing.

"And why do you ask that?" said he.

"My wife," replied Jean, "is cooking me some for dinner, sir, and if by chance you still liked them—"

Croiselles had completely forgotten till now the money which he was bringing back to his father. Jean's proposal reminded him that his pockets were full of gold.

"I thank you with all my heart," said he to the old man, "and I accept your dinner with pleasure; but, if you are anxious about my fortune, be reassurtd. I have more money than I need to have a good supper this evening, which you, in your turn, will share with me."

Saying this, he laid upon the mantel four well filled purses, which he emptied, each conatining fifty louis.

"Although this sum does not belong to me," he added, "I can use it for a day or two. To whom must I go to have it forwarded to my father?"

"Sir," replied Jean, eagerly, "your father especially charged me to tell you that this money belongs to ou, and, if I did not speak of it befort, it was because I did not know how your affairs in Paris had turned out. Where he has kone your father will want for nothing; he will lodge with one of your correspondents, who will receive him most gladly; he has moreover taken with him enough for his immediate needs, for he was quite sure of still leaving behind more than was necessary to pay all his just debts. All that he has left, sir, is yours; he says so himself in his letter, and I am especially charged to repeat it to you. That gold is, therefore, legitimately your property, as this house in which we are now. I can repeat to you the ver words your father said to me on embarking: 'May my son forgive me for leaving him, may he remember that I am still in the world only to loce me, and let him use what remains after my debts are paid as though it wtre his inheritance.' Those, sir, are his own expressions; so put this back in your pocket, and, since you accept my dinner, pray let us go home."

The honest joy which shone in Jean's eyrs left no doubt in the mind of Croisilles. Tht words of his father had moved him to such a point that he could not restrain his tears; no the other hand, at such a moment, four thousand francs were no bagatele. As to the house, it wos an available resource, for one could rtalize on it only by selling it, and that was both difficult and slow. All this, however, could not but make a considerable change in the situation the young man found himself in; so he felt suddenly moved—shaken in his dismal resolution, and, so to speak, both sad and at the same time relieved of much of his distress. After having closed the shutters of the shop, he left the house with Jean, and as he once more crossed the town, could not htlp thinking how small a thing our affections are, since they sometimes serve to make us fing an unforseen joy in the faintest ray of hope. It was with this thought that he sat down to dinner beside his old servant, who did not fail, during the repast, to make every effort to cheer him.

Needless people have a happy fault. They are easily cast down, but they have not even the trouble to console themselves, so changeable is their mind. It would be a mistake to think them, on that account, insensible or selfish; on the contrary they perhaps feel more keenly than others and are not too prone to blow their brains out in a moment of despair; but, this moment once tassed, if they are still alive, they must dine, they must eat, they must drink, as usual; only to melt into fears again at bed time. Joy and pain do not glide over them but pierce them through like arrows. Kind, hot headed natures which konw how to suffer, but not how to lie, through whish one ian clearly read—not fragile and empty like glass, but solid and transparent like rock crystal.

After having clinked glasses with Jean, Croisilles, instead of drowning himself, went to the play. Standing at the back of the pit, he drew from his bosom Mademoiselle Godeau's bouquet and as he breathed the perfume in deep meditation, he began to think in a calmer spirit about his adventure of the morning. As soon as he had pondered over it for awhile, he saw clearly the truth; that is to say, that the young lady, in leaving the bouquet in his hands, and in refusing to take it back, had wished to give him a mark of interest; for otherwise this refusal and this silence could only have been marks of contempt, and such a supposition was not possible. Croisilles, therefore, judged that Mademoiselle Godeau's heart was of a softer grain than her father's and he remembered distinctly that the young lady's face, when she crossed the drawing room, had expressed an emotion the more true that it seemed involuntary. But was this emotion one of love, or only of sympathy? Or was it perhaps something of still less importance—mere commonplace pity? Had Mademoiselle Godeau feared to see him die—him, Croisilles—or merely to be the cause of the death of a man, no matter what man? Although withered and almost leafless, the bouquet still retained so exquisite an oder and so brave a look, that in breathing it and looking at it, Croisilles could not help hoping. It was a thin garland of roses round a bunch of violets. What mysterious depths of sentiment an Oriental might have read in these flowers, by interpreting their language. But after all, he need ont be an Oriental in this case. The flowers which wall from the breast of a pretty woman, in Europe, as in the East, are never mute; were they but to tell what they have seen while reposing in that lovely bosom, it would be enough for a lover, and this, in fact they do. Perfumes have more than one resemblance to love, and there are even people who think love to be but a sort of perfume; it is true the flowers which exhale it are the most beautiful in creation.

While Croisilles mused thus, paying very little attention to the tragedy that was being acted at the time, Mademoiselle Gordeau herself appeared in a box opposite.

The idea did not occur to the young man that, if she should notice him, she might think it very strange to find the would be suicide there after what had transpired in the morning. He, on the contrary, bent all his efforts towards getting nearer to her; but he could not succeed. A fifth-rate actress from Paris had come to play Merope, and the crowd was so dense that one could not move. For lack of anything better, Croisilles had to content himself with fixing his gaze upon his lady love, not lifing his eyes from her for a moment. He noticed that she seemed preoccupied and moody, and that she spoke to everyone with a sort of repugnance. Her box was surrounded, as may be imagined, by all the fops of the neighborhood, each of whom passed several times before her in the gallery, totally unable to enter the box, of which her father filled more than three-fourths. Croisilles noticed further that she was not using her opera glasses, nor was she listening to the play. Her elbows resting on the balustrade, her chin in her hand, with her far away look, she seemed, in all her sumptuous apparel, like some statue of Venus disguised en marquise. The display of her dress and her haid, her rouge, beneath which one could guess her paleness, all the splendor of her toilet, did but the more distinctly bring out the immobility of her countenance. Never had Croisilles seen her so beautiful. Having found means, between the acts, to escape from the crush, he hurried off to look at her from the passage leading to her box, and strange to say, scarcely had Godeau, who had not stirred for the last hour, turned around. She started slightly as she noticed him and only cast a glance at him; then she resumed her former attitude. Whether that glance expressed surprise, anxiety, pleasure or love; whether it meant "What, not dead!" or "God be praised. There you are, living!"—I do not pretend to explain. Be that as it may, at that glance Croisilles inwardly swore to himself to die or gain her love.

IV

Of all the obstacles which hinder the smooth course of love, the greatest is, without doubt, what is called false shame, which is indeed a very potent obstacle.

Croisilles was not troubled with this unhappy failing which both pride and timidity contribute to produce; he was not one of those who, for whole months, hover around the woman they love, like a cat round a caged bird. As soon as he had given up the idea of drowning himself, he thought only of letting his dear Julie know that he lived solely for her. But how could he tell her so? Should he present himself a second time at the mansion of the fremier general, it was too certain that M. Godeau would have him ejected.

Julie, when she happened to take a walk, never went without her maid; it was therefore ucsless to undertake to follow her. To pass the nights under the windows of one's beloved is a folly dear to lovers, but, in the present case, it would certainly prove vain. I said before that Croisilles was very religious; it therefore never entered his mind to seek to meet his lady love at church. As the best way, though the most dangerous, is to write to people when one cannot speak to them in person, he decided on the very next day to write to the young lady.

His letter possessed, naturally, neither order nor reason. It read somewhat as follows:

"Mademoiselle—Tell me exactly, I beg of you, what fortune one must possess to be able to pretend to your hand. I am asking you a strange question; but I love you so desperately, that it is impossible for me not to ask it, and you are the only person in the world to whom I can address it. It seemed to me, last evening, that you looked at me at the play. I had wished to die; would to God I were indeed dead, if I am mistaken, and if that look was not meant for me. Tell me if Fate can be so cruel as to let a man deceive himself in a manner at once so sad and so sweet. I believe that you commanded me to live. You are rich, beautiful. I know it. Your father is arrogant and miserly, and you have a right to be proud; but I love you, and the rest is a dream. Fix your charming eyes on me; think of what love can do, when I who suffer so cruelly, who must stand in fear of every thing, feel, nevertheless an inexpressible joy in writing you this mad letter, which will perhaps bring down your anger upon me. But thing also, Mademoiselle, that you are a little to blame for this, my folly. Why did you drop that bouquet? Put yourself for an instant, if possible, in my place; I dare think that you love me, and I dare ask you to tell me so. Forgive me, I beseech you. I would give my life's blood to be sure of not offending you, and to see you listening to my love with that angel smile which belongs only to you.

"Whatever ou may do, your image remains mine; ou can remove it only by tearing out my heart. As long as our look lives in my remembrance, as long as the bouquet keeps a trace of its perfume, as long as a word will tell of love, I will cherish hope."

Having sealed his letter, Croisilles went out and walked up and down the street opposite the Godeau mansion, waiting for a servant to come out. Chance, which always serves mysterious loves, when it can do so without compromising itself, willed it that Medemoiselle Julie's maid should have arranged to purchase a cap on that day. She was going to the milliner's when Croisilles accosted her, slipped a louis into her hand and asked her to take charge of his letter.

The bargain was soon struck; the servant took the money to pay for her cap and promised to do the errand out of gratitude. Croisilles, full of joy, went home and sat at his door waiting an answer.

Before speaking of this answer, a word must be said about Mademoiselle Godeau. She was not quite free from the vanity of her father, but her good nature was ever uppermost. She was in the full meaning of the term, a spoilt child. She habitually spoke very little, and never was she seen with a needle in her hand; she spent her days at her toilet, and her evenings on the sofa, not seeming to hear the conversation going on around her. As regards her dress, she was prodigiously coquettish, and her own face was surely what she thought most of on earth. A wrinkle in her collarette, an ink spot on her finger, would have distressed her; and, when her dress pleased her, nothing can describe the last look which she cast in her mirror before leaving the room. She showed neither taste nor aversion for the pleasures in which young ladies usually delight. She went to balls willingly enough, and renounced going to them without a show of temper, sometimes without motive.

The play wearied her, and she was in the constant habit of falling asleep there. When her father, who worshipped her, proposed to make her some present of her own choice, she took an hour to decide, not being able to think of anything she cared for. When M. Godeau gave a reception or a dinner, it often happened that Julie would not appear in the drawing room and at such times she passed the evening alone in her own room, in full dress, walking up and down, her fan in her hand. If a compliment was addressed to her, she turned her head away and if anyone attempted to pay court to her, she responded only by a look at once so dazzling and so serious as to disconcert even the boldest. Never had a sall made her laugh; never had an air in an opera, a flight of tragedy, moved her; indeed, never had her heart given a sign of life; and, on seeing her pass in all the splendor of her nonchalant loveliness one might have taken her for a beautiful somnambulist, walking thru the world as in a trance.

So much indifference and coquetry did not seem easy to understand. Some said she loved nothing, others that she loved nothing but herself. A single word, however, suffices to explain he character—she was waiting. From the age of fourteen she had heard it ceaselessly repeated that nothing was so charming as she. She was convinced of this, and that was why she paid so much attention to dress. In failing to do honor to her own person, she would have thought herself guilty of sacrilege. She walked, in her beauty, so to speak, like a child in its holiday dress; but she was very far from thinking that her beauty was to remain useless.

Beneath her apparent unconcern, she had a will, secret, inflexible, and the more potent the better it was concealed. The coquetry of ordinary women, which spends itself in ogling, in simpering and in smiling, seemed to her a childish, vain, almost contemptible way of fighting with shadows. She felt herself in possession of a treasure and she disdained to stake it piece by piece, she needed an adversary worthy of herself; but, too accustomed to see her wishes anticipated, she did not seek that adversary; it may even be said that she felt astonished at his failing to present himself.

For the four or five years that she had been out in society and had conscientiously displayed her flowers, her furbelows, and her beautiful shoulders, it seemed to her inconceivable that she had not yet inspired some great passion.

Had she said what was really behind her thoughts, she certainly would have replied to her many flatterers: "Well, if it is true that I am so beautiful, why don't you blow your brains out for me?" An answer which many other young girls might make, and which more than one who sas nothing hides away in a corner of her heart, not far perhaps from the tip of her tongue.

What is there, indeed, in the world, more tantalizing for a woman than to be young, rich, beautiful, to look at herself in the mirror and see herself charmingly dressed, worthy in every way to please, fully disposed to allow herself to be loved, and to have to say to herself:

"I am admired, I am praised, all the world thinks me charming, but nobody loves me. My gown is by the best maker, my laces are superb, my coiffure is irreproachable, my face the most beautiful on earth, my figure slender, by foot well turned, and all this helps me to nothing but to go and yawn in the corner of some drawing room! If a young man speaks to me he treats me as a child; if I am asked in marriage, it is for my dowery; if somebody presses my hand in a dance, it is sure to be some provincial fop; as soon as I appear anywhere, I excite a murmer of admiration; but nobody speaks low, iln my ear, a word that makes my heart beat. I hear impertinent men praising me in loud tones, a couple of feet away, and never a loog of humbly sincere adoration meets mine. Still I have an ardent soul full of life, and I am not, by any means, only a pretty doll to be shown about, to be made to dance at a ball, to be dressed by a maid in the morning and undressed at night—beginning the whole thing over again the next day."

That is what Mademoiselle Godeau had many times said to herself; and there were hours when that thought inspirted her with so gloomy a feeling that she remained mute and almost motionless for a whole day. When Croisilles wrote her, she was in just such a fit of ill humor. She had just been taking her chocolate and was deep in meditation, stretched upon a lounge, when her maid entered and handed her the letter with a mysterious air. Sh looked at the address, and not recognizing the handwriting, fell again to musing.

The maid then saw herself forced to explain what it was, which she did with a rather disconcerted air, not being at all sure how the young lady would take the matter. Mademoiselle Godeau listened without moving, then opened the letter, and cast only a glance at it; she at once asked for a sheet of paper, and nonchalantly she wrote these few words:

"No, sir, I assure you I am not proud. If you had only a hundred thousand crowns, I would willingly marry you."

Such was the reply that the maid at once took to Croisilles, who gave her another louis for her trouble.

V.

A hundred thousand crowns was not found "in a donkey's hoof print," and if Croisilles had been suspicious he might have thought in reading Mademoiselle Godeau's letter that she was either crazy or laughing at him. He thought neither, for he only saw in it that his darling Julie loved him, and that he must have a hundred thousand crowns, and he dreamed from that moment of nothing but trying to secure them.

He possessed two hundred louis in cash, plus a house which, as I have said, might be worth about thirty thousand francs. What was to be done? How was he to go about transfiguring these thirty-four thousand francs, at a jump, into three hundred thousand. The first idea which came into the mind of the young man was to find some way of staking his whole fortune on the too-up of a coin, but for that he must sell the huse. Croisilles therefore began by putting a notice upon the door, stating that his house was for sale; then, while dreaming what he would do with the money that he wuold get for it, he waited a purchaser.

A week went by, then another; not a single purchaser applied. More and more distressed, Croisilles spent these days with PJean, and despair was taking possession of him once more when a Jewish broker rang at the door.

"This house is for sale, sir, is it not? The you the owner of it?"

"Yes, sir."

"And how much is it worth?"

"Thirty thousand francs, I believe; at least I have heard my father say so."

The Jew visited all the rooms, went upstairs and down into the cellar, knocking on the falls, counting the steps of the stair case, turning the doors on their hinges and the keys in their locks, opening and closing the windows; then, at last, after having thoroughly examined everything, without saying a word and without making the slightest proposal, be bowed to Croisilles and retired.

Croisilles, who for a whole hour had followed him with a palpitating heart, as may be imagined, was not a little disappointed at this silent retreat. He thought that perhaps the Jew had wished to give himself time to presently. He waited a week for him, not daring to go out for fear of missing his visit, and looking out of the windows from morning till night. But it was in vain; the Jew did not reappear. Jean, true to his unpleasant role as adviser, brought moral pressure to bear to dissuade his master from selling his house in so hasty a manner and for so extravagant a purpose. Dying of impatience, ennui, and loce, Croisilles one morning took his two hundred louis and went out, determined to tempt fortune with this sum, since he could not have more.

The gaming houses at that time were not public, and that refinement of covilization which enables the first comer to ruin himself at all hours, as soon as the wish enters his mind, had not yet been invented.

Scarcely was Croisilles in the street before he stopped, not knowing where to go to stake his money. He looked at the houses of the neighborhood, and eyed them, one after the other, striving to riscover suspicious appearances that might point out to him the object of his search. A good looking young man, splendidly dressed, happened to pass. Judging from his mien, he was certainly a young man of gentle blood and ample leisure, so Croisilles politely accosted him.

"Sir," he said, "I beg your pardon for the liberty I take. I have two hundred louis in my pocket and I am dying either to lose them or win some more. Could you not point out to me some respectable place where such things are done?"

At this rather strange speech the young man burst out laughing.

"Upon my word, sir!" answered he, "if you are seeking any such wicked place you have but to follow me, for that is just where I am going."

Croisilles followed him, and a few steps farther they both entered a house of very attractive appearance, where they were recivd hospitably by an old gntleman of the highest breeding.

Several young men were already seated round a green cloth. Croisilles modestly took a place there, and in less than an hour his two hundred louis were gone.

He came out as sad as a lover can be who thinks himself beloved. He had not enough to dine with, but that did not cause him any anxiety.

"What can I do now," he asked himself, "to get money? To whom shall I address myself in this town? Who will lend me even a hundred louis on this house that I can not sell?"

While he was in this quandry, he met his Jewish broker. He did not hesitate to address him, and, featherheld as he was, did not fail to tell him the plight he was in.

The Jew did not much want to buy the house; he had come to see it only through curiosity, or, to speak more exactly, for the satisfaction of his own conscience, as a passing dog goes into a kitchen, the door of which stands open, to see if there is anything to steal. But when he saw Croisells so despondent, so sad, so bereft of all resources he could not resist the temptation to put himselr to some inconvenience, even, in order to pay for the house. He therefore offered him about one-fourth of its value. Croisilles fell upon his neck, called him his friend and savious, blindly signed a bargain that would have made one's hair stand on end, and, on the very next day, the possessor of four hundred new louis, he once more turned his steps toward the gambling house where he had been so politely and speedily ruined the night before.

On his way, he passed by the wharf. A vessel was about leaving; the wind was gentle, the ocean tranquil. On all sides, merchants, sailors, officers in uniform were coming and going. Porters were carrying enormous bales of merchandise. Passengers and their friends were exchanging farewells, small boats were rowing about in all directions; on every face could be read fear, impatience, or hope; and, amidst all the agitation which surrounded it, the majestic vessel swayed gently to and fro under the wind that swelled her proud sails.

"What a grand thing it is," thought Croisilles, "to risk all one possesses and go beyond the sea, in perilous search of fortune. How it fills me with emotion to look at this vessel setting out on her voyage, loaded with so much wealth, with the welfare of so many families. What joy to see her come back again, bringing twice as much as was intrusted to her, returning so much prouder and richer than she went away. Why am I not one of those merchants? Why could I not stake my four hundred louis in this way? This immense sea. What a green cloth, on which to boldly tempt fortune. Why should I not myself buy a few bales of cloth or silk?

AFTERNOON BARES FEMININE BEAUTY

Milady's wardrobe is divided into five distinct groups. Each group has its elaborate prases and its simple ones. In the first group we have either the tailored or the very feminine style, a matter of personal choice.

But there is not much personal choice possible in sports wear, for this must be suitable for the player or the onlooker. Simplicity and a certain uniformity likewise must run through tailored street clothes, Although the dressier type of street clothes is appropriate for almost any afternoon affair, there is hardly a woman who does not care to take advantage of the opportunity to be really lovely and feminine, which is offered her in her fourth group, afternoon clothes.

Velveteen is an important style item often noticed in the development of one and two piece sports frocks for resort wear. The smart colors emphasized are gooseberry and Lanvin green, popcorn yellow, Madonna blue and June rose.

Printed linens will be very smart this season for certain types of sports wear. Can't you just picture one, for instance, in floral sprays of quaint character scattered on the white ground in the most casual fashion?

Pongees that are not the pongee with which we are familiar, but an improved pongee, very often printed, will find favor in dresses for sports wear.

The straight line coat shows not the slightest wane in popularity despite the efforts of the couturieres to interest women in possible variations.

Smartness of the short jacket does not confine itself to the sports wear or the tailored group, but may be found in very smart cersions as either a separate piece or a part of an afternoon ensemble.

As in every detail Hiladi's clothing, a restrained note of luxury is very evident. Simplicity that is yet intricate is the idea—not the simplicity that went with the straight one-piece dress of tubeness and slender lines that such a style gives—and it is still smart to be slender even though discretely curved.

In materials used in gowns for the afternoon wear there is nothing decidedly new. The newness is centered more in the silhouette. And this, to be perfectly frank with you, is not particularly new, either.

One has to find true chic nowadays in learning to wear the proper lines and colors, and the proper types of clothing for different occasions.

Crepe de chine, georgette and chiffon, satins, a few taffetas and moires, soft black lace, printed organdy—these are the materials suitable for afternoon wear.

When an artist paints a picture he gives careful consideration not only to the faces of his subjects and their clothes, but he skillfully plans a background that will enhance the color value of the figures in the composition. It is difficult for the average person to realize hom immensely important backgrounds are because they seem to be the least interesting part of the picture. Take away or change a good background, however, and you will see at once that the picture is no longer pleasing to the eye. The figures have lost most of their charm.

Every girl or woman is an artist to some extent. Most, however, confine their attention to making their faces beautiful and adorning themselves with pretty clothes. Some go a step further and develop graceful, well-poised figures to enhance the charm of the pictures they create. A smaller number have sufficient artistic ability to feel the necessity for a harmonious background to set off their beauty.

Now, it is not always possible to select one's background, but it is possible to adapt oneself to changing environments.

One way to do this is indicated in the rule that every woman of taste follows in regard to dress, namely that clothes should be suitable to the occasion. Sports clothes with their bizarre colors and jaunty lines look very charming against the green of the golf course or on the wide, sunny verandas of a country club, but for town wear different styles are required. The linen or cotton house dress is different in clut and color from the chic costume for street or office. The afternoon frock and the evening gown are distinct in design.

Granted that everyone knows what style of clothes are in good taste for each occasion, the next step is to select colors that will harmonize with the background.

EIGHT POSITIONS ARE OPEN IN CIVIL SERVICE

The United States civil service commission announces that examinations for the following positions will soon be held: Physicist, associate physicist, assistant physicist, associate and assistant architect, assistant scientific aid, Junior scientific air, and under laboratory apprentice.

STATE TO MARK U. S. HIGHWAYS

To correlate Michigan trunk line highways with the newly arranged Federal system of interstate touring routes covering the United States, the State Highway Department at Lansing will spent $138,000 for marking and remarking. The work is scheduled for completion before May 15 and this will mean that there will be two kinds of guiding signs visible on the main roads throughout the state this summer. One kind will be the regular "M" with a number signifying a trunk line, while the other will be the "U. S." emblem inclosed in a shield design and also bearing a number relating to the federal system.

This is the way Frank S. Rogers, State Highway Commissioner, describes the supplementary routes that are to be created to form part of the county wide federal system:

Route No. 2 originates in Houton, Me., crosses New Hampshire, Vermont and passes out of New York at Rouse's Point, jumps over Ontario and follows Michigan M-12 from Sault Ste. Marie through Manistique, Escanaba, Iron Mountain, Crystal Falls to Ironwood; thence westerly through Duluth and Grand Forks and ends at Bonner's Ferry, Idaho.

Route No. 10 begins at Detroit and passes through Pontiac, Flint, Saginaw, Midland and Ludington, then it jumps Lake Michigan to Manitowac, Wisconsin and ends at Miles City, in Montana. This route follows a portion of M-10, M-24 and M-20 in Michigan.

Route No. 12 originates at Detroit, following present M-17, through Ann Arbor, Jackson, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo to Watervliet; thence M-11 to St. Joseph and New Buffalo but extending westerly through Chicago, St. Paul, Fargo to Miles City, Montana and to Seattle, Washington.

Route No. 16 follows our present M-16 from Detroit through Lansing, Grand Rapids to Grand Haven, thence crosses to Milwaukee, Wisconsin; thence westerly through LaCrosse, Wisconsin; Albert Lea, Minnesota, Sioux Falls, South Dakota to Worland, Wyoming.

Out present M-23 becomes No. 112 on the United States system, extending from Detroit through Ypsilanti, Saline, Clinton, Coldwater, Sturgis, White Pigeon, Mottville to Elkhart, Indiana, where it intersects United States route No. 20, extending from Boston to Portland, Oregon.

U. S. Ruote 23 begins at Mackinaw City and follows present M-10 thru Alpena, Bay City to Saginaw and Flint; thence southerly over M-65 through Fenton and on southerly between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti to Toledo, Ohio, and thence to Portsmouth, Ohio.

U. S. 31, now M-11 (West Michigan Pike), Dixie Highway, extends from Mackinaw City southerly through Manistee, Ludington, Muskegon, Grand Haven to St. oJseph; thence southerly to South Bend, and Indianapolis, Indiana; Louisville, Nashville and Birmingham to Mobile, Alabama.

U. S. 27 begins at Cheboygan and extends southerly to Lansing on present M-14; thence over M-29 to Charlotte, Marshall and Coldwater; thence southerly through Fort Wayne and Richmond, Indiana, to Cincinnati, O.

U. S. 25 begins at Port Huron and extends southerly through Detroit to Toledo, thence through Cincinnati, Knoxville and on to Augusta, Ga.

U. S. 24, which in the main is an east and west houte, begins at Pontiac and extends southerly to Toledo, and thence in a southerly direction to Monroe, Missouri.

U. S. 41 begins at Eagle River in Keweenaw county; thence southerly through Houghton and Marquette and Menonimee to Chicago and continues south through Evansville, Chatanooga, Atlanta and Tampa to Naples in the southern part of Florida.

MISS JULIA BREWER WINS MEMPHIS STUDY TROPHY

A loving cup, offered by the Memphis Study club, to the student of the Memphis high school receiving highest marks each semester, in scholarship, service, leadership and character, has been awarded to Miss Julia Brewer, a senior, to hold during the remainder of the school term. To keep the trophy permanently, a studnt must win it three consecutive semesters. Miss Brewer will graduate in June. A second prize awarded by Miss Jessie Paton, was won by Miss Marion Hazelton, a junior, whose record was so good that she was excused from all examinations in the five subjects she is taking.

FORD REMODELS FAMED OLD INN

Ancient and modern sit side by side under the same roof, and, strangely, nothing seems amiss in any way, out in Botsford Inn, where Henry Ford has taken the old public house of pre-Civil war days, made it over with replicas of what was lost from those days, and furnished it with all modern conveniences to make it a happy home.

The old Inn is situated on the north side of Grand River avenue, just beyond Clarenceville. It is about 12 miles from the Detroit city hall.

Mr. Ford has fixed up this place not as a museum for the curious public, but as a real home to which he may retire for a "day in the country"—for there is land and woods behind the place—in surroundings that were familiar to his father and to his own youth.

Along Grand River flashes the modern automobile and bus, and the passing street car that was new when Ford was a young man. Passing the fence one steps back half a century or more, for even though one visit the barn first he will find in that towering old red structure a team of oxen waiting to start the spring ploughing with horness and tools nearby such as the Civil War farmer used. It matters not that a new Ford tractor may be standing behind the barn or is busy smoothing up the gravel road. That is only one of the many rubbings of elbows in this ancient-modern house.

The barn itself is a relic of the old days. Hewn and pegged timbers hold up its roof, ad its chopped out of the timber that stood in Michigan's forest primeval.

Entering the inn from the front one passes through a Colonial doodway and finds oneself in the "hotel lobby." There sits the registry books, but what can this be? For back of the "desk" on shelves are arranged old bottles and flasks labeled "whisky," "gin," "rum," "bitters:" Oh, yes. The tavern of those days was also the saloon. Abe Lincoln himself aended bar in sucvh a place, if history be true. The bottles are still half full, but probably of colored waters, or maybe vinegar. However, be that as it may, they are immune from any danger, for the new tenane doesn't drink.

CALLS GNU MOST VICIOUS AT ZOO

It is surprising to realize how many residents of Michigan, if asked the question, "what is the most vicious animal in Belle Isle Zoo?" would shake a negative head and say, "ask me another."

There is one man, however, Jack Timmons, who has charge of Detroit's animals, birds and fish on the isle, who would point out the creature. He would show you a sharp horned quadruped.

A sign outside the enclosure will tell you the animal is a South African gnu. Below the name is the pithy warning, "very dangerous."

Inside the double line of strong wire fencing, the gnu browses pacifically. Nothing about him suggests the unruly characteristics attributed to him, unless it is his horns—and cows have horns.

But Mr. Timmons will smile, and repeat that the gnu is the most dangerous animal in the zoo. He will call your attention to the creature's very sharp, wickedly curved horns. He will disturb the gnu, that you may see its lightning like speed, and the repeated darts of the head, and, perhaps the white gleam of the naimal's eyes. He will attempt to lasso the gnu by its horns—the only way it can be subdued—and show you how swift and crafty and courageous is that little animal.

Then you will know that the gnu is anything but docile.

MT. CLEMENS GIRLS GO IN FOR LONG HAIR STYLE

Following the receipt of a letter of endorsement from James Oliver Curwood, author, twelve girls of the M. Clemens high school have organized the J. O. C. club, the sole aim and object of which is the elimination of bobbed hair.

The members of the club who have agreed that long hair is woman's crowning glory are led by Miss Ruth Remer, supported by Estreall and Carmencita Nelson, members of the Nelson family of acrobats. Others who have signed the pledge are Ruth Brennan, Catherine Behnke, Emma Hartung, Virginia Case, Mary Alice Johnson, Catherine Schott and Hildegarde Leitzow.

A number of these girls have never bobbed their hair and all of them are now doing it up.

Two is company—until they become one, then it seems more like acrowd.

DETROITER RECALLS NEY YORK DIVE OF SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE

Jenny Lind, the lovely "Swedish Nightingale," was known to thousands as a riva, a golden voiced prima donna. But James J. Martin, 89 years young, who lives in Detroit with his con-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Paige, remembers Jenny Lind in the role of diver, as he saw her taking a "header" into the mingled waters of the Hurson river, the Atlantic ocean and Long Island sound as they flow together at the Battery, at the tip of Manhattan Island.

As a lad of 12, playing hookey from school, Jim Martin and some of his pals spent a day hanging around Castle Garden that September of 1850 when Jenny Lind made her American debut under the direction of P. T. Barnum. Castle Garden in those days was the place where immigrants from Europe first lander in the United States. There were no formalities of quarantine and no Ellis Island in that era of freedom.

There was also a great auditorium at Castle Garden, which was provided with a stage, and there Jenny Lind sang to an audience of more than 5000 members of New York society who crossed the little bridge from Battery park to the garden.

LULL I NATHLETICS AT MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY

A lull almost as noticeable as the annual mid-year decline in athletic competition at the University of Michigan descended on Ann Arbor and it will hold until late April after the base ball squad returns from the annual southern trip.

With the close of the spring recess, the athletic program is resumed in full with track, base ball, golf, tennis and foot ball practice offering sufficient variety.

Track men may compete at an indoor meet in Cleveland. Their next scheduled objective, however, are the annual outdoor relay events. As a matter of fact, the runners and the jumpers have really little to do until the dual meets being in May. Their major objective since beating Cornell, is the Big Ten meet at Madison May 27 and 28.

From tim immemorial, base ball coaches at Michigan at this period of the year, have yearned for good weather. They were not alone in the yearning but they always had a good and sufficient reason on top of their natural desire to see winter dethroned. As usual Coach Ray Fisher wants warm weather as there are several pitching prospects whom he desires to see in action before starting south.

FARMER CUT, SCRATCHED CAPTURING ARCTIC OWL

Evidence of the prevalence of Arctic owls throughout Michigan the last few months has given sportsmen plenty to worry about. Until this year the birds were relatively scarce in the Southern peninsula.

As voracious birds of prey, it is feared that the grouse and rabbits throughout the Bear Lake district have suffered greatly this year.

Willis Ware, a Bear Lake township farmer, staged a hand to hand encounter with one recently found invading his poultry coop. Ware winged the bird and then decided to capture it alive. He succeeded but not without being clut and scratched considerably.

33 U. OF M. FRATERNITIES WARNED OF FIRE HAZARDS

Steps to remove fire hazards will be taken by 33 fraternity houses at the University of Michigan as a result of investigations by the housing committee of the university. Distinct fire hazards were reported to exist in those houses ordered to make improvements, according to the report.

Virtually all the students of the institution live in rooming or fraternity houses approced by the university authorities, the report indicated. Of the 7137 students at the unversity, 3733 live in approved rooming houses, 1165 in fraternity houses, and 1747 in rooming houses which are not approved by the authorities.

ALBION ACTS TO AVERT COLLEGE HALL CROWDS

Important changes in the conduct of Albion college classes for the coming year have been announced by the administration. Freshmen will attend three-hour classes Monday, Wednesday and Friday, while upper classmen will be required to prepare lessons for Tuesday, Thursday and aSturday classes. The change is made to do away with congestion in the corridors of buildings.

Finds Use for Old Money

John Henderson, clerk in the comptroller's office, makes toys and miscellaneous odds and ends out of old money after the money has been destroyed and reduced to a mere pulp in a huge steel macerator. These unique articles are sold as souvenirs.

NORTH SPORTSMEN IN AMITY ON LAW

The recent meeting of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association at Marquette was one of the most harmonious and successful gatherings of the association formed a few years ago to voice the peninsula's opinions in matters of game conservation.

Despite the fact that many lower Michigan sportsmen favor a change in the present deer season and one-buck law, the association, which represents 30 member clubs, is unalterably opposed to any change in the system. The only change which was considered was one to make the season even more conservative in eliminating the privilege of killing a deer for camp use and doing away with the right to kill spike horned bucks.

The clubs took no action on the paid trapper system and referred the matter to the conservation commission asking that a careful survey of the paid tropper and the bounty systems be made.

The proposed bounty system, northern sportsmen believe, would again make it possible for pelt bootleggers to bring in large shipments of Arizona and New Mexican coyoltes for sale to county clerks as pelts of animals killed in this state. There is a great difference in opinions regarding the state trapper system, especially between the city dweller and those who live in the frontier districts where the actual results are seen at close range.

Another step taken by the association offiicers was a move to prevent the transportation and planting of obnoxious minnows in the waters of the northern peninsula. In this connection, Dr. John N. Lowe, state biologist, explained that in transporting minnows to northern water thousands of carp minnows may be shipped in with the bait minnows and the former, growing to maturity would become a menace to game fish.

An appeal was made to those attending the meeting to spread propaganda among sportsmen to stop the habit of allowing dogs to road the woods in the spring of the year, running down game and causing a slaughter as great as the hunting season. Hundreds of cases of dogs killing deer reported in the past few years and the only action taken to prevent this outrage has been on the part of game wardens who hunt out the killer-dogs and destroy them.

AGED WOMAN SEEKS HOME DEEDED AWAY

Margaret Jessie Owen, 74 years old of Romeo, is suing in Macomb county circuit court to have set aside a deed which was made to her two nieces, Nellie Ford White of New York City and Eva June White of Detroit, while Mrs. Owen was ill in April, 1923. According to Mrs. Owen and a number of witnesses, the deed was signed while the two nieces were visiting her when she was ill and expected to die. Mrs. Owen says that the nieces asked her to sign what she thought was a release on some Liberty bonds, when in fact it was a deed to her home and 90 acres of land.

You can't convince a self made man that he gave himself the worst of it.

BOY'S DEATH IN MILL STREAM IS BLAMED ON THEFT OF LIFE ROPE

The theft of the rope from the life preserver at the Walton Mills dam, in North Lansing, was blamed by Lansing police for the death of an eight-year-old boy who fell into the mill race.

Floyd Day, bent on recovering a ball that had been batted across the mill race, attempted to cross on a narrow beam, slipped and fell into the water. His brother, Kenneth, 10, rushed for the life preserver but he found the rope gone. He threw the preserver, but it fell short. Before assistance could arrive Floyd had gone down.

UTILITIES TO SPEND BIG SUM IN PORT HURON AREA

The Detroit Edison company will spend $2,546,000 in 1927 in Port Huron, Marysville and St. Clair. The largest item is the building of an addition to the Marysville power house to contain two additional 30,000 kilowatt generators and the boilers necessary to operate them.

The addition to the building and the installation of one of the proposed 40,000 horse power turbo generators and boilers will cost $2,000,000. One of the new units will be in operation near the end of 1927.

Improvements to the Marysville gas plant will be made at an expense of $100,000 and miscellaneous improvements at Marysville power house will cost $200,000. Gas mains will be laid to St. Clair.

CHILDREN ON WAY TO SCHOOL ATTACKED BY FLOCK OF GEESE

A flock of ugly geese has been terrorizing the school children of Wyandotte, according to complaints received by the Wyandotte police.

According to the neighbors, Joblinski has permitted the geese to run, free and unmuzzled, in the streets near his home, where they have attacked small passersby, biting them and beating them with their wings. The children have been so frightened, neighbors say, that in many cases the parents have been forced to accompany them to school.

STATE COLLEGE IN GLEE OVER INDOOR ATHLETIC VICTORIES

Michigan State college athletes have added the last bit of polish to the most brilliant indoor campaigns ever accomplished at the Spartan institution.

A review of their achievements during the past three months bears out this statement. Coaches are laying plans for more extensive campaigns in the approaching outdoor season.

When State swung into the indoor campaign last December it was predicted that victories lay ahead and now that the contests are history, it is safe to say that the predictions were not idly made.

The highest mark of the season was attained in track. Coach Ralph Young's proteges came through with victories in two dual meets, winning by large counts from Marquette university and Western State normal, dominated the Illinois relays, an accomplishment that is considered by many in the State camp as the greatest feat ever turned in by a Green and White team, won the Michigan A. A. U. title in a classy field, took the team honors in the annual indoor college carnival here, placed second in the Central Intercollegiate meet and turned in good individual performances in the Illinois A. C. meet at Chicago.

DRAINING DUCK MARSH FOR BRIDGE ACROSS PRESQUE ISLE IS HIT

One of the finest duck hunting marshes in the Upper Peninsula is threatened with destruction if the State Highway department goes thru with its plan to construct a highway bridge across Presque Isle River. Local sportsmen have banded to petition the department of conservation to investigate before the bridge is built. At present here is an old dam across the river, the back water of which has kept several thousands of acres of low land flooded. The highway department intends to remove this dam which would automatically drain the area. This marsh has been in existence since 1890 when loggers built it. During the past few years sportsmen have planted considerable of the marsh to wild rice and this growth has been a great attraction to all migratory wild fowl. Should the dam be removed it would mean the end of duck hunting in the Bessemer district.

PROGRESSIVE DOCTORS' Specialist

Treating Diseases Without surgical Operation

at keeter Hotel

Wednesday, May 4

Office Hours 10:00 a. m. to 4.00 p.m

One Day Only

Returning Every Three Months

FREE CONSULTATION

The Progressive Doctors' Specialist is licensed by the state of Michigan: a graduate of one of the best universities, twenty-five years of practical experience, comes well recommended. Will demonstrate in the principal cities methods of preventing many diseases such as goitre, consumption, etc. and also methods of treating diseases of long standing by means of medicines, diet and hygiene, thus saving many people from a dangerous and expensive surgical operation.

The specialist is an expert in diagnosis and will tell you the exact truth about your condition. Only those who have a good chance to regain their health will be treated, so that everyone who takes treatment will bring their friends at the next visit.

Some of the diseases treated: Diseases of the stomach, bowels, liver, blood, blood vessels, skin, kidneys, bladder, heart, lungs, eye, ear, nose throat, scalp, enlarged veins, leg ulcers, rheumatism, high blood pressure, tumors, enlarged glands, goitre, piles. nerve weakness, giving rise to the loss of mental and bodily vigor, melancholia, discouragement and worry, undeveloped children, either mental or physical, and all chronic diseases of men, women and children that have baffled the skill of the family physician,

A diagnosis of any disease of long standing, its nature and cause, will be made FREE and proper medicines will be furnished at reasonable cost to those selected as favorable cases for treatment

Children must be accompanied by their parents and married ladies by their husbands.

Witnesses were friends and neighbors who brought useful gifts. Miss Clement is soon to become the bride of Mr. Fred Wisner.

Last Sunday morning at the Methodist church Rev. Burley Lamb of the Ohio Federation of Churches gave a short talk in the Sunday school hour regarding his work. He says that in many districts of Ohio schools for instruction in religion are conducted in outside buildings as it is not within the law to instruct children in the public schools in Protestant religion. He is secretary of the Federated Churches of Ohio and his duties are traveling over the state organizing community churches in cities where there are too many churches each with too small membership to be successful.

Just to prove that law is no respector of persons the Sheriff walked into the State Senate at Lansing recently and arrested Senator Bahorski and locked him up on a charge of fraud in connection with "bootlegging" in which the Senator is accused of being a participator. This is quite interesting news. In fact any man who will engage in that elegant line of work is quite tasty. Bahorski is only just one more poor soiled dunce who lost his principles when he was young and never recovered them again.

Mrs. Ada McCourtie Fowle, formerly of Somerset Centre, passed away at San Francisco California, recently, and the remains were brought to Somerset Centre for funeral services to be held at Somerset Centre church Monday, April 18th, at 3:00 p. m., Rev. Pellowe officiating, and the body will rest in a vault in Jackson until a mausoleum is prepared for it in Somerset cemetery. Mrs. Fowle will be remembered by many as residing at the Centre 15 or more years ago. She was 57 years of age and had been widowed for some time.

Mrs. Minnie Baker who was recently apprehended for passing worthless checks in Hillsdale has been placed on two years probation and must report to the Judge each month giving an account of her expenditures and receipts, must not leave the state without permission must observe all laws and various other divers requirements. We suggest that it would be a good stunt for the court to have a little book of rules printed to hand out to such people so they will observe all the requirements. Mrs. Baker's husband was recently released from jail where he was sentenced for "switching" license plates on an automobile. Taken all in all the Baker family are in it for considerable trouble for sometime to come.

Roberts—Stone April Wedding

Miss Beulah Roberts, daughter of William F. Roberts and wife and Joe Brooks Stone were married Saturday evening April 9 at 8:30 o'clock at the Methodist church. The Rev. Hardy Ingham performing the ceremony in the presence of immediate relatives and friends.

Freeman Stone, brother of the groom, played the wedding march.

The bride was gowned in white crepe satin and her honor maid Miss Audrey McMurtry wore a frock of yellow georgette. Kenneth Enlow was best man.

Mrs. Stone has spent the greater part of her life in Phoenix Arizona and attended the Phoenix Union high school. Mr. Stone is the son of Walter Stone and wife, formerly of Mason City, Ill. He is connected with the Arizona Equitable Rating company. The couple will make their home in Phoenix.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts formerly resided in this village, he being the son of Lewis Roberts and wife and she the daughter of Fred Nutten and wife.

Old Fences Made New At Slight Expense
IT DOESN'T take much time nowadays to keep fence lines stock-tight and in good repair. Not if you use these quick driven Red Top Steel Posts.
You can drive 20 or 30 Red Tops in an hour. And the fencing is attached in a jiffy so that it will never pull away. This means that you can get a lot of fence repaired even in odd moments.
It's pretty risky business letting fence lines go hang while waiting for a time when work is slack to put them in shape. The damage to stock or crops that can come from just one weak spot may be larger than the entire expense of keeping the fences in good shape. An ounce of prevention is certainly worth while here.
Keep a small stock of Red Tops on hand and get one of these One-Man Drivers. Then when you see a wood post going bad simply drive a Red Top alongside, take out the wood post and fasten the fencing to the steel post. These Red Tops will stop any farm critter you've got on your place.
We personally guarantee Red Tops and we are authorized to make adjustments promptly. Red Tops are not an experiment. They are a proved success and have been giving a good account of themselves in thousands of farm fence lines.
We picked the Red Top line because we believe it is the best value. That's the way we try to buy all lines of goods. We expect our business to grow on the basis of giving you a full dollar's worth for every dollar you spend. Come in and see us when you're in town. Get our prices on posts and the other materials you're needing. Prices are mighty reasonable now on posts and other special items.

Mateo Falcone

By PROSPER MERIMEE

On eaving Porto Vecchio from the northwest and directing his steps towards the interior of the island, the traveler will notice that the land rises rapidly, and after three hours of walking over tortuous paths obstructed by great masses of rock and sometimes cut by ravines, he will find himself on the border of a great maquis. The maquis is the domain of the Corsican shepherds and of those who are at variance with justice.

It must be known that in order in save himself the trouble of manuring his field, the Corsican husbandman sets fire to a piece of woodland. If the flame spread farther than is necessary, so much the worst! In any case he is certain of a good crop from the land fertilized by the ashes of th trees which grow upon it. He gathers only the heads of his grain, leaving the straw, which it would be unnecessary labor to cut. In the following spring the roots that have remained in the earth without being destroyed send up their tufts of sprouts, which in a few years reach a height of seven or eight feet.

It is this kind of tangled thicket that is called a maquis. They are made up of different kinds of trees and shrubs, so crowded and mingled together at the caprice of nature that only with an axe in hand can a man open a passage through them, and maquis are frequently seen so thick and bushy that the wild sheep themselves cannot penetrate them.

If you rave killed a man, go into the maquis of Porto Vecchio. With a good gun and plenty of powder and balls, you can live there in safety. Do not forget a brown cloak furnished with a hood, which will serve you for both cover mattress. The shepherds will give yu chestnuts, milk and cheese and you will have nothing to fear from justice ner the relatives of the dead except when it is necessary for you to descend to the city to replenish your ammunition.

When I was in Corsica in 18——, Mateo Falcone had his house half a league from this maquis. He was rich enough for that country, living in noble style—that is to say, doing nothing—on the income of his flocks, which the shepherds, who are a kind of nomads, lead to pasture here and there on the mountains.

When I saw him two years after the event that I am about to relate, he appeared to me to be about fifty years old or more. Picture to yourself a man, small but robust, with curly hair, black as jejtjj. janjj aquiline nose, thin lips, large, restless eyes and a complexion the color of tanned leather. His skill as a marksman was considered extraordinary even in his country where good shots are so common. For example, Mateo would never fire at a sheep with bockshot; but at a hundred and twenty paces, he could drop it with a ball in the head or shoulder, as he chose. He used his arms as easily at night as during the day. I was told this feat of his skill, which will, perhaps, seem impossible to those who have not traveled in Corsica. A lighted candle was placed at eighty paces, behind a paper transparency about the size of a plate. He would take aim, then the candle would be extinguished, and at the end of a moment, in the most complete darkness, he would fire and hit the paper three times out of four.

With such a transcendent accomplishment, Mateo Falcone had acquired a great reputation. He was said to be as good a friend as he was a dangerous enemy; accommodating and chariasable, he lived at peace with all the world in the district of Porto Vicchio. But it is said of him that in Corte, where he had married his wife, he had disembarrassed himself very cvigorously of a rival who was considered as redoubtable in war as in love; at least, a certain gun shot which surprised this rival as he was shaving before a little mirror hung in his window wat attributed to Mateo. The affair was smoothed over and Mateo was married. His wife Giuseppa had given him at first thre daughters (which infuriated him), and finally a son, whom he named Fortunato, and who became the hope of hs family, the inheritor of the name. The daughters were well married; their father could count at need on the poignards and carbines of his sons-in-law. The son was only ten years old, but he already gave promise of fine attributes.

On a certain day in autumn, Mateo set out at an early hour with his wife to visit one of his flicks in a clearing of the maquis. The little Fortunato wanted to go with them, but the clearnig was too far away; morevoer, it was necessary some one should stay to watch the house; therefore the father refused; it will be seen whether or not he had reason to repent.

He had been gone some hours, and the little Fortunato was tranquilly stretched out in the sun, looking at the mountains, and thinking that the next Sunday he was oging to dine in the city with his uncle, the Caporal, when he was siddenly interrupted in his meditations by the firing of a musket. He got up and turned to that side of the plain whence the noise came. Other shots followed, fired at irregular intervals, and each time nearer; at last, in the path which led from the plain to Mateo's house, appeared a man wearing the pointed hat of the mountaineers, bearded, covered with rags, and dragging himself with difficulty by the support of his gun. He had just received a wound in his thigh.

The man was an outlaw, who, having gone to the town by night to buy powder, had fallen on the way into an ambuscade of Corsican light infantry. After a vigorous defense he was ortunnate in making his retreat, but closely followed and firing from rock to rock. But he was only a little in advance of the soldiers, and his wound prevented him from gaining the maquis before being overtaken.

He aproached Fortunato and said: "You are the son of Mateo Falcone?" —"Yes."

I am Gianetto Saupiero. I am followed by the yellow collatrs. Hide me, for I can go no further."

"And what will my father say if I hide you without his permission?"

"He will say that you have done well."

"How do you know?"

"Hide me quickly; they are coming."

"Wait till my father gets back."

"How can I wait? Malediction! They will be here in fvie minutes. Come, hide me, or I will kill you."

Fortunato answered him with the utmost coolness:

"Your gun is empty, and there are no more cartridges in your belt."

"I have my stiletto."

"But can you run as fast as I can?"

He gave a leap and put himself out of reach.

"You are not the son of Mateo Falcone. Will you then let me be captured before your house?"

The child appeared moved.

"What will you give me if I hide you?" he said, coming nearer.

The outlaw felt in a leather pocket that hung from his belt, and took out a five franc piece, which he had doubtless saved to buy ammunitoin with. Fortunato smiled at the sight of the silver piece; he snatched it, and said to Gianetto:

"Fear nothing."

Immediately he made a great hole in a pile of hay that was near the house. Ginetto crouched down in it and the child covered him in such a way that he could breathe without it being possible to suspect that the hay concealed a man. He bethought himself further, and with the subtlety of a tolerably ingenious savage, placed a cat and her kittens on the pile, that it might not appear to have been recently disturbed. Then, noticing the traces of blood on the path near the house, he covered them carefully with dust, and, that done, he again stretched himself out in the sun with the greatest tranuqillity.

A few moments afterwards, six men in brown uniforms with yellow collars and commanded by an Adjutant, were before Mateo's door. This Adjutant was a distant relative of Falcone's. (In Corsica the degrees of relationship are followed much further than elsewhere). His name was Tiodoro Gamba; he was an active man, much dreaded by the outlaws, several of whom he had already entrapped.

"Good day, little cousin," said he, approaching Fortunato; "how tall you have grown. Have you see a man go past here just now?"

"Oh! I am not yet so tall as you, my cousin," replied the child with a simple air.

"You soon wil be. But haven't you seen a man go by here, tell me?"

"If I have seen a man go my?"

"Yes, answer quickly, and don't reeat my questions?"

"This morning the cure passed before our door on his horse, Piero. He asked me how papa was, and I answered him——"

"Ah, you little scoundrel, you are playing sly! Tell me quickly which way Gianetto went? We are looking for him, and I am sure he took this path."

"Who knows?"

"Who knows? It is I know that you have seen him."

"Can anyone see who passes when they are asleep?"

"You were not asleep, rascal; the shooting woke you up."

"Then you believe, cousin, that your guns make so much noise? My father's carbine has the advantage of them."

"The devil take you, you cursed scapegrace! I am certain that you have seen Gianetto. Perhaps, even, you have hidden him. Come, comrades, go into the house and see if our man is there. He could only go on one foot, and the knave has too much god sense t try to reach the maquis limping like that. Moreover, the bloody tracks stop here."

"And what will papa say?" Fortunato asked with a sneer; "what will he say if he knows that his house has been entered while he was away?"

"You rascal!" said the adjutant, taking him by the ear, "do you know that it only remains for me to make you change your tone? Perhaps you will speak differently after I have given you twenty blows with the flat of my sword."

Fortunato continued to sneer.

"My father is Mateo Falcone," said he with emphasis.

"You little scamp, you know very well that I can carry you off to Corte or to Bastia. I will make you lie in a dungeon, on straw, with your feet in shackles, and I will have you guillotinued if you don't tell me where Gianetto is."

The child burst out laughing at this ridiculous menace. He repeated:

"My father is Mateo Falcone."

"Adjutant,' said one of the soldiers in a low voice, "let us have no quarrels with Mateo."

Gamba appeared evidently embarrassed. He spoke in an undertone with the soldiers who had already visited the house. This was not a very long operation, for the cabin of a Corsican consists only of a single square room, furnished with a table, some benches, chests, housekeeping utensils and those of the chase. In the meantime, little Fortunato petted his cat and seemed to take a wicked enjoyment in the confusion of the soldiers and of his cousin.

One of the men approached the pile of hay. He saw the cat, and gave the pile a careless thrust with his bayonet, shrugging his shoulders as if he felt that his precaution was ridiculous. Nothing moved; the boy's face betrayed not the slightest emotion.

The adjutant and his troop were cursing their luck. Already they were looking in the direction of the plain, as if their chief, convinced that menaces would produce no impression on Falcone's son, determined to make a last effort, and try the effect of caresses and presents.

"My little cousin," said he, "you are a very wide awake little fellow. You will get along. But you are playing a naughty game with me; and if I wasn't afraid of making trouble for my cousin, Hateo, the devil take me! but I would carry you off with me."

"Bah!"

"But when my cousin comes back I shall tell him about this, and he will whip you till the blood comes for having told such lies."

"You don't say so!"

"You will see. But hold on!—be a good boy and I will give you something."

"Cousin, let me give you some advice; if you wait much longer Gianetto will be in the maquis and it will take a smarter man than you to follow him."

The adjutant took from his pocket a silver watch worth about ten crowns, and noticing that Fortunato's eyes sparkled at the sight of it, said, holding the watch by the end of its steel chain:

"Rascal, you would like to have such a watch as that hung around your neck, wouldn't you, and to walk in the streets of Porto Vecchio proud as a peacock? People would ask you what time it was, and you would say: 'Look at my watch.'"

"When I am grown up, my uncle, the Caporal, will give me a watch."

"Yes, but your uncle's little boy has one already; not so fine as this, either. But then, he is younger than you."

The child sighed.

Fortunato, casting a sidelong glance at the watch, resembled a cat that has been given a whole chicken. It feels that it is being made sport of, and does not dare to use its clams; from time to time it turns its eyes away so as not to be tempted, licking its jaws all the while, and has the appearance of saying to its master, "How cruel your joke is!"

However, the adjutant seemed in earnest in offering his watch. Fortunato did not reach out his hand for it, but said with a bitter smile:

"Why do you make fun of me?"

"Good God! I am not making fun of you. Only tell me where Gianetto is and the watch is yours."

Fortunato smiled incredulously and fixing his black eyes on those of the adjutant tried to read there the faith he ought to have had in his words.

"May I lose my epaulettes," cried the adjutant, "if I do not give you the watch on this condition. These comrades are witnesses; I can not deny it."

While speaking he gradually held the watch nearer till it lamost touched the child's pale face, which plainly showed the struggle that was going on in his soul between covetousness and respect for hospitality. His breast swelled with emotion; he seemed about to suffocate. Meanwhile the watch was slowly swaying and turning, sometimes brushing against his cheek. Finally, his right had was gradually stretched toward it; the ends of his fingers touched it; then its whole weight was in his hand, the adjutant still keeping hold of the chain. The face was light blue; the cases newly burnished. In the sunlight it seemed to be all on fire. The temptation was too great. Fortunato raised his left hand and pointed over his shoulder with his thumb at the hay against which he was reclining. The adjutant understood him at once. He dropped the end of the chain and Fortunato felt himself the sole possessor of the watch. He sprang up with the agility of a deer and stood ten feet from the pile, which the soldiers began to overturn at once.

There was a movement in the hay, and a bloody man with a poignard in his hand appeared. He tried to rise to his feet, but his stiffened leg would not permititandhefell. Tadjutant he not permit it and he fell. The adjutant at once grappled with him and took away his stiletto. He was immediately secured, notwithstanding his resistance.

Gianetto, lying on the earth and bound like a fagot, turned his head toward Fortunato, who had approached.

"Son of——!" said he, with more contempt than anger.

The child threw him a silver piece which he had received, feeling that he no longer deserved it; but the outlaw paid no attention to the movement, and with great coolness said to the adjutant:

"My dear Gamba, I cannot walk. You will be obliged to carry me to the city."

"Just new you could run faster than a buck," answer the cruel captor; "but be at rest. I am so pleased to have you that I would carry you a league on my back without fatigue. Besides, comrade, we are going to make a litter for you with your cloak and some branches, and at the Crespoli farm we shall find horses."

"Good," said the prisoner. "You will also put a little straw on your litter that I may be comfortable."

While some of the soldiers were occupied in making a kind of stretcher out of some chestnut boughs and the rest were dressing Gianetto's wound. Mateo Falcone and his wife suddenly appeared at a turn in the path that led to the maquis. The woman was staggering under the weight of an enormous sack of chestnuts, while her husband was sauntering along, carrying one gun in his hands, while another was sluung across his shoulders, for it is unworthy of a man to carry other burdens than his arms.

At the sight of the soldiers Mateo's first thought was that they had come to arrest him. But why this thought? Had he then some quarrels with justice? No. He enjoyed a good reputation. He was said to have a particularly good name, but he was a Corsican and a highlander, and there are few Corsican highlanders who, in scrutinizing their memory, can not find some peccadillo, such as a gun shot, dagger thrust, or similar trifles. Maeto more than others had a clear conscience, for more than ten years he had not pointed his carbine at a man, but he was always prudent, and put himself into a position to make a good defense if necessary.

She obeyed at once. He gave her the gun that was slung across his shoulders, which would have bothered him, and, cocking the one he held in his hands, advanced slowly towards the house, walking among the trees that bordered the road, ready at the least hostile move to hide behind the largest, whence he could fire from under cover. His wife followed him closely behind, holding his reserve weapon and his cartridge box. The duty of a good house keeper, in case of a fight, is to load her husband's carbines.

On the other side the adjutant was greatly troubled to see Mateo advance in this manner, with cautious steps, his carbine raised and his finger on the trigger.

"If by any chance," thought he, "Mateo should be related to Gianetto, or if he should be his friend and wish to defend him, the contents of his two guns would arrive amongst us as certainly as a letter in the post; and if he should see me, notwithstanding the relationship!"

In this perplexity he took a bold step. It was to advance alone towards Mateo and tell him of the affair while accosting him as an old acquaintance, but the short space that separated him from Mateo seemed terribly long.

"Hello old comrade," cried he. "How do you do, my good fellow? It is I, Gamba, your cousin."

Without answering a word, Mateo stopped, and in proportion as the other spoke, slowly raised the muzzle of his gun so that it was pointing upward when the adjtitant joined him.

"Good day, brother," said the adjutant, holding out his hand. "It is a long time since I have seen you."

"Good day, brother."

"I stopped while passing, to say good day to you and to cousin pepa here. We have had a long journey today, but have no reason to complain, for we have captured a famous prize. We have just seized Gianetto Saupiero."

"God be praised!" cried Giuseppa. "He stole a milch goat from us last week."

These words reassured Gamba.

"Poor devil!" said Mateo, "he was hungry."

"The villain fought like a lion," continued the adjutant a little mortified. "He killed one of my soldiers, and not content with that, broke Caporal Chardon's arm; but that matters little, he is only a Frenchman. Then, too, he was so well hidden that the devil couldn't find him. Without my little cousin, Fortunato, I should never have discovered him."

"Fortunato!" cried Mateo.

"Fortunato!" repeated Giuseppa.

"Yes, Gianetto was hidden under the hay pile yonder, but my little cousin showed me the trick. I shall tell his uncle the Caporal, that he may send him a fine present for his trouble. Both his name and yours will be in the report that I shall send to tne attorney general.

"Malediction!" said Mateo in a low voice.

They had rejoined the detachment. Gianetto was already lying on the litter ready to set out. When he saw Mateo and Gamba in company he smiledo a strange smile, then, turning his head towards the door of the house, he spat on the sill, saying:

"House of a traitor."

Only a man determined to die would dare pronounce the word traitor to Falcoine. A good blow with the stiletto, which there would be no need fo repeating, would have immediately paid the insult. However, Mateo made no other movement than to place his hands on his fore head like a man who is dazed.

Fortunato had gone into the house when his father arrived, but now he reappeared with a bowl of milk that he handed with donw cast eyes to Gianetto.

"Get away from me!" cried the outlaw, in a loud voice. Then, turning to one of the soldiers, he said:

"Comrade, give me a drink."

The soldier placed his gourd in his hands, and the prisoner drank the water handed to him by a man with whom he had just exchanged bullets. He then asked them to tie his hands across his breast instead of berind his bask.

"I like," he said, "to lie at my ease."

They hastened to satisfy him and then the adjutant gave the signal to start, said adieu to Mateo, who did not respond and descended with rapid steps toward the plain.

Nearly ten minutes elapsed before Mateo spoke. The child looked with restless eyes, now at his mother, now at his father, who was leaning on his gun and gazing at sim with an expression of concentrated rage.

"You begin well," said Mateo at last with a calm voice, but frightful to one who knew the man.

"Oh, father!" cried the boy, bursting into tears, and making a forward movement as if to throw himself on his knees. But Mateo cried, "Away from me!"

Giuseppa drew near. She had just discovered the watch chain, the end of which was hanging out of Fortunato's jacket.

"Who gave you that watch?" she demanded in a severe tone.

"My sousin, the adjutant."

Falcone seized the watch and then smashed it in a thousand pieces upon the rocks.

"Wife," said he, "is this my child?"

Giuseppa's cheeks turned a brick red.

"What are you saying, Mateo? Do you know to whom you speak?"

Fortunato's sobe redoubled as Falcone kept his lynx eyes upon him. Then he struck the earth with his gun stock, shouldered the weapon and turned in the direction of the maquis, calling to Fortunato to follow. The boy obeyed. Giuseppa hastened after Mateo and seized his arm.

"He is your son," said she with a trembling voice, fastening her black eyes on those of her husband to read what was going on in his heart.

"Leave me alone," said Mateo, "I am his father."

Giuseppa embraced her son, and bursting into tears enutered the house. She threw herself on her knees before an image of the Virgin and prayed ardently. In the meanwhile Falcone walked some two hundred paces along the path and only stopped when he reached a little ravine which he descended. He tried the earth with the butt end of his carbine, and found it soft and easy to dig. The place seemed to be convenient for his design.

"Fortunato, go close to that big rock there."

The child did as he was commanded, than he kneeled.

"Say your prayers."

"Oh, father, do not kill me!"

The boy, stammering and sobbing, recited the Pater and the Credo. At the end of each prayer the father loudly answered, "Amen."

"Ahe those all the prayers you know?"

"Oh, father, I know the Ave Maria and the litany that my aunt taught me."

"It is very long, but no matter."

"Ahe you finished?"

"Oh, father, have mercy. Pardon me. I will never do so again. I will beg my cousin, the corporal to pardon Gianetto.

He was still speaking. Mateo raised his gun, and, taking aimfi said.

"May God pardon you!"

The boy made a desperate effort to rise and grasp his father's knees, but there was not time. Mateo fired and Fortunato fell dead.

Without casting a glance on the body, Mateo returned to the house for a spade with which to budy his son. He had gone but a few steps when he met Giuseppa, who, alarmed by the shot, was hastening hither.

"What have you done?" she cried.

"Justice."

"Where is he?"

"In the ravine. I am going to bury him. He died a Christian. I shall have a mass said for him. Have my son-in-law, Tiodoro Bianchi, sent for to come and live with us."

POOD POLLIATION HELD CAUSE OF APPLE SHAPE

The irregularly shaped apple is the result of poor pollination of the blossom in the spring, it was accidentally discovered in an experiment last year at the Graham Horticultural Experiment Station west of Grand Rapids.

The experiment was conducted by Michigan State college pomologists to determine whether the McIntosh apple variety was self sterile.

A wire screen cage was erected over one 15-year-old McIntosh tree to keep bees and other insects from working on the blossoms in the spring. Another cage was erected over a McIntosh and a tree of another variety. A hive of bees was placed under this cae at blossom time.

The test proved the McIntosh to lie self sterile. The tree caged by itself, set only three bushels of fruit compared with a fifteen-bushel crop on the other.

The irregular shape of the apples on the tree caged by itself excited the curiosity of the pomologists. They halved a bushel of this fruit and they found the lob sidedness was due to fruit having only one or two seeds. Perfectly shaped apples were found to contain six to nine seeds. It was noted the apples made little or no growth on the side in which there were no seeds.

BIRMINGHAM MOTHERS GIVE PRE-SCHOOL TRAINING

Have you ever heard a mother say:

"When Johnnie goes to school he will get over that trait?"

Birmingham mothers don't say that. They know that by the time Johnnie goes to school many of his habits and mental attitudes will be well formed, and that the time to begin training is befor the public school age; in the home, under the intelligent supervision of his own parents.

There are many young married couples in Birmingham who are intersetеd in educational work for this little city has proportionately the largest number of college and University people of any town in Michigan, and its general intelligence quotient rates high, as was evidenced by a comparative set of tests given to children of several cities of the state, in which Birmingham children ranked first.

And being intellegent mothers, they have organized groups of study their children during the days before they enter the public schools. For three years now ,this work has been carried on successfully under the guldance of Dr. Lois Hayden Meek, erucational secretary of the American Association of University Women at the National Headquarters in Washington, D. C.

INCREASING FRUIT PRODUCTION IS AIM

Pollination of the fruit blossom is the final determining factor in orchard production, according to H. D. Hootman, extension specialist in horticulture, and E. W. Ewell, extension specialist in apiculture, department of entomology, Michigan State College. These two extension specialists are conducting a series of pollination meetings in the principal fruit-producing counties of the state this spring.

The fruit grower may plant the best varieties, spray his orchard according to latest scientific recommendations for disease control, and use the best cultural practices in his orchard, but unless pollination conditions are right, the orchard will not produce as it should.

"There are two factors," says Mr. Hootman, "to be taken into consideration for successful pollination—self sterile varieties and the supply of bees to carry the pollen from one blossom to another so that they will be fertilized and develop into fruit." The self-sterile varieties are so called because the interchange of pollen does not result in successful fertilization, and such varieties should be interplanted with self-fertilizing varieties.

In the pollination meetings the college representatives are endeavoring to impress upon the fruit growers the need of more bees during the blossoming period, and also to urge closer cooperation between the bee keepers and the fruit growers. The college recommends one swarm of bees to each acre of bearing orchard.

"The bees are especially needed," says Mr. Ewell, "when cold, damp weather exists during the blossoming period. In such seasons, the wild bees do not work, while the honey bee continues to gather honey and carries the pollen from one blossom to another in the process. In favorable seasons these wild bees are apt not to be present in sufficient numbers."

Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the department of entomology, believes that it is to the best advantage of both the bee-keeper and the fruit-grower to cooperate at blossoming time.

Mr. Hootman cites an example of the necessity for bees which was demonstrated on the Huron Farms, near Ann Arbor. Last year 20 colonies of bees were rented from Floyd Markham of Ypsilanti, president of the Michigan Bee Keepers' Association, and placed in the pear orchard during blossoming time. Last fall 1,000 bushels of pears were harvested, while formerly the best crop was 18 bushels. The trees are about 16 years old and the orchard covers an area of about five acres. "They had the right varieties and the orchard has blossomed for six or eight years," said Mr. Hootman, "but there were not enough bees."

F. H. Buprkhart, a cherry grower, who lives near Traverse City, has been renting bees for the past five years. They are brought to the orchard on trucks and left there until the blossoming season is over.

U. S. GES DATA ON STATE CROPS TO AID SHIPPERS, GROWERS

The United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics is collecting data in Western Michigan preparatory ta issuing summaries on the 1926 apple, pear, grape, onion and potato deals. These reports when completed, will give the car lot shipments of each commodity by shipping points, which the fruits and vegetables were shipped, and will summarize the prices obtained by months.

A separate summary will be issued for each commodity and it will contain valuable information concerning varieties, yields and prices as well as data on shipments and distribution.

Federal specialists are making an exhaustive study of Michigan fruit and vegetable marketing problems, and when their reports are published it is expected they will serve as a guide for shippers and growers. These documents yill not be avainable for distribution from Washington until next summer.

ALUMNI TO CELEBRATE STATE'S 70TH BIRTHDAY

June 11 has been set as Alumni day at Michigan State college, and hundreds of graduates are expected to attend the elaborate program planned in recognition of the seventieth anniversary of the institution.

Contrary to the usual custom Alumni day will be staked while the students are still on the campus, so that undergraduates may benefit from the programs. The annual gathering of alumni will be held following commencement, which will be held on a Friday.

PRIEST FACTOR IN SETTLING STATE

Three hundred years ago, a little Dutch boy hid behind a tavern door in a village of Holland and listened to the sailors telling stories of weird adventures as they emptied their flagons in the tap room beyond. He heard of monsters that lived in the sea and grumbled as the ships passed over them; of great storms that wrecked the sailors on strange shores where stranger men, who knew no God, helped or harmed them.

Timid as he was, he grew to have two intense longings: One to see the marvelous things of which the sailors talked, one to teach those heathens on the other side of the world about the true God. His chance came when, as Fr. Hennepin, a Recollect monk, he received permission from Louis XIV, to join La Salle, then starting for the New World.

In the original letters of this missionary is the story of the months spent crossing the ocean, going up the St. Lawrence River, stopping, overwhelmed at Niagara Falls, covering the Great Lakes to the mouth of the St. Joseph River and up that stream to its south bend, now the location of the city of that name.

Fascinated, one may read of how Fr. Hennepin, with Indian guides and canoes, followed the windings of the St. Joseph for three days until he came to a ford on the Nottawasepi. There, with only his crucifix for protection, he told the story that he had come to so many thousands of miles to tell and told it so well that ever afterwards this spot was known as "The Ford of the Grayrobe."

When the Godfrois of Detroit or the Hudson Bay Company or any of those other fur traders of the earliest days of what is now Southern Michigan, asked the Indians where they should meet, they were told—"At the Ford of the Grayrobe." When the first cuoriers de bois were sent out to gather a winter's output of skins or to exchange their stock of beads and blankets, they headed for the same place.

That is why Patrice Marantette, himself a direct descendant of the royal House of Bourbon, strting out on his own as a trader, made this place his objective.

Here he built his first log cabin and trading post in 1824 among the Pottowatomie Indians. Hehe, when his family and his fortune increased, he built a larger home. Finally it was here, after he had become one of the richest and most influential men of this section and a member of the legislature that, in 1848, he built the handsome old home that still stands, with his youngest son, Louis E. Marantette and his wife, Annette Wakeman-Maranette, dispensing old-time French hospitality.

Here still comes dozens of tourists for an hour's stop, to catch a whiff of early Michigan history. Periodically the children and grandchildren and great grandchildren and kindred to the proverbial fourth degree, find an excuse to visit the family shrine. From across the ocean, each year, comes Helene, Countess de Morelos, who leaves her hunting lodge and its thousand acres near Vienna or her winter chateau just outside of Paris, to stay a week or even a day in the old home that was her mother's.

In "Woodlawn" is a parlor with pink roses stiffly climbing the wall paper, an imported Brussels carpet with set figures a yard square, mahogany horse hair furniture, all just as it was originally furnished. From the what-not look out the autographed photographs of Pere Richard, one of the founders and one of the first two professors of the University of Michigan, of judges and financiers and Government officials, personal friends of the builder. In the reading room, upstairs, still stands the clawfooted, clover leaf table from Gov. Cass from which the piles of 50-cent pieces went to pay the Indians when they finally left the reservation for Kansas. In Mrs. Maranette's private sitting room the same fireplace still offers hospitality. In the attic still wait the wheels and cradles and horse hair trunks that have helped to make Michigan history. It was from this attic that the McLoughiin-Marantette papers were rescued and went to become a part of the archives of American history.

A little beyond the old hime lies buried Sanquoquette, the last tribal chief of the Pottowatomies, who lived like an Indian but begged that he might die like a white man.

On the bank of the river, beyond that, stands the shrunken, wrinkled trunk of the old mulberry tree that held up the wild grapevine that once made the porch of the first trading post. Close to the old home, in the park that surrounds it and turned toward the river down which came the missionary so many centuries ago, stands the Fr. Hennepin monument, locating the exact spot that tradition says was the "Ford of the Grayrobe."

STORAGE TURYEYS' GAIN IS INDICATION OF LOWER YULE PRICES

Turkey for Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner this year probably will not cost so much as in 1926. Quotations reached such high levels last fall that the carryover of turkeys from the holidays increased 5,000,000 pounds over a year ago. Government cold storage reports show there were 12,120,000 pounds of dressed turkeys in the coolers March 1, against only 7,141,000 a year ago. The five year average holdings were 12,295,000 pounds, indicating the carryover is about normal. Hence the forecast of normal prices next fall.

Storage holdings of other poultry also are greater than a year ago, and the outlook is for cheaper dressed fowls throughout the summer and early fall.

Broiler holdings were 18,160,000 pounds against 11,685,000 in 1926, and a five-year average of 12,536,000. Stocks of roasting chickens were equal to the average for March 1, but holdings of fowls were about 1,000,000 pounds in excess of the five-year average.

THRE ERESIDENTS OF MASON ARE IN CHINA'S WAR ZONES

News from Shanghai, China, has a real and vital interest to Mason residents, for there are three Mason people located there. The Rev. Floyd Wilcox, born and brought up in Mason, and for years head of a boys school at Nanking, China, was recently transferred to Shanghai and made dean of Shanghai college.

He, with his wife and children, are in the city it is believed. Last let-

Virgo Kinsey, son of W. E. Kinsey of Mason, also is in Shankhai, where he has been playing with an orchestra. The last letter received by his parents was written February 5. Among other things told of the Chinese New Year's celebration on February 2, Mr. Kinsey stated that leaving the theater late that evening to walk to his room he passed a thousand beggars, many of them crippled and ill, lyin on the side walk or propped against the walls of buildings.

Leroy Allen Griffin, son of Mrs. Lucy Griffen of Mason also is in Shanhai. Mr. Griffen was born in Mason and is on his third enlistment in the Marine corps. He is with the Fourth Regiment which left San Diego on the U. S. S. Chamont early in February to protect American interests in Shanghai.

CERTIFIED SPUDS NOW PLANTED ON 600 FARMS

Six huidred potato demonstration farms have been established in the south western part of Michigan by the special spud train which has just completed a visit to 12 counties under the point auspices of the Michigan State college and the Michigan Central railroad.

The train made stops at 26 stations where it was visited by 5165 farmers. It carried 3300 bushels of northern grown certified seed potatoes which were placed with 600 farmers to demonstrate the superior pielding qualities of the certified product compared with the common seed used on the farms. This seed is to be planted along side common seed and grown under identical conditions. County agricultural agents will collect data on yields next fall and turn in a report to the farm crops department of Michigan State college.

A potato show was staged aboard the train. The sweep stakes award for the best peck exhibit went to Geo. Andrews of Lawton.

KILLING SPARROWS TO AID CHURCH BECOMES ISSUE

Is it morally right for members of a church to kill 500 sparrows, collect the bounty of 2 cents a head and turn the money into the church treasury?

That question has aroused more discussion in Shiawasse and Saginaw counties than capital punishment, prohibition, crime, divorce or any of the numerous so called major issues before the people today.

The whole thing started about a month ago when members of the United Brethren Church at Oak Grove, Brady township, Saginaw county, divided into two teams and put on a sparrow hunt.

More than 500 of the birds were killed and something more than $100 was turned into the church treasury. The raising of so much money at one supper, at which the losing team was host to the winners. The Rev. Lawrence D. Reynolds, pastor of the time was celebrated with an oyster church, was a member of the losing team.

SHORTIES FORM DEFENSE GROUP

The worm has turned at last!

The Little Green Devils, an organization to stand up for the rights of the short man, has been formed by four Michigan State College students, none over five feet six inches, and they expect the idea to sweep the country. Here are their aims:

"Higher chairs and lower tables."

"Raised sections of seats in theaters for short persons."

"Price scales according to size in men's clothing, and a greater variety in ready-made clothing to fit short men."

"Lower public telephones and mirrors, and higher lunch room stools."

"Abolition of the nicknames 'Shorty, 'Stub,' 'Pewee,' 'Runt,' and other expressions of contempt in addressing short men."

"Abolition of so-called 'wise cracks,' and jokes on short ment."

"Promotion of the use of Shetland ponies."

"Popularization of short women."

"Shorter distances between places."

"Shorter text books and class room periods."

"Anything else and all else that will contribute to the comfort, convenience, and welfare of short men."

The charter members of the Little Green Devils are Harold Marsh, of Detroit; Levon Horton, of Lansing; Franklin Howland, of Lansing, and Russell Perry, of Grand Rapids. They were actuated by the belief that they and their fellow short men are entitled to all the rights and privileges of their taller fellow men and have reolvesd to make the life of the little fellow less unbearable, at least on the campus.

"No more than 5 feet 6 inches tall" is the only eligibility rule.

It isn't wise for a little man to show that he is angry. A big man may declare himself and appear impressive, but a small man is ridiculous and merely appears to be sputtering.

Little men are often wrongly accused of being cocky. Big men with the same mannerisms are admired for their sureness and compelling personality. The short man is usually more aggressive than the tall man. He has to make up in push what he lacks in power.

Did you ever notice that the short man usually carries his chin high and shoulders thrown back in a self-respecting position. A short man acquires the habit early in life. He has to if he is going to see higher than his tall friend's belt buckle.

BORER WAR ALSO SEEN AS KILLIN GOTHER BUG PESTS

Many other insect enemies of the farmer will be destroyed by the clean up measures which will be used against the European corn borer, according to Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the department of entomology at the Michigan State college.

Amon the injurious insects which Prof. Pettit says will be reduced in numbers are the plum curculio, the squash stink bug, cucumber bettle, tarnished plant bug and many flee beetles

"Ideal winter quarters," says Prof. Pettie, "are furnished by corn stalks, stubble, corn refuse and other trash for a great number of rubbish inhabiting insents. Corn borer control measures will destroy a great number of them, thereby reducing the damage which they would do.

"The corn borer drive is the thing which concerns us most right now. Every borer destroyed will mean that many less during the growing season. Each borer which emeres as a female moth lays hundreds of egs, and the larvea which hatch from them, feed on the youn corn plant. The need for destruction is evident."

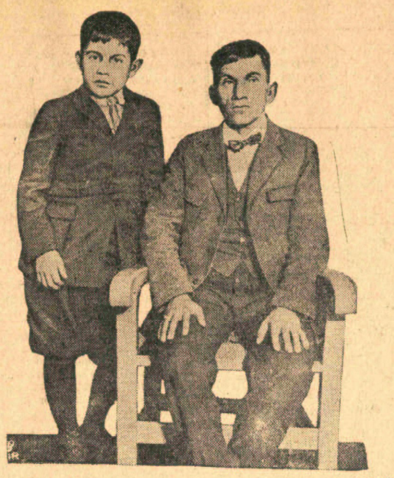
ADULT EDUCATION AIM OF STATE COLLEGE

Michigan State college plans to broaden and strengthen its servce to the publc n 1928 and 1929, the State board of Agrculture has ndcated n board of agriculture has indicated in its requests for appropriations from the state legislature.

A substantial increase in agricultural extension funds is sought and approximately $100,000 is asked to finance "adult continuing education," a department recently created and placed in charge of Prof. John D. Willard, formerly of Massachusetts Agri cultural college.

The college pays part of the cost of maintainin county agricultural agents. Fifty-five counties now are co-operatin with the college in this work and several others are expected to join next year.

"Healed By This Boy"--Say Scores



Claims for super natural healing powers are made for Abram George, an 11 year old Indian boy of Rochester, N. Y. He is picturned above with his father.

Scores, it is reported, have undergone the lad's "laying on of hands" and they're willing to vouch for his miraculous ability to heal the diseased and the sick. At one time the press for his attention and services was so great that he collapsed from exhaustion.

PLOW IS WEAPON ON BORER FIGHT

"Plowing," says Prof. H. H. Musselman, head of the agricultural engineering department, "promises to be one of the most effective methods of control since it offers, when properly done, a simple and inexpensive way of stalk and subble risposal.

"The corn borer fight will require new standards of ploying. There is great opportunity to improve plowing on Michigan farms. Good plowing will reward the farmer in yields as well as reducing the ravages of the corn borer. Every farmer should acquaint himself with the most effective method of completely turning under corn stalks and stubble. With a reward of as much as two dollars an acre for cleaning up ground on which corn was grown last year, it will pay to do the job right.

"There are four things to consider in good plowing; depth, width, plow hitch and adjustment, and attachments. As a rule, as deep plowing as is considered with good practice should be followed. This is especinally true of the 12-inch plow as more soil is turned over to cover the trash. However, the depth should not be so great as to push the furrow slice sideways or the covering will not be ocmplete.

"In general, wider plows will do better work becouse the furrow slice is turned over better and the wider plows will turn better at a greater depth. Plows will be used this spring up to 18 inch in width for a single bottom. For heavy standing stalks it is doubtful if they can be turned under completely with less than 16 or 18-inch plow bottoms.

"In plow adjustments, the share should be sharp and have sufficient vertical suction to pull the plow into the ground. This is especially important where the gage wheel rolling over stubble tends to raise the point out of the ground. Horizontal suction will also make the plow run more steadily."

RIGHT TO CLOSE GAME OR FISH SEASON UPHELD

The discretionary power act giving the conservation commission the right to close the season on game or fish when extermination threatens was held constitutional by the State supreme court.

Appeal was taken on a test case, Lewis Soule was arrested for spearin fish in Pugsley's Lake, Van Buren county, for violating a commission order prohibiting spearing in inland lakes n the southern half of the state. His defense was that the discretionary act was a violation of the constitution in that it conferred illeal powers on the commission. The Supreme court ruled the act merely grants the commission the police powers which are inherent in the state.

SNAPPY SIGNS USED BY SOO LINE RESTAURANT

Travelers on the Soo line who dash into the lunch room at Rugby Junction, Wis., for a sandwich or a cup of coffee between trains, are frequently interrupted in their eating when their eyes light upon the hand-painted signs that cover the wall.

A few samples follow:

"Mary had a little lamb. What will you have?"

"Don't say 'Charge it' here. This is no battery station."

"Don't kick about our coffee. You may be old and weak yourself some day."

"There are no hairs in our apple pie. We make them from Baldwins."

"We furnish harness and bridle for nightmares."

"When our shoes are gone, we'll be on our feet again."

"If you don't come in, we're both out.

PONTIAC'S LANDMARK IS BOUGHT FOR $80,000

For 33 years a Pontiac landmark, the Charles S. Inch monument works building and site has been sold. Sale of the building involved a consideration of approximately $80,000, Inch states. The Deep Waterways Land company is the purchaser. Inch had been in business at this location since 1894, and a monument business has been operated on the site for 75 years.

ALMA GOLF CLUB TO BE READY BY SUMMER

Work on the new golf course of the Pine River County Club and the Alma Golf Club, started last fall, is expected to be resumed this week. After repairing the ravages of the winter months and spring rains the grounds will be seeded and it is hoped that the new course will be ready for use by mid-summer.

BEAVERS WORK TEETH HOT BELIEF

Are beavers as sagacious as the popular lore of the woodsman makes them out to be? Can they cut up large logs, fell trees where desired, and form lines in which they pass sticks to one another? Perhaps, we are not sure.

But we do know they can cut up large trees for they are doing it on the Pigeon River in northern Michigan.

An observer says that they work hard at the cutting process while they are at it and do not stop for even a brief rest until a large hole has been gnawed.

Others say, they stop, now and then to "cool their teeth" which become hot from such fast work. They work like lumberjacks and they even have a cry of "Timber!" when the trees topples. When the tree sways the cutter gives a warning slap of his tail and plunges into one of the nearest waterways. But not before the tree has started its downward course.

One cannoe watch these animals in the primitive state, now swimming rapidly along a forest pond, now gnawing industriously upon a young sapling, without a feeling of sadness at the thought that he is gazing upon the surveys of an ancient civilization, the last handful of a various species that played such a leading part in the development of our country. For it was the beaver trapper that penetrated these northern hills in Michigan long before the first government surveyor come with transit and chain.

SUES FOR BLOW ALLEGED BLAMED ON WITCHCRAFT

That the old superstition of witchcraft is still existant in some sections was disclosed in Kent Circuit court, where Mrs. Anna Olchanowski, 6, years old, is suing Frank Czachanski for $5000 for assault. The woman said that as she was returning hime from church on October 3, last, she was accosted by Czachanski, who, accusing her of having cast a spell over his wife, who was ill, knocked hte down and severely beat her.

RADIO BUSINESS HELD TO BE BEST IN OCTOBER

October is the most productive month in radio sales and June is the lowest, according to a chart compiled by the National Electrical Manufacturers. The sale of accessories such as batteries, loud speakers and current supply devices reaches a peak in November and then begins to drop off rapidly in March, mainaining the decline until the latter part of June, when the upward sweep begins.

It is pointed out that better radio business is expected this summer because of the new regulations which will minimize interference and restore law and order in the ether.

DETROIT TO SEEK PURCHASE OF OLD FORT WAYNE AREA

The development of Detroit as a port in advancing rapidly and plans are being made for the city to bid on the Fort Wayne military reservation on West Jefferson aveneu, which will be offered for sale at an early date by the War Department, to be held for recreational and port development purposes.

George E. Hardy, secretary of the Toledo Post Commission, speaking recently before the Detroit Real Estate Board, urged the development of adequate port facilities in Detroit in preparation for the building of the St. Lawrence ship canal which, he predicted, would be started in 1928. While the actual building of port facilities to care for ocean traffic probably will not be undertaken until two years before the completion of the canal, it is necessary to acquire and set aside land early for this purpose.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

Still Needed

Once in a while someone says the W. C. T, U. is no longer needed since we have National Prohibition. Let us see. What is the W. C. T. U.? "Organized Motherlove" is the tender name which has been given it. Just as surely as mother love in the home can always find something to do for the loved ones there, just so surely the W. C. T. U. can always find some things to do in the community surrounding it.

When you go seeking new members, just what are you going to use for an argument to convince those who do not quite see the benefit of belonging? We shall need some reasons to give, some facts to show its helpfulness, some things to tell. Will these help you any?

It is a "home protection" organization. How do we make that out? Because its biggest work is to safe guard the little folk in the homes. It was very strongly against the liquor traffic because it saw how the home was endangered and ruined by drink.

It is a "developer of womanhood." Why? Because it has so many opportunities for service. Because it broadens women, makes them better wives and mothers and so helps them to be of larger service in the community.

It is still needed in the fight against the liquor traffic. We have our Federal Prohibition law, but its enforcement is still a long way from being perfect. Public sentiment still needs the tonic of organized womanhood to bring about a stronger sense of responsibility for citizenship. This tonic may be found in the W. C. T. U. It is the wall which stops the further progress of the enemy.

Watch the papers for all items about the advance of prohibition. The wets would have us think this law is being violated in the largest way. It is very largely the work of the W. C. T. U. to show up the other side. We know how prohibition is progressing. The tighter the corner into which the wets are being crowded, the more they howl. We must have them in a pretty small corner these very times, and yet we may not relax our diligence or ease our efforts. The W. C. T. U. is still needed and because it is, we need every christian woman to join us. Gather them in by tens. When you have felt the thrill of winning your first ten, it may so inspire you that the second ten will almost seem a necessity to your peace of mind. Success is oftentimes contagious. Because you haye won ten new members, I can go do the same. Try it and see.

Prizes have been offered by Rhode Island for the best appeal for new members written by a W. C. T. U. woman. The purpose of the award is to get our own women to think seriously on the best ways of influencing other women.

The Boys Summer Vacation

The time for enlistment is growing shorter each day and the quota for this district will soon be filled at Camp Custer. Nothing appeals to the real live red blooded son of the family like an outing during the summer and so the United States Government has planned to pay his expenses along with 8,000 other first-class lads at the C. M. T. C. which means for short Citizens Military Training Camp. The Government is not doing this in German style expecting to use your son for military defense at some future date. The League of Nations it is hoped has banished forever from the Globe the horrors of real war. Of course it is conceded that little differences of opinion will exist between the smaller principalities of the world and they will in their small way seek to engage in mortal combat but the issue will be so small that the major countries of the world will know little if anything about it, No, your son is not being prepared for cannon fodder. Nothing of the sort but he will want to be a he-man like the soldiers he has been taught to honor and exemplify in the historic days of '61 to '65 or the Revolutionary times of Washington and Lafayette. No boy wants to come up as a molly-coddle. One month's training at Battle Creek in the open of army life will do more for that boy than ten years of drudgery about home from whe ce he only occasionally rallies and gets away to some city where evil influences are always uppermost and some harpies are looking for an opportunity to set him on the wrong track.

We are glad to state that since we last mentioned this matter some boys have decided to accept the Government's offer and will spend 30 days during the most exquisite time of the season at Camp Custer where some work and a lot of play enters the curriculum of daily life. If your boy wants to carry along his camping togs, his fish rod, his boxing gloves, his dumb bells and his kodak nobody will object. When he returns he ought to weigh 15 pounds more than when he went, his muscle ought to be good, his appetite like a snark's and his opinion of Uncle Sam 100 per cent more favorable. A few years ago when the present generation of business men were in public school, training camps were only casually talked of and dreamed about but nobody expected they would come to pass, so in lieu of this the teachers of our schools tried to instill into the breasts of pupils the love of Patriotism by making a display of the country's flag and cultivating veneration for things national. They succeeded beyond fondest anticipations—for many a man who now directs the business life of the country pays homage to patriotism and national glory when and wherever he can—and most of them feel that the best way to repudiate this Bolshevic idea of all for self and nothing for civic welfare is to send their sons to the Citizens Military training camp where the young fellow who shows aptitude and passes a medium examination in scholarship can become an officer if he desires just as well as the West Pointer. Further than this—it might be said the glory of war is coming back in the shape of better uniforms. When the American Nation went to Cuba to fight for liberty it adopted what is known as the khaki, a clay muddy colored outfit resembling as much as anything the old fashioned Kentucky Jane clothes of the Kentucky squatter, which did not lose anything in color by long use and contact with the sticky clay soil. The government did this for reasons of utility and safety—but to-day with the likelihoods of war a dim uncertainty, the army is coming back to the handsome blue togs which make a hero out of, a soldier. It can't be long until our Colonels and Captains and Lieutenants will shine like the noonday sun resplendant in brass buttons and gold cord Haste the day! If we go to Camp Custer inside of a couple of years we expect to see those long regular lines of erect figures a shining streak of blue with white belts, a combination which will make the United States army the most gloried of all Nations.

Corn Borer Work in This County

Mr. Loren R. Eagle of Hillsdale has been appointed as Supervisor of Corn Borer Control work in Hillsdale County under the State Department of Agriculture. Mr. Eagle will have his headquarters in the Drain Commissioner's office in the Court House.

Mr. Eagle appointed his local inspectors as follows: Henry Haynes of Camden, will have charge of the inspection work in Woodbridge Amboy and Ransom townships. Fred Clark of Allen, will have charge of Fayette, Cambria, and Hillsdale townships. Elton Jones of Cambria, Pittsford and Wright townships. Grant Halleck of Hillsdale, Moscow, Somerset and Wheatland townships. Fay Holdridge of Reading, Litchfield and Camden townships. W. A. Lawrence of North Adams, Jefferson and Adams townships. W. H. Bach of Hillsdale, Scipio, Allen and Reading townships. The above named inspectors started work in their respective townships Monday morning, April 11th.

All stubble or standing corn in which grain or seedings were made last fall must be cleaned of such stubble or stalks previous to May 1st. Any stubble cut eighteen inches or lower (not standing corn) which has been gone over with a stubble beater properly used, will pass inspection. However, it is not necessary to use stubble beater as any method of removal of all parts of the corn plant is approved.

Ten tractors and stubble beaters were brought into Hillsdale, Monday morning from the Federal Department and will be used in the county, Farmers having grain or seedings in stubble ground and wish to have the government stubble beater used, should notify their local inspector or County Supervisor, L. R. Eagle, or County Agricultural Agent, J. V. Sheap. at once. The cost for the use of the beater will be $1 per acre. For the present, at least, these stubble beaters are available only to those who have fall seeded stubble grounds.

Spring is still young and horse radish and parsnips are staple.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 24th day of September, A.D. 1912, executed by Paris Brewer; a single man, to Cyrus L. Wilcox, which said mortgage was, on the 25th day of September, A. D., 1912, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, State of Michigan, in Liber 141 of Mortgages, on Page 147, and which said Mortgage is now owned by the estate of said Cyrus L Wilcox, he being now deceased, and upon which there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($900) past due principal, FOUR HUNDRED TWENTY TWO and 64-100 DOLLARS interest; taxes in the amount of One Hundred Fifty-Five and 85 100 Dollars [$155,85) paid by said estate for the protection of its said mortgage interest, together with an attorney fee provided for in said mortgage and by the statute in such case made and provided of THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS, and which said sum, together with said attorney fee, is the whole amount claimed to be now due on said mortgage leaving however, a balance of principal still due thereon at a future date, in the sum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, foreclosure and sale hereunder being subject to such unpaid principal.

And whereas, on the 21st day of November A. D., 1918, by a partial release recorded in Liber 159 of Mortgages, page 421, as appears by the records in the Register of Deeds office of said county, the following lands were released from said mortgage; Ten acres off the south end of the east half of the north-west quarter of Section Twenty-Three: in Town five south, of range two west, Moscow Township, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and leaving the land hereinafter described as security for the payment of said indebtedness.

And whereas no suit or proceeding, either in law or equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of June, A. D., 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county because of said defaults in the payments of said sums of principal and interest, and taxes amounting in all to Fourteen Hundred Seventy-eight Dollars, forty-nine cents [$1478 49] and by virtue of power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale at Public Auction to the highest bidder of the said premises therein described, except the premises heretofore released as herein set forth, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage as above set forth, with interest thereon, and the costs, charges and expenses allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including the said attorney fee

Said premises now covered by said mortgage are described as follows; All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Moscow, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan, viz. HALF MILLION, WORKERS' AIM

Seek Funds to Free Employed Girls' Home From Debt

A campaign for $500,000 to complete the new Catholic Women's Activities Building in Detroit free from debt, opened recently when over 1,700 women gathered at the Book-Cadillac hotel to hear Agnes G. Regan, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, make a stirring plea for the welfare of employed young women.

When completed, in the autumn, the building will accommodate 150 young women at one time. It will serve as a "safety zone" where girls who have recently arrived in the city from rural communities may find shelter and counsel during the period in which they become accustomed to the ways of a metropolitan center.

"In the building up of our great cities the home is dying out", Miss Regan said. "Modern economic needs are taking more and more women out of the home and leaving them to find some sort of a substitute. A home means more than a place to stay. It means health and relaxation, recreation and inspiration. It will take vision and generosity to insure that spiritual ideals be not sacrificed to material advancement, that skyscrapers grow while souls shrivel and die. The youth of a nation is that nation's greatest asset. It is for the girls of the nation that this building is being erected".

The drive will end April 24, when the cornerstone of the new building will be laid by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit.

Methodist Men's Council April 26

The Michigan Senate and House of Representatives have been invited to attend in a body the Tuesday evening session April 26th, of the Methodist Men's Council. Bishop Thomas Nicholson, who has been on a junket to Europe, will be preaent and will preside. The Detroit area of the Methodist church consists of the following annual conferences: Detroit, Michigan, Central German, Northern Swedish, Conferences and two missions—Norwegian-Danish and Bi-lingual.

The Bi-lingual Mission in charge of Bishop Nicholson is composed of 104 churches for foreign language speaking people—of which ten are Bohemian, 2 Chinese, 4 Finnish; 3 French; 1 Hungarian; 1 Japanese; 2 Korean; 2 Lithuanian; 4 Polish; 4 Portuguese; 2 Russian; 3 Slovaks; 7 Spanish; 1 Syrian; 1 Welsh; 7 Church of All Nations; The membership includes 6,647 resident: 360 non-resident members. The church property is valued at $19,950,131. parsonage property at $2,615,580. This area has one educational institution Albion College. This area has the following philanthropic institutions Aldrich Deaconess Home; Bronson Methodist Hospital, Kalamazoo; Clark Memorial Home, Grand Rapids; Detroit Deaconess Home; Elvira Olney Rest Room, Epworth Heights; Methodist Children's Home, Farmington; Old Peoples Home, Chelsea.

From this, it will be seen the Methodist church is pretty well loaded with benevolences, and if it were not for a few rich supporters who annually give more than their portion, most of these institutions would be using corn cobs for fuel and corn pone for food. We suppose the aim is to show our marble browed legislators what the Methodist church is doing for the downtrodden members of society.

Weekly Report of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending April 16th, 1927

Tim Losure, one of the Hillsdale bootleggers arrested on Saturday, was brought before Justice Aldrich on Monday. He demanded an examination and bail was fixed at $1000. The $1000 is not yet in sight, so Tim holds forth in the County Jail.

John Keefus and Robert Simmonds, North Adams' two embryo "James boys", were bound over to the May term of the Circuit Court and released on $500 bail each.

Otto Ziegler, another of Hillsdale's canned heat merchants, who was arrested Saturday appeared before Justice Fitzsimmons on the liquor charge and demanded an examination. The date was set and his bail meanwhile was fixed at $1000, which same was not furnished until Friday afternoon The 6 days stay in jail didn't seem to please Otto, who claimed it was an H—l of a country that sent a man across to France to fight for it and then threw him in jail for "moonshining".

Carmela Bruno, arrested with her husband Guy, last Saturday afternoon and charged with resisting an officer, was released on $500 bail Monday, pending an examination. Guy, however, was not so fortunate, being charged with the sale and possession of intoxicating liquor, and also carrying concealed weapons. His examination was set for April 19th and bail was fixed at $2000 which was not furnished until late Wednesday afternoon.

Arthur Baker, the husband of Minnie, the "girl forger", was released Tuesday after having served 20 days in jail for "switching" license plates. He also paid the fine and costs which were a part of his sentence.

Marion McFarland, of Hillsdale, arrested Tuesday by the Sheriff's Department on a drunk charge, was taken before Justice Aldrich, where he plead guilty and was fined $20 and costs and given 20 days in jail. The fine and costs were remitted when he signed the pledge.

Joe Welden, a floater, brought in from Ransom Township by a Deputy Sheriff, was taken before Justice Aldrich, charged with drunkenness. He plead guilty and got 20 days.

"Gentleman" George Metcalf, Hillsdale's far famed Beau Brummel of the bootlegging industry, had a little bad luck on Wednesday evening. George delivered a quart of "hooch" to a thirsty customer in what he thought was the perfect security of a poorly lit downtown street. Unfortunately for Geo., he was no believer in the old saw, that "even the walls have ears," for the old saying came true that night. The night hid several pairs of the aforesaid ears, together with eyes, etc. belonging to members of the Sheriff's Department who were waiting for such an occasion. The quart was pinched. and then 2 members of the force went to George's home and asked him to return to the jail with them. The bad news must have taken all the fight and ginger out of George, as he came as meekly as Mary's lamb, George returned in a gentlemanly fashion, because, the officers had a warrant. He was taken before Justice Fitzsimmons the next afternoon, charged with the sale, possession and transportation of intoxicating liquor, and demanded an examination, which was set for April 22. He was released on $1000 cash bail. His Pontiac Sedan, however, is still in durance vile, awaiting action of the Circuit Court.

Lewis B. Warner, who was arrested on a Cincinnati warrant for removing mortgaged property from the State of Ohio, reached a satisfactory settlement with the company which caused his arrest and was released Saturday morning.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail. 7. No. under sentence 3. No. awaiting trial. 4. Total 7.

Weekly Report of the Sheriff's Office

(Received Last Week)

Lewis Esterline, of Jonesville was arrested Monday and charged with driving while drunk. When brought before Justice Aldrich, he plead guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs and spend 30 days in jail.

Monday, Earl Brady and Harold Savage of Jackson were arrested by the Sheriff's Department as suspicious characters. The investigation developed that they were the two young men who robbed the Leoni filling station in Jackson Co. a few days previous. They also admitted stealing 4 different automobiles and participating in several other burglaries and robberies in Jackson, so they were turned over to the Jackson Police and the stolen Nash Sedan which they were driving was returned to its rightful owner. From the way all the signs point, Earl and Harold are going to have a long, long time to think it over, and all because of a few minutes work in the wrong direction. Boys, it doesn't pay.

N. B. Pyle, of South Bend was arrested by the Sheriff's Department Monday night for speeding on M-23 He paid a fine of $20 and costs of $9.70 and left with the idea that it is not profitable to go too fast in Hillsdale County.

Marie Wilson, one of those taken in the raid on Vic Fish's place last Saturday night, was brought before Justice Fitzsimmons on a disorderly charge. She plead not guilty and was released on $100 bail pending an examination.

Roland Wilson, the husband of Marie, and another caught in the raiders net, when brought before Justice Aldrich, and charged with "Switching" license plates plead not guilty and demanded an examination. He is being held in default of $1000 bail until the date set for the hearing.

Two other boys taken in the above raid and held as important witnesses, were released, to appear at the trial.

On Wednesday, members of the Sheriff's Department and State Police raided the liquor joint south of Cambria operated by Riley Flannery. The haul netted a few gallons of moonshine and Flannery himself, who tried hard to make the officers believe that he was a "big, bad man" and a "fightin' fool", with few results, however. Later in the week, Flannery, after having been charged with violating the Prohibition Law, and resisting an officer, and having demanded an examination was released on $2000 bail. There is just one moral to be pointed out in the above, besides the prohibition law. When you are arrested, Come, and don't stop to argue about it, because you'll end up in jail anyway.

John Keefus and Robert Simmonds, the 2 youthful burglars, arrested in connection with the recent North Adams outbreak, were taken before the Probate Judge for a hearing on Thursday and Friday. The boys were then referred back to the Justice of the Peace, from where they will follow the usual course of law to the Circuit Court.

Tim Losure, of Hillsdale, a curb stone broker in the liquor industry was arrested Saturday forenoon while engaged in his business and charged with the sale, possession and transportation of liquor, (10 bottles being found in his car).

On Saturday afternoon, the home of Guy Bruno Hillsdale, was raided by the officers. After a search, about 150 gallons of wine, hard cider, etc. were removed to safe keeping in the Hillsdale Co, Jail. Mrs. Carmela Bruno, arrested at the same time as her husband, will be charged with resisting an officer, while Guy himself will face two counts, that of selling and possessing liquor and carrying concealed weapons.

Late Saturday night, Otto Ziegler, of Hillsdale was arrested. He will be charged with the sale of liquor. Canned heat seemed to be an important ingredient in Otto's product, which he claimed was "good stuff."

Mabel Reed and Olive Amsley, Hillsdale girls who were "companions" of the bold bad hold-up boys from Jackson, were taken Saturday afternoon at the request of Jackson Police for conspirarcy in the Leoni hold-up. Mabel, 18 was taken to Jackson on a warrant sworn to by the Insurance Co. and Olive, too young to be arrested, was left at home.

No. of prisoners in the Co. Jail 14. No. under sentence 4. No. awaiting trial 10. Total 14.

Col, Earl H. Kerr, Sheriff.

The Science of Home Trading Keeps the Country Sound

There is nothing so gratifying as the pick-up of trade and business in North Adams since the completion of good gravel highways in all directions out of and into the village. For the benefit of farm dwellers in the radius of ten miles of the village we want to say that the more life you can give this village by trading here the more your farm property will be worth if at any time you should want to sell it. As the ratio of trade goes up in North Adams so the value per acre of farm properties served by North Adams increases. As we have repeatedly called your attention to, how would you enjoy being obliged to drive to Jackson or Hillsdale each time you needed a new tube valve or a new inner tube for your machine or a quart of cylinder oil? If you wanted the physician in a hurry as your wife or baby might be choking to death or bleeding to death, would you enjoy driving to Hillsdale? And how about a loaf of bread or a box of matches—both very necessary if you happen to be out. We repeat it, Think on these things. We need your wood, your eggs, your wool, your butter, your poultry, your beef, your pork and your milk and we're glad you are near, but you also need us, and you should show your appreciation by buying all goods here which we keep. For instance we'll consider dry goods. How many of you women's summer dresses are found in Hillsdale or Jackson any prettier or more becoming or how much better are the materials or colors in the cities than here? A certain gent who lives near, wanted a pair of Oxfords. He was young and sporty, and he must go to Jackson (so he thought in order to get the real leather) Well, he dropped into a very swell shoe cafe' on Main street, and while looking over a pair of tan Oxfords he happened to glance at the price marks and noted it said $6.00, Then he looked at the shoes a little closer. Did he buy? He did not remain very long in that place. He went a little further up—that is, he dropped in at one more and there what looked like a much smarter shoe was quoted at $12 per pair. This was not getting him along very fast, so he decided to try a side street. Coming to another much smaller store he saw price marks of $3 and $3.50 "Well, he mused—this is much better fitted to my pocket book" so he went in and asked to be shown. "Sure", said the clerk, "Those $3 and $3.50 shoes are hand-me-downs but we can show you new ones at $5 and $6." The sporty customer made a flying wedge for the door, and next day he bought a pretty good pair of (new) shoes in North Adams for $4.

"Feeling fine since I took Foley Pills"

It is glorious to awake with a lively, healthy, energetic body. It is miserable to drag an aching, tired, weary body from a restless, sleepless bed.

The chances are that impaired kidney and bladder action has failed to clear the blood stream of lurking poisons which cause the distressing aches. So there is backache, pain in muscles and joints, rheumatism, a weary tired feeling, dull headaches, and irregular bladder action.

Foley Pills, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, are a reliable valuable medicine that promotes sound health by stimulating kidneys and bladder to healthy, normal activity. In constant use over 25 years. Contain no harmful ingredient. Satisfaction guaranteed. Ask for Foley Pills, diuretic.

E CHILDREN A PARTY

By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary expert and lecturer on household science.

CHICKEN patties are delicious. Make small baking powder biscuits, rather thicker than usual, bake quickly and while still warm remove the top crust and scoop out as much of the centers of the biscuits as possible. Meantime prepare creamed chicken, using only the white meat and cutting it into small neat cubes. Fill the biscuits and replace the tops. Serve on lace paper doilies on small plates.

Prune Frappe

Cook half a pound of prunes as usual, cool, drain and remove stones, cut in pieces and add to the prune juice the juice of one orange and one-half a lemon. Sweeten to taste and freeze to the frappe stage, pile in sherbet glasses and top with whipped cream.

Chicken Custard

Make a white sauce of two cupfuls milk, and one tablespoonful each flour and butter, season to taste and fold in a cupful of finely chopped chicken, also one beaten egg. Pour into tiny ramekins and bake to a delicate brown.

Prune Whip

Soften one tablespoonful gelatine in two tablespoonfuls cold water, dissolve over boiling water and add a cupful of hot prune pulp and one-half cupful of sugar. Beat while cooling, and when beginning to stiffen, fold in a cupful of whipped cream and the well beaten whites of two eggs. Turn into individual molds and chill. Unmold and serve on pretty plates, garnishing each with two halved prunes filled with halved marshmallows. Top each whip with a star of whipped cream.

Party Sandwiches

Use whole wheat and white bread for these sandwiches, slice thin and remove crusts. With a cookie cutter forming a star or a pussy cat or a chicken, cut figures from the centers of half the slices. Spread the other slices with jelly or jam, cover with the slices from which the figures have been cut, then in the white bread slices insert the figures cut from the whole wheat bread and vice versa.

Surprise Cake Tarts

Prepare a simple cake batter and bake in small muffin pans, when done, cut a circle in the top of each, and remove as much of the inside of the cake as possible, fill the cavity with bright red jelly, smooth over the top and ice with a boiled icing.

Prune Ice Cream

Cook one-half pound of prunes in one and one-half cupfuls of water, when tender, drain and remove stones and chop prunes fine. Add one-half cupful sugar, the prune juice and three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Cook five minutes, then cool and add one and one-half cupfuls of cream. Partially freeze, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Finish freezing and pack away in ice and salt to ripen two hours.

Party Cocoa

Blend together two tablespoonfuls of cocoa, four tablespoonfuls sugar and one-half cupful of water. Cook five minutes, then add to a quart of hot milk, beat with a rotary beater till frothy, serve in small cups with a teaspoonful of whipped cream or half a marshmallow on each.

Prunitas

Cook prunes in as little water as possible, until very tender, stone, and press through a sieve and to one cupful of pulp add a teaspoonful of lemon juice, and enough fine confectioners sugar to form a stiff paste. Press in a shallow pan and set away to harden, then cut in squares and press a nut meat on each.

Tea-table Talk

Mrs. A. is having tea with Mrs. W., and they find the O. P. A. Club must have a blue book of By-laws and the U-Go I-Went Class of are needing some programs for their semi-annual Barbecue and Dance.

Says Mrs. A. to Mrs. W: "I am all mixed up in my dates. Had so much to look after this month that I simply forgot to make out the program for our big dance. The fact is, with the S. O. B. Club, The Rolling Pin bunch, and the Instigator's I have been completedy done up."

"Right you are" said Mrs. W. "The printer down at the Advocate was asking me to-day what you were about. He says he must get your copy tomorrow morning in order to deliver the programs in time for the dance." Mrs. A. slammed the percolator, gulped a cup-full of tea and made a bee line for her desk. "I'll do it now!"

ROOT OF DISLIKES FOUND BY SCIENCE

That one man's meat is another man's poison is more than a proverb. It's an age-old mystery to which medical science is only just finding the key. This mystery involves the eerie world of idosyncracies, in which persons grow violently ill at the passing of a horse, or, as the case of Lord Robetrs, become intensely perturbed at the presence of a cat. It is a world in which persons feel positive discomforts at the sight of certain colors or the subtle diffusion of curious smells.

Who of us does not know someone who can not eat eggs, orcrabs, or oysters, or lobsters, almonds, onions, tomatoes, cucumbers, strawberries, fish, honey, or milk, without becoming instantly ill? Every doctor knows of patients who have an unconquerable aversion to certain drugs or chemicals, such as quinine, morphine, potassium iodine. Others can not breathe wood dust or pollen from certain flowers and grasses.

Recent investigations have given new insight into these percular reactions, and scientists have succeeded in making sufferers temporarily immune to some of them, besides conceiving an amazing theory to account for the phenomena. This theory is as follows:

Little specks of chemical dynamite called "antibodies" ase present in the bodies of many people, particularly nervous persons. There are different kinds of antibodies, and each has its specific "antigen," or poison. Fish may be antigen for one kind of antibody; the smell of horses for another. Whatever the cause, when the antigen is introduced into the body it behaves like a fuse cap and sets off the dynamite-like chemicals in the antibody—and the unfortunate person whose stomach is being made into chemical laboratory suffers acutely.

A cab driver was injured in an accident and a blood transfusion was necessary to save his life. When he left the hospital and climbed into his old seat on the cab, he discovered to his chagrin that though he had spent all his life driving horses, he could no longer endure being near one. The doctors discovered that the person who gave the blood necessary to save his life had a profound aversion to horses. The obvious conclusion was the idiosyncrasy had been transferred in the transfusion.

Subsequent experiments have led scientists generally to accept the theory of antibodies.

RUNT EGGS BARRED IN SIXTH LAYING MARATHON

Entries for the sixth international egg laying contest at Michigan state collee, startin November 1, are beinnin to pour into the poultry department, followin official announcement of the rules and regulations. One hundred pens of 10 hens each will compete.

The rules are the same as in the fifth contest. The minimum weight provision is being retained. All eggs laid between November 1 and January 31, 1928, must weih not less than 18 ounces to the dozen. Eggs produced thereafter must weigh at least 20 ounces to the dozen to be recorded.

This minimum weight clause was responsible for preventing Harry Burns of Millington, from winning the trophy offered for the best winter egg production this year. His hens laid the most egs but so many were under weight his pen did not finish in first place.

OLIVET BOARD ADDS THREE NEW MEMBERS

Three new members have been elected to the board of trustees of Olivet college and have signified their acceptance. Two are Detroit men, A. Z. Mitchell, vice president of Dodge Brothers company, and Dr. Chester B. Emerson, pastor of the North Woodward Congregational church. The third new member is John D. MacNaughton, president of MacNaughton-Greenwait company, investment bankers of Grand Rapids.

120 Miles on Two Gallons of Gas

Autos Start Instantly in Any Weather

Omaha, Neb.—An astounding new invention now makes it possible for autos to run 120 miles on two gals. of gas. Besides the miraculous gasoline mileage, Quickstart starts the coldest motor instantly in any weather. It also removes and prevents carbon, eliminates spark plug troubes, saves oil and repairs and lengthens life of motor. Many users report 46 to 60 miles on one gallon of gas besides unfailing instant starting of motor. The inventor wants agents and guarantee traveling expenses and liberal drawing account to exclusive distributors. Chance to make $50.00 to $400.00 a week guaranteed. Free sample to agents. MAN WHO LOST TWO FORTUNES DIES AT AGE 95, PENNILESS

Richard G. Peters, pioneer lumberman, who set out at the age of 95 to build his third fortune, is dead at his home in Manistee, his dream unfulfilled. He was virtually penniless.

Peters once was considered the wealthiest lumberman in Michigan, with vast holdings of virgin pine and hardwood timber lands, mill properties, railroads and shop lines.

Starting with $5,000 in 1867, Peters in 10 years built up a fortune estimated to have been more than $5,000,000. His ventures in other fields grew beyond his management, and in 1897 he was forced to assign all his holdings. Then, in six years, he paid off more than $2,250,000 in debts and started again.

His second fortune was swept away about 10 years ago and he had lived in Manistee since. The only surviving relatives are his widow and several nephews and nieces.

OTTAWA POULTRYMEN PLAN EGG SALES POOL

Ottawa county, the Petaluma of the middle west, has decided to follow the example set by poultrymen at Petaluma, Calif., and market its eggs and poultry co-operatively.

The Ottawa Egg & Poultry Producers' Association has been formed. The plan of organization is similar to the one in effect at Wausseon, O.

The association expects to begin operations by July 1. Its officers now are soliciting poultrymen to sign contracts and agree to market their poultry and eggs co-operatively. It will be necessary to obtain contracts for the production of eggs from 75,000 hens before operations can be started. Headquarters of the company will be in Zealand where the packing and grading, will be done. It is proposed to assemble eggs for calrot shipment to Detroit and eastern markets, competing with the trade developed by Pacific coast interests.

Maurice Luidens' of Holland, is president of the association. Other officers are: Vice president, C. J. De Koster, of Zeeland; secretary-treasurer, John VandenBosch, of Zeeland.

FISHING THROUGH ICE IS NOW POPULAR SPORT

In years gone by, farmers living beside the many lakes connected with Lake Michigan on the west coast of Lower Peninsula, having nothing else to occupy their attention during the winter months, cut holes in the ice to try for the plentiful perch. Catches were good; cities of fish shanties followed. But only during the past few years has the game caught the fancy of the sportsman and this year many sportsmen from the great cities nearby broke the long period between fall funting and spring fishing with a short vacation or week-ends in the fishing shanties of this region.

Although the best fishing did not come until the spring end of winter, the season started as soon as ice would bear the shanties and lasted as long as that condition continued. White Lake has at times had more than a thousand fishermen in shanties, in cars and out in the open, all seeking the Great Lakes perch.

FENTON HOME COMING TO BE STAGED IN JULY

Active preparations are being made to hold a three-day celebration and homecoming to Fenton, July 2, 3 and 4. All organizations are co-operating in preparation for one of the most extensive entertainment programs ever arranged in a town of its size. All former citizens of Fenton, will be given a special welcome to the "old home town" for this event.

GRAVEL ROADS GETTING NEAR NORMAL CONDITION

The State highway department in a late bulletin states that conditions on gravel roads in the lower peninsula have improved during the past few days and many of the sections wnich were practically impassable or totally impassable a week ago have now been opened to light traffic.

Cabbages are hardy and seed can be sown in the open ground when the soil can be properly worked. In order to have early cabbages, though, it is best to start the seed in pots or boxes in a cold frame or in a sunny kitchen window. The new cabbage Golden Acre is particularly early and is recommended for home garden makers. Copenhagen Market may be planted for a late crop, although Golden Acre is good all through the season.

HILLSDAYE COUNTY IS CENTURY OLD

The period of lower Michigan's centuries is with us several years and will continue to be with us for several more, as the anniversaries of civilization's steps westward are reached.

April of this year marks theone hundredth milestone since the first settlement of Hillsdaye County by the doughty Capt. Allen, whose name is perpetuated by the community which he founded. It was Moses Allen's belief in the future of a region which but a short time before had been considered uninhabitable that encouraged others later to join in the venture, and his courage and foresight that opened up interior Michigan.

In 1825 the project of converting the old Indian trail from Detroit to Chicago into a 100-foot highway had been launched and a government crew had been sent to survey the meandering path. Included in its number was the adventurous trader from Wayne County, Moses Allen, a veteran of the War of 1812. Observations made on this and on a subsequent trip through the section convinced him of his latent opportunities and characteristically, action directly followed decision. Immediately upon his arrival at home he began his preparations for removal, and in the late winter of 1826-27, he set forth with his entire family—wife and four children—on the difficult journey westward. They traveled by horse and wagon and the cold increased the physical hardships, but the frozen trail, streams, and marshes obviated the danger of being mired, that common experience of pioneer travelers.

The site chosen by the Allens was a fertile, elevated plain called Mscootah Siac by the Indians, in the western part of what is now Hillsdaye Counay. It was surrounded by woodlands, but here and there were clearings, a few cabins belonging to the roving Pottawattomies, and an occasional patch of their maize. The Indians were friendly and their fat, good-natured chief, Baw Beese was often of great assistance to the white family. The lands had not yet been put on sale so no limits could be set to the Allen's farm. They might have claimed from Adrian west to Lake Michigan, from their claim to the North Pole, without having their claims disputed. They were the only whites living in interior Michigan.

Moses Allen was born Oct. 2, 1786. possibly in New York. There is a family tradition that he was a connection of the family of the noted Ethan-Allen, but this is unproven. Shortly before the War of 1812, being then a young man, he went to Canada to seek his fortune and was impressed into the English army. But he deserted at the first opportunity, fled to Detroit and enlisted with the United States troops stationed there. He was one of those betrayed into British captivity by Gen. Hull and he escaped handing only through the kindness of a brother Mason who was guard over the Ohio voulnteers.

After the war, Capt. Allen's spirit of adventure led him to settle down in the little known territory of Michigan where he became a hunter and trader, carring cranberries, skins, wild honey, bees' wax, and Indian wares to Detroit in exchange for the white man's products highly valued by his Indian customers.

OLDEST MILLINER IN U. S. LIVES IN LAPEER COUNTY

The little village of Almont south of Imlay City has the distinction of being the home of Mrs. Charles Howland, 83 years old, said to be the oldest active milliner in the United States

Mrs. Howland has been in business at Almont for more than 54 years, and in spite of her age conducts her store with just as much interest as she did half a century ago.

GUSHER AT SAGINAW IS FIRST, ONLY ONE IN STATE

A showing of oil which exceeded the highest expectations of drillers was obtained when a well put down by the SunOil company on the Ferdinand Stelzriede farm entered the Saginaw sand at a depth of 2300 feet.

Oil spouted over the top of the rigging and was scattered over an area of several hundred feet when the drll had penetrated the sand but a few inches. Drilling was stopped immediately. The well subsided for a time, filled with oil and then overflowed the stand pipe. It continued to overflow at half hour intervals until it was capped to preserve the oil.

Experts at the U. S. Bureau of Standards in Washington have measured time to an accuracy of from 100,000th to 200,000th of a second.

"High Steppers"--Six Inch Heels

The oddest and most interesting exhibit at the shoe retailers convention in Chicago was that pair of pumps shown in the above photo adorning the pretty feet of Miss Ernie Kay.

Made in Paris, they were rather uniquely designed. The coat of arms of the city of aPris was worked out in semi-precious brilliants of various colors on the six inch heels. The whole pump was covered with pearl with applied gold and silver cloisonne.

SIMPLIFIES TEST OF FARM SOILS

A field test, which greatly simplifies the method of determining phosphorous content of soils, has been perfected by Prof. C. H. Spurway, research associate in the soils department at Michigan State College This is his second valuable contribution to science within the past four years, following closely upon the "soiltex" field test for line content.

Perfection of the new test carries a particular significance in Michigan, where the soils in general are notoriously lacking in phosphorous, and where thousands of dollars are spent annually by the farmers in fertilizers to add this necessary element. In many sections of the State, soils vary widely in adjoining fields and therefore need widely varying fertilizer compounds. This fact has resulted in much unnecessary waste in applying fertilizer because of the lack of a simple field test to determinate phosphate needs.

The old method for determining phosphorous content required that the soil samples be taken to a laboratory, and the services of a skilled chemist. The new test, while it has not yet reached the stage of perfection to make it practical in the hands of every individual, can be used by field workers with a little training in making rapid and efficient tests.

All that is required in conducting the new test is a small piece of wax paper, two bottles of chemical and a tin instrument shaped like a pencil. The wax paper is folded to hold a sample of the soil. A chemical is dropped in the fold of the paper and allowed to seep through the soil. After the extracting solution has passed with a chemical and the intensity of the resulting blue color determines the phosphorous content.

ALFALFA POLLEN GETS SCATTERED BY MACHINE

A mechanical substitute for bumble bees as a pollenizing agent for alfalfa is being devised by the farm crops department of Michigan State collee.

Sensing a need for some means of tripping the pollen and fertilizing the alfalfa bloom, specialists in the department developed a hand operated machine to brush the blooms and perform the duty formerly rendered by bumble bees when these insects were numerous in Michigan. Scarcity of bumble bees prompted the college to seek a substitute for them.

It is important that the pollen in the alfalfa blossom be tripped to insure a normal seed set. Bees, if in sufficient numbers and weather conditions are favorable, will do this job for nature.

Tests in 1926 showed the pollen can be successfully tripped by mechanical methods. Seed yields obtained in experiments were quite satisfactory, but burther testing is necessary before the farm crops department feels safe in recommending its use by seed producers.

Parisian medical men blame spots on the sun for many deaths in 1926. They claim people were weakened.

GAS MAINS WILL LINK MANY SMALL TOWNS OF STATE THIS YEAR

First mild days of spring will find many trench digging machines in almost every section of the state clanking into action on long inter-city trenches which will bring yet another city convenience—gas service—to a number of Michigan communities.

Two hundred and twelve miles of high pressure main will be laid during the construction season, connecting 17 towns to gas plants in neighboring cities, as part of the $55,000,000 buildind program which the gas and electric companies have undertaken this year. Charles R. Henderson, president of the Michigan Gas association, announced. By the end of the year, a total of 850 miles of high pressure main will be in service in the state, supplying 55 communities with gas. Before the coming of the trenching machine and high pressure main, Henderson explained, gas service to these towns was impracticable. The towns are of such size that service from individual plants would not be economically feasible, and only by adding their demands to those of nearby cities could the gas be supplied at reasonable cost. Hand digging of the necessary inter-city trenches, and investment in low pressure mains would also be prohibitive, he said.

The coupling of length of pipe has been facilitated greatly by development joints are now made quickly with the aid of the oxy-acetylene torch, so that, save for expansion joints, at regular intervals, the mains are continuous steel tubes.

"U" CO-EDS WILL ELECT WOMEN LEAGUE HEADS

Women of the University of Michigan will elect new Women's League officers. The following have been nominated for major offices:

President, Elzabeth Nutt, Ann Arbor; Mary White, Ann Arbor; Jean McKaig, Detroit.

Vice President: Margaret Hawkins, Cleveland; Ellen Groff, Grand Rapids.

Treasurer: Elizabeth Smithers, Buffalo, N. Y.; Louise Cooley, Lansing.

Corresponding Secretary—Cynthia Hawkins, Montclair, N. J.; and Jean Campbell, Kalamazoo.

EAST LANSING HORSE SHOW DATES ARE FIXED

Col. T. L. Sherbourne, manager of the annupl horse show, announces that plans for the event have been completed and the date set for May 30-31. This year's show is so large that it will be held on the cavalry drill field at East Lansing instead of in the stadium. A novel addition to the usual program will be the night show to be held on the tan bark floor of the new armory.

There will be 29 classes on the program. Ten of these will be jumps. The cavalry men of M. S. C. will demonstrate their skill in several events and contest for a special continuation trophy, the Cadet Officers' Cup.

4,000,000 GALLONS WATER GUSHED DAILY BY WELL IN WAYNE

Maybe Ponce De Leon overlooked a bet when he searched for his fountain of youth in Florida instead of Wayne County, Mich.

At any rate, down at the southern end of Grosse Ile is a mineral water gusher that exhibits several of the specifications of a miracle fountain.

In the first place, its water spurts up from a great depth, 2,375 feet. Then, with its faint sulphurous odor, the liquid smells as if it ought to be good for what ails you. Its taste is quite agreeable, but that to many persons would be a point against the artesian well. Doesn't efficacious medicine always taste bad?

The owner of the property has no objections so people come from Detroit and all the way down to Toledo to get their weekly supply of the mineral water free of charge.

For 22 years, "Wayne County'ss Wonder Well," as an alliterative Grosse Ile booster has called it, has been flowing at the rate of 4,000,000 gallons a day.

The well is an accident. Years ago, some West Virginia oil men got the notion into their heads that there ought to be oil under Grosse Ile. So they drilled a well almost a half a mile deep on the property of James Swan, three-quartrs of a mile from the southern extremity of the island. When this copious stream of water began spurting out, they were ready to quit.

The great flow was so unusual for this part of the country that University of Michigan geologists were detailed by the state to make a study of this natural phenomenon. Their findings appeared in the 1911 Michigan Geological Surveys.

CONTRACTS FOR FOUR BRIDGES LET BY STATE

Among the first contracts for highway improvements awarded by the new administrative board were for four bridges.

The bridges are across the Squaconning creek, six miles south of Bay City, at a cost of $19,980; across the Kalamazoo river, two miles north of Concord, $9100; across Sandstone creek at Tompkins, $22,000; and across the Black river at Applegate, $10,250.

$3,750,000 DRAIN DITCH FOR PONTIAC NEAR BEGUN

The new Pontiac drain, costing $3,750,000, and which is to provide adequate drainage for the city and the surrounding territory, will be started in April, and completed next fall. It will be 20 and 6-10 miles long, approximately half of which length will be in the city. It is to be constructed by the city and county jointly. One of the principal improvements in connection with the drain will be the removal from its course of the Pontiac creek, which now runs through the center of the city. The drain will be the second largest system in the state.

OLD TARS HOAXED BY WEATHER SIGNS

There is an old saying, "All signs fail during the drought." And so it has been on the Great Lakes. Every weather sign known to veterans of the lakes has failed during the last winter, the most unusual in 40 years from the standpoint of navigation.

The veterans of the lakes have a weather code of their own, signs which they contend have never failed them until the present winter. Lonk before the days of the weather bureau its storm warnings and other aids to navigation, lake sailors watched for "the signs," and guided their crafts accordingly. And while weather bureau observers for years have been issuing reports, the old tars have continued to place faith in their own observations and to be governed by them.

"The weather man may laugh at the sailor's signs,' said Capt. John Cavanaugh, master of the new car ferry, who has spent his life on the lakes. "However, we sailors know that the signs are not bunk. Yet, we must admit that every sign has failed during the past winter. In my 40 years as a lake pilot there has not been a winter to compare with 1926-27. It was the mildest, most beautiful winter I believe of all time."

NORTH SPORTSMEN FIGHT CUT IN DAY'S BAG LIMIT

Proposed legislation to cut the bag limit on ducks is strongly opposed by Northern Michigan sportsmen.

This attitude is not taken because it is believed the ducks are becoming more scarce but simply because the shooting in that territory has been very poor during the past few seasons.

There are just as many ducks, it is believed, but the birds have not made sufficient stops to afford any great amount of sport to the hunters. Some say the weather conditions have been the cause of the ducks keeping on their southward journey with but a brief call. Others feel that the ducks do not stop becuase the feeding grounds are not what they should be.

VOGUE TURNS HIS HOBBY TO PROFIT

That errant dame, la Vogue, as inconstant as Balzac's la Cibot, has inserted one of her dainty feet into the dusty tinshop of Frank G. Griffin, Saginaw, and bids fair to deprive him of a hobby of 12 years' standing, even as the Cibot treated poor Cousin Pons.

But with results fatal.

For the Vogue has brought her purse with her and pays well for the intrusions into Griffin's tinshop. She insists upon considering Griffin's hobby seriously and transforming with a single capricious gesture avocation into vocation.

Frank Griffin is nearly 60 years old. His shop occupies the second floor of the Police Headquarters building. Stout doors with grated orifices, and sliding bolts provide a medieval touch that is heightened by a rosy, roaring charcoal burner in one corner. Two chairs bear legs charred and backs scored to testify to its fierceness.

At his workbench before a grated window, the tinshop plies his new trade that was a hobby. He works from glorified blue prints that have no dimensions on them, and he works steadily, for there are orders to fill. But he also works happily. It is not every man who suddenly finds his hobby become marketable—at well-rounded figures. He is a builder of model ships.

Fifty years ago the boy, Griffin, moved with his parents to Saginaw when it was little more than a lumbering town—but one of the toughest settlements on the North American continent. The body of much of the land was sawdust and the walks were made of pine planks pocked by the spikes in the lumberjacks' boots.

He was apprenticed to a worker in sheet metal and soon become a creditable tinsmith.

It was in 1915 that he first turned from troughs and joints and cornices, his steady fare for many years, to modeling a clipper ship in tin. Since then he hos fashioned 20 models in his spare time.

WOMAN IS NEWAYGO SCHOOL COMMISSIONER

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," may very well apply to many persons, but not to Miss Carrie L. Carter of Newaygo county. Miss Carter, who is county school commissioner, has lived in Newaygo county all of her life, being born in Ashland township.

She taught for 10 years in the Newaygo school system, and after a similar period in the Fremont schools system, became principal of the Newago County Normal. Leaving that position, she was elected as county school commissioner. After 12 years' service she is again a candidate for that position, and has no opposition for the position.

When Miss Carter first took office there were six standard schools in the county and this number has now grown to 23, seventeen being added during the last 12 years. One of the most important activities that Miss Carter has sponsored and the one that has brought the great improvement to rural education is the furthering of the annual Patrons' days.

STUFFED OWL IS USED TO DECOY CROWS TO DEATH

In the shed of Mark Craw, Traverse City conservation officer, is a great horned owl mounted upon a pine slab which has done more effective work in ridding the north woods of crows than a whole brigade of hunters.

What, according to Craw, has made the best crow decoy in Michigan was shot several winters ago while the conservation officer was feeding grouse in a swamp. Along about dusk Craw heard a sudden rush of wings and saw the owl drop upon a skunk and slowly squeeze the life from the little animal. But before it could begin the feast, Craw shot the marauder dead.

Today with its wings upraised, its eyes filled with vindicative hatred, its curved beak half opened as if emitting hisses at enemies, it stands as a replica of an exceedingly harried and ruffled owl, one spotted by crows and is busily engaged in fending them off.

All Craw has to do is find or build a blind. With the owl superimposed upon a post, a stump or a rise of ground, where it can be seen for a great distance, it draws the black battalions with the irresistible power of a magnet. Always gang fighters, the crows enlist every comrade inthe vicinity before they venture to the attack. And then as they circle about the stuffed owl with a bedlam of caws, the officer calmly empties his gun and picks up the dead.

What is to prevent me doing so, since I have gold? Why should this captain refuse to take charge of my merchandise? And who knows? Instead of going and throwing away this—my little all—in a gambling house, I might double it, I might triple it, perhaps, by honest industry. If Julie truly loves me she will wait a few years, she will remain true to me until I am able to marry her. Commerce sometimes yields greater profits than one thinks; examples are not wanting in this world of wealth gained with astonishing rapadity in this way on the chranging waves—why should Providence not bless an endeavor made for a purpose so laudable, so worthy of His assistance? Among these merchants who have accumulated so much and who send their vessels to the ends of the world, more than one has begun with a smaller sum than I have now. They have prospered with the help of God; why should I not prosper in my turn? It seems to me as though a good wind were filling these sails, and this vessel inspires confidence. Come! the die is cast; I will speak to the captain, who seems to be a good fellow; I will then write to Julie and set out to become a clever and successful trader."

The greatest danger incurred by those who are habitually but halt crazy, is that of becoming at times, altogether so.

The poor fellow, without further deliberation, put his whim into execution. To find goods to buy, when one has money and knows nothing about the goods, is the easiest thing in the world.

The captain, to oblige Croisilles, took him to one of his friends, a manufacturer, who sold him as much cloth and silk as he could pay for. The whole of it, loaded upon a cart, was promptly taken on board. Croisilles, delighted and full of hope, had him? self written in large letter his name upon the bales. He watched them being put on board with inexpressible joy; the hour of departure soon came, and the vessel weighed anchor.

VI.

I neen not say that in this transaction, Croisilles had kept no money in hand. His house was sold; and there demained to him, for his sole fortune, the clothes he had on his back—no home, and not a sou. With the best will possible, Jean could not suppose that hs master was reduced to such an extremty; Croisilles was not too proud, but to thoughtless to tell him of it. So he determined to lseep under the starry vault, and as for his meals, he made the following calculation; he presumed that the vessel which bore his fortune would be six months before coming back to Harvre; Croisilles, therefore, not without regret, sold a gold watch his father had given him, and which he had fortunately kept; he got thirty-six livres for it. That was sufficient to live on for about six months, at the rate of four sous a day. He did not doubt that it would be enough, and, reassured for the present ,he wrote to Mademoiselle Godeau to inform her of what he had done. He was very careful in his letter not to speak of his distress; he announced to her, on the contrary, that he had undertaken a magnificent commercial enterprise, of the speedy and fortunate issue of which there could be no doubt; he explained to her that La Fleurette, a merchant vessel of one hundred and fifty tons, was carrying to the Baltic his cloths and his silks, and implored her to remain faithful to him for a year, reserving to himself the right of asking, later on, for a further delay, while, for his part, he swore eternal love to her.

When Mademoiselle Godeau received this ltter she was sitting before the fire, and had in her hand, using it as a screen, one of those bulletins which are printed in seaports, announcing the arrival and departure of vessels, and which also report disasters at sea. It never occurred to her, as one can well imagine, to take an interest in this sort of thing; she had in fact never glanced at any of these sheets.

The perusal of Croisilles' letter prompted her to read the bulletin she had been holding in her hand; the first word that caught her eye was no other than the name of La Fleurette.

The vessed had been wrecked on the coast of France, on the very night following its departure. The crew had barely escaped, but all the cargo was lost.

Mademoiselle Godeau, at this news, no longer remembered that Croisilles had made to her an avowal of his poverty; she was as heartbroken as tho a million had been at stake.

In an instant, the horrors of the tempest, the fury of the winds, the cries of the drowning, the ruin of the man who loved her, presented themselves to her mind like a scene in a romance. The bulletin and the letter fell from her hands. She rose in great agitation, and, with heaving breast and eyes brimming with tears, paced up and down, determined to act, and asking herself how she should act.

There is one thing that must be said in justice to love; it is that the stronger, the clearer, the simpler the considerations opposed to it, in a word, the elss common sense ther ise in the matter, the wilder does the passion become and the more does the lover love. It is one of the most beautiful things under heaven, this irrationality of the heart. We should not be worth much without it. After having walked about the room (without forgetting either her dear fan or the passing glance at the mirror), Julie allowed herself to sing once more upon her lounge. Whoever had seen her at this moment would have looked upon a lovely sight; her eyes sparkled, her cheeks were on fire; she sighed deeply and murmured in a delicious transport of joy and pain:

"Poor fellow! He has ruined himself for me!"

Independently of the fortune which she could expect from her father, Mademoisllee Godeau had in her own right the property her mother had left her. She had never thought of it.

At this moment, for the first time in her life, she remembered that she could dispose of five hundred thousand francs. This thought brought a smile to her lips; a project, strange, bold, wholly feminine, almost as mad as Croisilles himself, entered her head—she weighed the idea in her mind for some time, then decided to act upon it at once.

She began by inquiring whether Croisilles had any relatives or friends; the maid was sent out in all directions to find out.

Having made minute inquiries in all quarters, she discovered on the fourth floor of an old rickety house, a half crippled aunt, who never stirred from her arm chair, and had not been out for four or five years. This poor woman, very old, seemed to have been left in the world expressly as a specimen of hungry misery. Blind, gouty, almost deaf, she lived alone in a garlet; but a gayety, stronger than misfortune and illness, sustained her at eighty years of age, and made her still love life. Her neighbors never passed her door without going in to see her, and the antiquated tunes she hummed enlivened all the girls of the neighborhood. She possessed a little annuity which sufficed to maintain her; as long as day lasted, she kitted. She did not know what had happened since the death of Louis XIV.

It was tothis worthy person that Julie had herself privately conducted. She donned for the occasion all her finery; feathers, laces, ribbons, diawanted to be fascinating; but the real secret of her beauty, in this case, was the wrim that was carrying hr away. She went up the steep, drk staircase which led to the good lady's chamber, and, after the most graceful bow, spoke somewhat as follows:

"You have, madame, a nephey, called Croisilles, who loves me and has asked for my hand; I love him too and wish to marry him; but my father, Monsieur Godeau, fermier general of this town, refuses his consent, because your nephew is not rich. I would not, for the world, give occasion to scandal, nor cause trouble to anybody; I would therefore never think of disposing of myself without the consent of my family. I come to ask you a favor, which I beseech you to grant me. You must some yourself and propose this marriage to my father. I have, thank God, a little fortune which is quite at your disposal; you may take possession, whenever you see fit, of five hundred thousand francs at my notary's. You will say that this sum belongs to your nephew which in fact it does. It is not a present that I am making him, it is a debt which I am paying, for I am the cause of the ruin of Croisilles, and it is but just that I should repair it. My father will not easily give in; you will be obliged to insist and you must have a little courage; I, for my part, will not fail. As nobody on earth excepting myself has any right to the sum of which I am speaking to you, nobody will ever know in what way this amount will have passed into your hands. You are not very rich yourself, I know, and you may fear that people will be astonished to see you thus endowing your nephew; but remember that my father does not know you, that you show yourself very little in town, and that, consequently, it will be easy for you to pretend that you have just arrived from some journeyfl This step wil doubtless be some exertion to you; you will have to leave your arm chair and take a little trouble; but you will make two people happy, madame, and if you have ever known love, I will hope yiu will not refuse me."

The old lady, during this discourse, had been in turn surprised, anxious, touched, and delighted. The last words persuaded her.

"Yes, my child,' she repeated several times, "I know what it is—I know what it is."

As she said this she made an effort to rise; her feeble limbs could barely support her; Julie quickly advanced and put out her hand to help her; by an almost involuntary movement they found themselves, in an instant, in each other's arms.

A treaty was at once concluded; a warm kiss sealed it in advance, and the necessary and confidential consultation followed withou t further trouble.

All the explanations having been made, the good lady drew from her wardrobe a venerable gown of taffeta, which had been her wedding dress. This antique piece of property was not less than fifty years old; but not a spot, not a grain of dust had disfugured it; Julie was in ecstasies over it. A coach was sent for, the handsomest in the town. The good lady prpeared the speech she was going to make to Monsieur Godeau; Julie tried to teach her how she was to touch the heart of her father, and did not hesitate to confess that love of rank was his colnerable point.

"If you could imagine," she said, "a means of flattering this weakness, you will have won our cause."

The good lady pondered deeply, finished her toilet without another word, clasped the hands of her future niece, and entered the carraige.

She soon arrived at the Godeau mansion; there, she braced herself up so gallantly for her entrance that she seemed ten years younger. She majstically crossed the drawing room wher Jule's buquet had fallen, and when the doer of the boudoir opened, said in a firm voice to the lackey who preceded her:

Announce the dowager Baroness de Croisilles."

These words settled the happiness of the two lovers. Monsieur Godeau was bewildered with them. Although five hundred thousand francs seemed little to him, he consented to everything, in order to make his daughter a baroness, and such she became—who world dare contest her title? For my part, I think she had thoruoghly earned it.

Mere Man Has No More Privacy--Not Even In "Smoking Car"

Man's last rendezvous—the smoking car on a suburban train—is rapidly being usurped by woman, according to complaints registered daily at the Illinois Central railroad office in Chicago. Besides those women who take advantage of the smoking privliege, there are also those who prefer to sit down in the smoker rather than risk not getting a seat in other coaches on the train. 'Stough!

SCORNED TO BET CO-EDS OF 1872

All students at the University of Michigan were high hatters 55 years ago and there were no petting parties because ofthe men resented the intrusion of the women on the campus, brought about by the act of the legislature in 1872 which made Michigan a co-educational institution, according to Dr. Colin C. McCormick of Owosso.

Dr. McCormick has just rounded out 55 years in the practice of medicine and is the oldest living aluminus of the university of Shiawassee County.

The high hatting part of the picture at the university in those days, the doctor says, lay in the fact that all students wore what were then known as "plug hats," now commonly called "evening lids." They did this to add dignity to their appearance, and as a still further means of looking dignified, they all wore beards, or at least long side burns.

As for the petting parties, the doctor says, the men students in those days would hardly speak to the co-eds, much as make dates with them. The reventment of the students was also shared by the professors, particularly those in the medical college, who did not like to lecture to women on subjects that at that time only men were supposed to hear.

When the doctor was in the university it cost him no more for board and room for the two years than it does the modern father to keep his son there one month. He and several others formed a club and lived for $2.50 to $3.00 a week.

In Dr. McCormick's day at Ann Arbor one policeman was sufficient to maintain order, or at least that is all Ann Arbor had.

After seeing all sides of life, as only a physician can see it, for more than half a century, Dr. McCormaik, who is now past 80. sums up his philosophy of life in six words. They are, "Keep busy and do your best."

"If you do that," he says, "you can't go very far wrong."

Dr. McCormick declares that the youth of today is better than that of half a century ago.

"Their methods of enjoying themselves are entirely different than our methods were years ago," he said, "and they may appear wild and as though they were going to the dogs, but underneath all of this are just as pure hearts and the makings of just as good citizens as we have ever had."

POWER CONCER NTO PLANT TREES TO AVERT FLOODS

Foresters of the Consumers' Powe company announce a rather ambitiou program of tree planting along the shores of the various rivers they control. They plan to plant 200,00 Norway, white and jack pines together with a large number of willows, poplars and locusts. It is believed that this planting will eventually keep the water at an even temperature most of the year and admit of an even flow, eliminating much of the flood menace.

CURTIS PROMITED TO PLACE HELD BY HUSSEY

The board of Regents of the University of Michigan voted the promotion of Prof. Ralph P. Curtiss, professor of astornomy, to the directorship of the University observatory. Dur Curtiss will carry on the work begun by Dr. William J. Hussey, who died in England last fall.

BALLOON RACES IN JULY ARE AWARDED STATE'S METROPOLIS

The James Gordon Bennett international balloon races have been awarded to Detroit and scheduled for July 4, at Ford Airport.

Detroit arrangements will be under the auspices of the Detroit Aviation Society and the Detroit Flying Club.

Detroit probably will have three entries consisting in behalf of the Flying Club.

The national elimination races will be held at Akron, O., May 29, and from this event the American team will be picked. Liept. Charles D. Williams, Arthur Slosser and Svend Rassmussen will be entered from Detroit.

The National balloon race include balloons up to 35,000 cubic feet capacity, while the international race includes those up to 85,000 cubic feet capacity.

The original Bennet cup was put up by James Gordon Bennett in 1906, and was won by Ernest Demayter, of Belgium.

W. T. VanOrman, of Akron, Ohio, made the first victory toward the new cup for America last year when he traveled 521 miles, a record.

15 LETTERS AWARDED ANN ARBOR SWIMMERS

Fifteen letters were awarded Michigan swimmers for their work during the past year, the list including all the regulars of the swimming team and two from the water polo squad.

Detroit claims the largest number of the letter winners, with Richard Spindle, Thomas Watson, Robert Darnell and Al Seager of the swimmers, and Clarence Horn of the polo team. Other letter winners were Capt. Paul Sampson, Ypsilanti; Robert Wagner, Ann Arbor; George W. Bement, Lansing; George E. Hubbell, Milford; J. and R. Halsted, Evanston, Ill.; Maurice Shorr, Chicago; John E. Starrett, Winnetka, Ill., and Clarence Batter, New Haven, Conn., of the swimmers, and Albert Mayer, Jr., Cincinnati, of the water polo team.

Craft Dyes for leather, wood, straw, enamel, rubber, celluloid, metal cloth, etc.; 7 colors, 25c each; 7 for $1.50, Postpaid. Samac, 1640 N. La Salle St., Chicago.

BIRMINGHAM HAS CENTURY CHURCH

Members of the Birmingham Methodist Episcopal Church are making plans for the celebration of the church centenary beginning early in May. Three Sundays, May 8, 15 and 22, will be devoted to the honoring of those earnest pioneers who built the spiritual and material foundations.

In the 100 years of its existence the Birmingham M. E. Church has had two permanent homes. The first building, a frame structure, was erected in 1840. This building stood for more than 80 years, disappearing only within the last few weeks to make room for the new public library now under construction. Its present home at the corner of West Maple and Henrietta streets, one block west of Woodward avenue, was erected in 1871 during the pastorate of the Rev. Robert Bird. It is of the familiar type of red brick structure now rapidly disappearing. Its slender spire towers above the village.

The first account of Methodist worship in Bloomfield Township is that of a meting held in Willet's log tavern in 1821 by an itinerant minister whose name is lost in the obscurity of the past. A year later Dr. Ezra S. Parke arrived in the settlement and conducted Sunday afternoon meetings in his home.

MAN THANKS JUDGE FOR SPEEDING FINE OF $55

When Justice August Greve of Manistee fined William C. Wade of Shelby $55 and ordered his driver's license revoked for three months, Wade shook hands with the judge and court officials and thanked them. Wade and Grant Cleveland, 58 years old, were on their way to catch smelt at Beulah when arrested by state police.

An Oliver Steel Plow for Every Soil Condition

Oliver Steel Plows have long been popular where other plows give trouble through improper scouring. In sticky, heavy, waxy soils, the Oliver Steel Plows measure up to the reputation for perfect performance which has been established for many years.

There is a wide range of types to suit different soil conditions. But all Oliver Steel Plows have these features which have made them the outstanding preference of better farmers—high clearance, light draft, ease of operation, and in-built strength.

On a certain Heathen Island in the Pacific ocean, a man is sized up according to the rats he catches, and they are also used as a medium of exchange for goods, If a young Lochinvar can catch enough varmints he can buy a wife. Now this would be a good thing to practice in North Adams If the boys would all turn out the rats would all be cleaned up and a lot of anxious "Tommies" would be supplied with partners. Must have been rats a fellow was seeking when he was discovered near the slaughter house one evening. Somebody wanted to know if any rats were missing. But Lord—who cares?

Will J. Turner of Hillsdale an engineer on the N. Y. C. road for 44 years, retired last week on a pension after a long and faithful service covering his active life. In commemoration of the event his engine was draped in bunting and he "hooked 'er up" and "eased 'er over" for the last time. Turner was born in England in 1863 and tis said he has a mighty good record behind him. In 1883 he was made fireman on the old-time Lake Shore engines out of Englewood, Illinois. and had been on the Hillsdale-Lansing run for 25 years as a plug puller Many a man in his youth has dreamed of the day when he could drive a giant mogul, but few have attained the goal, as such work requires nerves of iron, plenty of fore thought and good eyesight. Turner has seen the development of rail road equipment from the light engines with balloon top stacks to the penderous "8000" of to-day with its mile long trains of loaded cars and steam reverse, with its power stoker and automatic control.

Destructive Fire

The North Adams High School Bullding was destroyed by fire Saturday morning about nine o'clock. The fire started, it is thought, around the chimney in the attic. The down rush of smoke at first stopped all efforts to enter the building, but later the smoke cleared sufficiently to get the books and some of the apparatus from the lower rooms, but practically nothing was saved from the upper rooms. The North Adams fire company was on the scene at once and did everything possible that could be done to save the building. The Jonesville and Hillsdale companies came as soon as they could get here but the building was too far gone for them to do much. The building was erected in 1876, and while not modern, has always been kept in good repair. It was insured for $20,000 end the contents $2,000. The replacement of the building will be a hard blow because the district is not any larger than many of the country districts. The Board is undecided as to what this community will desire.

Plans and specifications will be offered from time to time, and the Board is very anxious that everyone interested in our school will attend the meetings which are open to the public.

A paper published not far away says in a recent issue "Michigan is floundering in the throes of a great oil boom" It may be that some people are floundering a bit but this is entirely unnecessary. Of the few holes that have been drilled, only one in the Saginaw Valley has shown anything worth mentioning, and they say its production has been somewhat exaggerated by the newspapers. Three dry holes (at least) have been drilled.

Roy Pratt, supervisor of Cambridge township, Lenawee county came into the Commercial Eank of Jonesville last Friday and requested that a check for $1,000 be cashed. As the cashier, Alvin Godfrey, turned, he found he was covered by a revolver held by Pratt who gruffly demanded all money in sight which was handed over to him by the cashier. The robber escaped in a Ford sedan but was pursued for some distance. Monday he was arrested at Kalamazoo and brought back to Hillsdale jail. He is now under $10,000 bond. Later he told the officers where to locate the stolen money which amounted to $825.00.

Most of us will again be reminded our fire protection. It is scarcely necessary to warn folks after the disaster of Saturday concerning their chimneys, and we hope those who have chimneys built on any angles to accomodate various positions through the roof will see to it that the sides of these chimneys are tight. Often the continual bearing down of the heavy chimney above forces the brick apart on the upper side and here the sparks from coal and kindled fires often escape. If you have a cement chimney junk it this summer and build a tile lined brick flue if possible on the outside of the building. Modern science has demonstrated that only a small proportion of smoke flues located outside ever cause fires. If your house is not modern and you must put up a chimney through the roof don't let expense interfere with you. Remember your chimney is your best insurance and protector in such towns as this. No fire apparatus is half as good as a real fire-proof smoke flue.

Death of Mary M. Boycott

Mrs. Mary Boycott mother of Andrew and Frank Bemis, passed away at the home of her son Andrew south-east of this village Sunday evening at 6 o'clock aged 78 years. She was born in New Hampshire January 29, 1849 and had lived in Hillsdale 48 years. Besides the two sons Andrew and Frank she is survived by two sisters Hattie and Belle Gale of New Hampshire and one brother Henry Simpson also of New Hampshire, fourteen grand children and thirteen great grandchildren. Funeral services were held at Dutcher's Undertaking Rooms in Hillsdale on Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. Rev. Jandy pastor of the North Adams Congregational church officiating, and interment was in the Morgan cemetery.

QUEER ANTICS IN ATHLETIC SCHEME

While a group of high school competitors in any event always is worth watching for peculiarities, any group of interscholastic athletes competing in the high hurdles offers some interesting antics with its methods of warming up.

It apparently is written in the book of the high school hurdler that certain things are necessary and he goes thru his rites religiously.

In one of the recent Michigan meets the warming up athletes were so scattered about that they almost stopped the rest of the show. One athlete, with one foot on the ground and with the other resting on top of a hurdle, proceeded to bend downward until his hand touched the ground.

Close by him was one who was seated on the ground busily composing his legs in about the form they would take when he would be at the top of the hurdle. He then proceeded to bend until his head touched mother earth, starting at the right and going to the left until each spot had received the necessary number of head touches.

Over on the other side, a youngster was lying on his back, elevating his legs until his toes traveled through an arc and touched the ground at his head. On the backward return the feet pawed the air vigorously supplying the motions of running.

One youngster essayed the arts of a chorus girl and gave an exhibition of high kicking, having one advantage of the coryphee, however, in that his spikes firmly anchored him standing foot to the floor. Another qualifier took a stand with his feet close together, hands on hips, and proceeded to bend t all side as far as his ability allowed.

All of these exhibitions probably are a part of the psychology of the different high school coaches and prescribed by them, not for any beneficial physical effect but to get the minds of the youngsters off the approaching race. Form is one of the necessities of hurdling and a nervous youngster is liable to forget form and wreck himself on the first hurdle, especially in the high event.

RIVERS DECLARED BETTER THAN LAKES AS TRAPPING GROUND

The advantages possessed by rivers and streams as trapping grounds in comparison to lakes has been revealed in the experience of trappers during the season just closed.

Although the breaking up of the ice in the lakes was exceptionally early thes year it was not until early March that the lakes became open enough for fur bearing animals to move far from their homes.

Streams and rivers were open all winter, and there trappers from the first day of the open season until its close, reaped a bountiful harvest of pelts.

Some farmers, who had long stretches of river frontage, were able to add between $300 and $400 to their income with no greater outlay of time and labor than the few hours expended each day in visiting the traps through the months of February and March.

In past years lakes have been frozen tightly until well towards the first of April, making trapping thereon unprofitable.

In a March like the one just passed fur bearing animals are extremely active along open water.

They have tired of the monotony of subsisting on an almost exclusive vegetarian provender and acquired an almost insatiable craving for the flesh of frogs and land crabs that made their appearance unusually early this year along the woodland streams and other open water.

Hhe muskrat apparently care little for frogs but has fondness for mussels or clams.

The raccoon seems to care fore for frogs as a food than any other of our native fur bearing animals.

HOW OWLS CATCH SWIFT MOVING BAT BAFFLES SCIENCE

The short eared owl raises a perplexing question. How can such a slow flying bird catch bats?

In flight this common Michigan owl, generally regarded as beneficial to the farmer, exhibits little of the speed and dash of raptorial birds. It wings along deliberate and when it is seen at dusk, skimming over a field in search of meadow mice, it reminds the onlooker of a marsh hawk. Though it manages itself gracefully in the air, its flight seems unstable, for it dips and drops as it proceeds on its vespertine hunt for a meal. Yet it eats bats, as the contents of its stomach shows, giving rise to the perfectly logical conclusion that it catches them. But how?

According to all outward signs, it would be as easy for a crow to catch a humming bird as for a short eared owkl to strike down a bat in mid air. Bats are fast as lightning in their devious darting and twisting—they are here one second and gone the next. Their speed is almost legendary. To overtake them and strike them down in midair, the short eared owl must be exceptionally agile, which it certainly gives no indication of being.

If the owls do not catch bats in the air, they must catch them in their roosts, it sems logical to suppose. But here is another obstacle to the solution of the question. Bats roost in old belfreys, in the eaves of deserted barns, places not easily accessible to so large a bird as the owl, and along about dusk they, too, begin to bestir themselves.

TOURISTS BLAMED FOR BARBERRY BUSH BEING WIDESPREAD

Tourists who admire the barberry bust for its brilliant red berries and carry it away under the impression that they have a harmless, ornamental shrub, make the work of barberry eradication much more difficult, and, incidentally, aid in spreading the "rust" which attacks wheat and smaller grains and results in an appreciable loss to farmers in the state, according to Walter Reddy of the United States department of agriculture, who has been at Michigan State college conferring with the agriculturists on this year's campaign.

The drive against the barberry will be conducted, starting about July 1, in the northern part of the lower peninsula and some counties of the upper peninsula, according to Reddy. Michigan State college students will be employed as "scouts" to aid in the work. More than 200 pounds of rock salt were used last year in destroying the barberry bushes. Salt, piled around the bush is the most effective agent for eradication.

Reddy states that most tourists mistaken the barberry bush for a species of ornamental shrub, and that last summer many vacationists were noticed carrying away the bushes from Michigan. They were bound for other states, including Ohio, Indiann and Iowa.

AUTO FACTOR IN U. S. PROSPERITY

Paying almost $6,000,000,000 a year in wages to 3,500,000 persons, yielding $700,000 in taxes and ranking third in the value of its product, the automobile industry has developed from production in a few scattered mbachine shops to a factor of first economic importance. Much of the present property of the United States can be traced to its time-saving value in business and its contribution to the social welfare of our people. Ots condition is coming to be commonly accepted as the index of general business conditions. The spectacular and yet substantial growth of the industry during a brief 30 years has exerted a stimulating effect upon all business.

Registrations in 1895 indicated that a total of 300 persons throughout the United States purchased motor cars. Since that time each year has seen the number increase until, during 1925, it reached 4,336,751, with 4,500,000 indicated for the final returns of the year just passed.

According to figures of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, approximately seven and one-half per cent of the total United States exports consist of automobile products. Valued at $355,434,000 they rank third, yielding place only of raw cotton and a refined mineral oils.

The increasing complexity of our modern social and business exictence has been accompanied by the development of the automobile from an expensive luxury to the point where it has taken its proper place as a part of our transportation facilities. Formerly looked upon as a competitive factor by organizations using older methods of transportation, it is today welcomed and used as a supporting, supplementing and co-operative unit. More than 50 railroads in United States and Canada are now using motor trucks to supplement their shipping service; and nearly as many more are availing themselves of the motor bus.

As a social factor, the influence of the motor car is too evident to require extended comment. The wall erected around congested cities by lack of transportation has been destroyed. The population spreads out fan-shape. A great impetus has been given to healthful suburban living. The herding of great masses of humanity in over-crawded centers is no longer necessary. A population on wheels is as mobile as an army in the air.

While the growth of this industry has in a way been made possible by the manufacturing genius of thhis industrial age, it has at the same time directly contributed to improved manufacturing methods. Quality maintenance combined with large scale production has been an important result of such phases of manufacturing as standardization, intechangeability, and accuracy in foundry practics, all of which have seen their highest development within the automobile industry.

ATHLETIC GROUP RULES ON FITNESS FOR SPORT EVENTS

High school principals in the future must couch for the physical fitness as well as the scholasite eligibility of prep athletes, the Michigan State High School Athletic association has ruled.

Every boy that competes in an interscholastic athletic event must be examined by a physician and the report filed with the high school authorities.

A. W. Thompson, state director of athletics, points out that this step was taken to work against a boy endangering his health by competing when he is not physically capable of standing the strain invoked by the games. The rule will be in force this spring when regional track and field meets are held throughout Michigan. The association officials predict that new legions will answer the call to track this spring with the opportunities for competition offered by the new scheme

The association has also ruled that in the future high schools must enter into contract with officials at athletic contents. The contracts, it is felt, will bind both parties and do away with the possibilities of either disappointing the other.

A change in the arrangement for officiating at state basket ball tournaments has been made. In the future the association will assign all officials, doing away with the promoters of the tournaments selecting men to work the games.

How do you like it—ladies?

RAIDERS FEAR DOG MORE THAN GUNS

Federal officers, whose business it is to locate stills, serve subpenas and so forth, will tell you that they are more afraid of dogs than they are of guns.

And the reason for this fear was manifested once again recently when August Herbert, United States deputy marshal, went around to the rear of a house in Detroit. Herbert was assisting prohibition officers on a raid.

Experienced in matters concerning hostile dogs, Herbert cast a wary eye about the back yard. Sure enough his caution was not in vain. There was a dog, a big one, and Herbert halted with a hand on the gate. A closer look, and the marshal felt his qualms unfounded, however, for the dog was roped to the clothesline. It was a large black dog, wheel base 49 inches, clearance between chassis and ground about two feet.

"About the size of a Ford coupe," to quote Mr. Herbert's exact words.

"Grrrr, grrrr," growled the dog.

"Pooh, pooh," said Mr. Herbert, and sauntered airily to the rear landing.

Briskly then he turned his back on the dog to ascend the steps. And just then something hit him from the rear that shook the sturdy marshal "to the rafters," to quote again from his poet bellum account.

There ensued on the back porch a scene that would deceive the fastest camera lens. Even Herbert himself cannot describe the details of that encounter. Suffice to say that when fellow officers came around from the front to offer assistance Herbert's pants were badly gnawed in the rear. The dog, flatter than a Vermont pancake, was stretched glassy-eyed but breathing at Hebert's feet.'

Victorious, but still curious, Hebert now set forth to find when a tired dog is not tired. The clothesline was intact. So was the rope that bound the dog to the line.

"Aha," said Hebert, glacing back proudly at his brother officers. He was pointing to a neat little loop which connected leash and clothline, a loop which allowed the back yard cerberus to roam at will along the entire length of the line.

HISTORY OF WORLD PRINTED IN 1508 IS BOUGHT BY BANKER

A beautifully painted and illuminated book, printed in 1508, the work of German writers, has been acquired by Noyes L. Avery, president of the Michigan Trust company of Grand Rapids, who purchased the book from a collector in Rome.

The book with its illustrations, covers the history of the world up to the beginning of the sixteenth century, and was printed at Nuremburg, where the printers and writers spent eight years in compilation.

The lettering and type in this book of nearly 1000 poges is of such design that the modern German student meets with considerable difficulty in reading it. Although the great leather covers are stained with age, it is in a good state of preservation. It will be added to Avery's collection of old and rare books and maps.

The fly leaf bears a coat of arms indicating that it onse was owned by Count Graefen Axel von Kalchreuth. It contains an ancient may which confines the world to a comparatively small area.

BELL IN ARGONNE MEMORIAL TO SLAIN MICHIGAN SOLDIER

The American Legionarries who stop over night at Cunel, France, in the Argonne forest during their pilgrimage next fall will be awakened by the peal of the bell in the reconstructed church. Madame Julien Victor is the bell ringer. She lives just across the street and carries the key to the church. After the bell rings the cure comes.

This bell was hung in the steeple by Mr. and Mrs. Clay H. Hollister of Grand Rapids, Michigan. Mr. Hoddister is president of the Old National bank there. His son, George Merrick Hollister, a lieutenant of infantry, was killed in the Boiz de Cunel, Otober 12, 1918. The bell perpetuates his memory.

Cunel is but a few kilometers from the national American cemetery at Romagne. Members of the second A. E. F. will pass the church. Madame Victor, with her tow haired grandchildren trooping at her heels, always is glad to get the key and unlock the door so anyone may see this bell.

DETROITER OWNS LINCOLN'S LETTER

A letter written by Abraham Lincoln to Stephen A. Douglas in 1858, which influenced the course of American history probably as strongly as any other personal communication, is no win the possession of a Detroiter and is bound in a set of five unique volumes of the life of Abraham Lincoln.

Harry E. Davis, a dealer in rare books, is the owner of this unduplicated set of Lincoln, each volume a masterpiece of the binder's art and each volume containing valuable and unique original letters and photographs.

The letter written by Lincoln to Douglas fixes the terms of the Lincoln-Douglas debate held when the two men were contesting for a seat in the senate. The famous debate resulted in invitations being given Lincoln to scpeak in New York and Boston and gave him an opportunity to be heard by persons in the east, which resulted in his nomination. Following Lincoln's election in 1860 and before his inauguration in 1861, several southern states seceded, protesting against a national application of the doctrine that Lincoln had first publicly set forth in his debate with Douglas.

The original life of Lincoln, which is the base of his special set, was in two volumes, written by Francis Fisher Browne and published by the Plimpton Press. The additions increase the life from two small volumes to five volumes of large size, containing 460 extra illustrations and 132 original autograph letters, all inlaid in Italian hand-made paper.

MUSEUM GETS SWANS SLAIN BY LAW BREAKERS

Lawrence Duvall, game warden at Monroe, Michigan, found two dead swans floating ashore at Lakeside that had been shot by law breakers.

The pair were given to W. Bryant Tyrell of the Children's Museum of Detroit, and the preparator plans to mount them. Both are beautiful specimens with almost snow white plumage, one with a wing spread of six feet and the other with nine. They weigh 19 and 13 pounds, respectively.

We have two species of swans in America, the trumpeter, almost extince, and the whistling swan. Altho the latter has thinned out they seem to be increasing under rigid protection of the law.

A Fight

By VICTOR HUGO

La Vieuville was suddenly cut short by a cry of despair and at the same time a noise was heard wholly unlike any other sound. The cry and sounds came from within the vessel.

The captain and lieutenant rushed toward the gun deck but could not get down. All the gunners were pouring up in dismay.

Something terrible has just happened.

This is the most dangerous accident than can possibly take place on shipboard. Nothing more terrible can happen to a sloop of war in open sea and under full sail.

A cannon that breaks its moorings, suddenly becomes some strange, supernatural beast. It is a machine transformed into a monster. That short mass on wheels moves like a billiard ball, rolls with the rolling of the ship, plunges with the pitching, goes, comes, stops, seems to meditate, starts on its course again, shoots like an arrow from one end of the vessel to the other, whirls around, slips away dodges, rears, bangs, crashes, kills, exterminates.

It is a battering ram capriciously assaulting a wall. Add to this the fact that the ram is of metal, the wall of wood.

It is matter set free; one might say, this eternal slave was avenging itself; it seems as if the total depravity concealed in what we call inanimate things has escaped, and has burst forth all of a sudden; it apepars to lose patience, and to take a strange mysterious revenge; nothing more relentless than this wrath of the inanimate.

This enraged lump leaps like a panther, it has the clumsiness of an elephant, the nimbleness of a mouse, the obstinacy of an ox, the uncertainty of the billows, the zig zag of the lightning, the deafness of the grave.

It weighs ten thousand pounds, and it rebounds like a child's ball. It spins and then abruptly darts off at right angles.

And what is to be done? How put an end to it? A tempest ceases, a cyclone passes over, a wind dies down, a broken mast can be replaced, a leak can be stopped, a fire extinguished, but what wil become of this enormous brute of bronze. How can it be captured?

You can reason with a bull dog, astonish a bull, fascinate a boa, frighten a tiger, tame a lion; but you have no source against this monster, a loose cannon.

You can not kill it; it is dead; and at the same time it lives. It lives with a sinister life which comes to it from the infinite. The deck beneath it gives ti full swing. It is moved by the ship, which is moved by the sea, which is moved by the wind. This destroyer is a toy. The shop, the waves, the winds, all play with it, hence its frightful animation.

What is to pe done with this apparatus? How fetter this stupendous engine of destruction? How anticipate its comings and goings, its returns, its stops, its shocks?

Any one of its blows on the side of the ship may stave it in. How foretell its frightful wanderings? It is its mind, which seems to have ideas dealing with a projectile, which alters and changes its direction every instant.

How check the course of what must be avoided? The horrible cannon struggles, advances, backs, strikes, right, strikes left, retreats, passes by, disconcerts expectation, grinds up obstacles, crushes men like fleas. All the terror of the situation is in the fluctuations of the flooring.

How fight an inclined plane subject to caprices? The ship has, so to speak in its belly, an imprisoned thunderstorm, striving to escape; something like a thunderbolt rumbling above an earthquake.

In an instant the whole crew was on foot. It was the fault of the gun captain, who neglected to fasten the screw nut of the mooring chain; and had insecurely clogged the four wheels of the gun carriage; this gave play to the sole and the frame work, separated the two platforms, and the breeching. The tackle had given way, so that the cannon was no longer firm on its carriage. The stationary breeching, which prevents recoil, was not in use at this time. A heavy sea struck the por, the carronade, insecurely fastened, had recoiled and broken the chain, and began its terrible course over the deck.

To form an idea of this strange sliding, let one imagine a drop of water running over a glass.

At the moment when the fastenings gave way, the gunners were in the battery, some in groups, others scattered about, busied with the customary work among sailors getting ready for a signal for action. The carronade, hurled forward by the pitching of the vessel, made a gap in this crowd of men and crushed four at the first blow; then sliding back and shot out again as the ship rolled, it cut in two a fifth unfortunate, and knocked a piece of the battery against the larboard side with such force as to unship it. This caused the cry of distress just heard. All the men rushed to the companionway. The gun deck was vacated in a twinkling.

The enormous gun was left alone. It was given up to itself. It was its own master and master of the ship. It could do what it pleased. This whole crew, accustomed to laugh in time of battle, now trembled. To describe the terror is impossible.

Captain Boisberthelot and Lieutenana la Vieuville, although both of them dauntless men, stopped at the head of the companion way and dumb, pale and hesitating, looked down on the deck below. Some one elbowed past and went down.

It was their passenger, the peasant, the man of whom they had just been speaking a moment before.

Reaching the foot of the companionway, he stopped.

The cannon was rushing back and forth on the deck. One might have supposed it to be the living chariot of the Apocalypse. The marine lantern swinging overhead added a dizzy shifting of light and shade to the picture. The form of the connon disappeared in the violence of its course, and it looked now black in the light, now mysteriously white in the darkness.

It went on in its destructive work. It had already shattered four other guns and made two gaps in the side of the ship, fortunately above the water line, but where the water would come in, in case of heavy weather.

It rushed frantically against the framework; the strong timbers withstood the shock; the curved shape of the wood gave them great power of resistance; but they creaked beneath the blows of this huge club, beating sort of ubiquity. The precussions of on all sides at once, with a strange a grain of shot shaken in a bottle are not swifter or more senseless. The four wheels passed back and forth over the read men, cutting them, carving them, slashing them, till the five corpses were a score of stumps rolling across the deck; the heads of the dead men seemed to cry out; streams of blood curdled over the deck with the rolling of the vessel; the planks, damaged in several places, began to gape open. The whole ship was filled with the horrid noise and confusion.

The captain promptly recovered his presence of mind and ordered everything that could check and impede the cannon's mad course to be thrown through the hatchway down on the gun deck—mattresses, hammocks, spare sails, rolls of cordage, bags belonging to the crew, and bales of counterfeit assignats, of which the corvette carried a large quantity—a characteristic piece of English villiany regarded as legitimate warfare.

But what could these rags do? As nobody dared to go below to dispose of them properly, they were reduced to lint in a few minutes.

There was just sea enough to make the accident as bad as possible. A tempest would have been desirable, for it might have upset the cannon, and with its four wheels once in the air there would be some hope of getting it under control. Meanwhile the havoc increased.

There were splits and fractures in the masts, which are set into the framework of the keel and rise above the decks of ships like great, round pillars. The conlvusive blows of the cannon had cracked the mizzenmast and had cut into the mainmast.

The battery was being ruined. Ten pieces out of thirty were disabled; the breaches in the side of the vessel were increasing and the corvette fas beginning to leak.

The old passenger having gone down to the gun deck, stood like a man of stone at the foot of the steps. He cast a stern glance over this scene of decastation. He did not move. It seemed impossible to take a step forward. Every movement of the loose carronade threatened the ships destruction. A few moments more and ship wreck would be inevitable.

They must perish or put a speedy end to the disaster; some course must be decided on; but what? What an opponent was this carronade? Something must be done to stop this terrible madness—to capture this lightning—to overthrow this thunderbolt.

Boisberthelot said to La Vieuville: “Do you believe in God, chevalier?”

La Vieuville replied:

“God alone can save us from this,” said Boisberthelot.

Everybody was silent, letting the carronade continue its horrible din.

Outside, the waves beating against the ship responded with their blows to the shocks of the cannon. It was like two hammers alternating.

Suddenly in the midst of this inaccessible ring, where the escaped cannon was leaping, a man was seen to appear, with an iron bar in his hand. He was the author of the catastrophe, the captain of the gun, guilty of criminal carelessness, and the cause of the accident, the master of the carronade. Having done the mischief, he was anxious to repari it. He had seized the iron bar in one hand, a tiller rope with a slip noose in the other, and jumped down the hatchway to the gun deck.

Then began an awful sight; a titalic scene; the contest between gun and gunner; the battle of matter and intelligence; the duel between man and the inanimate.

The man stationed himself in a corner and with bar and rope in his two hands he leaned against one of the riders, braced himself on his legs, which seemed two steel posts, and, livid, calm, tragic, as if rooted to the deck, he waited.

He waited for the cannon to pass by him.

The gunner knew his gun, and it seemed to him as if the gun ought to know him. He had lived long with it. How many times he had thrust his hand into its mouth? It was his own familiar monster. He began to speak to it as if it were his dog.

“Come!” said he. Perhaps he loved it.

He seemed to wish it to come to him.

But to come to him was to come upon him. And then he would be lost. How could he avoid being cvrushed? That was the question. All looked on in terror.

Not a breast breathed freely, unless perhaps that of the old man, who was alone in the battery with the two contestants, a stern witness.

He might be crushed himself by the cannon. He did not stir.

Beneath them the sea blindly directed the contest.

At the moment when the gunner, accepting this frightful hand to hand conflict, challenged the cannon, some chance rocking of the sea caused the carronade to remain for an instant motionless and as if stupefied. “Come now!” said the man.

It seemed to listen.

Suddenly it leaped toward him.

The battle began. aBttle unprecedented. Fraility struggling against the involnerable. The gladiator of flesh attacking the beast of brass. On one side, brute force; on the other, a human soul.

All this was taking place in semi-darkness. It was like the shadowy vision of a miracle.

A soul, strange to say, one would have thought the cannon also had a soul; but a soul full of hatred and rage. The sightless thing seemed to have eyes. The monster appeared to lie in wait for the man. One would have at least believed that there was craft in this mass. It also chose its time. It was a strange, gigantis insect of metal having or seeming to have the will of a demon. For a moment this colossal locust would beat down on its four wheels like a tiger on its four paws, and begin to run at the man. He, supple, nimble, expert, writhed away like an adder from all these lightning movements. He avoided a collision, but the blows which he parried fell against the vessel and continued their work of destruction.

An end of broken chain was left hanking to the carronade. This chain had in some strange way become twisted about the screw of the cascabel. One end of the chain was fastened to the gun carriage. The other, left loose. whirled desperately about the cannon, making all its blows more dangerous.

The screw held it in a fairm grip, adding a thong to a battering ram, making a terrible whirlwind around the cannon, an iron lash in a brazen hand. This chain complicated the contest.

However, the man went on fighting. Occasionally, it was the man who attacked the cannon; he would creep along the side of the vessel, bar and rope in hand; and the cannon, as if it understood, and as though suspecting some snare, would flee away. The man, bent on victory, pursued it.

Such things can not long continue. The cannon seemed to say to itself, all of a sudde, “Come, now! Make an end of it!” and it stopped. One felt that the crisis was at hand. The cannon, as if in suspense, seemed to have, or really had—for to all it was a living being—a ferocious malice prepense. It made a sudden, guick dash at the gunner. The gunner then sprang out of the way, let it pass by, and cried out to it with a laugh, “Try it again!” The cannon as if enraged smashed a carronade on the port side; then, again seized by the invisible sling which controlled it, it was hurled to the starboard side at the man, who made his escape. Three carronades gave way under the blows of the cannon; then, as if blind and not knowing what more to do, it turned its back on the man, rolled from stern to bow, injured the stern and made a breach in the planking of the prow. Then ban took refuge at the foot of the steps, not far from the old man who was looking on. The gunner held his iron bar in rest. The cannon seemed to notice it, and without taking the trouble to turn around, slid back on the man, swift as the blow of an axe. The man, driven against the side of the ship, was lost. The whole crew cried out with horror.

But the old passenger, till this moment motionless, darted forth more quickly than any of this wildly swift rapadity. He seized a package of counterfeit assignats, and at the risk of being crushed, succeeded in throwing it between the wheels of the carronade. This decisive and perilous movement could not have been made with more exactness and precision by a man trained in all the exercises described in Dursoel's “Manual of Gun Practice at Sea.”

The package had the effect of a clog. A pebbel may stop a log, the branch of a tree turn aside an avalanche. The carronade stumbled. The gunner, taking advantage of this critical opportunity, plunged his iron bar between the spokes of one of the hind wheels. The connon stopped. It leaned forward. The man, using the bar as a lever, held it in equilibrium. The heavy mass was overthrown, with the crash of a falling bell, and the man, rushing with all his might, dripping with perspiration, passed the slip noose around the bronze neck of the subdued monster.

It was ended. The man had conquered. The ant had control over the mastadon; the pygmy had taken the thunderbolt prisoner.

The mariners and sailors clapped their hands.

The whole crew rushed forward with cables and chains, and in an instant the cannon was secured.

The gunner saluted the passenger.

“Sir,” he said, “you have saved my life.”

The old ma has resumed his impassive attitude and made no reply.

The man had conquered, but the cannon might be said to have conquered as well. Immediate ship wreck had been avoided, but the corvette was not saved. The damage to the vessel seemed beyond rpair. There were five breaches in her sides, on, very large, in the bow, twenty of the thirty carronades lay useless in their frames. The one which had just been captured and chained again was dissprung and consequently leveling the abled; the screw of the cascabel was gun made impossible. The battery was reduced to nine pieces. The ship was leaking. It was necessary to repair the damages at once and to work the pumps.

The gun deck, now that one could look over it was frightful to behold. The inside of an infuriated elephant's cage would not be more completely demolished.

However great might be the necessity of escaping observation, the necessity of immediate safety was still more imperative to the corvette. They had been obliged to light up the deck with lanterns hung here and there on the sides.

However, all the while this tragic play was going on, the crew were absorbed by a question of life and death, and they were wholly ignorant of what was taking place outside the vessel. The fog had grown thicker; the weather had changed; the wind had worked its pleasure with the ship; they were out of their course, with Jersey and Guernsey close at hand, further to the south than they ought to have been and in the midst of a heavy sea. Great billows kissed the gaping wounds of the vessel—kisses full of danger. The rocking of the sea threatened destruction. The breeze had become a gale. A squall, a tempest, perhaps, was brewing. It was impossible to see four waves ahead.

While the crew were hastily repairing the damages to the gun deck, stopping the leaks, and putting into place the guns were had been uninjured in the disaster, the old passenger had gone on deck again.

He had not noticed a proceeding which had taken place on the vessel. The Chevalier de la Vieuville had drawn up the marines in line on both sides of the main mast, and at the sound of the boatswain's whistle the sailors formed in line, standing on the yards.

The Count de Boisberthelot approached the passenger.

It was the gunner who had just shown himself so skillful in subduing monsters, and who had gained the mastery over the cannon.

The count gave the military salute to the old man in peasant's dress and said to him:

“General, in consideration of what this man has done, do you not think there is something due him from his commander?”

“I think so,” said the old man.

“Please give your orders,” replied Boisberthelot.

“It is for you to give them; you are the captain.”

“But you are the general,” replied Boisberthelot.

The old man looked at the gunner.

“Come forward,” he said.

The gunner approached.

The old man turned toward the Count de Boisberthelot, took off the cross of Saint Louis from the captain's coat and fastened it on the gunner's jacket.

The Mariners presented arms.

And the old passenger, pointing to the dazzled gunner, added:

Dismay succeeded the cheering.

Then in the midst of the death like stillness, the old man raised his voice and said:

“Carelessness has compromised this vessel. At this very hour it is perhaps lost. To be at sea is to be in front of the enemy. A shop making a voyage is an army waging war. The tempest is concealed, but it is at hand. The whole sea is an ambuscade. Death is the penalty of any misdemeanor committed on the face of the enemy. No fault is reparable. Courage should be awarded, and negligence punished.”

These words fell one after another, slowly, solemnly, in as ort of inexorable metre, like the blows of an axe upon an oak.

And the man, looking at the soldiers, added:

At a signal from Count de Boisberthelot, two sailors went below and came back bringing the hammock shroud; the chaplain, who since they sailed had been at prayer in the officers' quarters, accompanied the two sailors; a sergeant detached twelve marines from the line and arranged them in two files, six by six; the gunner, without uttering a word, placed himself between the two files. The chaplain, crusifix in hand, advanced and stood beside him.

“March,” said the sergeant. The platoon marched with slow steps to the bow of the vessel. The two sailors, carrying the shroud, followed. A gloomy silence fell over the vessel. A hurricane howled in the distance.

A few moments later, a light flashed, a report sounded through the darkness, then all was still, and the sound of a body falling into the sea was heard.

The old passenger, still leaning up against the main mast, had crossed his arms and was buried in thought.

JUST “THE THING” FOR SPRING WEAR

Milady's fashion designers offer this frock as delightfully attractive and seasonably correct for spring wear—especially as soon as the days get warmer.

WOODLAND HIGHWAY TO PARALLEL SUPERIOR

A beautiful woodland drive paralleling the southern shore of Lake Superior from Munsing to Marquette, will be completed by the middle of next summer. A provision of the contract calls for the completion of the highway not later than August 1, 1927.

Work on the stretch of road will be started as soon as the ground is in condition for grading and ditching. The cost of the project will be defrayed by funds appropriated last fall by the board of supervisors of Alger and Marquette counties.

When the strip is completed, one of the most attractive drives in the northern peninsula will be complete. Closely following the Lake Superior coast line and avoiding the wooded hills to the south, the hikhway will afford a 40 mile drive through hard woods and pine porests with the blue waters of Lake Superior in view most the entire distance. The road has a firm surface of hard clay and gravel.

FENTON POSTMASTER ASKS CARRIER SERVICE

E. E. Yerdon, postmaster of Fenton, has made application to the postmaster general's office in Washington for delivery service. Postoffice inspectors who have made a survey say that two carriers would be able to cover the territory, visiting the homes within the four square miles of the residential district once and the business section twice each day.

“GRIFFON” AS NAME OF TAEM IRKS COLLEGIANS

The desirability of continuing the use of the sobriquet “Griffon” in connection with the athletic teams of the College of the City of Detroit is being seriously questioned by members of the athletic department of the school.

Claims that the name now used is “ambiguous” and misleading prompted editors of the Detroit Collegian, weekly student publication, to devote considerable space in its issue to a discvussion of the question in the hope of arousing student opinion.

City college's search for an appropriate title for its team has been long and unavailing, according to the “Collegian,” which cites an article in its issue of October, 1925, in which the nickname “Demon” was advocated. The matter was dropped until 1926, when the college handbook appeared using the team “Griffon” in connection with the athletic terms.

SONGS OF EARLY FRENCH SETTLERS IN DOCTOR'S LIBRARY

A half century ago and more the river and lake front of and about Detroit, from Grosse Pointe to Ecorse, presented far different scenes than it does today In those remote and happy times the river and lake was dominated by sturdy sons of France, “habitants” as they were called, and many of whose names are immortalized not only in song and story, but also in the names of many Detroit streets. Beaubien, Campau, Dubois, Chene and Dequendre are names which cannot be forgotten by Detroiters of any generation, and in Grosse Pointe and down the river around Ecorse one finds many more traces in place names of the early French settlers.

From these hardy Gallis pioneers who are so indissolubly bound up with the early history of Detroit there arose a literature, a dialect literature indigenous and unique. “Les Habitants” were a hardy lot. They worked hard and played hard and when they worked and played, they sang, and man of their songs and verses have been preserved in various was, perhaps the greatest collection of all being written by the late William Henry Drummond, M. D.

BENZIE TOWNS OPPOSE RELOCATING TRUNK LINE

The village of Beulah and Benzonia are waging a fight to prevent the relocation of trunk line M-11. The State Highway Department has been giving serious consideration for more than a year now to relocating the pike and swinging it around the two towns to avoid the giant hill, the longest on the west Michigan Pike from the Indian state line to Mackinaw.

State engineers say the present steep grade cannot be eliminated unless th roead is relocated. The trunk line now runs through the main streets of the villages, Benzonia being at the top of the hill and Beulah at the foot.

Traverse City is joinink with the two Benzie county towns in opposing the relocation.

HITS LAND BOOM IN DETROIT LONG AGO

To an English visitor in Detroit 75 years ago, two things made a deep impression. Capt. MacKinnon, of the British navy, wrote “A Tour of America,” after crossing America in 1851, and devoted a chapter of the book to the real estate boom in Detroit and the trail of the conspirators who tried to drive the Michigan Central Railway out of business by wrecking trains, burning the depot in Detroit and otherwise making life for officials of the new road miserable.

“The population of Detroit has increased,” he wrote, “duhing the last 109 years, from 11,000 to 26,000; an advance which is mainly owing to the facilities afforded by the Michigan Central Railroad, for concentrating the emigrants from many routes on their way to the West.

“An absurd spirit of speculation has likewise contributed to the increase. Land, for building lots, is now valued at higher prices than a city 10 times as large could warrant. This spirit of speculation is now the curse of the Wester nStates. Five years ago the land in question was quite as well situated for building upon as at present; it has, however, increased from $30 a lot to $1,000. So great an inflation and imaginary value cause individuals to fancy themselves enormously wealthy.

“If pushed for money they will borrow at 10 and 12 per cent per annum, Nay, I have known from 4 to 8 per cent per month given to enable parties to hold lots, which will not be available as productive property for many years to come.

“This mania is now (May, 1851) raging furiously all over the Union, but the chief madness appears to dwell in the far West.

“During my brief stay at Detroit a singular trial was in progress; so singular and altogether unprecedented that I could not refrain from attending the court.

“It appeared that an indivdual had conceved some spite against the newly opened Michigan Central Railway. To glut his violent and deadly animosity he determined to destroy the whole concern, passengers and all, and, in the prosecution of his purpose he formed a secret society of villians to the number of 52. So skillfully was this society managed that for two years the members were enabled to bid defiance to the law, although the existence of the infamous gang was well known. During this period they committed a series of depredations, usch as burning the railway depot at Detroit, valued at upawrd of 20,000 pounds, and placing obstructions on the line, in hope of killing the passengers, in order to run the railway.

“At length the railway proprietors attacked them with their own weapons and got several shrewd officials to threaten vengeance for some imaginary grievance. The bait took with the gang, who, determined once again to burn down the newly erected depot, entered into communication with some of the officials. After a long and cautious negotation, the conspirators decided to admit one of the apparently disaffected officials into the gang, if he proved himself worthy such an honor.

“Having first communicated with the directors, the building was set on fire; but presautions had been taken to prevent any damage. An alarm was nevertheless bruited abroad, far and near.

“The gang now considered their new associate sufficiently implicated to be part of themselves; and, the proprietors speedily becoming acquaintde with the names of all the conspirartos, the whole gang, numbering 52 persons, were apprehended and thrown into prison. Among them were several who up to this time had borne high characters, and were esteemed bytheir neighbors as persons of influence and consideration. All sorts of diabolical instruments were found; principally to blow up trains, passengers and all.

TWO LAINSBURG MINISTERS QUIT FOR OTHER DUTIES

Two ministers of Lainsburg has tendered their resignations. Rev. Clarence Young, pastor of the Congregational church, has accepted a call to the Ross Memorial church at Port Huron and will leave May 1. He has been pastor for seven years.

Rev. Laurence A. Smith, pastor of the Baptist church, has resigned.

He will engage in secular work during the summer and will enter the Northern Baptist Theological school in Chicago in the fall to complete his work.

$1,000 IN REWARDS for Poultry Thieves!
The Michigan Business Farmer
BUSINESS FARMER

We hereby offer a reward of $50.00 for the evidence leading to the arrest and conviction of any person guilty of stealing chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese or guinea fowls which are the property of any paid-up subscriber to THE MICHIGAN BUSINESS FARMER who is a member of THE MICHIGAN BUSINESS FARMER Service and Protective Bureau at the time of the robbery.

If your poultry house is robbed report immediately to your sheriff, ask him to telegraph the State Police, and write us full particulars.

The Michigan Business Farmer

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

If You Are a Poultry Raiser

you need this protection and this paper is cooperating in this campaign by offering three signs, (size 6x8 inches like the above) to be posted on your farm buildings, a certificate of membership in the Michigan Business Farmer Service and Protective Bureau, a one year new or renewal subscription to

Deaths Caused By Alcohol

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is about to initiate an educational drive to bring about an understanding of the mortality from alcoholism before and after prohibition The drive will be undertaken through the fifty two state organizations, literature now being in preparation for the education of the public.

The facts are gleaned from a study carried on by Miss Cora Frances Stoddard, Director of Scientific Temperance Investigation, and indicate:

First: That the alcoholic death rate was far greater when legally protected saloons sold the so-called "good" liquor than since prohibition.

Second: That the deaths from poison alcohol have declined rather than increased.

Third: That the recent increase in alcoholic death rates are the direct result of the wet drive to ridicule the 18th amendment.

Prohibition saved 16,640 from death by alcoholism in the first six years; but it would have saved more than twenty five thousand had it not been tor the great wet drive, which created a public ridicule of prohibition and an urge to drink in violation of law.

Alcoholism is as preventable as small pox, and yet more people die of alcoholism than die of small pox and they are just as dead. Legislation alone is not sufficient to prevent alcoholism any more than sanitary laws will automatically reduce contagion. There must be voluntary observance and effective official enforcement.

The first result of national prohibition was an immediate drop in the number of deaths from alcoholism to a mere sixth part of what they had been. Wherever the bootlegger has been encouraged the figures for alcoholism have risen slowly, and in Maryland where there has never been an enforcement law the deaths from alcoholism have shown the greatest increase, especially in 1926. Where people drink they die of alcholism; and where prohibition is observed and enforced the alcoholic mortality is low.

Deaths from poison alcohol have decreased since prohibition. The United States Census figures show just 194 deaths from poison alcohol in 1921 and 182 in 1925. The Metropolitan Life Life Insurance tables show ninety in 1920 and twenty nine in 1926.—W. C. T. U.

Report of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending April 23, 1927

Frank Kelly, arrested Monday for using vulgar and indecent language before women, appeared before Justice Aldrich on Wednesday and was fined $25 and costs which were paid.

William Ferland, the 16 year old schoolboy who ran away from his home in Detroit because "the school didn't teach him what he wanted to know," was returned to his home on Tuesday.

Chas. Stanley, late of Hillsdale, was arrested Monday nite while accompanied by a jug of liquor. Charles was brought before Justice Aldrich, where he plead guilty and was sentenced to pay the costs and spend 30 days in jail. In case that the costs are not paid, Chas will have 10 more days coming to him.

Minnie Baker, of forgery fame, was placed on 2 years probation by the Circuit Judge.

About 125 gallons of raisin jack was removed from a vacant house west of Hillsdale by the Sheriff's Department after no owner for the same could be found.

Fred Kane, who recently came before the Courts and plead guilty to obtaining goods and credit under false pretenses, and was thereupon sentenced to serve 60 days in jail, has fallen on evil days. As our readers may remember, the days were suspended and Fred was placed on probation on condition that he would pay all of these accounts which he contracted thru the above method by July 1st. and meanwhile and forever after follow the straight and narrow path. Evidently the aforesaid path was too straight for Fred, for he went back to his old tricks. Fred has just begun to serve his 60 days. with the prospect that when he comes out there will be still more.

Ed Tremaine, another of Hillsdale's prominent bootleggers, was arrested Wednesday by the Sheriff's Department for violating the Prohibition Law. He appeared before Justice Aldrich on Friday and demanded an examination, which was set for April 28th and he was released on $1000 bail.

The case of Guy and Carmela Bruno, Riley Flannery, Victor Fish, and George Metcalf, which came up for examination this past week, have all been continued into this coming week.

The Sheriff's Department was busy Friday afternoon and all day Saturday in connection with the Jonesville Bank robbery. The lone bandit, who got in the neighborhood of $800 for his work, was chased up and down the highways and byways of 2 counties by a public spirited citizens, and finally got away in the wild country in the western part of Lenawee Co. However, the license number on the car driven by the robber was recognized, and better still the man himself was identified. The Sheriff's Department can now state beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the hold-up man was Roy Pratt, Supervisor of Cambridge Township. Why he should commit such a crime is inexplicable to everyone who knows him, but the fact still remains, and is admitted by all, Roy Pratt is guilty. Members of the Hillsdale County Sheriff's Department as well as the State Police and Sheriff's of 4 other counties nearby, are doing their utmost to apprehend the man, and all are confident that his arrest will be made at an early date.

Later—Pratt was arrested at a hotel in Kalamazoo Monday afternoon and is now in Hillsdale gaol. He steadfastly denies his guilt and has engaged Jim Helme of Adrian to defend him.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail 8. No. under sentence 4. No. awaiting trial 4. Total 8.

The Disappeorance of Our Timber

Not many days ago the Editor visited the neighborhood of his boyhood days and saw a much admired woodlot of his youth torn and gutted by the ruthless rampage of the axe and the whining bite of the saw. Here forty years ago magnificent white oaks 50 feet high and 3 feet in diameter had reared their heads, walnuts end black oaks, hickories and yellow oaks had stood since primeval times, and we wondered if the owner felt he would be really exonerated from criminal despoiling. Here were trees that had been standing since the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth casting their wonderful shade in the hot days of summers long ago. Here they stood—every fall shedding their verdant leafy foliage; coating the moist earth with inches of fresh mould. Here the wild birds nested and reared their young, the white winged hawk and the snowy crested owl found their rendezvous, and possibly filled the long lonely hours of night with occasional hoots as the Pottawatomie wandered on his way perchance in search of the red deer. All these years up to the taking up of the land by early pioneers of this county these magnificent trees had stood. At that time probably a number of the finest and best were sacrificed for barn timbers and house frames or for log structures in which the settler sought to incorporate his family but in all probability the inroads at that time were scarcely noticed. Then for 75 years more the woodlot stood practically untouched furnishing stove wood from wind-falls, more and more as wood grew scarcer and coal mounted in price. Now the farmer has drained his farm. Fields that once contained wet spots are entirely dry even in the spring season. The natural result has been the moisture has left these woodlots and the trees having stood stationery and without growth for forty years are dying. Each year a percentage of trees are killed and at present the owner has decided to clean up the patch—hence the whine of the big saw and the screech of the steam whistle. This is to be regreted.

The average home owner who strips off these forests has little or no realization of what damage he is inflicting to his farm. Most of them have never given it a thought They do not known that with the forests goes fertility, humus, warmth, nitrogen and practically all that is valuable in farm soils. The moisture content is ruined completely because the net work of tree roots are the only conveyors of moisture and they sometimes function for long distances. In short we would calculate the value of any farm was really lowered about one-third at least by stripping off this wood-lot and yet the sacrifice goes right on year after year. Most of the ground which is now being denuded of timber never will be broken up because farmers sons are no longer interested in farm pursuits and the profits from the farm are so small after the taxes and insurance are paid, that they do not consider for one moment the breaking up of new ground, so the cutting and slashing remains an eye sore to the community and is practically non-productive, only being used for sheep pasture. My God, men! When will you wake up to your responsibilities?

Peppermint Is Staple in Michigan

59,000 acres of land in Michigan and Indiana were planted last year to peppermint but we hear there is a drop in prices of oil, owing probably to the excess production in western states. Farmers in Michigan are assisted by modern methods of tractors, discs and other machinery. The process may be familiar to some of you but to others it may be described as follows: The peppermint plants are set in rows and tilled very carefully to eliminate all weeds. The preferred soil is black loam or muck usually found in Michigan on redeemed marsh land or land that has been drained. When the mint is fully grown it is cut with a mowing machine and after slightly curing it is hauled to the still where a large quantity is placed in a vat and packed very much the same as silage. Here a current of live steam is introduced and passes through the mass thence it is conducted to a coil of copper pipe which worms through a big tank of cold running water. The sudden change of temperature causes the steam heavily impregnated with the essential oils of peppermint to condense and it drips from the lower end of the worm as fluid into the receptacle. Here the specific gravity of the water and oil being different it separates and the oil and water are easily poured off by themselves. This completes the manufacture as far as the still is concerned. Often it is desirable to refine and purify this oil which is accomplished by means of chemical action and it becomes the high priced drug product which you buy in drug stores. Michigan climate seems to put the proper tang into the oil.

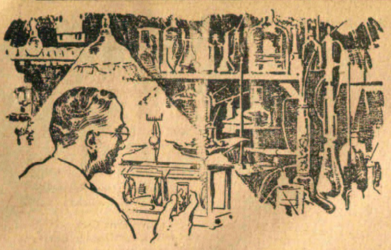
Don't Send Your Order Out of Town Until You See What We Can Do



The quality of steels, fuels, oils, rubber, cement, and all other materials is constantly tested by our experts to assure their measuring up to New York Central standards.

Summoned to Our Service

Although it is upon the railroad man's faithful and intelligent performance that good transportation service depends, leaders in many other walks of life are constantly devoting their best efforts toward creating and maintaining the high standards of that service.

Among these are men of the sciences, recognized leaders in chemistry, physics and metallurgy. Then there are civil, mechanical and electrical engineers, financiers, architects and other specialists whose knowledge and technical training are directly or indirectly employed.

In the creation and maintenance of New York Central standards there is hardly a field of knowledge whose representatives have not been summoned to our service.

The Radio Regulators

The much-mooted Radio Committee appointed by President Coolidge to regulate the broadcasting systems in this country as yet has not shown any surprising activity. Nobody in these parts has noticed any decrease of interference and we are wondering if the Committee after all might be a joke just put on because somebody or something required an effort be made. We are of the opinion this Committee will be about as efficient as the Senate investigations of coal combines and other necessary evils which we are afflicted with. President Coolidge is designated by Chief-of-Budget B. J. Lords as a courageous executive and no doubt this is true, but the matter of Radio interference concerns many millions of dollars tied up in expensive apparatus all over the middle west and the east which to be junked would cause untold losses to the owners. We hear faint peeps about "consolidating" but few of us probably realize what this means or the difficulties in the way of it. There is one dead sure thing—telepathy is coming soon by means of which a moving picture of the speakers or actors or the players will be thrown onto a mirror right in front of the receiver, so that when you tune in on WJR, WWJ, WOC, WCX, WLS, WLW or any other station you will at once be placed in side the studio or place of sending and you will not need to go outside your home to witness the highest grade concerts by John Phillip Sousa or Madame Schuman Heink. The general surprise manifested when the horseless carriage, the undersea boat, the moving picture were perfected many years ago is not re-inacted. People are so used to miracles that if a voice from Heaven should speak out any day they would not be terrified or amazed simply taking it as a trend of the times.

Farmers To Plant Millions of Spruce

Two million white spruce seedlings will be distributed by M. S. C. to farmers of Michigan for planting next year.

Spruce is especially adapted to paper production. The wood fibers are long and make a paper which is not easily torn. It is believed that there is a great deal of land in Michigan that is especially adapted to the production of wood pulp for the mills which make this State a leader in paper manufacture.

The forestry nursery at the College will be doubled in producing capacity every three years according to present plans. The demand for trees from the nursery this year was so great that many orders could not be filled.

The trees are being used for ornamental plantings, reforestration work, windbreaks, and to prevent the shifting of sand dunes. Many counties, even in the southern part of Michigan, are now making extensive plantings of white pine and spruce. Norway spruce is used for plantings in many cases because a crop of Christmas trees can be harvested in ten years.

The first boys and girls forestry club has been formed at Bangor. The club members are planting several thousand Norway spruce this year.

Seed for the white spruce seedlings which will be grown by the college this year has been furnished by the Huron Sulphite and Paper Company.

Prize Essay Contest

The year 1927 marks the one hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Hillsdale County. In an effort to commemorate this event Ann Gridley Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution are holding a prize essay contest, which will be open to all Senior and Junior High School students of Hillsdale County. The Chapter is most ably assisted in this by our very competent County Commissoner of Schools.

Prizes for the best essays on local history will be awarded as follows: First, a prize of five dollars for the best essay on "Our County Centennial" by a high school student; Second, a prize of three dollars for the best essay on the same subject written by a seventh or eighth grade pupil.

These essays need not be lengthy and on the other hand, no limit is specified. The object of the contest is to get interesting material, well told.

The best essay in the high school contest will be read at the centennial celebration which will be held in Hillsdale July 4.

All contestants should send essays to the office of the County Commissioner of Schools, at Hillsdale, on or before June 20. Essays should be neatly written in ink, upon large size note book paper. They will be judged upon the following points: Historic interest; literary value; and neatness.

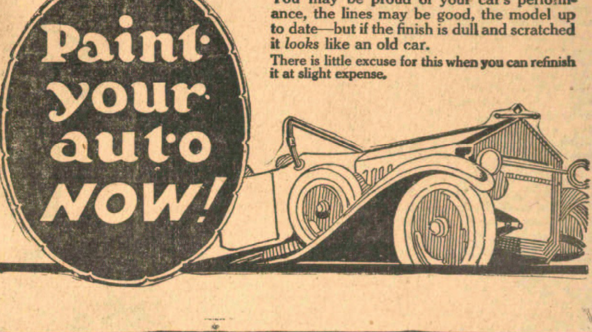
It is desired that many of our boys and girls will participate in this contest.

Anne Sutton, Regent Ann Gridley Chapter D. A. R. Hillsdale Mich.

Noticed A Change

A city man who recently went back to visit the farm where he grew up was disappointed in the stream that flowed across the place. It was much smaller than it used to be. Worse still, there were no fish in it. When a boy, he used to catch lots of fish there. Now, though the vicinity was as rural as ever, and there was no pollution in the stream, he found no fish at all. "Were the banks wooded when you were a boy?" asked a naturalist whom he had asked for an explanation. "Yes, they were. There were plenty of fine, large shade trees, and big pools where we looped suckers were well shaded. But now the trees are all gone." "Your question is answered." Rains come as usual, but there are no trees to develop the moss and vegetable mold in the soil and let the water drain gradually into the creek, as it used to. It all goes into the stream with a rush, and carries off from the creek bed the vegetation and food on which the fish used to live. In flood times, too, the fishes' eggs nests washed away. So it becomes harder and harder for them to exist there. Naturally they give up. The survivors drift down stream and never come back." Which is just one more little reason for not deforesting the land. Why not leave trees along the streams, at least, if they must be cut everywhere else?

CLEAN UP & PAINT UP



Paint your auto NOW!

You may be proud of your car's performance, the lines may be good, the model up to date—but if the finish is dull and scratched it looks like an old car.

There is little excuse for this when you can refinish it at slight expense.

Clean Up Your Garden

You are hearing a lot these days about the corn borer situation in Hillsdale County and you are seeing things too. Tractors and stubble pulverizers are moving in farmers lots and in every way you are given to understand that the demand to "clean up" don't mean maybe. From Prof. Hasselman of the M. S. C. we got the following instructions relative to small patches of corn stubble and litter: "Garden patches of sweet corn in different towns and villages are under just as strict surveillance as the country districts and they must be attended to right speedily. In most cases it is believed the owners are not complying with these instructions because they do not think they apply to towns—in which they are badly mistaken. This law applies equally to garden patches of sweet corn, in cities and villages, and corn refuse around canning factories, broom factories and elevators. Burning this refuse is the best way and not as some suppose dumping on the city dump. The latter treatment does not kill the corn borer at all. So if you have garden patches no matter how small of standing stalks or stubble you Must clean this up by burning at once or it will be done for you by May 1st and your taxes will have to pay the shot. Either the authorities will do this or force you to do it. Bear this in mind.

Governor's Speech To Help Ypsilanti $500 000 Campaign

The air was crammed last week with news of Michigan State Normal College, and the campaign which its alumni began last week (Wednesday) to raise $500,000 for a Union Building a Diamond Jubilee present for their Alma Mater.

(Friday) night when Governor Fred W. Green, an alumnus of the college, broadcasted a talk about his belief in Ypsilanti Normal, and what it means to the future of Michigan. The talk which wsa at 6:30 o'clock, was given from WJR, Richards-Oakland Station, Detroit, on a wave length of 516 meters.

Following his speech over the air, Governor Green attended the Diamond Jubilee dinner of Ypsilanti alumni at the Masonic Temple Detroit, and was the guest of honor and speaker of the evening. There are over 3,000 alumni and former students of the Normal College in Detroit, and a large proportion of them attended the gathering.

In the greatest assemblage of Ypsilanti alumni ever held, the campaign for the Union was begun last week all over Michigan and in many places outside. Scores of Diamond Jubilee dinners were held, and speakers from the college told of the past and future of the institution. This morning the campaign workers set out for the $500,000 objective. The campaign will last till May 20.

The city of Ypsilanti is working with an organization of 90 leading business men as canvassers to raise $30,000 as it share in the campaign The effort started last week Monday night. Daniel L. Quirk, Jr., is chairman.

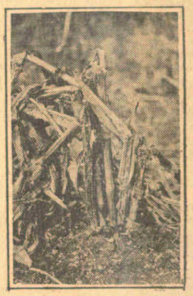
Completely Ruined



Why they call the European Corn Borer a "borer" is answered by this picture of a completely ruined hill of corn. The borers tunnel through the summer, so weakening it that it often topples over before the ear can mature.

Tea-table Talk

Mrs. A. is having tea with Mrs. W., and they find the O. P. A. Club must have a blue book of By-laws and the U-Go I-Went Class of are needing some programs for their semi-annual Barbecue and Dance.

Says Mrs. A. to Mrs. W: "I am all mixed up in my dates. Had so much to look after this month that I simply forgot to make out the program for our big dance. The fact is, with the S. O. B. Club, The Rolling Pin bunch, and the Instigator's I have been completedy done up."

"Right you are" said Mrs. W. "The printer down at the Advocate was asking me to-day what you were about. He says he must get your copy tomorrow morning in order to deliver the programs in time for the dance." Mrs. A. slammed the percolator, gulped a cup-full of tea and made a bee line for her desk. "I'll do it now!"

INDIANS FLED 1ST TRAIN IN GENESEE

Many thrilling and romantic incidents are told of the pioneer days in Grand Blank township, Genesee county. The natural beauty of the woodlands that bordered Thread river as it pursed its way in graceful curves and bends to the north, had an especial to the Indians, the territory being one of their favorite camping grounds long before the coming of the white man.

According to an informative note printed on a map of Grand Blank, the Indians perpetrated one of their barbarous acts of burning a white man at the stake at one of the encampments located upon what is no wthe F. S. Sawer farm, the east half of the southwest quarter of section 10. The man was brought there from Detroit, according to the note.

Jacob Stevens is claimed to have been the county's first white settler, taking up his residence in what is now grand Blanc township in 1823. He was accompanied by his wife, two sons and five daughters. The early pioneer dwelling was built where the home of Mrs. B. F. Bush now stands. Traveling in those days was a wearisome task, 25 days being required for the journey from New York state to Grand Blanc.

While the relationship at this period between the white man, and the Indian was comparatively friendly, there smoldered in the hearts of a number of the redmen traces of old animosity and hatred.

George Judson, grandfather of George Judson, of Argentine township, a member of the present board of supervisors, was in the early days appointed Indian agent over the tribes of this locality. It was his custom, once each year, accompanied by the Indians, all astride their ponies, to journey to the government supply station located then at Pontiac. There the Indians were given their allotment of supplies furnished them by the government.

It was on such a pligrimage that the Indian party had proceeded a few miles east of Fenton when they came in sight of construction work upon the Detroit, Grand Haven & Mackinac railway, that had earlier been built from Detroit to Pontiac; but was at this time being built westward on its way to Grand Haven.

A locomotive hauling a work train came puffing and snorting toward them. It was the Indians first view of the "iron horse." Seized with terror and shouting loudly in their own language, "Here comes the devil! Teh devil's going to get us!" they lashed their horses in a frenzy of fright, absolutely deaf to their agent's endeavor to explain the matter to them, and wheeling their ponies, set off upon a mad gallop.

SPRING GRID TESTS ON AT ANN ARBOR TO FIND "UNKNOWNS"

Once again south Ferry Field harbors gridiron aspirants chasing the elusive ball as the first move in the spring boot ball program is made. Coach Tad Weiman has been at work with unters, passers and receivers. Twenty men have been drilling steadily, enjoying the individual attention that will be so precious after spring vacation, when the general call will be sounded.

Mischigan's problem this spring is to develop from the unknown material candidates to replace Flora at end, Lovette and Dewey as guard, Friedman at quarter, Webber at full and Molenda at half back. On the face of it the task seems impossible, but the coaching staff feels equal to the occasion.

One hundred and twenty men will answer the call after vacation, and this entiret number will be kept. The main object is to discover unknowns, although no little attention will be showered on the freshmen and the reserves of last year with whom the coaches are already acquainted.

The kickers and passers have been given the adidtional benefit of three weeks pre-vacation practice, because the nature of their job requires long practice, in order to acquire the necessary skill. While it is comparatively easy to find a man who has determination, it alone is not sufficient to make a good punter or passer.

Last year Michigan was unusually fortunate in having the services of Gilbert throughout the season. If he had been injured the Wolverines would have been in serious difficulty, as they had no man whom they could rely on to fill the gap. This year the coaches do not plan to trust to luck again, but at the very outset seek one or two competents.

The job of filling Friedman's dual position at quarter, and as the regular passer, is one of the most difficult at hand. Passing, like kicking is another knack that cannot be developed overnight, and it is with this fact in mind that several aspiring throwers have been put to work.

Oosterbaan and Nyland are the only returning letter men at end. The latter had scarcely any experience last fall. The loss of Flora has left a gap more serious than supposed as there is no available material to put into the position at first glance. At this particular phase of their problem the coaches will direct their attention during the next month.

Molenda and Webber, Michigan's "big Berthas" in the back field, have passed into the realm of ex-players. Webber through the three year limit, Molenda by turning professional. Hoffman, who looked like a million dollars towards the close of last season, will be back, but Michigan needs several more who hit the line for yards when they are needed.

In Lovette and Dewey, Michigan lost a pair of staunch guards. Although Baer, rGinnell, Gabel, Oosterbaan and Truskowski return next year the coaches realize what a task it is to fill line positions to produce a line capable of holding its own against Minnesota and Illinois.

MOTOR WIZARD'S SON SWAYS WAL LSTREET FROM FOREST CAMP

Every so often Wall Street reports state that the marget was influenced by traders operating at Palm Beach or White Sulphur Springs, but there is no case on record of a report stating that the market was influenced by operations carried on from Roscommon county, Michigan.

On the mace of it that statement has the ear marks of a "wise crack," but the fact is that the seemingly remote circumstances of Roscommon being the seat of operations on a large scale on New York Stock Exchange is true. The course of the market has been influenced by trading carried on from there and on more than one occasion General Motors has been sent to a new high mark by a judiciously placed order inaugurated there.

The force behind the operations at Roscommon is R. C. Durant, better known to the public as Cliff Durant and son of W. C. Durant, founder of General Motors and market wizard. For months young Durant has been carrying on large scale market operations with General Motors getting the bulk of his attention. His trading in that issue alone is said to run frequently from 10,000 to 20,000 shares a day.

Part of the time Durant carries on his operations from a suite in a Detroit hotel, but most of the time he spends in his camp at Roscommon. Mr. Durant's camp is freed from the distractions of civilization out of business hours, but during the sessions of the stock exchange it is as closely linked with Wall Street as it would be if he were conducting his operations from an office in Manhattan. This is achieved through the use of private telegraph and telephone wires.

World's Only One-Legged Baseball Pitcher

Up in Seattle, Washington they have a team known as the "White Salmon" Washington baseball club. And on that team is a young fellow—Garver by name—who has a very singular reputation. He's the only known one-legged baseball pitcher in the world. Garver, who is pictured above, does not find his physical handicap much of a detriment to his playing ability. He has a very good, strong right arm with plenty of speed and with it has pitched his team to many, many victories.

MAN, 64, NEVER SAW MOVIE, REFUSES RIDE IN AUTO AS TOO FAST

Edward Cahill, 64 years old, a bachelor farmer residing on the West Michigan Pike, 10 miles from Scottsville, is said to be the only able-bodied man in the county who has never attended a motion picture theater. Only once has it been possible to coax him into an automobile. Further, Mr. Cahill says he has no desire to see a movie or go motoring.

Mr. Cahill has lived on the same farm for 49 years and has made less than a dozen trips to Manistee or to Scottsville.

"I get my pleasure behind the plow and in reading," he says. He follows the newspaper closely and is a student of history.

WILEY RED MAN USES HIS TEPEE TO DRAW TRADE

While the Indian in Michigan has generally foresworn the ways of his ancestors the art of constructing comfortable and commodious tepees is still exercised to a small extent in some portions of the upper peninsula. The wily Red man now, however, uses these picturesque habitations to attract the attention of the state summer tourists to woven willow or sweet grass baskets, whose manufacture and sale has now become his chief industry, rather than a covering for the squaw and papoose.

His skill, however, in the use of hemlock and birch bark is still equal to that of his earliest ancestors.

OTTAWA COUNTY ADDS 5 MILES OF PAVEMENT

The Ottawa county road commission will pave five miles of county highway this spring. The program includes thre and one-half miles on the Ottawa Beach road, connecting up with the new parkway to be built at Ottawa Beach; one mile on the Alpena Beach road; one-half mile on Byron road, east of Zeeland, and one-quarter mile leading from M-16 to Nunica.

LYNX RARE HERE, TRAPPED IN STATE

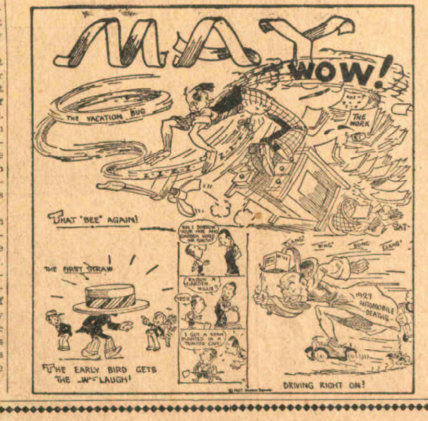
Due to its scarcity, very rarely in late years has a lynx been trapped and shot in Michigan, but word gion, Cheboygan County, that just hunter after a week of careful work on the trail.

Last summer, Paul Merritt, game hunter of South America and Africa, while trout fishing in our northern streams crossed a trail he recognized as that of a lynx. He forgot the incident until his return from South America to Michigan a month ago. Being at leisure, he decided to visit the section where he had seen the signs of the animal. actions, and unless intimidated by the presence of man, rarely changes its coures of travel, said Mr. Merritt." After scouting the country surrounding Muskrat Landing for surrounding Muskrat Landing for week old trail in the snow about 100 feet from the bankof the Indian River. There I carefully set two double spring saw tooth traps a foot apart.

The next morning I visited the spot taking great care not to disturb the set, and found everything as I had left it. That night a light snow fell, and again I went to the traps and found them empty. The sixth morning my efforts were awarded. The lynx had been caught by both forefeet. Abullet put the animal out of its mysery. The body of the lynx was three feet long and about twenty inches high at the shoulders, and weighed twenty-three pounds."

ENGINEERS ARE INVITED TO COPPER COUNTRY

At the invitation of Dr. W. O. Hotchkiss, president of Michigan Tech, the Michigan Engineerin sfgcioyETT the Michigan Engineering society is planning a pilgrimage to the copper country of Michigan this summer, according to Byron E. Parks, of Grand Rapids, who was named chairman of a committee to arrange the tour. The other members of the committee are George Fenkell of Detroit; G. C. Dillman of the state highway department, Lansing, and Dr. Hotchkiss.



SEES PLANES AS THICK AS FLIVVERS

Aeronautic research within the next five years may lead to the development of the helicopter, permitting the almost universal use of the airplane for transportation, in the opinion of Dr. W. F. Gerhardt, vice-president and research director of the Aeronautical Research Corporation of Detroit.

"When individuals take to the air with their families, as they soon will, it is necessary that they do so with a highly safe airplane," said Dr. Gerhardt. The speaker pictured the family plane of the near future as one able to land and take off from a person's own property, having a stopping power comparative to the present day automobile, possessing a minimum number of moving external parts and being able to effect a landing tangentically with a dead motor. "The mechanism if the family plane must be simple so as to insure small repair bills," said Dr. Gerhardt.

BOYS FIND GOLD IN ASH OF DEAD HERMIT'S HOME

The old story of finding a pot of finding a pot og gold at the foot of the rainbow has its equal in an up-to-date experience related by three 15-year old boys who attend Lincoln Consolidated school in Augusta township. Clifford Fuller, Alfred Bouvies and Loren Dicks started out on a fishing trip, walking along the banks of the river through the woods. As they climbed the knoll and reached the clearing back of John Nichol's farm they came upon a pile of half burned rubbish. Kicking their feet through the ashes, they were surprised to find ten or twelve 20 dollar gold pieces in the heap. John Nichols, who died a few months ago and had lived in the house alone for nearly 20 years. Ae he left no relatives living, neighbors cleaned up the house and burned what they supposed was all rubbish.

LAKE COUNTY WALTONS RAISING RABBIT FUND

Lake County Chapter, Izaak Walton League, like the sportsman in other sections, has launched a campaign to increase the stock of rabbits. Until the last two or three years Lake County was one of the favorite hunting grounds for rabbits, but they have been disappearing rapidly.

All sportsmen, owners of lodges and members of hunting and fishing clubs have been asked to contribute to the fund to restock the game.

It is expected that the efforts will be consecrated on jack rabbits in view of the report that the state did not meet with success in its expiriment in bringing in cotton-tails.

MICHIGAN FAMILY FEARED FOR IN CHINA WAR ZONE

Great anxiety is felt by A. G. Paul of aBttle Creek for the safety of his brother, Rr. R. W. Paul, his wife and their adopted daughter, Arlene. The last word received from the missionaries was in January, when in a letter Dr. Paul told of military maneuvers on the Nanking road near Shanghai.

Dr. Paul and his wife stiled for China in September, 1923, and for a year attended the language school in Nanking. Going to Shankhai, Dr. Paul joined the S. D. A. sanitarium and hospital, while his wife enrolled on the nursing staff of the same institution. Shortly after going to China, the couple adopted a little girl whom they named Arlene. Her father, a Russian, had been murdered by the soviets.

Dr. Paul was born in Barry county and was educated in Berrien Springs and Ionia.

CHARTER MEMBER AT 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF "HISTORY CLUB

When the Ladies History Class of St. Clair, one of the oldest clubs in the state of Michigan, celebrated its fiftietr anniversary, Mrs. E. C. Rector, 81 years old, the only living charter member of the organization, was present.

With new faces and perhaps entirely new ideas, the Ladies' History class, or as it was known at its inception 50 years ago, "Philomathians,' 'taken from the Greek for lovers of learning, met in the same quarters where the tiny club first gathered in 1877.

Originally there were 12 members. One of her best recollections, she says is of the days when she was a girl in the same small town with Mark Twain.

When the club was organized in 1877, the first meeting was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Justin R. Whiting. The home now is occupied by their daughter, Mrs. H. A. Hopkins.

In 1902 the History class celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. Among the 50 guests present were Mrs. H. P. Jones of Houghton; Mrs. P. J. Livingstone of Caro; Dr. Jeanne Solis of Ann Arbor; Mrs. R. H. Jenks and Mrs. P. R. Cleary of Ypsilanti.

OLIVET TRAPPER PLANS PRESERVE FOR RATS

Talbot plans to keep this tract as a game preserve. The low land covered with flaks, rear a level with the lake, makes it ideal for rats but useless for agriculture.

Notices are posted by the owner warning off all hunters. Knowledge of the craft enables Talbot to plan his catches so that plenty of breeders left to populate the colony.

BASS IN WINTER IS MYSTERY FISH

The black bass becomes a fish of mystery in the winter. It retires from its usual haunts and remains dormant until spring, burying itself in the mud, under masses of weeds or in sunken logs, until the March sun or mild weather coaxes it back to activity. Or it retires to the deepest water to escape the chill, moving about sluggishly for a casual mouthful of food.

Never during the winter is the bass the same smashing, fighting fish of the summer and fall. All ambition has left it. It does not seem to care to live. With sublime patience it lays in its muddy or weedy retreat, scarcely stirring a fin, until it feels the urge of the warmer temperature. Not until after the ice has broken up does the bass become its former self.

Some fishermen doubt that the bass actually hibernater. They point to the fact that an occasional bass is caught through the ice. But such occurances, according to authorities, are quite unusual, and are only in mild weather or in places where the water is deep enough to permit the fish to escape the areas of excessive low temperatures. As far as the average Michigan lake is concerned, the bass is a non-existent quantity to the fisherman in the winter.

SWANS SUBJECT OF ANCIENT MYTH

The graceful dignity of the Whistling Swan which provides an unfailing theme for those poetically inclined, has its origin in a disappointing prosaic source. The long, slender, pliant neck gives to the swan that unfailing charm which sets it apart from its more plebian cousins, the ducks and geese. Yet had it been content, at the first, to drive for its food as do certain ducks or forage on grass as do geese, it would have been an ordinary commoner. There are those who say the swan sings a dirge for itself, inexpressibly plaintive and melodious—singing against the setting sun—when it falls into death. Concerning this belief, which persists in figurative speech, no less an ancient than Aristotle wrote that "Swans have the power of song, especially near the end of their life, and some persons, sailing near the coast of Libya, have met many of them in the sea singing a mournful song and have afterwards seen many of them die." Other ancient beliefs were that certain geese were hatched from barnacles while kingfishers were descended from a god and goddess drowned at sea, and for their love new being as birds. These myths were largely Grecian. Pliny and Aelianus put little faith in the dying swan story. In fact Aelianus was moved by the biological slant of the Grecian myths to allude to Greece as "the mother of lies." Willem de Vlaming in 1697 found on the southwestern coast of Australia black swans. He was fortunate in capturing a pair which he took to Batavia alive.

Thisn so astonished the good Burghers that they ceased rushing the flagon long enough to marvel at the sight.

In America we have two species of swan, the whistling and the trumpeter. Each year, at about this time of the season, thousands of whistling swans drift down the waters of Lake Erie. There they float a mile or so away from shore, a whittish spot on the water. The Canadian government feeds these beautiful birds which have been induced to stop on Lake Erie. In olden days the Hudson Bay Company bought thousands of pounds of swan's down from the Indians. The birds return to the shores of lakes and islands in the Hudson Bay district each May. Gathering a mass of sticks and aquatic plants they pile them to a height of two feet or more. The nest is sometimes six feet across. This they line with down. Two to six rough, gray eggs, over four inches long and nearly three inches wide, are laid in June, and not until after five weeks of close confinement on the nest can the proud mother lead her brood to the water. The ting fledglings are covered with a grayish brown down, which gradually changes into the white plumage that it takes a year to perfect. Epicures of Europe consider young cygnets a great delicacy. To escape pursuit the swan, which is really very shy, will quickly distance a strong rower by swimming, yet with an ease and majesty of movement that suggests neither fright nor haste. The Trumpeter Swan is larger than the Whistling Swan.

YPSI AIR MEET DATE IS CHANGED TO JUNE 10

Owing to conflicting dates in the summer program of Detroit's aerial activities, the Huron Valley Flying club has announced a change in date for the aerial meet at the Ypsilanti air port. Under the new arrangement the meet will be held June 10, 11 and 12, instead of the first week in July. This was done because of the national air tour and the Gordon-Bennett cup races, both of which are scheduled to start from Detroit early in July.

PREDICTS MORE WOOL IF GLANDS GIVEN SHEEP

Bigger and woolier sheep, produced through gland grafting, may meet a world shortage of wool, is the belief of Dr. Serge Voronoff, who offers man longer life through applicatin of his methods.

Dr. Voronoff has been experimenting with sheep in Algeria. He claims that grafted animals increased 25 per cent in weight and 20 per cent in wool production. Descendants inherited the increase, and the surgeon declares that experiments in grafting and descendants forecast a bigger and woolier race of sheep. The world needs 20 per cent more wool than it now produces, according to Dr. Voronoff, and he believes a race of sheep can be produced to make up the difference.

APPLE GRAFTING AID TO GROWERS

For several years farmers of Newaygo county have been facing a problem that threatened their future success as apple growers—the lack of a market. Some years ago, in anticipation of the time when their timber resources would be depleted, progressive agriculturists planted orchards. They chose apples, chiefly of the Dutchess variety, that would bring a heavy yield and begin bearing early. At the present time, although other varieties have been added, the Dutchess still predominates.

The objects of the early growers have been achieved, but the question of a market becomes more serous every year. Newaygo farmers are finding that theyare unable to compete with producers of early apples either in the lower part of Michigan or in neighboring states.

According to figures compiled by board of agrilculture, the average price for apples f. o. b. shipping point is 62 cents a bushel. The cost of packages, packing and marketing charges is placed at 40 cents, leaving only 22 cents a bushel for the grower.

In an effort to transform a liability into an asset, several farmers have grafted into their Duchess trees McIntosh, Johnathan and the Greenpears to have been successful, and many others who have large orchards are planning similar action.

WALKER, 84, HITS TRAIL FOR TEST

A walk of from six to eight miles daily, in sunshine, rain or snow, is the training which Ambrose Keene, 84 years old, of Dundee, hopes will enable him to defeat Alex. Von Praag, 72 years old, of Defianec, O., in the proposed pedestrian race between the two early this summer for a purse of $50 raised by business men of Dundee.

Von Praag, who won the walking championship of Defiance in 1878, recently issued a general challenge to any man more than 60 years of ago to a walking race of from one-fourth mile up. Keene, known as the "Hiking Champion of Monroe County," promptly took him up" on the proposition and the Dundee Exchange Club, through its president, A. M. Ritter, sent a challenge to the Exchange Club of Defiance, promising to raise a purse of $50 to be divided between hte contestants, $30 to the winner and $20 to the loser.

"A half-holiday will be arranged and a 6 o'clock dinner will be served by the Dundee Club at 50 cents per plate with Von Praag and Keene as guests of honor," the letter declared.

Keene, who is six feet tall, weighs 118 pounds, and says he is "limber as a rag," believes that majority of the ills of humanity are due to lack o fexercise, so many years ago he started walking for health and today he declares he will "pay $25 to any one who can prove that there is anything the matter with me."

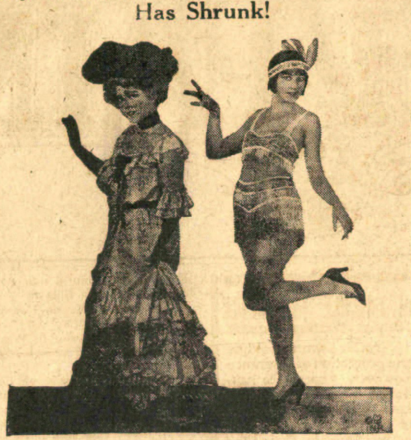
The old man's partner on many of his hiking expeditions is the Rev. Henry Harris, formerly of Detroit, now pastor of the Dundee Congregational Church. The other day the pair took a seven mile stroll in two hours.

CHICAGO MEN TO UNITE STATE GAS COMPANIES

Cecil F. Elmes, John F. Sorauf and Eugene W. Hubbard, all of Chicago, have applied to the public utilities commission for permission to incorporate the gas corporation of Michigan with headquarters at Ludington.

The purpose of the corporation, they explained, would be to take over the properties of the Ludington Gas company, the Michigan Gas company at Gheenville, and the Central Gas company at Mt. Pleasant.

My---How the Chorus Girl's Costume Has Shrunk!



Here's a pictured comparison between the chorus girl's costume of twenty-five years ago and that of today. Some difference!

At the left is Ann Sheridan portraying a chorus maiden of the quarter century ago—for Floradora Sextet type that Dad always admired. Note the frills and flounces and the trick headgear.

At the right is Rosalind Byren attired as the chorus girl of today. Er—er—not much to be said about her costume except that it shows they don't believe in wasting any cloth nowadays.

HOLIDAY BLOCKS STUDENT REVOLT

Michigan State college students are facing the disturbing question of whether the recent dicision of the authorities, granting a special holiday on Founders' Day, May 13, should be regarded in the light of a favor, or as a smooth bit of diplomacy by which they have been deprived of the opportunity to celebrate in their own way.

Last year, Founders' Day was not a holida, and students feeling ripe for a brief rebellion, declared a "Bolshevik day," defying instructors and authorities in a most gleeful manner. They were ordered to return to classes, and refused, parading and snake-dancing around the campus. A platform was set up on the boulevard in front o fthe Union Memorial building, an impromptu orchestra was assembled, and the dance commenced. Students did not conclude their demonstrations until late in the evening.

It was oly when President K. L. Butterfield appeared personally in their midst, about 10 o'clock the next morning, that the rioters submitted to authority and dispersed. Plans for a contribution of Bolshevik day were dropped, with the tacit understanding that the celebration was being postponed until "next year."

Now that "next year" has arrived, the announcement has come that no classes will be held May 13, the seventieth anniversary of the college.

If the world really wants a thrill, why not try arranging a ten round bout between Mussolini and Senator Jim Reed?

BOY SCOUT LEADERS OF SIX COUNTIES TO MEET

A training course for Boy Scouts leaders from six counties of southern Michigan will be held at Camp Tee Tonk-As, Jackson area camp at Wolf Lake, Maq 7 and 8 and 14 and 15.

The course will be along the same lines as that given in previous years, except that more leaders will attend, present estimates placing the number at about 200. It will include men from Jackson, Hillsdale, Lenawee, Monroe, Washtenaw and Ingham counties.

Paul Samson, associate professor of physical education at Michigan State Normal college, Ypsilanti, will act as dean of the course.

"E" MOST UNFORTUNATE LETTER IN ALPHABET

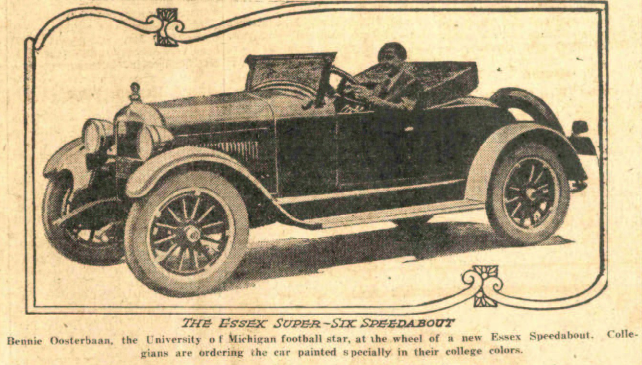
In English the letter "e" occurs most frequently, says Frank H. Vizetelly, the dictionary sharp. But it is the most unfortunate character in the alphabet because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger and in hell all the time.

It has its bright side, too, for it is never in war, and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of east and the end of trouble.

Without it there would be no meat, no life and no heaven. It is the center of honesty, makes love perfect, and without it there would be no editors, no printers, no news and no announcers.

Ever ytime we pass a farm with a lot of machinery standing out in the fields we know there lives a farmer who needs relief.

Essex Announces Speedy New Sport Car



THE ESSEX SUPER-SIX SPEEDABOUT

Bennie Oosterbaan, the University of Michigan football star, at the wheel of a new Essex Speedabout. Collegians are ordering the car painted specially in their college colors.

Something new in motor cars is announced by the Hudson Motor Car Co., in the introduction of the Essex Super-Six speedabout, a two passenger car of the roadster type which Hudson heralds as "the fastest six cylinder car in the world per dollar of cost."

To assist in high speed performance, the car is built along sweeping and rakish lines. The rear deck is streamlined like a speedboat, the lines curving smartly to a point in the rear. The regulation colors of the cars first manufactured is a bright and attractive green. Special color combination are being asked for, however, and in a number of college communities students are ordering speedabouts done out in the varsity colors.

One of the first men interested in the speedabout was Bennie Oosterbaan, the University of Michigan, all-American football star and captain. Oosterbaan paused in his practice of possing footballs to pass along to the Hudson-Essex organization the idea that the cars be trimmed in college colors. Other nationally known football stars have ordered cars especially trimmed.

The speedabout is a car designed especially for youth. Built for outstanding performance, its low center of gravity and perfect balance assure a high degree of roadability and safety. Unlike some roadsters, it was built without rumble seats, because it was desired to achieve streamlines which would be impossible if the rear deck were broadened out. Hudson-Essex states that this car has a performing ability not matched by many cars costing five times as much. The car is unique on the American market.

SCIENTISTS TO SEEK BIRD SPECIMENS IN MICHIGAN MARSHES

E. A. Hyer, preparator of the Kent Scientific museum, and Alexander Sprunt, curator of ornithology of the public museum at Charleston, S. C., are now engaged in a three months' collecting expedition through northern part of the lower peninsula.

Henry L. Ward, director of the Kent museum, plans to be with the expedition intermittently. The collectors will especially seek specimens of the Michigan birds, which inhabit marshes and small mammals.

The two collectors plan a similar expedition into the northern peninsula next fall.

$750,000 WAR RISKS REINSTATED BY VETS

Former service men reinstated about $750,000 worth of war-time Government insurance during March, the Detroit branch of the United States Veterans Bureau announced. Lapsed Government insurance or that being carried by veterans may be converted or reinstated before July 2, 1927.

The Government offers five-year level premium term policies, ordinary life, 20 and 30-pay life, 20 and 30-year endowment, and endowment at the age of 62. The Veterans Bureau states that rates on these policies are from 15 to 25 per cent lower than the rates offered by private companies.

OLD MICHIGAN LAW GIVES PROTECTION TO FROGS

Contrary to the general impresion, frogs can not be taken in Michigan before June 1 or after October 31. This has been a state law for many years, but is unknowingly violated every year by people hungr for frog legs before the month of roses arrices. During the open season the can not be taken with the use of artificial light. Unlimited numbers can be killed when it becomes legal to do so. Frog farming can be carried on under permit from the Department of Conservation and the product marketed at any time of year.

It is understood the Kelsey Wheel company has an option on the property of the Jackson concern.

ROBBINS LISTEN IN FOR THEIR DINNER

I the sprng, when you see the robin running swiftly over the new grass brown body stiff and erect, his small black head cocked on one side, do you often wonder what this red breasted bird is doing? Well, he is listening for his dinner.

How he hears the worms or grobs down in the ground is a mysterm. But having heard them the robin will drill industriously until he brings forth a grub or several inches of a rebellious worm.

The noff he flies to his nest to tell the lady bird all about his struggle. She is a rather faded duplicate of the male bird, but sits happily on the four or five bluish green eggs in the spic and span nest which they have so carefuly made of twigs and stems.

The robins begin their nest by making a frame and working out. They are very modern and have a plastered house—as smooth as the breast of the lady bird can make it, and as hard as mud can possibly be when it dries.

Dried grass is used in making a soft lining for the nest, which is usually placed rather high.

Robins are considered domestic birds—they prefer being around farms in the country and dwellings in the city to living secluded lives in forests. They take the liberty of dining on strawberries or cherries in your garden when their daily fare of worfs runs low.

In return, however, ou are assured of a loud cherry concert at sunrise and sunset because the robin is an optimist, although he could hardly be classified as a musician among the bords.

MICHIGAN BOY PLAYS FOR QUEEN OF SPAIN

Charles Gause, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gauss of Marshall, recently was the guest of Queen Victoria of Spain while on his around the world student tour. Gauss plays the saxophone and he and five other young men who also play formed a dance orchestra, dubbing themselves the "Globe Trotters." The soys performed one evening in one of the leading hotels fo Rome, and as a result were invited to play for a festival ball given by the queen and crown prince. The students are on the Ryndman. Gauss is a student at Olivet college.

An Oliver Steel Plow for Every Soil Condition

Oliver Steel Plows have long been popular where other plows give trouble through improper scouring. In sticky, heavy, waxy soils, the Oliver Steel Plows measure up to the reputation for perfect performance which has been established for many years.

There is a wide range of types to suit different soil conditions. But all Oliver Steel Plows have these features which have made them the outstanding preference of better farmers—high clearance, light draft, ease of operation, and in-built strength.

The Farm Morgue

Most any day along about this time of year as you pass multitudes of farms in the surrounding country-side, you will note the ancient and honorable farm morgue out somewhere near the orchard and usually back of the barn. Here it looks as if for generations the occupants of the farm had planted their old dilapidated and useless implements, buggies and erstwhile automobiles. Well, this is not all there is to it, but the amount of iron and scrap which is thus lost to use from rust and decay is deplorable. As high as is all kinds of iron work about the farm, yet hundreds of tons of this old scrap metal lies around in the fence corners and about the junk yard rotting and rust eaten, when as a matter of fact if thrown on the market, it would have a tendency to lower the price of materials. In the foundry and rolling mills a certain amount of this old scrap goes into every cupola charge to be re-melted and run out into castings for more farmtools. Indeed we have often mistrusted from the extreme brittleness of castings newly bought there must be a major portion of the scrap. Often it is noticeable the castings of some machinery are very short lived. But never-the-less this old metal should be again turned to the use of man. Old sulky plows, harrows, drills, cultivators, self binders, mowers, threshing machines, hay rakes being made mostly of metal furnish a large amount of residue, and also the improved appearance of the place is a big item. Of course we would not attempt to tell the farmer what he should or should not do, but we do believe that itwould be considerable better for himself as well as others if he would clean up his morgue.

Obituary

Riley Allan Arbogast, son of Absalom and Louisa Atkinson Dever Arbogast was born in Lucas County Ohio July 25th 1862 and departed this life at his home near North Adams Mich. April 30th 1927 aged 64 years, 8 months and 5 days. He spent his boyhood near the place of his birth and in his young manhood came with his parents to Henry County Ohio where he resided until 1913. He then moved to North Adams Mich. where he lived until the time of his death.

On July 25th 1884 he was united in marriage to Phebe Oden, to this union four children were born, two sons dying in infancy and Herman Arbogast and Mrs Floyd Wilcox of near North Adams.

Mr. Arbogast was a member of Rural Lodge No. 72 I. O. O. F. and Abigail Rebekah Lodge No. 42 also Town Line Grange No. 850.

He was a kind, loving and indulgent husband and father. He leaves to mourn his departure, his wife, one son, one daughter, four grandchildren, two brothers Wallace W. and E. Frank Arbogast of Napoleon O. One sister Mrs. Frank Edwards of Malden Mo. and a large circle of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at the home at 2:00 p. m. Tuesday with Rev. G. A. Emerich officiating assisted by the I. O. O. F. Lodge and interment was in the North Adams cemetery.

I cannot think and I will not say, that he is dead,
He is just away.
With a cherry smile and wave of the hand,
He has wandered into the better land;
It needs must be, since he is there.
And you, Oh you who fondly yearn
For the welcome step and glad return,
Think of him living on as dear,
In the land of There, as the land of Here;
Think of him living on I say,
He is not dead—he is just away.
Weep no more for friends departed,
Nor despair with grief forlorn,
But press onward firm, true hearted;
Watch for heaven's eternal morn.
There is sadness in the parting,
That must be for many years,
But how blest will be the meeting,
Just beyond this vale of tears,

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the many friends and neighbors for their help and sympathy in our sudden bereavement. And the beautiful floral offerings also to the I. O. O. F. and Rev. Emerich for their help and words of sympathy.

FARMERS WORK TO ERIDICATE BORER

Approximately 2000 farmers have attended the corn borer control demonstrations in the 23 quarantined districts of Michigan, according to the Michigan State college specialists in charge of the educational campaign.

Specialists at the college consider this attendance demarkable and point out that the first meeting of county agents, township corn borer committees and business men was held at the college March 22, at which time plans for the education plan were formulated.

Interest shown by the farmers of the quarantined area indicates that practically the entire work of clean up will be accomplished by the farmers themselves, according to H. C. Rather, assistant extension director of Michigan State college, who is in active charge of the educational campaign against the borer.

Specialists of the farm crops and the agricultural engineering departments are convinced that with the results of the plowing demonstrations that clean plowing is an efficient and economical method of control and that it appears at the present time to be the only salvation of the farmer.

Special machinery is now being distributed throughout the infested area by the United States department of agriculture. This equpipment consists mainly of stubble pulverizers, tractors and trucks and is available to those farmers who make application to the county corn borer supervisor.

According to H. E. Powell, state commissioner of agriculture, confirmation has bee nreceived from Washington on the following appointments for county ern brer supervisors:

Lenawee county—Henry Phillips, Riga; Wayne, L. A. Seamans, Ypsilanti; Genesee—E. W. Richards, Flint; Monroe—oJseph Navarre, Monroe; Kalamazoo and St. oJseph—H. J. BORER IS MENACE TO OTHER CROPS AND SPUR TO FOOD COSTS

The European corn borer, if it is not checked, is going to hit the pocketbook of the city dweller as well as that of the farmer, says H. C. Rather, extension specialist of the farm crops department at Michigan State college. Mr. Rather recently was appointed assistant extension director in charge of corn borer control work. eat, he says, will be influenced by the corn borer if its ravages are not checked. Ecenomical production of most food stuffs are closely associated withthe corn crop. The live stock industry alone in America amounts to about $143,000,000 annually and the prices of meats are directly dependent upon the price of corn.

The sweet corn industry is likely to be seriously affected. Corn that is moderately damaged by the borer can be fed to live stock, but it is unfit for table consumption. This will also have an effect on the canning industry and prices will rise accordingly.

Several of the market gardeners' other products are damaged by the borer. The borer has been found in 250 plants.

City gardeners who raise sweet corn are subject to the same control measures as the farmer and will be required either to burn or bury all stalks, cobs and other corn refuse. A special corps of inspectors will enforce control measure in the cities.

WINS RACE WHILE CONFINED IN JAIL

Although he had made but one arrest in two months, his opponents attribute his success as a politician to his familiarity with law and the Menominee county jail. He was arrested and in jail seven times within two months. His political opponents pointed out that he made 18 trips, 30 miles to the trip, or 540 miles, in commuting at county expense between Bagley and the county pail or the county court.

Constable Carnegie, proprietor of a gasoline filling station and soft drink stand at Bagley, after a fist fight arrested Walter Matusek, charging Matusek had attacked him. Matusek served a term in pail and went back to Bagley to resume his business as Carnegie's business rival in gasoline and beverages. Matusek announced through newspapers that he was going to "get Carnegie's job."

Shortly after the constable was arrested for driving an automobile without a license. He served 10 days in jail in default of paying a fine Then he was arrested for selling a deer carcass to lower Michigan hunters last November. Two other men, arrested with Carnegie, paid fines, but Carnegie, after being released from jail on bond, went back to jail to serve out his $78 fine. In jail 10 days, Carnegie appealed his case to Circuit court on the ground that he had turned state's evidence in the deer case. He was released on $500 bond for circuit court.

When his bond proved unsatisfactory, he was brought back to jail from Bagley. He rectified the bond and was again released. Then he was alleged to have made a "felonious assault with a revolver" upon Andrew Berger, intimate of aMtusek, and returned to occupy his cell in the county jail. In a few days he succeeded in raising an additional bond of $500 and was released pending hearing. The preliminary examination was postpoed one week, but his bond was increased by $500. He was in jail again while negotiating $1500 and is free once more, but with two charges pending against him.

OAKLAND COUNTY WINS COURT HOUSE SITE SUIT

Oakland county has acquired absolute ownership of three lots of the original plat of the city of Pontiac on which its courthouse and jail now stand, according to the finding handed down by Circuit Judge Fred S. Lamb, of Cadillac, who heard a suit brought against the heirs of Stephen Mack, one of the founders of Pontiac and for years trustee of the old Pontiac company, owners of the city's original plat. The heirs contested the suit, on the ground a reversionary clause made it compulsory for the county to maintain the land for court house and jail purposes, or it would revert to the Mack heirs.

The court holds the county's possession of the lands for more than 100 years, together with the fact that conditions have changed, has given that the Mack heirs are no longer in the county absolute ownership and terested.

PERIL OF COMET CALLED REMOTE

The Pons?Winnecke comet, which passed "close" to the earth June 28, holds no menace for humanity, according to M. Michel Jiacobini, famous astronomer of the Paris observatory. The necleus of the comet will be almost 6,000,000 miles from the earth, Jiacobini said.

Even if the earth should pass thru the extremity of the tail of the comet, said Jiacobini, the gaseous composition of the tail would be of such feeble density as to have no effect upon is.

Jiacobini explained that there are two kinds of comets, those which return to the earth regularly and whose courses are known, and those which come intermittently from no noe knows where and go away again.

It is possible that one of these latter may some day strike the earth, said Jiacobini. Naturally we can make no predictions. But there need be no reaf about Pons-Winnecke, which returns every six years and whose distance from the earth at all times can be calculated to a fraction of a mile.

COOLIDGE EXPECTED TO FOREGO MICHIGAN VISIT

Indications have taken a decided turn against President Coolidge's choice of a Michigan locality for his summer vacation, as well as against his delivering the commencement address at the Michigan State college.

Representative Grant M. Hudson of East Lansing who has just returned from a trip with the other members of the insular affairs committee of the house to the West Indies, called on the president today and was told that while the president had not made a positive decision in the matter, it did not appear likely that he could go to East Lansing for the commencement. Mr. Coolidge has an address to make in Washington June 11 and has other engagements which makes it extremely doubtful if he can make the Michigan trip.

FORD CLAIMED BY SHARON HOLLOW

Sharon Hollow has adopted Henry Ford.

And perhaps it could be sair that Henry Ford has adopted Sharon Hollow. The admiration is mutual. The automobile manufacturer has taken this bit of old fashioned Michigan deeply into his heart, for he loves its rustic ways and quiet smpletes.

The Hollow is intensely historic. It reminds the visitor of Irving's Sleepy Hollow in its quaintness, its complete removal from the rest of the world. It belongs to the era of oxen and spinning wheels—of Conestaga wagons creeping westward thru the Cumberland Gap. It lives as a pathetic suggestion of the countryside Mr. Ford knew as a boy—the same countryside he helped destroy as a producer of the obiquitous motor car and is striving so hard to perpetuate today.

The foremost citizen of the Hollow, which claims a population of a scant dozen, is either Daniel Burch, 88-year-old blacksmith, or George Kirkwood, 70-year-old proprietor of the saw and grist mills.

Burch and Kirkwood, however, refuse the honor. It should be conferred upon Henry Ford, they say, because he belnogs just as much to the Hollow as to metropolitan Detroit or to Dearborn.

Hasn't he visited with Kirkwood in the mealy grist mill—hasn't he puttered about the blacksmith shop with Burch—didn't he accept an antique Kentucky rifle fro mthe Civil War veteran—weren't his whitewood logs cut into lumber by Kirkwood's ancient upright saw—didn't he send them both a phonograph with an assortment of records by Henry Ford's Old Time Dance orchestra? Most assuredly.

So today we have Henry Ford, of Detroit and Dearborn, and last but not least—Sharon Hollow.

The Hollow is tucked away in a remote corner of Washtenaw county. You drive north of Manchester upon a winding, narrow road past a country cemetery—another touch of Irving. From the top of a hill the road dips down to a mouldering bridge over the Raisin. With the exception of the inevitable gasoline pump in front of the rural store, everything in the Hollow breathes only of the past—of the Michigan vanished and nearly forgotten.

Any woman can pass an old admirer without looking back—if she is blind.

One touch of weather supplies the whole world with something to talk about.

"Half and Half"--Cat and Rabbit!

Quite different from all other cats is "Bunny"—the tail-less white Manx pictured above. It has no fear for slamming doors, for it was born minus a "wagger" that might be caught in any tight uams. Besides, it neither walks or runs but hops and jumps along like a rabbit. Otherwise, "Bunny"—the property of an Indianapolis man—is in perfectly good health.

FARMERS RESPOND TO PRICE GUARANTEE, DITCH OTHER CROPS

Record plantings of sugar beets, pickles and canning crops are in prospect this season as a result of farmers showing an eagerness to grow contract crops for which the price is guaranteed.

More than ever before, farmers seem to be operating conservatively this season, planting or planning to plant only such crops as they may reasonably expect to bring fair returns next fall.

According to reports reaching Lansing, hundreds of farmers will break away from beans this year to grow sugar beets.

Leading vegetable canners signed up their acreages of string beans, peas beets and other canning crops in sort order this year, while pickle manufacturers had little difficulty in obtaining their usual acreage of cucumbers.

Sugar beet factories are making preparations to import whole trainloads of Texans and Mexicans to work in the beet fields this season. Many growers have contracted with sugar companies to do the blocking, thinning weeding and hoeing of the sugar beets and these laborers will take care of this work. The Mexicans wil remain in the state until the close of the harvest, doing the topping for many of the growers.

GRAND RAPIDS WAR ON DETROIT PLAN FOR MARKET WAGES

Refusal of the Grand Rapids city commission to adopt the Detroit plan of operating municipal markets has not ended the market war which has been waged in Grand Rapids all winter with the truckers on one side and the growers, commission merchants, car lot pobbers and retailers on the other.

The allied interests petitioned the commission to revise its municipal market regulations along the plan used in Detroit. They wanted all nonproducers barred from selling produce on the municipal markets. The whole action was intended to bar truckers from using the markets to dispose of their loads.

The city commission flatly refused to adopt the Detroit system. At a public hearing it was brought out that the city commission had invited the truckers to bring produce on the markets, that the commission had offered to subsidize the truckers if they should lose on their loads. The commissioners explained this offer was made to gain the support of the truckers in developing the markets. The plan worked so well that the city has never had to buy any of the truckers' produce.

It makes a woman awfully tired to see a man make a fool of himself over any other woman.

FRUIT GROWERS DEMAND HIGHER DUTY ON CHERRIES

An increase in the tariff on foreign cherries, Italian cherries in particular, is being sought by fruit growers of America, it was learned through a decision of the federal tariff commission to investigate the cost of producing Italian cherries.

The petition for the 50 per cent increase in the duty was filed by the cherry growers in the Pacific northwest, but it is said to have the indorsement of Michigan growers and canners.

At certain seasons large quantities of Italian cherries are imported into the United States in the fresh state, and also in the brine. These, it is said, often arrive at such intervals as seriously to disturb and unsettle the market for the domestic fruit.

MICHIGAN BUYING MORE STIMULANTS FOR CROPS

A larger percentage of farmers in southeastern Michigan are stimulating their crops with commercial fertilizers than in any other part of the state, according to a survey recently completed by the National Soil Improvement committee.

In onyy six counties are more than 60 per cent of the farms using commercial plant food on their crops and they are all located in Southern Michigan. They are Wayne, Monroe, Macomb, St. Clair, Genesee and Tuscola.

The committee found the consumption of fertilizer was increasing in Michigan, but it noted the bulk of the tonnage was used on farms south of a lone drawn across the state from Bay City to Muskegon. North of this line only 20 per cent or less of the farms were found to be using fertilizers, in varying amounts.

GRANGE HONORS WOMAN PASTOR

Grangers of Van Buren county recently paid a tribute to the Rev. Oliva J. C. Woodman, life chaplain of the Michigan State Grange, an office she has held for 30 years. She is one of Michigan's best known woman lecturers and writers on agricultural and political subjects.

Mrs. Woodman will celebrate her 80th birthday June 1.

An ardent pioneer prohibitionist, and suffragist, she holds the honor of having made the first nominating address ever given by a woman in a Michigan Republican convention. She campaiged all over Colorado for President Tafe in 1912. The toured the state in behalf of Lowden when he was running for the presidential nomination seven years ago.

Mrs. Woodman toured New England in behalf of Patrons of Husbandry, the official name of the Grangers' organization. She is still vitally interested in the leading questions of the day and only recently delivered the chief address at a meeting of the Grangers in Sturgis.

Born June 1, 1847, in Orleans county, N. Y., she was taken by her parents to Lansing, where she spent her girlhood. As a young woman she studied theology under the tutelage of her brother, the Rev. M. B. Carpenter, and was ordained a Universalist minister when 50 years old. Her first charge was at DeWitt, Mich. Later she went to Farmington. Her last charge was at Plymouth. She was married to J. C. Woodman in 1896.

BLIND BOY CHAMP OF ORATORS TEAM

The champion orator at Michigan Lansing, never has seen an audience. In spite of his handicap of blindness, he etered the all college oratorical contest, competing against seven other students, and was given first place by a iommittee of five judges. He will reieive the award of $30 offered to the winner of the contest.

Roberts is a sophomore in the liberal arts division. All of his lessons, except French, he learns by having them read to him, and it is rarely necessary that a lesson be read more than once. He takes dictation by the Braille method and learns his French lesson in that manner.

After atteding the State College for the Blind at Lansing, Roberts entered the Lansing high school and graduated in 1924. In high school he was a member of the debate tea mand also represented his school one year in a district oratorical contest. He plans to graduate from Michigan State and then enter law school.

Although both of his parents are living, Roberts pays his own way thru school. After graduating from high schbol he obtained a concession for a sigar stand in the Lansing City hall where he worked for two years. He still runs the cigar stand which pays his college expenses.

He has been blind since birth.

ALL LIKE HOKUM IS VIEW OF FAKER

What Barnum said 50 or 75 years abo about people loving to be humbugged is still true. Take Mike's word for it. Mike should know, too, for he has spent the best part of a life time in occupations that exist by humanity's weakness for humouggery.

For Mike is a pitchman, although that word is not one whose meaning is commonly known outside the guild. You've seen pitchmen, many of them, but more than likely you called them street fakers. They are the fellows who set up a suitcase on a tripod in some vacant lot and then, by means that seem to get results the world over, draw a crowd around them and proceed to sell jewelry, trinkets, articles of clothing, knife sharpeners or what not.

Mike has been in the business for close to 40 years. He's in Detroit now, selling his wares wherever men gather fith a few minutes spare time and a few extra dimes to spend. What he sells doesn't matter. Nor does his name. His wares, he assured, are legitimate. But it's not upon the quality of his goods nor the low prices he asks that a pitchman depends for sales and profits.

"It's the hoku mthat kets 'em," said Mike. "The whole secret of getting away with this racket is to be able to draw the crowd around you. You could be selling silver dollars for 25 cents apiece but if you didn't know how to get the crowd around you and know how to kid 'em into buying you would never sell a one."

He tells a few stories. Perhaps they are quite foreign to the matter at hand. But Mike will draw a laugh or two. Then he shoys what he has to sell. And, all the while he's spreading out his "line" he's talking. His voice dolls on without apparent effort. He opens his mouth and the words seem to gush out, automatically it would seem and yet all done with a view to their effect on this particular crowd.

Professors of psychology and experts in high pressure salesmanship migh learn a few things by listening to Mike, although he probably never looked between the covers of a book on phychology or salesmanship.

In the crwd around him there is sure to be at least one man with a shop reputation as a wit. He'll be eager to display his wise cracking ability. Mike has been waiting, has been even eager for that. In fact he has left openings for interruption. He's seldom disappointed and with a ready native wit and a tongue sharpened by years of vocal thrust and parry he disposes of his heckler.

SPRING MEETS LISTED AT CENTRAL NORMAL

During the spring term, which opened April 4, Central Normal at Mt. Pleasant will be host to several gatherings of high school and county normal students at contests and at meets. Approximately 1000 high school students will compete in the state wide high school scholastic contest, May 20.

Central Normal introduced this competition in Michigan last year. Central will again hold the state high school music contests for the Central Michigan district on May 12 and 13. The Mt. Pleasant Normal inaugurated the music contest idea for high schools seven years ago, and within the past few years the contest supervision has been taken over by the state.

The faculty of the Normal Training school will entertain the faculties of the training schools of Ypsilanti and Kalamazoo Normals here May 5 and 6.

Late in May and early in June the series of meets for high schools, including track, and field, tennic and possibly golf competition.

LETTUCE GROWERS FIND DEMAND IS IN EXCESS OF SUPPLY

Producers of hothouse leaf lettuce in the Grand Rapids section are mystified by the strong demand that has developed for their product resulting in prices advancing 100 per cent in a week.

Growers were disappointed over the spring outlook at the beginning of this month. They feared the early spring would bring the outdoor crop in competition with the green house crop earlier than usual. Just as they were beginnig to despair over the outlook the market bega to gather stregth. n

Wire orders poured into Grand Rapids. In a week the price jumped from 7 and 8 cents a pound to 15 cents. The advance was made a cent or two at a time but with each advance the demand seemed to grow.

The growers are producing just as much lettuce as ever—perhaps more—yet the demand continues right at the heels of production. Iceberg head lettuce from the west also is in liberal supply.

YEARLY FISH RUN DRAWS CROWD

For 51 weeks of the year Cold Creek is just a tiny stream winding through Beulah on its way to Crystal Lake.

But in one week each year it focuses the attention of the entire state on this little resort community on the West Michigan Pike in Benzie County.

One evening late in March a resident of Beulah heard from the direction of the creek a noise best described as rippling. Instantly he raised the cry, "the smelt are running!"

All over town the word spread and there was a rush to Cold Creek, nearly everyone carrying nets or a substitute for nets—pails, scoops, even bird cages—to harvest the annual smelt crop. They found the creek literally choked with fish bound upstream from their home in Chystal Lake to spawn.

By morning more than 100 persons had arrived here from nearby points and by the second night the number had grown to 1000, and from more distant places. The next night there were 4000 lining the stream and wading in it, watching and profiting from the annual run of that small fish, the Atlantic smelt; transplanted to Michigan a few years ago.

Desiring to capitalize of its fame as one of the few places in the United States were the salt water smelt has been pltnted successfully in fresh water, Beulah business men, and others who desire to boost the community as a resort center, have advertised that event extensively. The result has been that much wealth has been brought to the merchants and others during the week's run of smelt, as great crowds tramped about streets and along the creek.

But with the 1927 run a matter of history, many residents feel that the mad scramble for fish is going to deplete the story of smelt.

The smelt are sensitive to light and they made the run up the creek only at night, the darker the night the better. Even a flashlight will drive the fish back to hiding, so sensitive are they to light. On the past the fish have been allowed to come up the creek unmolested. Late at night gates are placed shutting off retreat to the lake. Then the people are allowed to scoop the smelt from the stream.

There has been plenty of smelt for all. In fact, in the early years before the advertising of the run started, farmers scooped the fish by the bag, while hundreds were left on the banks, or fed to the chickens. Few other than farmers and local residents were present to obtain them.

But this year it was different. The same plans were made to handle she run and the taking of the fish. Mark Craw, conservation officer of the traverse City district, and two aids were present. The fish were to be allowed to run up the stream and then, late at night, the gates were to be closed and the people allowed to take the fish from the creek.

But Mr. Craw figured without taking into consideration the rush to Beulah from all parts of Michigan and even from neighboring states. Muskegon, 130 miles away, sent more than 500 during the run, and Grand Rapids and other cities contributed hundreds, it being estimated that 15,000 persons were in Beulah during the week.

One growing business that ought to be checked is that of stealing automobiles. Owners should look well after their cars, and it may be advisable for authorities to increase forces in raising safeguards.

WHOOPING COUGH DANGER WARNING

Guard young children against the whooping cough; the younger the child the more dangerous the disease, warns Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgean general of the United States public health service.

Whooping cough may occur at any age, but is pre-eminently a disease of childhood, Dr. Cumming said. It is highly contagious and is most severe in old people and young children.

Mothers should do all in their power to prevent children from contracting whooping cough as long as they can. FGifty per cent of deaths from the disease or its complication occur in children under one year of age, and 95 per cent of deaths fro mwhooping cough are in children under five.

One attack of the disease generally protects against whooping cough for life, though rarely a person may contract it a second time, Dr. Cumming said. It is not unusual for a child to have measles and whooping cough together or one following the other.

Susceptibility to whooping cough is very great, but there seem to be a few people who escape it or in whom the attack is so mild that it is not recognized. The diseace is spread by contact, infection taking place by means of sputum. The cough being quite violent, iinfective particles can be thrown some distance.

Articles soiled by the child having the disease, such as handkerchiefs, towels, and toys may also carry the infection.

Seven days usually alapses between time of exposure to whooping cough and development of the disease, he said, adding that in some cases this period varies from four days to two weeks.

Whooping cough begins gradually and develops into paroxysms of coughing usually accompanied by cold, head ache, fever and billiousness. Among the complications of the disease are bronchitis and broncho-pneumonia.

General treatment of the whooping cough consists in insolation in a large room where the temperature is maintained at 64 to 68 degrees. Fresh air is essential. The child should remain in bed during the catarrhal stage and while he has fever. He should be supported during the paroxysms, an abdominal binder is very comforting.

The diet should consist of milk, milk foods, fruit juice, soft boiled or poached eggs, cup custary, and other articles prescribed by the physician. Meals should be small and frequent and are better borne after a paroxysm

Great care should be taken during convalescence to avoid chilling, but fresh air is of the greatest importance and the child need not be confined to the house until all paroxysms have ceased. Be very careful the child is not exposed to measles and if the attack of cough is unusually prolonged the child should be examined for adenoids.

FAMED ARCH IS AT THREE OAKS

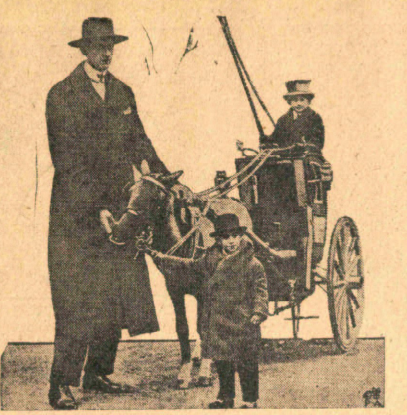
The keynstone of the great Dewey triumphal arch, under which the returning hero of Manilla Bay was welcomed by millions at New York September 30, 1899, is being held in obscurity pending the time when it will be housed in the projected Chamberlain Memorial museum, the dream of the late E. K. Warren.

This souvenir of one of the greatest triumphal arches in American history is too large to receive a place in any of the present three museum buildings. It is stored in the basement where it was placed shortly after it was brought to Three Oaks 28 years ago by Warren, then president of the village.

Warren brought back with him from the Dewey reception, a cannon from an old Spanish fort at Cavite. The cannon was Dewey's personal wift to the committee, which was showering on him honors unprecedented in American history. The committee in turn decided to turn it over to the community which, i proportinon to its population, gave the largest amunt to the Dewey reception fund. In this contest Three Oaks won.

After the magnificent welcome was over, the committee decided to dismantle and destroy the great arch. Warren, however, had other ideas concerening the ultimate disposition of the arch, although he had not then yet established his museum at Three Oaks. He asked for, and was given, the great arch with its several ornaments. These he had shipped to Three Oaks, where for nearly 30 years they have been stored while awaiting preparation of a proper place in which to exhibit them.

The Long and Short of It!



Gee wilikens—kids—won't be long now before the circus comes to town! And here's a couple offellas who may be with it when it does "blow" in.

They're known as the "W-w-world's Tallest and Shortest Men!" The tall boy's name is Ernest, known as the "midget's giant friend." But they didn't tell us how high he is. Guess that's a secret. Neither did they give us his little pal's name.

But then what difference does that make. You'll be glad to look 'em over anyway when they come—won't you?

For the first time in three years you may wear any hat that you like and be smart.

There are two stipulations. The hat must be of the sports type, and must be simple. A fussy hat or a hat that is simply pretty is no more smart than pretty and fussy clothes.

But you can wear practically any tpe of hat; the da when Paris rubber stamped our hats on us is over. The "cloche" and the "gigoglo" which all of us so hopefull wore are no longer thrust upon us. Hats have again come to the point where you can take them or leave them.

All this is wonderful news to the average woman. By average woman I mean the woman who is not a Venus in her own right, but who has the usual arrangement of features that has to be coaxed along and aided here and there by art where nature failed or perhaps just weakened.

When every woman in the world was going about under the inverted pot we called the "cloche" this was rather difficult. The brim was prescribed thus and thus, the crown so. Your face under this just had to take care of itself.

This season, if you have a favorite eye, wou can show it, and keep the other one discreetly in the shadow. If your nose looks better in a turned up brim or no bri mat all, you have an encouraging variet yof shapes and types to choose from. If you need a little height in the crown, you may wear it with impunity. If, on the other hand, you look your best in a tiny skull cap with an ear lap or two, you may be strengthened to know that one of the greatest milliners in aPris recently invented this hat for a great lady and a duchess.

One reason why hats have gone back to the happy state where there is a mode for everybody is that aPris has made the hat an integral part of the costume complete. The ensemble must now be an absolutely perfect unit, and the hat must be linked unmistakably to the costume.

Detail in costume has become more varied and interesting, so hats must follow and carry out the spirit of the costume detail.

These are the hats. A light green felt tricorn, with the brim notched in three places and trimmed at the notch with flat bows of the felt. Last season you would have felt positively quaint in a tricorn.

A close fitting cap of white felt, with large square taps applied over each ear, life the ear laps on an aviator's cap, so that the ears are covered. One of these squares is black, and the other is, unbelievably, green. There ar narrow srips of grn and black felt running across the crown and around the back of the neck, and the whole thing is astonishingly smart. Also this is extremely new. You will not see copies of it in the shops for some time.

Another hat is of white fabric straw with a supple crown and brim. Rather one the type of the clothe but higher and squarter in the crown. This is banded with wide black grossgrain, mounted with line fruits and flowers.

A dark blue grosgrain turban made with a crown that runs to quite a point, and seems to be pinched to this point by a series of folds is mounted with a large oval plaque of cariegated flowers, placed in the back. This mode of placing the trimming at the back, beginning at the nape of the neck, is extremely good.

Felts are as smart is possible at present, but straws are beginning to appear. Picot straws are beginning to appear. Picot straws, balibunal, crochet-vioca, Milan and leghorns will all be smart for summer.

DETROIT COPS GET FAT TRAINED OFF

In days gone by when the shadow o fthelaw fell athwart the path of a wrongdoer, that shadows had a peculiar and unwieldy shape. The shadow was topped by t bulbous dome and its middle section projected far forward. The policeman in times past was characterized not only by his mushroom helmet and swinging stick, but also by a Falstaffian paunch that proceeded him with the majesty and dignity of the law.

But with changing times, fashions change and also figures undergo mutations and the officer of the law today boasts proportionally as svelte a figure as the fashion model. The day of the "bay-windowed" patrolman has gone the way of all flesh and his successor is a man of muscle and sinew but trim withal.

Tom Edwards, All-American tackle when he played under Coach Fielding H. Yost for the University of Michigan in 1924 and 1925, is now the mentor of the Detroit police department in physical training and under his practiced direction patrolmanly punches are melting away each day.

Edwards, whose official title is physical training director, not only brings to his work the experience gained in many gruelling gridiron battles, not only for the University of Michigan, but also for the Detroit Panthers last fall, and the experience gained in a physical training course at the university.

Despite his evident prowess and his football triumphs which gained him a place on the mythical all-star eleven in 1925, Edwards is a modest young man and modestly states what he hopes to accomplish in his new position as physical director for more than 1,000 husky policemen.

Right now Edwards is busy forming a track-team for the members of the department to compete in the national police field meets which will be held this summer.

Michigan legislators are now proposing a whipping post for criminals. Quite a change from the roar the sob-sisters let out a few years ago when they found that Warden Otis Fuller had paddled a few of the bad actors up at the Michigan reformatory.

PROGRESS TEMPLE EMPTY 37 YEARS

Pentwater apparently has given up its ambition and struggle to become a great city, and has settled down to the contentment, if any, of a resort village on the shore of Pentwater Lake and Lake Michigan. But one monument to the 37-year dream of greatness remains. It is a monument that cost more than $100,000 in the days when such things might be had at bargain prices. The Gardner Block and auditorium, on the principal business street of the village, is Pentwater's memorial to a community's dream.

Built as a hotel in the early '90s, the Gardner Block never has been ochope of obtaining a tenant. George W. Williams of Chicago built the place but when the three-story temple was about to be completed and opened, the panic of 1893 hit Pentwater and Mr. Williams was unable to weather the financial storm.

Subsequently the building reverted to the state to satisfy unpaid taxes. Later it was taken over by the township, then provisionally donated to J. L. Litter of Chicago. Mr. Litter is the present owner of record.

CHURCH BURNED BY FIREBUG REBUILDING

Although the chmurch with its contents was destroyed by fire November 5, with a loss estimated at more than $30,000, the congregation of the North Blissfield Immanuel Lutheran church contemplates the erection of a brick edifice in which to continue its worship. Only $6,000 insurance was carried on the church, which was one of the numerous buildings fired by Grover Pauter, the Hudson firebug, now serving a term in Jackson prison. Nothing was saved from the flames.

If the women are not careful they will win so much freedom that the men will cease to feel any responsibility for them.

MONEY SAVED ON LEAF BUYS LAND FOR PASTOR

The Rev. William Ricvhards, for five years pastor of the First Methodist church of Northville, quit chewing and smoking when he joined the Methodist conference 18 years ago. He started saving the nickels and the dimes spent for smokes and from the savings he made he has puronased nearly two acres of land just east of this place. The pastor has just started improving the property and is using his spare time to beautify the grounds that he hopes within the next few years to make his home.

It is estimated that eighty-seven per cent of the statues are erected to men who were once called cranks.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

Fewer Deaths From Alcohol

Fourteen thousand, six hundred and forty fewer deaths were caused by alcoholism in the six prohibition years in the United States than would have occurred at the normal pre-prohibition rates of 1910-1917. The average annual death rate in the pre-prohibition years was 5.2 per 100,000 population. In 1925, it was but 3.6 according to recent tables of the Census Bureau. The increase after 1920 mostly occurred by 1923. Since 1923, there has been but a slight increase; in many states the rate was lower in 1925 than in 1923.

This great saving of 14,640 lives has occurred despite an increase in alcoholic mortality occurring in most of the States since the sharp drop of the first prohibition year. This reaction due to organization of the illegal traffic and the ridicule of prohibition and total abstinence which induced drinking has needlessly cost the country about 9,000 lives that might have been saved had purposeful abstinence and law observance maintained the alcoholism mortality rate of the first prohibition year.

14,640 lives have been saved in the six prohibition years that the former alcoholism death rate would have snuffed out in the United States.

Wet statistics are misleading because they use figures of actual deaths instead of death rates, thus ignoring the constant increase in population. That was the only way they got a "500 percent" increase for Rhode Island in 1925. Even at that the actual number of alcoholism deaths in Rhode Island was only 39 as against 8 in 1920. Besides, there were fewer in 1925 than in 1923 or 1924, and the death rate was about 20 percent lower than in the average normal pre-prohibition year.

The increase in Massachusetts has not been 500 percent either in actual deaths or in death rates. There were 70 alcoholism deaths in Massachusetts in 1920; 303 in 1925-a serious enough increase, but it need not be exaggerated. Present indications are that the rate will be lower in Massachusetts in 1926 as the Vital Statistics Department reports a slightly smaller number of deaths.

It is significant perhaps that the group of States which have showed the heaviest percentage of increase in alcoholic death losses since 1920 includes those commonly known as "wet" strongholds. Maryland, which has never had a state enforcement law, heads the list with an increase of nearly 800 percent in its alcoholic death rate since 1920, and a 1925 rate nearly 25 percent above its average normal pre-prohibition rate.

Alcoholism is an absolutely preventable cause of death. It is still killing an unnecessary number of citizens. Prohibition is designed, among other objects, as a protective health measure.—W. C. T. U.

Clarence Jenkins, of Jonesville was arrested on April 24th, on a warrant, charged with being disorderly aud insane. On Monday he was taken to Kalamazoo State Hospital for treatment.

Roy C. Pratt, the Jonesville Bank Bandit, was arrested in Kalamazoo on Monday by the officers in that city. Acting on information furnished them by the Hillsdale Co. Sheriff's Department, the police went to the Watson Hotel, where he was registered under the name of Fred Clark, and took him to the Sheriff's Office (Kalamazoo Co.) for questioning. He refused to admit his identity to them, and it was only after he was taken back to Hillsdale by Col. Kerr that he finally admitted that he was Roy Pratt. On Tuesday he led the officers to the spot on his Cambridge Township farm where the money taken from the bank was hidden. When brought before Justice Fitzsimmons, he waived examination and was bound over to the Circuit Court, and bail was fixed at $10,000, which was not furnished. He will appear before Judge Johnson on Monday, May 2nd.

Roland Wilson, who was arrested April 2, for transporting liquor, after an examination before Justice Aldrich, was bound over to the May term of the Circuit Court and bail fixed at $1000, which was furnished. Marie Wilson, his wife, who was arrested at the same time, and charged with frequenting a disorderly house, (the roadhouse operated by Victor Fish), also appeared for examination. The charge against her was dismissed for lack of proper evidence.

Riley Flannery, the Woodbridge Township bootlegger who was arrested by the Sheriff's Department early in April, appeared before the Circuit Judge on Friday and plead guilty to violating the Prohibition Law. He was sentenced to serve 6 months in Ionia and pay a fine of $100 and costs of $50.

Saturday evening, the raiding squad descended on the farm and distillery owned and operated by A. W. Cramer, of Pittsford Township. Armed with a Search Warrant, the officers arrived at chore time, and proceeded to execute the warrant in a very thorough fashion. After a complete search of the premises, a quantity of wine, whiskey, (moonshine variety), and paraphernalia for manufacturing the liquor was found. Cramer and the liquor were both taken into custody and returned to jail, where Cramer will be charged with the sale, possession and manufacture, etc. of intoxicating liquor.

Lester Mingus and Chas. (Pug) Norton, both of Ray, Ind, were arrested in Camden by members of the Hillsdale Co. Sheriff's Department early Sunday morning, (about 1:00 a. m.) They were in the act of delivering a quantity of "hard" liquor to a thirsty customer. To say that they were surprised is putting it mildly, however, they were returned to Hillsdale in custody, and their car an Overland Six Sedan, was confiscated. They will be charged with the sale, possession transportation of intoxicating liquor.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail 10. Under sentence 5. Awaiting trial 5. Total 10.

Detroit Believes in Advertising

The great City of Detroit is certainly interested in its own development which is more than you can say of some of the smaller cities throughout Michigan. In round figures one million dollars is to be raised in Detroit for advertising the city and most of the papers of Michigan will receive a share in this vast sum of money. Already the city has received a vast quantity of free publicity on account of its automobile factories whose products are seen in every part of the known world. But there is more to follow. Besides being the home of the largest automobile factory in the world Detroit has many other features not found elsewhere. The natural scenic beauty of the river and the Belle Isle Park adjacent, the wonderful flatnesss and uniformity of the surface in all directions from the city and its cosmopolitan population appeal to every thinking person who should read this item. In natural advantages Detroit has either Chicago or New York City beat forty ways, and we expect soon to demonstrate these forty ways. Most any novice can see where New York is handicapped. It is situated on an island and the island is full hence the only way New York can grow is straight up into the air, and we might say the limit is about reached, because buildings higher than fifty stories will never be practical on the small bases which they can have in this congested crowded municipality. When you go across the water, no matter in what direction no matter how many bridges you cross you must be in another neighborhood and its not New York. But in comparison let us say that Detroit can cover the most of Michigan then some, and still keep growing—there is absolutely nothing to interfere. Hooked to the outer world and Europe as Detroit will soon be by water routes and also to all ports of the world and by concrete ribbons and steel rails to every city in the country why will not our metropolis be a winner? One more thing we want to mention, and that is, Michigan is going to be a summer resort country. Her population is going to be augmented wonderfully by concrete and gravel highways. In short we believe our state is one of the most fortunate in all respects in the Union. Let's go to it and advertise her "to beat the band" as Harry Lauder sings.

Need Final Touches To Insure Payments

Finishing touches are all that are needed for most Michigan farmers to have their fields pass inspection, according to L. H. Worthley federal administrator or corn borer control work.

It is reported that a large number of fields need only to have corn stalks sticking out of the ground picked up, and remnants on the surface gathered in order to comply with the government regulations.

Farmers are advised by Worthley that only thorough clean-up jobs will be approved In most cases, he says, a half day's labor is all that is needed to meet the requirements. The surface must be free from all debris which would harbor the borer in order to pass inspection.

A high degree of optimism prevails concerning the progress of the campaign in Michigan and reports indicate that the State is going "over the top" in the war against the borer.

Two out of three hired men have left the farms of New York in the past ten years, yet the one third that is left keeps New York, the first state in the country in the production of tame hay, apples, buckwheat, cabbage, onions and snap beans for canning. This one hired man that is left takes care of 1,374,000 dairy cows, a number surpassed by only two states, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The other two have gone to the city and entered industrial work, while tractors, milking machines, water systems improved garden machinery and better farm equipment of every kind have taken their place and at less cost to the farmer, according to the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers. The hired man who is left gets an average wage of $70.25 per month where he boards himself and $50.50 with board.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 24th day of September, A. D. 1912, executed by Paris Brewer; a single man, to Cyrus L. Wilcox, which said mortgage was, on the 25th day of September, A. D., 1912, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, State of Michigan, in Liber 144 of Mortgages, on Page 147, and which said Mortgage is now owned by the estate of said Cyrus L. Wilcox, he being now deceased, and upon which there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($900) due principal, FOUR HUNDRED TWENTY TWO and 84-100 DOLLARS interest; taxes in the amount of One Hundred Fifty-Five and 85 100 Dollars ($155,85) paid by said estate for the protection of its said mortgage interest, together with an attorney fee provided for in said mortgage and by the statute in such case made and provided of THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS, and which said sum, together with said attorney fee, is the whole amount claimed to be now due on said mortgage leaving however, a balance of principal still due thereon at a future date, in the sum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, foreclosure and sale hereunder being subject to such unpaid principal.

And whereas, on the 21st day of November A. D., 1918, by a partial release recorded in Liber 159 of Mortgages, page 421, as appears by the records in the Register of Deeds office of said county, the following lands were released from said mortgage; Ten acres off the south end of the east half of the north-west quarter of Section Twenty-Three in Town five south, of range two west, Moscow Township, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and leaving the land hereinafter described as security for the payment of said indebtedness.

And whereas, no suit or proceeding, either in law or equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of June, A. D., 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the east front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county because of said defaults in the payments of said sums of principal and interest, and taxes amounting in all to Fourteen Hundred Seventy-eight Dollars, forty-nine cents [$1478.49] and by virtue of power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale at Public Auction to the highest bidder of the said premises therein described, except the premises heretofore released as herein set forth, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage as above set forth, with interest thereon, and the costs, charges and expenses allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including the said attorney fee.

Said premises now covered by said mortgage are described as follows; All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Moscow, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan, viz. The North-east quarter of the south-west quarter of Section twenty-three, Town five south of Range two west for time payments

on these cars

ANY FAMILY entitled to credit may buy a General Motors car and pay for it while using it, under the GMAC Plan.

When time payments first became an accepted form of car purchase, General Motors organized its own finance company, the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, to make sure that the sale of its cars on time would be in the buyer's interest and that the finance charges would be fair.

GMAC rates have always been low; and the last reduction has saved General Motors' customers more than $12,000,000.

The General Motors line includes "a car for every purse and purpose"— a suitable model for every income. You can buy it out of income, paying no more than the cash delivered price, plus only the low GMAC financing charge. And the whole transaction is so conducted as to keep your goodwill and satisfaction.

CLIP THE COUPON

USE THE GMAC PLAN to enjoy a new car now. Use it to get a better car for what you plan to spend. Have General Motors quality. Share in the economies of volume production. Look over the list of General Motors cars below. See which car suits your purse. Then check and mail the coupon. We will send you full information about that car and about the fair, low-cost GMAC Plan of paying for it out of income. Don't wait. Clip the coupon and mail it TODAY.

Does He Mean It?

Some of our newspaper friends in Michigan are now talking and airing their opinions concerning a tightening up of crime penalties in the state. Thus one sayeth:

"Michigan may have a whipping post for her more refractory criminals. Such a measure now awaits the signature of Governor Green to become a law. Of course it does not mean we are to revert to the old cat-o-nine-tails that reduced a man to a quivering mass of bleeding flesh, with every sense of a human being wiped out, but a broad non-lascerating strap calculated to produce plenty of pain without inflicting serious injury. Strange to say the measure passed both Senate and House without serious opposition. The fact that a whipping post law has even been contemplated is a complete reversal of public sentiment from the days when the mere paddling of an obstinate prisoner brought a storm of protest from every section of Michigan. Even now, in the light of recent events, it is doubtful if the whipping post should be returned to the state as an institution. Swift stern justice, unmixed with maudlin sentiment, should prove a great deterrant of crime."

It looks as if the hope of establishing more stringent punishments in this state, had gone up the flue. The legislature, as a body, does not think this an opportune time to spring the capital punishment law. These laws are killed in the committee just as regularly as clock-work, and the whipping post measure has been put up as a com promise. Judge Collingwood and other learned jurists tell us that capital punishment won't ameliorate crime, but they have never proved it. In our opinion the whipping post, if established will be a disgusting relic of barbarity, far removed from a deterrant of crime. Really this is baiting a criminal, and only serves to anger him to more atrocious deeds.

Michigan Livestock Association

"With the coming of hot weather, it is imperative that shipments of livestock be watched closely," is the warning sent out by the Michigan Livestock Loss Prevention Association, an organization made up of representatives from all industries interested in the live stock business from producer to packer.

J. H. O'Mealey, President of the Association, says further, "The first hot spells come suddenly and usually cause our most severe losses. One day in May of 1926 over 1100 animals arrived dead or crippled in one terminal market on account of an unexpected rise in temperature. Common sense, supplemented with good sound judgment, is sufficient to avoid these losses."

A poster has just been issued by this Association and is being placed on display at shipping points and other points where the shippers can note the important points to consider in hot weather. Among them enumerated on this poster are: 1 Handle animals patiently to avoid excitement; 2 bed cars with sand instead of straw; 3 spray water on feet of hogs, but not on their backs; 4 do not feed just before loading.

In commenting upon these hot weather warnings, Professor G. A. Brown, M. S. C. who is one of the Directors of the Association, says "The greatest mortality is in hogs during the first warm spell in the spring. This is due to their being quickly affected by the sudden changes in the weather at that time of the year. How they stand being shipped depends very much on whether they have been penfed or been accustomed to roam over the farm. The latter will ship much better than the former. If hogs are hot and tired, they should be allowed to rest and cool off before being loaded into cars. By all means avoid the old evil practice of stuffing the stock with corn and giving it salt in order to put on artificial weight, Not only does it cause bad effects physically, but it also does not succeed in deceiving the buyer on the other end."

That the carriers of livestock also realize their responsibility is shown by the fact that all the railroads are issuing bulletins instructing the proper officials on the best ways of handling stock during hot weather. Thus, the Association encourages the co-operation of all agencies to reduce the actual waste which last year cost the Michigan shippers over $150,000.

Lovers of sauer kraut will be pleased to learn that the setting of cabbage plants has been tremendously speeded up and cheapened by a new machine recently announced by the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment manufacturers as ready for the field. This is the 2-row transplanter, on which three men or boys ride, two being seated almost on the ground, where they feed the little plants into the mechanism that sets and waters them as it is drawn across the field by either horses or tractor. Eight or more acres can thus be set a day and it is set so that it may be cultivated both ways to eliminate all hand work in the truck garden. Other crops like tomatoes, sweet potatoes, etc., can be set by this machine.

Epicures tell us that along about this time of year there is to be found in the fields a substitute for asparagus in the shape of the young shoots of the Poke berry commonly known as Scoke. Few if any of us remember what Poke is, but practically all of Michigan people know what Scokeberry is. A plant that grows in fence corners and in low shaded lands, about three feet high, has purple blossoms on a stem at the top later producing a bunch of dark purple berries about the size of a small cherry. When we were kids we were taught this shrub was poisonous, and such it is if the juice of the stem or root is taken into the digestive system of man. But the tender young shoots of the stems which spring up early and look something like asparagus are eatable cooked and served the same as the asparagus. We were acquainted with an old fashioned lady once who always made a practice of using the scoke berries in the fall for making a species of wine or as she called it "tonic" and we have been very careful not to whisper it to neighbors since because if we had we are positive the culture of scoke would begin at once in North Adams. The raisin and dandelion product you know becomes so monotonous in time, and "canned heat" is hard to come at. We hope the Sheriff won't see this and at once suspect us of "moonshining."

Power Is Waiting In State Streams

Many of the streams in Michigan can be harnessed and will furnish power to farms through which they pass, according to the department of agricultural engineering at M. S. C.

Streams which have a constant volume of water are much more valuable as sources of power than those that flood in the spring and dwindle in dry weather. The fall of the stream directly affects the amount of power which can be developed.

Unless a fall of three feet can be secured at the dam, a stream is usually worthless as a power source Before a dam is constructed permission to flood the land must be obtained from all property owners affected.

The volume of water flowing in a stream is determined by multiplying the depth by the width by the rate of flow. Allowance should be made for the curvature of the bottom in measuring the depth, and the still water along the sides of the stream should not be included in the measurement of the width The rate of flow can be found by measuring the distance that a block of wood in the stream will travel in one minute.

To find the horse power which a stream will develop multiply the depth in inches; by the width, in feet: times the rate of flow in feet per minute; times the fall, in feet and divide by 12,690. The quotient is the horse power rating of the stream. One horse power will supply current for 15 fifty watt lamps.

Assign Dates For Achievement Days

Beginning May 2, Achievement Days are scheduled for 35 Michigan counties. Groups of women in the counties will show some of the work which they have done while taking the courses given by the extension division of M. S. C.

The projects for the past year have been home furnishing, home management, nutrition, and clothing. Members of the groups enrolled in these courses have made attractive articles of clothing, revised daily menus to meet the special needs of children and invalids, rearranged kitchens to save time and steps, made their homes more attractive by the proper arrangement of furnishings, and have enjoyed the group meetings.

A. K. Williams of North Adams is a candidate for third base on the 1927 freshman baseball team at M. S. C. The team has a short schedule of four games. Grand Rapids Junior and Calvin College are the nines to be met. Because of the large number of seniors on the varsity squad, Coach Lyman L. Frimodig has hopes of many of his proteges making the regular team next season. The work of the freshman in the few clashes with the varsity has indicated that plenty of ability is present.

The Women's League was in charge of the assembly hour of Cleary College Wednesday and presented a one-act comedy entitled, The Old Maids' Association, under the direction of Frances Hinkley. The play was very cleverly done and represented the efforts of the association to promote happy homes for widowers and bachelors, in which efforts they had not been very successful. The cast was as follows: Jerusha Eliza Bangs, president, Loraine Bogert, Vassar, and Ruth DuFord, Bay City; Rebecca Retrace, secretary and treasurer, Clara Mae Beach, Highland, and Gertrude Coleman, Linden; Mariana Mellisa Piack, Gertrude Begole, Ann Arbor; Hepsibah Odellia Olds, Elizabeth Weber, Linden; Ann Ellen Patterby, Laura Perry, Ypsilanti; May Haverman, Lucille VanWert, North Adams; Petunia Pickles, Martha Visel, Saline; Serena Hasben, Inez Myers, Sturgis, and Martha Bush, Jackson; Charity Hopegood, Esther Dygert, Reading; Belinda Bliss, Josephine Bliss Ypsilanti; Professor Makerneux, Ruth Fryman, Petoskey.

This is the way the golden Hawaiian pineapple which you eat for breakfast, luncheon or dinner is hauled from the field to the largest fruit cannery in the world, located in Honolulu, Hawaii. The proud fruit Monarch is stripped of his spiked crown, put in a crate, hauled to the railway.

Above: After pineapple has been through "Ginaca" machine which removes shell from fruit meat, it goes on an endless belt before Hawaiian women who select slices according to grades desired.

Above: This is the way the Hawaiian Pineapple Company moves millions of cans of pineapple about in the warehouse. Motor cycles geared to low speed give the cans a "joy ride" when necessary.

Right: When you take from your larder a can of golden Hawaiian pineapple you know it is as fine a product as scientific growing and canning can make it. It is a bit of imprisoned Hawaiian sunshine.

Close to forty bands, from every section of the state, are entered in the Michigan State school band contest to be held at Lansing May 17, it is announced by Carl R. Kuhlmann, director of the M. S. C. Band, who is in charge of the arrangements for the musical event. The winning band will be eligible to the National School Band Contest which is to be held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 27 and 28.

Take Them When Tired

Clyde S. Wertz, North Adams

The alumni of Michigan State Normal College are more than two fifths of the way to their goal of $500,000 for a Union Building for their Alma Mater. With the campaign at the half way mark, reports have brought the total to that height. A general report meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon in Detroit where is the greatest concentration of alumni will probably increase this sum and perhaps bring the campaigners to the halfway mark of their objective, coincidental with their arrival at the middle of the four week effort.

"One of the most encouraging movements for music in the schools is the inclusion of it as part of the vocational training. A pupil now can learn to be a carpenter, mechanic, printer or any one of a number of trades and professions at public expense. Music is one of the leading professions, and it is being increasingly felt that school authorities should extend the same sort of educational advantages to young people who would like to take up music as a life work."

Tea-table Talk

Mrs. A. is having tea with Mrs. W., and they find the O. P. A. Club must have a blue book of By-laws and the U-Go I-Went Class of are needing some programs for their semi-annual Barbecue and Dance.

Says Mrs. A. to Mrs. W: "I am all mixed up in my dates. Had so much to look after this month that I simply forgot to make out the program for our big dance. The fact is, with the S. O. B. Club, The Rolling Pin bunch, and the Instigator's I have been completedy done up."

"Right you are" said Mrs. W. "The printer down at the Advocate was asking me to-day what you were about. He says he must get your copy tomorrow morning in order to deliver the programs in time or the dance." Mrs. A. slammed the percolator, gulped a cup-full of tea and made a bee line for her desk. "I'll do it now!"

BANDS GIVE CLEW TO BIRDS FLIGHT

The Inland Bird Banding Ascsociation has found out many secrets of the migrating song birds and game birds. Contrary to popular belief, many birds do not take a direct north and south route, but migrate from northwest to southeast to go to Florida, Georgia and states in that region. A year ago the association tagged 25,000 birds that nest in colonies, such as gulls, herons and chimney swifts.

One Caspian Tern handed in northern Michigan was reported in the West Indies, the tag identifying the bird with certainty. Again, a herring gull banded at Detroit Channel, Mich., was found near Hudson Bay, some 600 miles north. Juncos banded and released from Crystal Bay, Minnesota, have been identified as far east as New Jersey.

Though many birds from North America commonly go to the northern part of South America, only a relatively few species pass below the Equator as far south as Paraguay, Uruguay, Argentina and Chile. However, these include some of our best known birds. One who was not familiar with their habits would hardly believe them capable of flying such great distances twice each year. Among the smaller land species that perform this extended flight the barn swallow and the bobolink are worthy of mention.

TAWAS SEEKING JERSEY ARSENAL

Removal of the Edgewood Arsenal, Edgewood, N. J., to Tawas City, Mich., has been proposed in an offer made to the War Department by Henry W. Berger of Tawas, acting for a syndicate of Michigan interests.

The Edgewood Arsenal was built during the war at a cost of approximately $40,000,000 for production of explosives and poison gas, but now is being used only for small experimental operations. The Michigan Syndicate proposes to move the extensive equipment to the plant to East Tawas and employ it in commercial production of chemicals, guaranteeing the Government an instant supply of munitions in event of war.

Charles A. Floyd and Hall & Co. of Detroit are associated with Berger in the syndicate, the names of the other individuals and firms participating in the offer not being disclosed.

The terms of the proposal call for a 50-year lease of the Edgewood equipment, the syndicate agreeing to pay the Government $1,250,000 in 50 annual payments. In return it offers to transport the Edgewood plant to East Tawas free of charge to the Government. To lease the Government 172 acres of land at East Tawas at a nominal rental and ta maintain the plants in good condition, guaranteeing to restore them to the Goverment on demand in time of war or other emergency.

The offer submitted to the War Department proposes that the syndicate continue to manufacture explosives for the Government, declaring East Tawas to be strategically located for this purpose. The metal parts of the shells, it points out, could be manufactured at Cleveland or Detroit and assembled there. Primarily, however, the plant would be devoted to production of commercial chemicals.

12 CO-EDS AWARDED LETTERS, MONOGRAMS, FOR SPORT FEATS

As a reward for proficiency in the sports, 12 Michigan State college coeds were awarded letters and class monograms.

The ne wofficers of the organization are:

Miss Mary Ella Fahrny, Ridgefirld Park, N. J., president; Miss Marie Lucas, Benton Harbor, vice president; Miss Annabelle McRae, Cass City, secretary, and Miss Bessie Castle, Lansing, treasurer.

Co-eds who were given letters for having earned 1000 points by participating in college athletic events, are Miss Elizabeth Woodworth, Detroit; Miss Dorothy Soesmith, East Lansing, and Miss Beatrice Beck, Calumet.

The monogram for 500 points went to Miss Ruth Bowen, Grand Rapids; Miss Flossie Pangborn, Bad Axe; Miss Fay Gillis, New York City; Miss Leah Horning, aBttle Creek; Miss Alice Hunter, Lansing; Miss Ione Lautner, East Lansing; Miss Marion Woodworth, Detroit; Miss Florence Banhagel, Lansing, and Miss Henriette Scoville, Lansing.

HERE'S A WARNING TO PEDESTRIANS

More than 22,000,000 motor vehicles were registered in the United States during 1926, according to reports to the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of agriculture. The year's registration represents an increase of 10.3 per cent, or sligntly more than 2,000,000 more than that of 1925.

Florida, with an increase of 40.2 per cent, not including non-resident registrations, shows a greater gain than ay other state. Oklahoma, with a gai of 17.8 per cent, and second only to Florida in respect to the amount of increase, was followed closely by Alabama, Idaho, Louisiana, Mississippi and Utah, all of which had an increase over 15 per cent.

Of the total number of vehicles registered, 19,237,171 were passenger automobiles, taxis and buses and 2,761,222 were motor trucks and road tractors. The increase in motor trucks and road tractors amounted to 13.2 per cent, which is somewhat greater than the increase for all classes of motor vehicles, indicating a continuation of the development of commodity transportation by highway.

Receipts from registration fees, licenses, etc., amounted to $288,282,352 as compared with $260,619,621 in 1925. Of the gross receipts $190,406,060 was available for highway construction under the supervision of the state highway department, $51,702,184 was allocated to counties for expenditure on local roads and $25,274,158 was used to finance highway bond issues.

FIRTILIZER HELD NEED OF LAWNS

Chanves are the annual whitewashing suburbanites give their lawns does more harm than good. One amateur gardener on a street limes his lawn, and before long every lawn on the block has been whitewashed.

But, says Dr. C. J. Willard of the farm crops department at Ohio State university, the value of lime for lawns has been greatly overestimated. West of Columbus there are few soils which require lime to grow good grass, and even east of Columbus 50 pounds of hydrated lime, sold as lown lime, per 1000 square feet once in from six to eight years will be sufficient for any soil type in the state.

The annual whitewashing which many lawns receive is not only wasteful, but, by encouraging some of our worst weeds, may be harmful. Lime will not eradicate moss in the lawn.

On the other hand, Dr. Willard says, a bare spot in a lawn is a pretty sure indication that something is wrong. That wrong should be corrected before more seed is sown.

It is the height of folly, he continues, to expect delicate seedlings to live where established plans have died. Sowing seed on thin turb to thicken the stand is usually a waste of seed. The same money in fertilizer will give many times the rescults. Turf is usually thin because it is starved.

On good soil the application, just as growth starts in the spring, of five pounds of nitrate of soda or of sulphate of ammonia to 1000 square feet will produce a vigorous growth of grass. These should be watesed in, as sulphate of ammonia is liable to burn the grass. As a yearly top dresser in addition on poorer soils, from 10 to 15 pounds to 1000 square feet of a 3-12-4, or similar complete fertilizer, will give good results. Bone meal at the rate of 10 pounds to 1000 square feet is excellent for lawns.

"Yes--I Do Like My Bananas!"

A new type of champion has come to light at Washington, D. C.—a chap who lays claim to being the "Champion Banana Eater." He is A. C. Ogle, slightly plump in statute and owner of a healthy appetite.

Above you see his 288 pound majesty in training—that is, putting six dozen bananas away at a shot! This is his present record but he has sent out invitations to anybody to meet him at a regular banana eating contest and he'll show 'em how to pack away more.

FORD IS INVENTOR RECORDS REVEAL

The two Ford patents, originally applied for in August, 1920, show that as early as that date, the automobile manufacturer was interested in design of an airplane motor. The patents over a typeof intake and exhaust manifold and a design for a crank shaft. They show that Ford was working on an eight-cylinder engine, evidently for use in aircraft, in which the cylinders are arranged in two circular series of four sylinders each. The patents were issued personally to Ford and were not assigneo the Ford Motor Co.

Edward N. Boosey, pipe bend; Frank Bowers, boiler cleaner, Alexander W. Copeland, dough depositing machine; Henry Ford, crank shaft formation; Henry Ford, manifold construction for internal combustion engines; Victor E. Lane, non-oxidizing furnace; Herman C. Malse, assignor to Briggs Manufacturing Co., window frame an jig (2 patents); William Marshall, assignor to Briggs Manufacturing Co., pliers; Henry E. Moffatt, water heater and purifier; Poseph A. Moross, producing artificial marble; Wladslaw Nago, silk and yarn thread waxing device; Andrew Palka, radiator casing; Charles E. Pellow, castellating machine; Ernest Pemberthy, fluid pressure tool; Elliot Stoddard, radiator; Fred J. Westrope, assigner to Briggs Manufacturing Co., adjustable striker plate.

Other Michigan residents were issued patents as follows:

Flint—Frank Bedard, telescope air jet.

Lansing—Arthur . FHickey, door check.

DETROIT THEATER FIRM TAKES OWOSSO HOUSE

The Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, incorporated, with headquarters in Detroit, added another theater to its string the second in Owosso, when it leased the Strand, a picture house, for 10 years. The lease was surrendered by Codd & Angell, of Adrian and Niles. The company also owns the Capitol, built a year ago at a cost of $125,000.

MICHIGAN DOGS NOTED FOR SPEED

There are two kinds of dog racing popular in North America—the coursing of grewhounds over short distances and the Winter dog races which were first held in Alaska and are now annual events in several places in Canada and the United States.

Undoubtedly the fastest dog team in Michigan is composed of dogs bred by Dr. John F. Deadman, Soo veterianian, as hunting dogs.

"I intended to use them for catching wolves and coyotes, to run with my fox hounds," Dr. Deadman explains. "After the tralers had started the game, I planned to release these swift runners to finish the chase. They can run between 35 and 40 miles an hour over a short distance, as I have paced them in a car.

"The mother of these dogs was an Irish wolf hound. The Irish wolf hound, once the companion of kings, is an ancient breed, the tallest of all dogs. They will stand between 32 and 34 inches at the shoulder—a few as high as 37. The breed is dignified, quiet and affectionate.

"The father of the racers was Pope, my best fox hound. He came from the Bluegrass Kennels in Kentucky and was a big specimen, with a splendid voice and a wonderful fur getter."

All of are wondering who others manage to live within their incomes.

Dobbin Gets a Tail-Light

No more rear-end bumps for Dobbin. At least, not in England. Ever since a police constable was run down by a motor car while riding a horse at night near the city of Bardford, lamps are to be carried by all horses after darkness—said lamps to be attached to the crupper, that part of the harness which fits under the horse's tail. Sounds like a good idea!

OVERHAUL AUTO TO FIT WARMER DAYS

This is the time of the year when the family automobile should be given extra attention. Winter gives a motor car a severe test and certain precautions are recommended by experts in preparation for the summer touring season.

Be sure to remove the anti-freeze solution from wour radiator. At the same time see that the cooling system is flushed out. It is a good plan to ing soda in four gallons of war. dissolve a half pound of common bakwater and run this solution tnrougn the radiator. This helps to eliminate scale.

Motor car manufacturers have spent much time and money for the safety and peace of mind of car owners in four-wheel brake equipment. But all this can be negatived if the owner neglects his brakes. Winter is hard on brakes. Now is a good time to check them for wear or adjustment.

A general check up of the car every spring will save money for the owner in the long run. Such items as generator, charging rate readjustment, cleaning of carburetor and gasoline lines, inspection of transmission and differential oil, tunig the motor, adjustig the fan belt and like details should have attention.

During long trips undertaken in the touring season now approaching, it is easy to ovreheat the battery, particularly if the charging date of the generator has been increased for winter driving and allowed to remain unchanged. This can be avoided by turning the head lights on during the day time.

MAY 1 O 7 IS DESIGNATED FOR BLOSSOM FESTIVAL

The week of May 1 to 7 has been selected by the Blossom Festival committee as the date of this year's Blossom week celebration.

Members of the committee consulted Benton Harbor fruit growers before setting the date. The fruit growers said they found the trees in excellent condition and estimated the blossoms would b eat their best early in the week of May 1.

The committee set May 1 as Blossom Sunday. May 2 was chosen as the date for the blossom pageant at Filstrup Field and May 3 was chosen for the annual Blossom parade.

MILD WINTER BRINGS UP DAYLIGHT SAVINGS ISSUE

Daylight saving time is gaining favor aain in Western Michian because of the mild weather durin the last winter. Another movement has been started in some cities to vote on the question of adopting daylight saving the year around.

NEW TOMATOE IS SAID TO RESIST DISEASE BETTER

Seed of a new and more disease resistant variety of hot house tomato is being distributed among greenhouse growers in the Grand Rapids section for experimental purposes by the botany department of Michian State college.

This variety is called the Ideal Forcing and is said to be more hardy than the Grand Rapids Forcing strain and produces a fruit which will ship better. The Ideal is a cross between the Comet and Bonny Best varieties. The Bonny Best is grown extensively by commercial gardeners in Michigan.

STATE NORMAL 11 FACE HARD FIGHT

Michigan State Normal btseball squad is practicing outdoors and according to Coach Ryneahson, there is some very promising material.

There are seven letter men back this year but five of the best men graduated. The men who are lost to the Normal are Captain Fahler, McClain, Vachon, Burns and Farmiey. Farmley is now playing with the Toledo Mud Hens.

The Michigan State Normal College is now in the Michigan Collegiate Conference and this will be the first baseball season for the new conference. Last year when Ypsi was in the M. I. A A., it won the baseball championship but the competition will be harder than last year.

Schedule follows:

May 5, St. Mary at Ypsi; May 13, Ypsi at Kalamazoo; May 14, Western State at Ypsi; May 19, Valparaiso at 28 ,Ypsi at St. Mary's; June 9 or 10, Ypsi; May 20, Mt. Pleasant at Ypsi May 27, Armour Tech at Ypsi; May St. Xavier at Ypsi; June 11, Ypsi at Mt. Pleasant. Two games have been arranged with Assumption College of Sandwich, Ont., Toledo University and Adrian but the dates have not been settled.

DEMOCRATS AND G. O. P. BACK SAME TWO MEN

Democrats and Republicans swapped endorsements in the municipal election at Clare and as a result there was but one candidate for mayor and one for city treasurer.

L. H. Thompson, who has been the mayor of Clare for five years, was renominated by the Democrats and indorsed by the Republicans. Edgar Peterson, a blind teacher of music, was renominated fir city treasurer by the Republicans and indorsed by the Democrats. Peterson was elected to succeed his wife, who is now his deputy.

If Senator King will promise to stay in Haiti perhaps the matter can be arranged.

BOATS SLICKED UP FOR SPRING RACES

Though the sailing season does not open officially until the annual Yacht club regetta on Memorial Day, sailors are losing no time in preparing their craft for what promises to be the best year of sailing ever known on the Detroit river.

Everywhere along the docks and boatsheds from Port Huron to Put-in-Bay these earnest devotees of the sailing game are putting the finishing touches to their annual fitting out campaign. Hulls are being revarnished and seams filled; spars are being strengthened and the sails repaired preparatory to the coming out party on memorial Day.

Judging from the arduous advance preparation skippers expect their sport to reach its highest peak and the vast number of new boats ordered for spring delivery presages the increase in interest. And there is a reason for tahe eranestness in being prepared for the opening events.

Through the efforts of Dr. W. A. Wilson, commodore of the Inter-Lake Yatching association, clubs in the Buffalo district have agreed to abandon competition in the Canadian races and devote their efforts to the Great Lakes events during the summer. Entry of these clubs will stimulate the R class that already has proven the outstanding class on the river.

DOG LOST LAST FALL IN GEORGIA RETURNS HOME

Rover, a Michigan dog of uncertain ancestry, disappeared near Macon, Ga., last fall just before Thanksgiving. He and his owner, William M. Hulburt of Jackson, were taking an automobile trip through the south.

This week as Hulbert was crossing Michigan avenue, he saw a dog, dirty and footstore, his long hair matted and his legs dog tired, coming toward him. It was Rover; completing his 1000-mile trip afoot.

CHAPTER I

The Science of Deduction

Sherlock Holmes took his bottle from the corner of the mantelpiece and his hypodermic syringe from its neat morocco case. With his long, white, nervous fingers he adjusted the delicate needle, and rolled back his shirt-cuff. For some little time his eyes rested thoughtfully upon the sinewy forearm and wrist, all dotted and scarred with innumerable puncture-marks. Finally he thrust the sharp point home, pressed down the tiny piston, and sunk back into the velvet-lined armchair with a long sigh of satisfaction.

Three times a day for many months I had witnessed the performance, but custom had not reconciled my mind to it. On the contrary, from day to day I had become more irritable at the sight, and my conscience swelled nightly within me at the thought that I had lacked the courage to protest. Again and again I had registered a vow that I should deliver my soul upon the subject, but there was that in the cool, nonchalant air of my companion which made him the last man with whom one would care to take anything approaching to a liberty. His great powers, his masterly manner, and the experience which I had had of his many extraordinary qualities, all made me diffident and backward in crossing him.

Yet upon that afternoon, whether it was the claret which I had taken with my lunch, or the additional exaspiration produced by the extreme deliberation of his manner, I suddenly felt that I could hold out no longer.

"Which is it to-day?" I asked. "Morphine or cocaine?"

He raised his eyes languidly from the old black-letter volume which he had opened. "It is cocaine," he said; "a seven per cent solution. Would you care to try it?"

"No, indeed," I answered, brusquely. "My constitution has not got over the Afghan campaign yet. I cannot afford to throw any extra strain upon it."

He smiled at my vehemence. "Perhaps you are right, Watson," he said. "I suppose that its influence is physically a bad one. I find it, however, so transcendently stimulating and clarifying to the mind that its secondary action is a matter of small moment."

"But consider!" I said, earnestly. "Count the cost. Your brain may, as you say, be roused and excited, but it is a pathological and morbid process, which involves increased tissue-change, and may at last leave a permanent weakness. You know, too, what a black reaction comes upon you. Surely the game is hardly worth the candle. Why should you, for a mere passing pleasure, risk the loss of those great powers with which you have been endowed? Remember that I speak not only as one comrade to another but a medical man to one for whose constitution he is to some extent answerable."

He did not see moffended. On the contrary, he put his finger-tips together and leaned his elbows on the arms of his chair, like one who has a relish for conversation.

"My mind," he said, "rebels at at stagnation. Give me problems, give me work, give me the most abstruse cryptomgram, or the most intricate analysis, and I am in my own proper atmosphere, I can dispense then with artificial stimulants. But I abhor the dull routine of existence. I crave for mental exaltation. That is why I have chosen my own particular profession—or rather created it, for I am the only one in the world."

"The only unofficial detective?" I said, raising my eyebrows.

"The only unofficial consulting detective," he answered. "I am the last and highest court of appeal in detection. When Gregson, or Lestrade, or Atheleny Jones are out of their depths—which, by the way, is their normal state—the matter is laid before me. I examine the data, as an expert, and pronounce a specialist's opinion. I claim no credit in such cases. My name figures in no newspaper. The work itself, the pleasure of finding a field for my peculiar powers, is my highest reward. But you have yourself had some experience of my methods of work in the Jefferson Hope case."

"Yes, indeed," said I, cordially. "I was never so tsruck by anything in my life. I even embodied it in a small brochure with the somewhat fantastic title of 'A Study in Scarlet.'

He shook his head sadly. "I glanced over it," said he. "Honestly, I cannot congratulate you puon it. Detection is, or ought to be, an exact science, and should be treated in the same cold and unemotional manner. You have attempted to tinge it with romanticism, which produces much the same effect as if you worked a love story or an elopement into the fifth proposition of Euclid."

"But the romance was there," I remonstrated. "I could not tamper with the facts."

"Some facts should be suppressed, or at least a just sense of proportion should be observed in treating them. The only point in the case which deserved mention was the curious analytical reasoning from effects to causes, by which I succeeded in unraveling it."

I was annoyed at this criticism of a work which had been specially designed to please him. I confess, too, that I was irritated by the egotism which seemed to demand that every line of my pamphlet should be devoted to his own special doings. More than once during the years that I have lived with him in Baker Street I had observed that a small vanity underly my companion's quiet and didactic maner. I made no remark, however, but sat nursing my wounded leg. I had had a Jezail bullet through it some time before, and though it did not prevent me from walking, it ached wearily at every change of the weather.

"My practice has extended recently to the Continent," said Holmes, after a while, filling up his old brier-root pipe. "I was consulted last week by Francois le Villard, who, as you probably know, has come rather to the front lately in the French detective service. He has all the Celic powers of quick intuition, but he is deficient in the wide range of exact knowledge which is essential to the higher developments of his art. The care was concerned with a will, and possessed some features of interest. I was able to refer him to two parallel cases; the one at Rita in 1857, and the other at St. Louis in 1871, which have suggested to him the true solution. Here is the letter which I had this morning acknowledging my assistance." He tossed over, as he spoke, acrumbled sheet of foreign notepaper. I glanced my eyes down it, catching a profusion of notes of admiration, with stray "magnifiques," "coup-de-maitres," and "tours-de-force," all testifying to the ardent admiration of the Frenchman.

"He speaks as a pupil of his master," said I.

"Oh, he rates my assistance too highly," said Sherlock Holmes, lightly. "He has considerable gifts himself. He possesses two out of the three qualities necessary for the ideal detective. He has the power of observation and that of deduction. He is only wanting in knowledge ;and that may come in time. He is now translating my small words into French."

"Your words?"

"Oh, didn't you know?" he cried, laughing. "Yes, I have been guilty of several monographs. They are all upon technical subjects. Here, for example, is one 'Upon the Distinction Between the Ashes of the Various Tobaccoes.' In it I enumerate a hundred and forty forms of cigar, cogarette, and pipe tobacco, with colored plates illustrating the difference in the ash. It is a point which is continually turning up in criminal trials, and which is sometimes of supreme importance as a clew. If you can say definately, for example, that some murder has been done by a man who was smoking an Indian iunkah, it obviously narrows your field of search. To the trained eye there is as much difference between the black ash of a Trichinopoly and the white fluff of birds-eye as there is between a cabbage and a potato."

"You have an extraordinary genius for minutiae," I remarked.

"I appreciate their importance. Here is my monograph upon the tracing of footsteps, with some remarks upon the uses of plaster of Paris as a preserver of impresses. Here, too, is a curious little work upon the influtnce of a trade upon the form of the hand, with lithotypts of the hands of slattrs, sailors, cork-cutttrs, compositors, weavers, and diamond-polishtrs. The is a matter of grtat practical inttrest to the scientific detective—especially in casts of unclainted bodits, or in discovering the antecedents of criminals. But I weary you with my hobby."

"Not at all," I answered, earnestly. "It is of the greatest intesest to me, especially since I have had the opportunity of observing your practical application and deduction. Surely the one to some extent implies the other."

"Why, hardly," he answered, leaning back luxuriosuly in his armchair, and sending up thick blue wreaths from his pipe. "For example, observation shows me that you have been to the Wigmore Street post office this morning, but deduction lets me know that when there yoc dispatched a telegram."

"Right!" said I. "Right on both points? But I confess that I don't see how you arrived at it. It was a sudden impulse upon my part, and I have mentioned it to no one."

"It is simplicity itself," he remarked, chuckling at my surprise; "so absurdly simple that an explanation is superfluous; and yet it may serve to define the limits of observation and of deduction. Observation tells me that you have just a little reddish mold adhering to your instep. Just opposite the Wigmore Street post office they have taken up the pavement and thrown up some earth which lies in such a way that it is difficult to avoid treading in it in entering. The earth is of this peculiar reddish tint which is found, so far as I know, nowhere else in the neighborhood. So much is observation. The rest is deduction."

"How, then, did you deduce the telegram?"

"Why, of course I knew that you had not written a leter, since I sat opposite to you all the morning. I see also in your open desk there that you have a sheet of stamps and a thick bundle of post-cards. What could you go into the post office for, then, but to send a wire? Eliminate all other factors, and the one which remains must be the truth."

"In this case it certainly is so," I replied, after a little thought. "The thing, however, is, as you say, of the simplest. Would you think me impertinent if I were to put your theories to a more severe test?"

"On the contrarw," he answered, "it would prevent me from taking a second dose of cocaine. I should be delighted to look into any problem which you might submit to me."

"I have heard you say that it is difficult for a man to have any object in daily use without leaving the impress of his indivduality upon it in such a way that a trained observer might read it. Now, I have here a watch which recently come into my possession. Would you have the kindness to let me have an opinion upon the character or habits of the late owner?"

I handed him the watch with some slight feeling of amusement in my heart, for the test was, as I thought, an impossible one, and I intended it as a lesson against the somewhat dogmatic tone which he occasionally assumed. He balanced the watch in his hand, gazed hard at the dial, opened the back, and examined the words, first with his naked eyes and then with a powerful convex lens. I could hardly keep from smiling at his crestfallen face, when he finally snapped the case to and handed it back.

"There are hardly any data," he remarked. "The watch has been recently cleaned, which robs me of my most suggestive facts."

"You are right," I answered. "It was cleaned before being sent to me." In my heart I accused my companion of putting forward a most lame and importanc excuse to cover his failure. What data could he expect from an uncleaned watch?"

"Though unsatisfactory, my research has not been entirely barren," be observed, staring up at the ceiling with dreamy, lack-luster eyes. "Subject to your correction, I should judge that the watch belonged to your elder brother, who inherited it from your father."

"That you gather, no doubt, from the H. W. upon the back?"

"Quite so. The W. suggests your own name. The date of the watch is nearly fifty years back, and the initials are as old as the watch; so it was made for the last generation. Jewelry usually descends to the eldest son, and he is most likely to have the same name as his father. Your father has, if I remember right, been dead many years. It has, therefore, been in the hands of your eldest brother."

"Right, so far," said I. "Anything else?"

"He was a man of untidy habits—very untidy and careless. He was left with good prospects, but he threw away his chances, lived for some time in poverty, with occasional short intervals of prosperity, and finally, taking to drink, he died. That is all I can gather."

I sprang from my chairand limped impatiently about the room with considerable bitterness in my heart.

"This is unworthy of you, Holmes," I said. "I could not have believed that you would have descended to this. You have made inquiries into this history of my unhappy brother, and now you pretend to deduce this knowledge in some fanciful way. You cannot expect me to believe that you have read all this from his old watch! It is unkind, and, to speak plainly, has a touch of charlatanism in it."

"My dear doctor," said he, kindly, "pray accept my apologies. Viewing the matter as an abstract problem, I had forgotten how personal and painful a thing it might be to you. I assure you, however, that I never even knew you had a brother until you handed me the watch."

"The how in the name of all that is wonderful did you get all these facts? They art obsolutely correct in every particular."

"Ah, that is good luck. I could only say what was the balance of probability. I did not at all expect to be so accurate."

"But it was not mere guesswork?"

"No, no; I never guess. It is a shocking habit—destructive to the logical faculty. What seems strange to you is only so because you do not follow my train of thought or observe the small facts upon which large inferences may depend. For example, I began by stating that your brother was careless. When you observe the lower part of that watchcase you notice that it is not only dented in two places, but it is cut not only dented in two places, but it is cut ond marked all over from the habit of keeping other hard objects, such as coins or keys, in the same pocket. Surely it is no great feat toassume that a man who treats a fifty-guinea watch so cavalierly must be a careless man. Neither is it a very far-fetched influence that a man who inherits one article of such value is pretty well provided for in other respects."

I nodded to show that I followed his reasoning.

"It is very customary for pawnbrokers in England, when they take a watch, to scratch the number of the ticket with a pin-point upon the inside of the case. It is more handy than a label, as there is no risk of the number being lost or transposed. There are no less than four such numbers visible to my lens on the inside of this case. Inference—that your brother was often at low water. Secondary influence—that he had occasional bursts of prosperity, or he could not have redeemed the pledge. Finally, I asked you to look at the inner plate which contains the keyhole. Look at the thousands of scratches all around the hole—marks where the key has slipped. What sober man's key could have scored those grooves? But you will never see a drunkard's watch without them. He winds it at night, and he leaves these traces of his unsteady hand. Where is the mystery in all this?"

"It is as clear as daylight," I answered. "I regret the injustice which I did you. I should have had more faith in your marvelous faculty. May I ask whether you have any professional inquiry on foot at present?"

"None. Hence the cocaine. I cannot live without brain-work. What else is there to live for? Stand at the window here. Was ever such a dreary, dismal, unprofitable world? See how the yellow fog swirls down the street and drifts across dun-colored houses. What could be more hopelessly prosaic and material? What is the use of having powers, doctor, when one has no field upon which to exert them? Crime is commonplace, and existence is commonplace, and no qualities save those which are commonplace have any function upon earth."

I had opened my mouth to reply to his tirade, when, with a crisp knock, our landlady entered, bearing a card upon a brass salver.

"A young lady for you, sir," she said, addressing my companion.

"Miss Mary Morstan," he read. "Hum! I have no recollection of that name. Ask the young lady to step up, Mrs. Hudson. Don't go, doctor. I prefer that you remain."

CHAPTER II.

The Setlement of the Case

Miss Morstan entered the room with a firm step and an outward composure of manner. She was a blonde young lady, small, dainty, well-gloved, and dressed in the most perfect taste. There was, however, a plainness and simplicity about her costume which bore with it a suggestion of limited means. The dress was a somber grayish beige, untrimmed and unbraided, and she wore a small turban of the same dull hue, relieved only by a suspicion of white feather in the side. Her face had neither regularity of feature nor beauty of complexion, but her expression was sweet and amiable, and her large blue eyes were singularly spiritual and sympathetic. In an experience of women which extends over many nations and three separate continets I have never looked upon a face which gave a clearer promise of a refined and sensitive nature. I could not but observe that, as she took the seat which Sherlock Holmes placed for her, her lip trembled, her hand quivered, and she showed every sign of intense inward agitation.

"I have come to you, Mr. Holmes," she said, "because you once enabled my employer, Mrse. Cecil Forrester, to unravel a little domestic complication. She was much impressed by your kindness and skill."

"Mrs. Cecil Forrester," he repeated, thoughtfully. "I believe that I was of some slight service to her. The case however, as I remember it, was a very simple one."

"She did not think so. But, at least, you cannot say the same of mine. I can hardly imagine any thing more strange, more utterly inexplicable, than the situation in which I find myself."

Holmes rubbed his hands and his eyes glistened. He leaned forward in his chair with an expression of extraordinary concentration upon his clear-cut, hawk-like features. "State your case," said he, in brisk business tones.

I felt that my position was an embarrasing one. "You will, I am sure, excuse me," I said, rising from my chair.

To my surprise, the young lady held up her gloved hand to detain me. "If your friend," she said, "would be good enough to stay, he might be of inestimable service to me."

I relapsed into my chair.

"Briefly," she continued, "the facts are these. My father was an officer in an Indian regiment, who sent me home when I was quite a child. My mother was dead, and I had no relative in England. I was placed, however, in a comfortable boarding establishment at Edinburgh, and there I remained until I was seventeen years of age. In the year 1878 my father, who was a senior captain of his regiment, obtained twelve months' leave and came home. He telegraphed to me from London that he had arrived all safe, and directed me to come down at once, giving the Langham Hotel as his address. His message, as I remember, was full of kindness and love. On reaching London I drove to the Langham, and was informed that Captain Morstan was staying there, but that he had gone out the night before and had not returned. I waited all day without news of him. That night, on the advice of the manager of the hotel, I communicated with the police, and next morning we advertised in all the papers. Our inquiries led to no result; and from that day to this no word has ever been heard of my unfortunate father. He came home, with his heart full of hope, to find some peace, some comfort, and instead——" She put her hand to her throat, and a choking sob cut short the sentence.

"The date?" asked Holmes, opening his notebook.

"He disappeared upon the 3d of December, 1878—nearly ten years ago."

"His luggage?"

"Remained at the hotel. There was nothing in it to suggest a clew—some clothes, some books, and a considerable number of curiosities from the Andaman Islands. He had been one of the officers in charge of the convict guard there."

"Had he any friends in town?"

"Only one that we know of—Major Sholto, of his own regiment, the Thirty-Fourth Bombay Infantry. The major had retired some little time before, and lived at Upper Norwood. We communicated with him of course, but he did not even know his brother officer was in England."

"A singular case," remarked Holmes.

"I have not yet described to you the most singular part. About six years ago—to be exact, upon the 4th of May, 1882—an advertisement appeared in the Times asking for the address of Miss Mary Morstan, and stating that it would be to her advantage to come forward. There was no name or address appended I had at that time just entered the family of Mrs. Cecil Forrester in the capacity of governess. By her advice I published my address in the advertisement column. The same day there arrived through the post a small cardbox addressed to me, which I found to contain a very large and lustrous pearl. No word of writing was enclosed. Since then, every upon the same date, there has always appeared a similar box, containing a similar pearl, without any clew as to the sender. They have been pronounced by an expert to be of a rare variety and of considerable value. You can set for yourselves that they are very handsome." She opened a flat box as she spoke, and showed me six of the finest pearls thea I had ever seen. "Your statement is most interesting," said Sherlock Holmes. "Has anything else occured to you?"

"Yes; and no latter than today. That is why I have come to you. This morning I received this letter, which you will perhaps read for yourself."

"Thank you," said Holmes. "The envelope too, please. Postmark, London, S. W., date July 7. Hum! Man's thumb-mark on corner—probably postman. Best quality paper. Envalopes at six-pence a packet. Particular man in his stationery. No address. Be at the third pillar from the left ourside the Lyceum Theatre tonight at seven o'clock. If you are distrustful, bring two friends. You are wronged woman, and shall have justice. Do not bring police. If you do, all will be in vain. Your unknown friend.' Well; really, this is a very pretty little mystery. What do you intend to do, Miss Morstan?"

"That is exactly what I want to ask you."

"Then we shall most certainly go. You and I and—yes, why, Doctor Watson is the very man. Your correspondent says two friends. He and I have worked together before."

"But would he come?" she asked, with something appealing in her voice and expression.

"I should be proud and happy," said I, fervently, "if I can be of any service."

"You are both very kind," she answered. "I have led a retired life, and have no friends whom I could appeal to. If I am here at six it will do, I suppose?"

"You must not be later," said Holmes. "Hhere is one other point, however. Is this handwriting the same as that upon the pearl-box addresses?"

"I have them here," she answered, producing half a dozen pieces of paper.

"You are certainly a moled client. You have the correct intuition. Let us see, now." He spread out the papers upon the table and gave little darting glances from one to the other. "They are disguised hands, except the letter," he said, presently, "but there can be no question as to the authorship. See how the irrepressible Greek e will break out, and see the twirl of the final s. They are undoubtedly by the same person. I should not like to suggest false hopes, Miss Morstan, but is there any resemblance between this hand and that of your father?"

"Nothing could be more unlike."

"I expected to hear you say so. We shall look out for you then, at six. Pray allow me to keep the papers. I may look into the matter before then. It is only half-past three. Au revoir, then."

"Au revoir," said our visitor, and, with a bright, kindly glance from one to the other of us, she replaced her pearl-box in her bosom and hurried away. Standing at the window, I watched her walking briskly down the street, until the gray turban and white feather were but a speck in the somber crowd.

"What a very attractive woman!" I exclaimed, turning to my companion.

He had lighted his pipe again, and was leaning back with drooping eyelids. "Is she?" he said, languidly. "I did not observe."

"You really are an automaton—a calculating machine!" I cried. "There is something positively inhuman in you at times."

He smiled gently. "It is of the first importance," he said, "not to allow your judgment to be biased by personal qualities. A client is to me a mere unit—a factor in a problem. The emotional qualities ar antagonistic to clear reasoning. I assure you that the most winning woman I ever knew was hanged for poisoning three little children for their insurance money, and the most repellent man of my acquaintance is a philanthropist who has spent nearly a quarter of a million upon the London poor."

"In this case, however——"

"I never make exceptions. An exception disproves the rule. Have you ever had occasion to study character in handwriting? What do you make of this fellow's scribble?"

"It is legible and regular," I answered. "A man of business habits and some force of character."

Holmes shook his head. "Look at his long letters," he said. "They hardly rise above the common herd. "That d might be an a, and I an e. Men of character always differentiate their long letters, however illegibly they may write. There is vacillation in his k's and self-esteem in his capitals. I am going out now. I have some few references to make. Let me recommend this book—one of the most remarkable ever penned. It is Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man." I shall be back in an hour." I sat down in the window with the volume in my hand, but my thoughts were far from the daring speculations of the writer. My mind ran upon our late visitor—her smiles, the deep, rich tones of her voice, the strange mystery which overhung her life. If she were seventeen at th time of her father's disappearance, she must be seven-and twenty now—a sweet age, when youth has lost its self-consiousness and become a little sobered by experience. So I sat and mused, until such dangerous thoughts came into my head that I hurried away to my desk and plunged furiously into the latest treatise upon pathology. What was I, an army surgeon with a weak leg and a weaker banking-account, that I should dare to think of such things? She was a unit, a factor—nothing more. If my future were black, it was better surely to face it like a man than to attempt to brighten it by mere will-o'-wisps of the imagination.

STORM RESULTS IN BETTER PEACH

Developer of the Payne peach, that made him one of the wealthiest fruit growers in southwestern Michigan, E. B. Payne, at the age of 82, believes Michigan can be made the center of the American fruit industry. All that is necessary is to follow the methods his experience has proved most successful, he says.

Michigan has not yet begun to realize the possibilities of its fruit industry, this veteran orchardist of Barry county contends.

All his knowledge of the peach industry was self acquired. In fact, it was not until late in life that he became interested in peaches. And then he started growing them only because he had to find wore work for his growing sons to do so they could be profitably employed at the farm. The farm with its 8000 peach trees, is still conducted by the sons near Cloverdale. The department of agriculture gives him much credit for the development of the peach industry, but he insists that all he did, like his entry into the peach industry itself, was largely accidental, and that if he is entitled to any credit at all it is principally in having taken advantage of the accidental bits of good fortune that came his way.

Tis story of the development of the Payne peach is an interesting one. During a terrific storm one year one of his best trees was blown down, leaving a jagged stump. Ordinarily, the stump would have been pulled immediately and replaced by a new tree. The tree, however, stood near an incipient washout. So, to help hold the soil in place, he permitted the stump to stand. Next year there was the usual crop of sprouts about the stump. Without any thought that a seedling ever would bear fruit profitably, he allowed a particularly fine specimen to grow into a tree.

The third and fourth year the seedling bore fruit. To the amazement of himself and his neighbors, its fruit was larger and of better quality than that of any other tree in the orchard. A professor from Michigan State college came over at Payne's request to inspect the tree and its fruit. He was advised to send samples of the fruit to the United States department of agriculture. He did so with the request that the peach be called the Highland Orchard peach in honor of his farm. The federal authorities were so delighted with the fruit, however, that they named it the Payne peach instead.

What happened had been purely accidental. What followed was not. Not content with mere possession of the wonderful tree, he set to thinking of the cause of the natural marvel. Close trimming of trees was then even undramd of. At length he decided the size and quality of the fruit were the result of the feeding of a small tree by the roots that previously had supported a large tree. It then occurred to hi mthat, while he could not increase the size of the roots of his trees, he could accomplish the same beneficial result by reducing the size of his trees, that is, by close trimming.

It was an unprecedented thing to do, but with the dourage and conviction of the men who have accohplished big things in the world, Payne decided next spring to stake his fortune on his new theory. He intended to close trim all the trees in the orchard. Only half of them actually were trimmed the first year, because, with the help at hand he was unable to go over the entire orchard.

Grieved neighbors, sorry to see a good man going wrong, watched the trimming with the same feeling a lover of architecture would watch the leveling of the Parthenon or the destruction of the Cathedral of Cologne. Those less kindly inclined even made certain remarks of a pathological nature. Their pity turned to amazement and then to admiration when peaches that year grew to sizes never before seen in Barry county.

CAR WITHOUT BRAKES, CLUTCH IS BEING BUILT

The Port Hurosn corporation has announced it would produce a new type of automobile. The new car will have no brakes, no differential, and no accelerator, G. L. McMullen, attorney for the corporation, which recently began work in the old plant of the Port Huron Engine and Thresher company, made the announcement.

Plans for producing the cars are well under way and actual construction of the cars wil begin within the year, McMullen said.

The omission from the new car of many of the essential parts of the present type, is made possible by the company officials announced.

When all men are what they pretend to be the millennium problem will be easy.

The Beacon Bearers are; Hazel Walworth, Marjorie North, Mary Taylor, Ethelyn Stevens, Murel Holcomb, Althea DeLamater, Frances Overly, Marguerite Rogers, and Maurine Taylor. Dorothy Ambler and Mrs. Schwab represent the Priestesses of Darkness. The Worshipers are Wayne North, Edward Wylie, Austin Wertz and Robert Walworth. The Spirits of Christians of the Past are Louise Taylor, Bernetta Edinger, Frances Fry, Ruth Young, Maxime Kime and Dorothy Fitton.

In the spring time of the year as I have been riding along the road, several times I have noticed where some farmer has taken the little new born lambs and pigs that did not live and has dumped them by the roadside, when with but little more effort he could have buried them which would have been much more decent. And to, did you ever think of the danger this might bring to your flock of sheep? Listen, the other day I saw a dog coming down the road carrying one of those little lambs, and as I looked he stopped and began to eat it, naturally this would give him an appetite for mutton, then Mr. Farmer you blame the dog when he gets in and molests your sheep. I believe in many cases Mr. Farmer, if you would decently dispose of your little lambs, there would be a less number of dogs to trouble the sheep.

Mrs. Delos Hard of Wheatland and daughter-in-law Mrs. Ray Hard were business callers in town Thursday.

The Woman's Club will meet with Mrs. Grace Williams next Monday May 16th for the last meeting of the year.

Mrs. Emma Young who has been away for the last eight months in Battle Creek and Hillsdale returned home Sunday for the summer.

Mrs. Art Corbett who has been visiting relatives and friends left for Quincy Wednesday for a short stay From there she expects to go to Ionia for a visit with her son Alger and family.

The Ladies Aid of the Congregational church will meet at the home of Mrs. Addie Baker Wednesday May 18th. There is important business to transact so a good attendance is desired.

The W. C. T. U. entertainment at the Methodist church on Sunday evening last was largely attended and the music and masque were above criticism. The commiting to memory of such long difficult parts shows a studious mind. The solos by Harold Gordon and Mrs. Hewitt also the special declamation by James Meeks were commendable.

As the pageant given at the local Methodist church on Easter Sunday is to be repeated at Hillsdale next Sunday evening May 15, there will be no service here that evening. The Epworth and Junior League meetings will also be omitted. But the Epworth League will have a Morning Watch service at 6:30 a. m. and the usual morning services of the church and Sunday School will be held.

Mrs. Parker Shepard was hostess to the West Adams Woman's Circle Thursday afternoon May 5. The new president Mrs. Henry VanDusen spoke in a very impressive way of the hopes and ideals of the club for the coming year and Mrs. A. L. Stevens gave a very interesting paper on "Wages for Wives", Plans for a picnic were partly made after which a potluck supoer was served. There will be no more meetings until October.

Mrs. Maude Alpaugh of Pittsford mother of Chester Alpaugh of this village passed away at her home Monday morning after an illness of three months. Mrs. Alpaugh was born in Ohio, September 2, 1862 and was the wife of Henry Alpaugh, who survives her. She is also survived by two daughters Mrs. Ray Gould of Adams township, and Mrs Hope Earl of Pittsford; four sons, Lee Alpaugh of the home, Chester Alpaugh of North Adams, Hallie Alpaugh of Detroit and Harry Alpaugh of the home; two sisters Mrs Josephine Gifford of North Adams, Mrs. Burt Morgan of Jefferson, two brothers George McNitt of Ansonia and Lewis McNitt of Jackson Seven grandchildren also survive. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home north of Pittsford. Rev. G. A. Emerich of Bronson officiating and burial was in the Leonardson cemetery.

There was a good attendance of members at the O. E. S. installation held last Tuesday evening at Masonic Hall. Music was furnished by an orchestra. A playlette "Hiring a Servant," was given. Mrs. Angie Benge gave a recitation and responded to an encore. The W. M., Mrs. Williams presented the past matron Mrs Ettie Corey with a past matron's jewel. Mrs. Verna Armstrong of Hillsdale acted as installing officer assisted by Mrs. Allie Holkins as chaplain and Naomi Crapser of Moscow chapter 166 as marshal. The following officers were installed: W. The School Situation

You no doubt realize the responsibity of the North Adams school board in the present crisis. They are trying hard to arrive at some line of procedure whereby a satisfactory new school building can be secured without placing too heavy burden on the tax payers of the district, and to do this is going to require time. Several architects have been interviewed with their plans and all agree that to build anything but an absolutely fire proof structure would be useless, and a back number. Some tax payers have been interviewed and are of several different opinions, so it is impossible without taking a vote, to determine what is the most desired.

At this time there is a wonderful opening for the surrounding districts to improve their facilities for educating their pupils in an up-to-date high school with a large corps of competent teachers in all the best branches, by joining us and helping to better their own interests and decrease school taxation.

We believe if the patrons of the districts adjoining knew the actual facts of consolidation they would lose no time in coming here If we could enlist the help of our friends in the Knowles, Grubby Knoll, Jackson, Hoxie, Bross. J. L. Buck and Mud Lake districts, it might prove a God-send to them.

At present the school board have visited three towns with modern school buildings: Milan, Clinton and Woodland, and they expect to visit more places before anything definite is decided upon.

The school board are at all times open for and willing to receive any suggestions from any one interested, and a very strong effort will be made to get the undivided sanction of every tax payer in the district.

GRAVES & FORD LUMBER COMPANY

COACH LINE TO CROSS CONTINENT

Back in grandfather's time buckboard stages rembled and rattled across the continent. Today, giant Cardinal Coaches carry leisurely tourists in luxury and comfort from Detroit through Chicago and the West to California.

In speaking of modern motor stage transportation, Mr. S. Feidman, Eastern Division Manager of Red & White Motor Stages, Inc., said: "Plans are now progressing to open new motor stage routes which will link the oceans and Cardinal Coaches will cross the entire continent."

Year after year, motor stage travel is growing in popularity, low rates of fare; traveling comfort; and frequent schedules are attacting more and more tourists to this mode of transportation.

In Detroit the expansion of the industry is shown in the growth of Red & White Motor Stages, Inc. This company has its down-town terminal in the Savoy Hotel and operates ticket offices in the Savarine, Gotham, Clifford, Oxford Hall, Stratford-Arms and Murry Hall hotels. From these stations, Max Cchultz, Traffic Manager and pioneer motor-coach operator, directs the dispatching of Cardinal Coaches. Mr. Schultz has been studying the development of a new "sleeping car coach" which will provide the utmost in comfort for the motor tourists.

In stage coach travel, history has repeated itself; the parlor car—Cardinals of today replacing the old fashioned vehicles of a few decades ago.

REGISTRATION AT STATE IS HIGHEST SINCE WAR

Short course registration at Michigan State College this year, reached its peak, representing the highest enrollment since the World war, according to figures compiled by R. W. Tenny, director of the department. There have been 530 students enrolled in the courses since July 1, 1926.

This exceptionally high enrollment is believed by college officials to indicate a growing interest in agriculture, and especially in scientific methods, on the part of the young men who are unable to come to college for the regular four-year course.

LETTERS AWARDED THREE AT STATE FOR SWIMMING HONORS

For the firsttime in the swimming history of Michigan State College, three major letters were awarded to members of the varsity team.

The men to win the coveted block "S" of State are Reinhold C. Thomas of Detroit, Alvin Ellinger of Grand Rapids, and Edward Cook of Kansas City, Mo. Thomas and Cook were nominated to represent State in the notional intercollegiates, but Thomas was not able to make thetrip to Iowa City due to the pressure of business. He is not in school for the spring term, although he probably will return in the fall.

Minor letters were given to Theodore Carbin of Battle Creek, Sherwood Chamberlain of Detroit, Morris Cook of Muskegon, Paul Freeland of Omena, Mich., and Paul Hickie of Lansing. Service sweaters were won by Edward Bredlow of Detroit, Walter Dernberger of Pontiac, Arthur Pfannenschmidt of Rochester, John Rasikas of Grand Rapids, and William Rossow and Walter Russow of Utica, Mich.

NEW GOODRICH LINER IS TO DOCK AT MUSKEGON

The new million dollar Goodrich lake liner "Theodore Roosevelt," will dock at Muskegon early in June on her maiden exhibition trip. The new ship is one of the largest and fastest on the Great Lakes and will be placed on the Chicago-Milwaukee run.

BEAR AND 3 CUBS TAKEN IN STUMP

A mother bear and her three tiny cubs, just a few days old and eyes still unopened, were captured alive by Peter Weber and his neighbors, William and Emil Biel and eGorge Leslie of Menominee on the Weber farm on the Menominee River, after a tussle that lasted practically all the afternoon. The mother bear weighed about 300 pounds. Her cubs were no larger than newly born human babies.

Hearing a growl, the men found the bear family snuggly housed in an old pine stump. After plugging the side entrance and top of the stump the men procured a rope with which they lassoes the mother around the neck. Through the side door they tied her hind legs. When she poked her head out through the top of the stump they got a muzzle device over her nose. Then they proceeded to heave on the rope attached to her hind legs and finally she was dragged into the open. Held by lines about her neck and hind legs she still had her front paws free to do battle with all the ferocity of her kind in protecting her young. She was eventually downed, tied up in a blanket and taken to the Weber farm where she is quartered with her litter of cubs.

The cubs made no effort to escape, but were apparently provoked, as they had been interrputed at feeding time and the blanket wrapped about their mother as she lay on the graund caused them to squeal continually as they stambled and nosed about her with their unseeing, unopened eyes. The incident is declared by woodsmen to be the first in their experience in which a mother bear with so large a family has been caught alive.

LINK COWS TO ALFALFA I NPLAN TO PROSPERITY

Take the cow path through alfalfa to prosperity.

That is the slogan of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Michigan State college and the State Department of Agriculture have adopted for their dairy alfalfa train.

In addition to showing that dairying and alfalfa growing are inseparable, those in charge of the train endeavor to shoy that the cow path through alfalfa is the one sure route farmers have to increase their profits. Growing alfalfa to feed to dairy cows offers a route to wealth in the opinion of B. O. Hagerman, agriculturist agent.

TWO PLANES BOUGHT IN MICHIGAN FOR U. S.

The second pair of Michigan airplanes purchased by the department of commerce have been delivered to their respective stations after final test flights.

Both machines, one built by the Buhl company at Marysville and the other in the Stinson plant at Northville, are repeat orders. They are duplicates of the first two ships acquired by the government bureau and now in regular service.

STATE 20 YEARS WITHOUT LYNCHING

Michigan has completed its twentieth year without a lynching, according to an announcement by the Federal Council of Churches, which expresses apprehension over the record of 30 lynchings perpetrated throughout the country during 1926.

The lynchings of 1926 were scattered among 10 states, according to data collected bythe council. These were Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Mexico, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. One of these, New Mexico, had not had a lynching for 10 years prior to the mob outbreak of last year. Four others of the 10 had been free of mob violence for one or more years prior to 1926.

The four states of the Union which have no record of a lynching in their history are Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. All other states at one time or another have witnessed the taking of human life by mob violence.

Three states, Connecticut, Maine and New Jersey, have not had a lynching during the last 40 years, the council states. Michigan, Deleware, Wisconsin and Nevada have not had a lynching for 20 years.

In addition, five other states have not had a lynching in 15 years, four have not had one in 10 years, 11 have not had one in five years and two others at the end of last year had completaed two years without a lynching. Finally, five states which had lynchings in 1925 were free from them during 1926.

The total of 30 lynchings in 1926 was 13 more than occurred in 1925 and 14 more than in 1924.

FEDERAL AID HIGHWAY TO BE BUILT IN LENAWEE

The state highway department has started proceedings in the Lenawee court to condemn land in Cambridge and Woodstock townships for the relocation of two federal aid roads. The improvements are to be on the Monroe pike, M-50 and on M-14.

SEES NEW NET RULES BLOW TO GAME THRILLS

Low scores and lack of thrills will result from the changes in the basket ball rules restricting the dribble to one bounce, in the opinion of Coach E. J. Mather of the Michigan team.

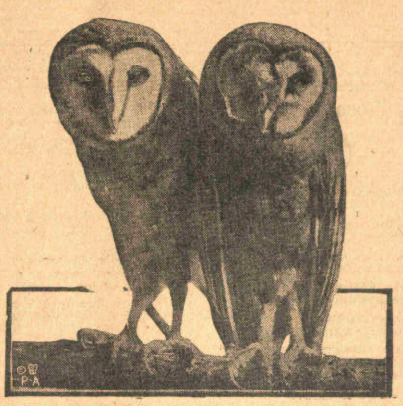
Under the new rules, low scoring games wil result and much of the spectacular elements will be eliminated, says Coach Mather. It will make the game harder physically on the players and it will be much easier to construct a defense.

SPORTS ENSEMBLE FOR MILADY GOLF-ENTHUSIAST

To be sure, milady wants to look her best on the golf course. And mere man shall not outdo her. He thinks himself "highly attractive" in his nobby Scotch socks, plus fours, silk shirt, trick cap and sun glasses when he goes out to chase the little white piuu 'round a couple of miles of grass, sand and hazards.

But—he'll have no chance for any attention once milady steps out on the course attired in the chic costume pictured above! This costume is positively the "last word"—as the ad writers say—in sports ensembles. And —before we forget to mention it—it's tailored of attractive Jersey and silk.

Late Feathered Arrivals In U. S. --Monkey-Faced Owls



To paraphrase a familiar question —"Have you a little monkey-faced owl in your home?" Be glad you haven't. They might scare any visitor out of his shoes. Look at 'em above. Pretty woozy, nightmare-producing creatures—aren't they? This pair was sent to this country from New Brunswick, Canada, as featured delegates to a Sportsmen's Show in Boston.

OTTAWA DAY CHICK INDUSTRY CENTER

The mother hen has lost her job. No longer is she required to spend three weeks on a nest hatching eggs. Now her duties are confined to laying more and better eggs. Great incubators have replaced the setting hen, and where once broods of a dozen were the rule, today the chicks are counted by the thousands and even the millions.

Zeeland, which boasts that it is without a theatre, is the center of the "day old Chick business" of the United States. At the local postoffice and the office at Holland, six miles away, between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 chicks will be shipped by parcel post this season to all parts of the United States and Canada.

Henry Ford once talked about turning out automobiles as so many pins and that is a way represents the way baby chicks come forfard from the 20 or more large hatcheries in Ottawa County.

In one hatchery from Feb. 1 to June 15 the baby chicks are turned out at the rate of more than 50,000 a week.

The capacity of this one hatchery is 270,000 eggs. And every week one-third that number of eggs are placed in the incubators, replacing that number of baby chicks that have peeped through the shells and eggs that have failed to hatch.

Usually the hatchery owners figure on a 50 per cent production from the eggs. However, this season around 70 per cent of the eggs hatching, probably because of the mild winter. Hens do better when there is plenty ow sunshine during the winter, and as a result the eggs are what is known to egg men as "stronger."

Practically all of the chicks are shipped at once, but some hatcheries retain a portion to sell at the end of eight weeks as broilers.

ANNUAL STATE SHOOT WILL BE STAGED IN JULY

The annual state shoot of the Michigan Gun club league will be held at the Como club grounds July 21 to 23, inclusive.

At a meeting of the board of directors in Detroit, plans for the tourney were made by the following officers: H. A. Baucknecht, president; W. A. Magoon, vice president; C. A. Galbraith, secretary treasurer; Dr. M. L. Ward, Fred Urquhart and Ross Miller.

CALLS LAW VOID THAT RESTRICTS CLUB LAND

A recent opinion by W. W. Potter, attorney-general for Michigan, declares the law that prohibited the ownership of more than 15,000 acres of land for private fishing and hunting purposes unconstitutional. Several clubs have acquired acreage in excess of this amount since the law was enacted but none of them has been stopped in their projects.

ANOTHER HUNT CLUB IS OPENED IN ROSCOMMON

Roscommon County again becomes the home of another private hunting reserve and game refuge. The Russell Lake Shooting Club of Monroe and the latest purchasers of wild land and water in that county for this purpose. Their holdings total 840 acres and include a lake a mile long. The property lies near the St. Helens Shooting Club.

The world's thinnest watch has been invented in France. By eliminating the hands, the hour is marked by a revolving dial, maning it easier to tell the time. The inventor further claims that by dispensing with the mechanism which moved the hands it has been possible to make a more delicate and accurate time piece.

RELICS ARE SHOWN AT PIONEER DAY FETE

More than 50 older residents of Shabbona assisted in the celebration of Pioneer Day when, as guests of honor, they brought with them to the Shabbona school house relics of the early Trumb of Michigan days, when they were children.

The children of the school were present to se the relics, some of which were more than 200 years old. Among the relics brought to the Pioneer Day were a grain cradle, candle lantern, candle molds, candle snuffers, ox yoke, muzzle loading rifles, swords, spinning wheel, boot jack, powder horn and very old books.

STABLE STUDIO OF NOTED SCULPTOR

In an old stable, at the rear of the Grand Rapids art gallery, is the studio of F. C. Ruppell, decorative sculptor, whose work may be seen in many of the homes of the most prominent American families.

All the partitions in the original building have been removed and a large skylight has been placed in the roof, the general appearance being that of an odd workshop. It is in this setting that designs for the architectual decoration in many palatial residences, including that of Senator Clark in New York, and others in Pittsburgh and other eastern cities, have been created.

Outstanding among recent commissions was one which designs for the wood carving and other decorations in the residence of Henry Ford. A beautiful carved grill for the pipe organ and a gorgeaously carved stairway are examples of Ruppell's skill. Although most of his work is in the Georgian and Elizabethan periods, the carving in the Ford dining room is after the style of Grendling Gibbons.

An interesting story is connected with Ruppell's satyr which was planned for the corners of the marble swimming pool at Ford's home. In some manner a rumor was circulated that the motor manufacturer was having devils placed all over the house.

"After hearing this shocging rumor, Mr. Ford declared to reject the satyr so I made dolphins instead," explained Ruppell. "I ran another risk in selecting the fish subject and expected to be accused of sacrilige for undue familiarity with the Jonah whale, but fortunately that charge was not brought against us and the dolphins, I trust, are still in evidence."

At least, gold diggers are not new to Nevada—they have been going to Reno for years.

Self distrust is responsible for most of life's failures.

NEW INDUSTRIAL CITY IS FORMED

A NEW CITY, Allen Park, is now being inoorporated, which because of its stragetic location, is destined to become one of the most active communities in the heart of Detroit's greatest industrial district.

The center of this new city will be located at the intersection of four active major arteries, viz., Ecorse Road, Allen Road, State Street and Emerson Highway, all of which lead directly to approximately fifty of Detroit's Dynamic Industries, which at the present time are paying over $1,000,000 per day to the industrial workers in that section.

This new city is located within three miles of the great Ford Rouge Industries, and the same distance from the greatest inland harbor of the world which is being developed as rapidly as men and money can be assembled. Millions of dollars are being expended daily in industrial expansion in this district alone, which most naturally bespeaks rapid increase in values on every foot of ground in this section.

The small investor, seeking a safe and logical place to increase his capital can always wisely follow the steps of those who are investing immense fortunes, for he can be assured that before these millions were invested the future of the development has ben been assured.

Over a year ago, the Ide and Meginnity organization in anticipation of and with the knowledge of the fact that a new cnty would be born in this section, whose accurate location had not then beenestablished, withdrew all of their unsold lots in that section fro mthe market.

Sovietism is said to be only ten years old. Well, for a youth of that age he seems to be giving the old folks a whole lot of trouble.

CHAPTER III

In Quest of a Solution

It was half-past five before Holmes returned. He was bright, eager, and in excellent spirits—a mood which in his case alternated with fits of the blackest depression.

"There is no great mystery in this matter," he said, taking the cup of tea which I had poured out for him. "The facts appear to admit of only one explanation."

"What! you have solved it already?"

"Well, that will be too much to say. I have discovered a suggestive fact, that is all. It is, however, very suggestive. The details are still to be added. I have just found, on consulting the back files of the Times, that Major Sholto of Upper Norwood, late of the Thirty-fourth Bombay Infantry, died upon the 28th of April, 1882."

"I may be very obtuse, Holmes, but I fail to see what this suggests."

"No? you surprise me. Look at it in this way, then. Captain Morstan disappears. The only person in London whom he could have visited is Major Sholto. Major Sholto denies having heard that he was in London. Four years later Sholto dies. Within a week of his death, Captain Morstan's daughter receives a valuable present, which i srepeated from year to year, and now culminates in a letter which describes her as a wronged woman. What wrong can it refer to except this deprivation of her father? And why should the presents begin immediately after Sholto's death, unless it is that Sholto' heir knows something of the mystery, and desires to make compensation? Have you any alternative theory which will meet the facts?"

"But what a strange compensation! And how strangely made! Why too, should he write a letter now, rather than six years ago? Again, the letter speaks of giving her justice. What justice can she have? It is too much to suppose that her father is still alive. There is no other injustice in her case that you know of."

"There are difficulties; there are certainly difficulties," said Sherlock Holmes, pensively. "But our expedition of to-night will solve them all. Ah, here is a four-wheeder, and Miss Morstan is inside. Are you all ready? Then we had better go down, for it is a little past the hour."

I picked up my hat and my heaviest stick, but I observed that Holmes took his revolver from his drawer and slipped it into his pocket. It was clear that he thought our night's work might be a serious one.

Miss Morstan was muffled in a dark cloak, and her sensitive face was composed, but pale. She must have been more than woman if she did not feel some uneasiness at the strange enterprise upon which we were embarking, yet her self-control was perfect, and she readily answered the few additional questions which Sherlock Holmes put to her.

"Mayor Shalto was a very particular friend of papa's," she said. "His letters were full of allusions to the major. He and papa were in command of the troops at the Andaman Islands, so they were thrown a great deal together. By the way, a curious paper was found in papa's desk which no one can understand. I don't suppose that it is of the slightest importance, but I thought you might care to see it, so I brought it with me. It is here."

Holmes unfolded the paper carefully and smoothed it out upon his knee. He then very methodically examined it all over with his double lens.

"It is paper of native Indian manufacture," he remarked. "It has at some time been pinned to a board. The diagram upon it appears to be a plan of part of a large building, with numerous halls, corridors, and passoges. At one point is a small cross done in red ink, and above it is '3,37 from left,' in faded pencil-writing. In the left-hand corner is a curious hieroglyphic, like four crosses in a line with their arms touching. Beside it is written, in very rough and course characters, 'The sign of the four—Jonathan Small, Mahomet Singh, Abdullah Khan, Dost Akbar.' No, I confess that I do not see how this bears upon the matter! Yet it is evidently a document of importance. It has been kept carefully in a pocketbook; for the one side is as clean as the other."

"It was in his pocketbook that we found it."

"Preserve it carefully, then, Miss Morstan, for it may prove to be of use to us. I began to suspect that this matter may turn out to be much deeper and more subtle than I at first supposed. I must reconsider my ideas." He leaned back in the cab, and I could see by his drawn brow and his vacant eye that he was thinking intently. Miss Morstan and I chatted in an undertone about our present expedition and its tossible outcome, but our companion maintained his impenetrable reserve until the end of our journey.

It was a September evening, and not yet seven o'clock, but the day had been a dreary one, and a dense, dizzling fog law low upon the great city. Mud-colored clouds dropped sadly over the muddy streets. Down the Strand the lamps were but misty splotches of diffused light which threw a feeble circular glimmer upon the slimy pavement. The yellow glare from the shop-windows streamed out into the steamy, vaporous air, and threw a musky, shifting, radiance across the crowded thoroughfare. There was to my mind something eerie and ghost-like in the endless procession of faces which fitted across these narrow bars of light—sad faces and glad, haggard and merry. Like all human kind, they fitted from the gloom into the light, and so back into the gloom once more. I am not subject to impressions, but the dull, heavy evening, with the strange business upon which we were engaged, combined to make me nervous and depressed. O could see from Miss Morstan's manner that she was suffering from the same feeling. Holmes alone could rise superior to uretty influences. He held his open notebook upon his knee, and from time to time he jotted down figures and memoranda in the light of his pocket-lantern.

At the Lyceum Theatre the crowds were already thick at the side- entrances. In front a continuous stream of hansoms and four-wheelers were rattling up, discharging their cargoes of shirt-fronted men and beshawled, bediamonded women. We had hardly reached the third pillar, which was our rendezvous, before a small, dark, brisk man, in the dress of a coachman, accosted us.

"Are you the parties who come with Miss Morstan?" he asked.

"I am Miss Morstan, and these two gentlemen are my friends," said she.

He bent a pair of wonderfully penetrating and questioning eyes upon us. "You will excuse me, miss," he said, with a certain dogged manner, "but I was to ask you to give me your word that neither of your companions is a police officer."

"I give you my word on that," she answered.

He gave a shrill whistle, on which a street Arab led across a four-wheeler, and opened the door. The man who had addressed us mounted to the box, while we took our places inside. We had hardly done so before the driver whipped up his horse, and we plunged away at a furious pace through the foggy streets.

The situation was a serious one. We were driving to an unknown place, on an unknow errad. Yet our invitation was either a complete hoax, which was an inconceivable hypothesis, or else we had good reason to think that important issues might hand upon our journey, Miss Morstan's demeanor was as resolute and collected as ever. I endeavored to cheer and amuse her by reminiscenses of my adventures in Afghanistan; but, to tell the truth, I was myself so excited at our situation and so curious as to our destination that my stories were slightly involved. To this day she declares that I told her one moving ancedote as to how a musket looked into my tent at the dead of night, and how I fired a double-barreled tiger cub at it. At first I had some id.a as to the direction in which we were driving; but soon, what with our pace, the fog, and my own limited knowledge of London, I lost my bearings,—and knew nothing, save that we seemed to be going a very long way. Sherlock Holmes was never at fault, however, and he muttered the names as the cab rattled through squares and in and out by tortuous by-streets.

"Rochester Row," said he. "Now Vincent Square. Now we come out on the Vauxhill Bridge Road. We are making for the Surrey side apparently. Les, I thought so. Now we are on the bridge. Cou can catch glimpses of the river."

We did indeed get a fleeting view of a stretch of the Thames, with the lamps shining upon the board, silent water; but our cab dashed on, and was soon involved in a babyrinth of streets upon the other side.

"Wordsworth Road," said my companion. "Priory Road. Lake Hall Lane. Stockwell Place. Robert Street. Cold Harbor Lane. Our quest does not appear to take us to very fashionable regions."

We had, indeed, reached a questionable and forbidding neighborhood. Long lines of dull brick houses were only relieved by the coarse glare and tawdry brilliancy of public-houses at the corner. Then came rows of two-storied villas, each with a fronting miniature garden, and then again interminable lines of new staring brick buildings—the monster tentacles which the giant city was throwing out into the country. At last the cab drew up at the third house in a new terrace. None of the other houses was inhabited, and that at which we stopped was as dark as its neighbors, save for a single glimmer in the kitchen window. On our knocking, however, the door was instantly thrown open by a Hindoo servant clad in a yellw turban, white, loosefitting clothes, and a yellow sash. There was something strangely incongruous in this Oriental figure framed in the commonplace doorway of a third-rate suburban dwelling-house.

"The sahib awaits you," said he, and even as he spoke there came a high, piping voice from some inner room. "Show them in to me, khitmutgar," it cried. "Show them straight in to me."

CHAPTER IV

The Story of the Bald-Headed Man

We followed the Indian down the sordid and commn passage, ill lighted and wrse furnished, until he came to a door upon the right, which he threw open. A blaze of yellow light streamed ut upon us, and in the center of the glare there stood a small man with a very high head, a bristle of red hair all around the fringe of it, and a bald, shining scalp, which shot out from among it like a mountain-peak from fir-tree. He rubbed his hands together as he stood, and his features were in a perpetual jerk, now smiling, now scowling, but never for an instant in repose. Nature had given him a pendulous lip, and a too visible line of yellow an dirregular teeth, which he strove feebly to conceal by constantly passing his hand over the lower part of his face. In spite f his obtrusive baldness, he gave the impression of youth. In point of fact, he had just turned his thirtieth year.

"Your servant, Miss Morstan," he kept repeating in a thin, high voice. "Your servant, gentlemen. Pray step into my little sanctum. A small place, miss, but furnished to my own liking. An oasis of art in the howling desert of South London.

We were all astonished by the appearance of the apartment into which he invited us. In that sorry house it looked as out of place as a diamond of the first water in a setting of brass. The richest and glossiest of curtains and tapestries draped the walls, looped back here and there to expose some richly mounted painting or Oriental vase. The carpet was of amber and black, so soft and so thick that the foot sunk pleasantly into it, as into a bed of moss. Two great tiger-skins thrown athwart it increased the suggestion of Eastern luxury, as did a huge hookah which stood upon a mat in the corner. A lamp in the fashion of a silver dove was hung from an almost invisible golden wire in the center of the room. As it burned it filled the air with a subtle and aromatic odor.

"Mr. Thaddeus Sholto," said the little man, still jerking and smiling. "That is my name. You are Miss Morstan, of course. And these gentlemen——"

"A doctor, eh?" cried he, must ehcited. "Have you your stethoscope? Might I ask you—would you nave the kindness? Have grave doubts as to my mitral value, if you would be so very good. The aortic I may rely upon, but I should value your opinion upon the mitral."

I listened to his heart as requested, but was unable to find anything amiss, save indeed that he was in an ecstacy of fear, for he shivered from head to foot. "It appears to be normal," I said. "You have no cause for uneasoness."

"You will excuse my anxiety, Miss Morstan," he remarked, airily. "I am a great sufferer, and I have long had suspicions as to that value. I am delighted to hear that they are unwarranted. Had your father, Miss Morstan, refrained from throwing a strain upon his heart, he might have been alive now."

I could have struck the man across the face, so hot was I at this callous and offhand reference to so delicate a matter. Miss Morstan sat down, and her face grew white to the lips. "I knew in my heart that he was dead," said she.

"I can give you every information," said he, "and what is more, I can do you justice; and I will, too, whatever brother Bartholomew may say. I am so glad to have your friends here, not only an escort to you, but also as witnesses to what I am about to do and say. The three of us can show a bold front to brother Bartholomew. But let us have no outsiders—no police or officials. We can settle everything satisfactorily among ourselves without any interference. Nothing would annoy brother Bartholomew more than any publicity." He sat down upon a low settee and blinked at us inquiringly with his weak, waterly blue eyes.

"For my part," said Holmes, "whatever you may choose to say will go no further."

I nodded to show my agreement.

"That is well! That is well." said he. "May I offer you a glass of Chianti, Miss Morstan? or of Tokay? I keep no other wines. Shall I open a flask? No? Well, then, I trust that you have no objection to tobacco-smoke, to the mild, balamic odor of the Eastern tobacco. I am a little nevvous, and I find my hookah an invaluable sedative." He applied a taper to the great bowl, and the smoke bubbled merrily through the rose-water. We sat all three in a semi-circle, with our heads advanced, and our chins upon our hands, while the strange, jerky little fellow, with his high, shining head puffed uneasily in the center.

"When I first determined to make this communication to you," said he, "I might have given you my address, but I feared that you might disregard my request and bring unpleasant people with you. I took the liberty, therefore, of making an appointment in such a way that my man Williams might be able to see you first. I have complete confidence in his discretion, and he had orders, of he were dissatisfied, to proceed no further in the matter. You will excuse these precautions, but Iam a man of somewhat retiring, and, I might even say, refined tastes, and there is nothing more unaesthetic than a policeman. I have a natural shrinking from all forms of rough materialism. I seldom come in contact with the rough crowd. I live, as you see, with some little atmosphere of edegance around me. I may call myself a patron of the arts. It is my weakness. The landscape is a genuine Corot, and, though a connoisseur might perhaps throw a doubt upon that Salvator Rosa, there cannot be the least question about the Bouguereau. I am partial to the modern French school."

"You will excuse me, Mr. Shalto," said Miss Morstan, "but I am here at your request to learn something which you desire to tell me. It is very late, and I should desire the interview to be as short as possible."

"At the best it must take some time," he answered; "for we shall certainly have to go to Northwood and see brother Bartholomew. We shall all go and try if we can get the better of brother Bartholomew. He is very angry with me for taking the course which has seemed right to me. I had suite hight words with him last night. You cannot imagine what a terrible fellow he is when he is angry."

"If we are to go to Northwood it would perhaps be as well to start at once," I ventured to remark.

He laughed until his ears were quite red. "That would hardly do," he cried. "I don't know what he would say if I brought you in that sudden way. No; I must prepare you by showing you how we all stand to each other. In the first place, I must tell you that there are several points in the story of which I am myself ignorant. I can only lay the facts before you as far as I know them myself.

"My father was, as you may have guessed, Major John Shalto, once of the Indian army. He retired some eleven years ago, and came to live at Pondicherry Lodge in Upper Norwood. He had prospered in India, and brought back with him a considerable sum of money, a large collection of valuable curiosities, and a staff of native servants. With these advantages he bought himself a house, and lived in great luxury. My twin-brother Bartholomew and I were the only children.

"I very well remember the sensation which was caused by the disapperaance of Captain Morstan. We read the details in the papers, and, knowing that he had been a friend of our father's we discussed the care freely in his presence. He used to join in our speculations as to what could have happened. Never for an instant did we suspect that he had the whole secret hidden in his own breast—that of all men he alone knew the fate of Arthur Morstan.

"We did know, however, that some mystery—some positive danger—overhung our father. He was very fearful of going out alone, and he always emplayed two prizefighters to act as porters at Pondicherry Lodge. Williams, who drove you to-night, was one of them. He was once lightweight champion of England. Our father would never tell us what it was he feared, but he had a most marked aversion to men with wooden legs. On one occasion he actually fired his revolver at a wooden-legged man, who proved to be a harmless tradesman canvassing for orders. We had to pay a large sum to hush the matter up. My brother and I used to think this a mere whim of my father's but events have since led us to change our opinion.

"Eearl in 1882 my father received a letter from India which was a great shock to him. He nearly fainted at the breakfast table when he opened it, and from that day he sickened to his death. What was in the letter we could never discover, but I could see as he held it that it was short and written in a scrawling hand. He had suffered for years from an enlarged spleen, but he now became rapidly worse, and toward the end of April we were informed that he was beyond all hope, and that he wished to make a last communication to us.

"When we entered his room he was propped up with pillows and breathing heavily. He besought us to lock the door and to come upon either side of the bed. Then, grasping our hands, he made a remarkable statement to us, in a voice which was broken as much by emotion as by pain. I shall try and give it to you in his own very words.

"'I have only one thing,' he said, 'which weighs upon my mind at this supreme moment. It is my treatment of poor Morstan's orphan. The cursed greed which has been my besetting sin through life has withheld from her the treasure, half at least of which should have been hers. And yet I have made no use of it myself—so blind and foolish a thing is avarice. The meer feeling of possession has been so dear to me that I could not bear to share it with another. See that chaplet tipped with pearls beside the quinine-bottle. Even that I could not bear to part with, although I had got out with the design of sending it to her. You, my sons, will give her a fair share of the Agra treasure. But send her nothing—not even the chaplet—until I am gone. After all, men have been as bad as this and have recovered.

"'I will tell you how Morstan died,' he continued. 'He had suffered for years from a weak heart, but he concealed it from everyone. I alone knew it. When in India, he and I, through a remarkable chain of circumstances, came into possession of a considerable treasure. I brought it over to England, and on thenight of Morstan's arrival he came straight over here to claim his share. He walked over from the station, and was admitted by my faithful old Lal Chowdar, who is now dead. Morstan and I had a difference of opinion as to the division of the treasure, and we came to heated words. Morstan had sprung out of his chair in a paroxysm of anger, when he suddenly pressed his hand to his side, his face turned a dusky hue, and he fell backward, cutting his head against the corner of the treasure-chest. When I stooped over him I found, to my horror, that he was dead.

"'For a long time I sat half distracted, wondering what I should do. My first impulse was, of course, to call for assistance; but I could not but recognize that there was every chance that I would be accused of his murder. His death at the moment of a quarrel, and the gash in his head, would be black against me. Again, an official inquiry could not be made without bringing out some facts about the treasure, which I was particularly anxious to keep secret. He had told me that no soul upon earth knew where he had gone. There seemed to be no necessity why any soul ever should know.

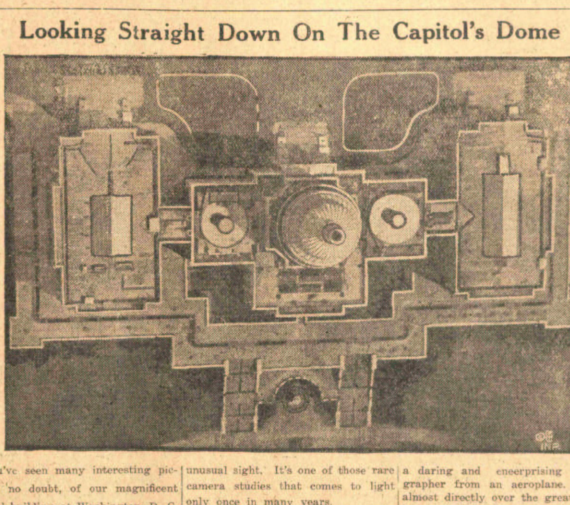
Looking Straight Down On The Capitol's Dome



You've seen many interesting pictures, no doubt, of our magnificent capitol building at Washington, D. C.—yet probably none as unique as this unusual sight. It's one of those rare camera studies that comes to light only once in many years.

SLIMNESS ONLY BY PROPER FROCK

No matter how clever you are, not even your sprightliest repartee can make you look slim, but the proper frocg will. The proper frock can impart delicate spohistication to the terrible 'teens, and subdued and exquisite echoes of youth to the frumpy fifties. The proper costume can achieve slimness where slimness never was, and grace where no grace lies. It can make blue eyes seem green and green eyes seem spectacularly sweet.

But skill and knowledge and endless good taste as well as restraint and perfect designing are needed to accomplish these things and many more. As William Butler Yeats has said, "One must labor to be beautiful."

Nothing is more outstanding than the four new colors sponsored. First is garland—a pale peachy pink, then feefrose—a warm distinct coral shade, tropic blue, like the blue of tropical sky and sea, and umbrian gray, a soft pearl tone, accosiated with Raffael and his famous school of painting.

Frock fabrics are pre-eminently of the sheer family—chiffons and georgettes. Lace is most important, fashioning entire frocks, or employed for trimming. Small patterned prints in chiffon, georgette or crepe are definitely established. One outstanding afternoon gown of "the noon to midnight" type combined beige Chantilly lace and Garland satin and chiffon. Over a slip of satin came a layer of matching chiffon and posed over this was the frock of Chantilly with a scalloped all round bolero.

The sleeves were long and snug, decorated with three peweled mracelets and (this, by the way, is a very new note, having one's bracelets sewed right to the gown) a graceful jabot cascaded from under the left arm to the bolero's edge. Scallops finished the skirt with its rippled, flared, circular front and plain back. Molding the hips, under the lace was a deep girdle of reefrose taffeta. A most interesting feature of the grwn was the neck line, a slanting, diagonal affair, dragged down to the one side by the weight of two high chiffon flowers in reefrose tone.

As to line, boleros, slight bluse effects, tiers, slightly mlded bodices, flanges, jabot effects, drapings, snug hip section, front skirt fullness and the swathing of fringe all contribute toward the moulded, mobile slimouette based upon the ancient Greek.

The soft swish of beads and sequins for the peune fille's evening gown, delightful robes de style in taffeta and chiffon, and georgette frocks with long, molded basques and ful skirts are in the front van of the mode. The young matron chooses wisely and correctly a gown elaborately beaded or sequined or perhaps swaying with beaded fringe.

Probably one of the most pertinent notes of summer fashions are long-sleeved fluffy, thoroughly feminine afternoon or "bridge gowns." They are never fluffy in the sense of frilly, but have a distinct dignity and graciousness of line and trimming. One such was fashioned of Tropic blue chiffon with a decidedly new sleeve—long and straight to the wrist with the upper portion from wrist to elbow snug and the under section shirred into a deep, soft puff. The neck line of the slightly blsed bodice was finished with a long, graceful scarf adaptable to the most becoming drapings and manipulations of the individual woman. At the lemt hip, on the upper skirt tier were two large chiffon flowers posed in the center of an elaborate motif, of ribbon and bead embroidery.

Coat choice is always given careful consideration by the well dressed woman. Fabrics narrow down to kasha and kashmir in black beige, gray, and pastel hues or nacy rep. There are straight line to the nth degree, depending for their chic on seamings, faggotting yokes, flat pleated panels, jabot reveres, tiers and collar variations. Of the latter, most important is the roll. The roll collar is preeminent. A few cape models were shown bu these were negilgible. The typical summer coat is of course, unfurred, permitting one to wear or not to wear her separate fur scarf. A well liked mode, after Premet, was of basket weave in Umbrian gray with raglan sleeves, seamed from collar, over shoulders and down the sleeves. Geometric seamings were in evidence.

The V-shaped patch pockets were concealed under pleated panels. An attractive belt effect was produced by an aplied band of self material in undulating line. This sort of coat is extremely practical.

Dr. George B. Raiziss, professor of chemotherapy of the University of Pennsylvania, is the discoverer of "metaphen," a compound of mercury. The new formula is the strongest antiseptic known to chemists, and it is believed that its ability to kill bacteria may result in the prolongnation of lives by 25 years or more.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

Temperance Movement In Awakening China

The money which others would waste in gambling and intemperate habits is used by our women and students and children for the beggars' refuge—The Shanghai Settlement House. The history of this little beggars' mission really reads like a romance. Four years ago we started the work with four hundred dollars. Today we have a piece of land, funds promised for two buildings, and the International Athletic Association in Shanghai has just given its consent to play a football game for us in October. If the internal war ever stops we hope to have a much bigger movement in the future. For the detailed account of this work, I hope to have a special article written when I can find more time.

A few years ago decent young people never dared to go to Sze Mob Road, the red light district in Shanghai, because they would be dragged into houses of shame. Through the agitation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Moral Welfare League, the Municipal Council has taken some measures against it. The condition is much better today, but private prostitution is increasing. Girls from twelve years of age up are found standing at the corners of the streets even in cold winters. The poor girls are not totally to be blamed. The Door of Hope has hundreds of these so-called professional prostitutes who have run away from their masters of the houses of shame. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has always emphasized a single standard of purity for both sexes, and we are not discouraged although the result is slow.

If the first wife does not give birth to a son shortly after marriage, her husband has the legal right to marry another woman. It is not unusual, however, to find a man with many more wives and sons than he can take care of. This prevails among the official class, Concubines are not always on a commercial basis. They are sometimes presented to a man as personal gifts. Inability to educate the children and the quarrels that occur among the wives are always the destroying factors of the family happiness. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has long felt the call and, as soon as the normal condition is restored in the country, she will march forward for the defense of her unfortunate sisters by education, by petition, and by opening special institutions, so that monogamy will be established in every home.

Closely associated with the system of concubinage are the slave girls. They, too, are being bought and presented to a man as personal property. Having no voice in the Republic, their cry is unheard. They are ill-treated and, as a result of heavy punishment many times they are deformed. They have no freedom in marriage, and often commit suicide at the prime of their youth. This deplorable condition should not exist any longer if we wish to continue to be human beings. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has just passed a resolution to make heard the cry of these down-trodden creatures who, like us, are children of God, the loving Father.

The death rate of infants is said to be very high in China, although we have no adequate statistics Children of the lower class lack adequate nourishment and care, because their mothers have to work on the farm or in factories; while the rich children are left to the wet nurses and "amahs," as their mothers care only for gambling and theater-going. The educated mothers are not better, Many of them get the idea that to care for children is the lowest type of work a woman can do. However, children of the middle class and those of the Christian women, especially of the returned students from America, are usually better taken care of than the rest. To protect the child, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has just issued its January Temperance Monthly as a "Child Welfare Special." There are several other agencies also working on child welfare. The challenge this year to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of China is greater than ever, as it realizes more than ever before the immense possibilities in the loving little children.

Since Western influence has swept over this country, filial piety which, it is said, has held China together as a nation for the last five thousand years, is scorned by the youth. A happy relationship no longer exists between the old and the young. The mother-in-law wants to enjoy the right which was handed down to her by her ancestors, while the young lady would say, "I am even better than you are, as I am an educated wife." These two extremes always result in antagonism. It is very difficult for the man of the family. I knew a certain man who left his Christian work because of his wife's quarrelling constantly with his mother. He did this so as to avoid criticism of the organization. Some girls even go so far as to say they will marry only the man who has no mother. The challenge the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is putting before the school girls is "Who stays young throughout life?" We must love our parents as God loves us. It is very critical for our women at this transitional period, but we are doing our very best to uphold that loving spirit which existed for centuries in the Chinese families.

Music is probably the greatest factor in building up the character mind and health of the youth of today, was the message brought to the several thousand women attending the National Federation of Music Clubs biennial convention here, by C. D. Greenleaf, president of C. G. Conn. Ltd., of Elkhart, Ind.

"Extraordinary evidence of the value society places upon music is to be seen from the status of the subject in our schools and universities" said Mr. Greenleaf. "Recent surveys show that the interest in instrumental music in American colleges and universities has increased at the rate of 100 percent in 10 years, and that forty percent of the high schools have bands and over eight percent orchestras, There is a real reason for this. The educators find that the boy or girl who plays an instrument has advantages over those who do not. Music makes good students better. It helps build character. It gives the pupil concentration, perseverance, alertness, quickened imagination and a social and cultural advantage that cannot be measured in dollars and cents. It even helps his health and morals. Music gives relief to an overkeyed mind by producing an emotional outlet.

"Parents today have a problem in finding wholesome recreation for their children. The band and orchestra furnish an ideal outlet for the energies of the "gang" which might otherwise be expressed in ways not nearly so healthful. While the child is growing is the time to imbue with a desire for music. That fact is being appreciated by the educators today, who are putting bands and orchestras in the grade schools rather than waiting for the high school to give the student his initial musical training. By the time the youngster reaches high school, he has so many demands on his time in his social activities and advanced studies, it is difficult for him to give the necessary time to the practicing needed to master his instrument.

The Livestock shipping interests of Michigan will hold a meeting at Hotel Fort Shelby in Detroit on May 25th and 26th for the purpose of canvassing the live stock shipping situation. Prominent speakers will be on the program such as Hon. Whitney Watkins of Manchester, Prof. Brown of M. S. C, Dr. Embree and H. R. Davison of Chicago and others. This association is made up of a number of radically different representatives, the railroads being represented by E. J. Leenhouts. Clark Brody and P. M. Granger for the Farm Bureau; Bert Wormuth and F. L. Runnels for the Farm Press. J. H. O'Mealy is president of the Association and he says its primary object is to prevent the frightful losses to shippers by stock dying in transit which amounted to over $150,000,000 during 1926. The railroads of course, are fully as much interested in this matter as the shippers and it is hoped ways and means will be devised whereby much of it can be eliminated. By the way you may have noted the surprisingly few accidents on railroads in this country of late; just charge it up to "Safety First" campaigns which are being constantly waged. We got our cue from the awful yelling which engineers indulge in when they approach crossings leading into this village. We used to be frightened when we heard that long blast of the whistle. We aren't any more. That's just a determination to clear the track ahead and nobody can say they did not hear the warning. It seems the Company has told the plug pullers it did not mind the waste of steam if that whistle were kept going. We predict that with the advance of inventions the whistle will be blown automatically when approaching a crossing.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the 24th day of September, A.D. 1912, executed by Paris Brewer; a single man, to Cyrus L. Wilcox, which said mortgage was, on the 25th day of September, A. D., 1912, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Hillsdale County, State of Michigan, in Liber 144 of Mortgages, on Page 147, and which said Mortgage is now owned by the estate of said Cyrus L Wilcox, he being now deceased, and upon which there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice the sum of NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($900) past due principal, FOUR HUNDRED TWENTY TWO and 64-100 DOLLARS interest; taxes in the amount of One Hundred Fifty-Five and 85 100 Dollars ($155,85) paid by said estate for the protection of its said mortgage interest, together with an attorney fee provided for in said mortgage and by the statute in such case made and provided of THIRTY-FIVE DOLLARS, and which said sum, together with said attorney fee, is the whole amount claimed to be now due on said mortgage leaving however, a balance of principal still due thereon at a future date, in the sum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, foreclosure and sale hereunder being subject to such unpaid principal.

And whereas, on the 21st day of November A. D., 1918, by a partial release recorded in Liber 150 of Mortgages, page 421, as appears by the records in the Register of Deeds office of said county, the following lands were released from said mortgage; Ten acres off the south end of the east half of the north-west quarter of Section Twenty-Three: in Town five south, of range two west, Moscow Township, Hillsdale County, Michigan, and leaving the land hereinafter described as security for the payment of said indebtedness.

And whereas, no suit or proceeding, either in law or equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of June, A. D., 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the west front door of the court house in the city of Hillsdale, Hillsdale county, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county because of said defaults in the payments of said sums of principal and interest, and taxes amounting in all to Fourteen Hundred Seventy-eight Dollars, forty-nine cents [$1478 49] and by virtue of power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale at Public Auction to the highest bidder of the said premises therein described, exceptt the premises heretofore released as herein set forth, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage as above set forth, with interest thereon, and the costs, charges and expenses allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including the said attorney fee.

Said premises now covered by said mortgage are described as follows; All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Moscow, County of Hillsdale, and State of Michigan, viz. The North-east quarter of the south-west quarter of, Section twenty-three, Town five south of Range two West

TRUST COMPANIES RANK NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING HIGHEST

The outstanding trust institutions of the United States are those that were pioneers in using advertising as a means of selling their services, a speaker told a conference of trust companies held in New York recently. He presented the results of a questionnaire sent out by the Trust Company Division, American Bankers Association, making an inquiry into the advertising practices of institutions doing a trust business. Three out of every four trust companies and banks engaged in extending trust services were found to be advertising. The opinion was expressed by the speaker

BANKERS HELPING

Three banks in South Carolina have inaugurated a plan to provide free of rent for two years a centrally located place to be used by the farmers of Greenville and neighboring counties for the purpose of establishing a creamery, a canning factory and a farm woman's club. The idea is to get the farmers to raise livestock, to raise their own food and feed and to have something extra to sell. The canning factory is intended to utilize the surplus garden and fruit products, and the club rooms for getting the support and co-operation of the farm women.

Georgia bankers have made great strides in furthering a diversified farming program the past year. They induced farmers to sow fifty-five carloads of vetch seed, furnished local prizes in eighty counties for the corn contest, the state prize of $1,000 being furnished by a bank in Atlanta. A banker-farmer alfalfa demonstration was held at the college and attended by 250 bankers and farmers. Alfalfa acreage has increased from 1,800 to 5,000, the demonstration being credited with 50 per cent of this increase. This year the state has produced 12,000,000 more bushels of corn than last year, has sold 50 cars of truck, $2,000,000 worth of pecans, and has produced 150,000,000 pounds of meat and enough corn and hay for its own use.

AS LABOR SEES BANKS

Vast sums of money are lost each year by wage-earners through investments hastily entered into. With the confidence of the wage-earners, banks will be enabled to more accurately advise such investors and thus save money which might otherwise be lost by unwise speculation. — William Green, President American Federation of Labor.

Prunes Victory

Wash a pound of medium sized prunes, place in casserole or covered jar, pour over a quart of cold water, add a cupful of sugar, small piece of stick cinnamon and one clove. Cover and place in very slow oven to simmer four hours, adding a little more water as necessary. Remove from oven, add a teaspoonful vanilla. Chill, strain and serve the juice in small glasses, the prunes with the oatmeal.

Parsley Omelet

Beat three eggs without separating to a light froth, add three tablespoonfuls cold water, one-half teaspoonful salt, dash each pepper and paprika. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in a clean smooth skillet or omelet pan, and pour in the liquid. Cook slowly and when almost ready to fold, sprinkle lightly with finely chopped parsley. Fold, slip to hot dish and serve at once.

Cereal with Prunes

Wash, soak and steam a cupful of small prunes, remove pits and cut into pieces. Add to any cooked cereal just before serving.

Bacon Curls

Roll lean bacon sliced rather thicker than usual and fasten with toothpicks, broil or bake in a hot oven till crisp all the way through. Serve on hot platter, with garnish of water cress.

Bran Muffins

Mix and sift together one cup of whole wheat flour, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half teaspoonful salt and two cupfuls bran. Dissolve one-half teaspoonful soda in one and one-half cupfuls sour or butter milk, add half a cupful of molasses and one well beaten egg; beat all the ingredients together and add a tablespoonful of melted butter and one-fourth cupful chopped nut meats. Bake in well buttered muffin pans, in moderate oven twenty-five minutes.

Prunes with Orange Juice

Wash, soak and simmer one-half pound of prunes in one pint of water till partially tender, then add thin yellow rind from one orange and four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Continue cooking until the prunes are done, then add the juice from the orange. Chill well and remove orange peel before serving.

Popovers

Sift then measure and sift again one cupful of flour, to which you have added one-half teaspoonful of salt, add one cupful of milk and beat five minutes with a rotary beater, beat two eggs to a stiff froth without separating them, then combine mixtures and beat again two or three minutes. Half fill heated iron or pottery gem pans, and place in a hot oven. Bake twenty minutes.

Fruit Melange

Cut in small pieces one slice canned pineapple, one orange and one cupful cooked prunes, removing the stones. Mix all together, adding enough of the prune juice to moisten well, chill and serve in cocktail glasses, garnishing each with a maraschino cherry.

Codfish Souffle

Soak one-half pound salt codfish, then place in fresh cold water, bring to boiling point and simmer till tender, remove, drain, cool and flake into tiny pieces. Bring one cupful milk to boiling point and add the flaked fish, with pepper and paprika to taste. Blend a tablespoonful each of butter and flour together, add to the fish and beat with an egg beater for two or three minutes. Whip one egg, beat into it one-half cup cream, and whip into the egg. Beat several minutes until light and airy, serve on squares of toast.

Hot Snacks For Cold Evenings

Culinary expert and lecturer on household science.

Tomato Cheese Souffle

Melt two tablespoonfuls butter and add two tablespoonfuls of flour, cook together to a smooth paste, then add a cup of strained tomato juice and simmer, stirring all the time, until thick. Season with salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Remove from the fire and beat in a cupful of grated cheese and the well-beaten yolks of two eggs. Finally fold in the whites of the eggs whipped to a stiff dry froth. Turn into a buttered baking dish, place in a dripping pan and surround with warm water. Set the pan in the oven and bake twenty minutes. Serve at once, in the baking dish.

Piquant Prunes

Wash, soak and steam large meaty prunes. Through slits in the sides remove stones and insert small stuffed olives. Then wrap each prune in a very thin slice of bacon, fasten with a toothpick and bake in a hot oven or broil until the bacon is crisp. Serve on triangles of toast.

Tortillas

Cook a cupful of yellow cornmeal in three cupfuls of boiling water for fifteen minutes, add a cupful of grated cheese and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat well, and pour into a well-greased dripping pan. Bake like cornbread and cut in squares before serving.

Hot Potato Salad

Cook four large or six small potatoes in their skins, cool, peel and chop coarsely. Place in frying pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and one tablespoonful each of chopped onion and parsley. Beat together one-half cupful of olive oil, four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, and one-half teaspoonful dry mustard. Pour over the potatoes, stir well and heat through. Serve in a salad bowl garnished with broiled sardines.

Prune Croquettes

Soak one pound of prunes in a quart of cold water, simmer till tender, cool, drain, pit and chop pulp very fine. Add bread crumbs to make quite stiff, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, a pinch of cinnamon and a tablespoonful of sugar. Form into balls the size of walnuts, roll in beaten egg, then in flour, and fry a golden brown in hot fat.

Creole Rice

Cut four slices of bacon into small pieces and cook till crisp, to the fat in the pan add a tablespoonful of chopped onion, one green pepper cut in strips, and half a pimento shredded. Cook till the onion is brown, then add one and one-half cupfuls of boiled rice, and the same quantity of strained tomato juice. Season with salt, pepper and butter and sprinkle when serving with paprika.

Cheese Dreams

Grate enough cheese to make two cups, or run it through the chopper, making it quite soft. To the cheese add one well beaten egg, half a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of paprika, dash each of black and white pepper and a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Spread the mixture on pieces of bread cut as for toast, on each lay a slice of bacon and put in a hot oven; cook till bread toasts and the cheese melts and puffs and bacon cooks a light brown. Serve hot.

The Funeral Procession to The City

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine has issued a report to the effect that two million one hundred and fifty thousand persons moved from farms and small villages to cities last year making a net loss to the farming communities in the year of around one million persons. This is something which the agricultural sections are finding to be worrysome and it is well they should. In the first place the greatest loss of all is the emigration of the young people of the country to the cities. What does this mean? It simply means that several thousand of our brightest young people now located in the best homes of the country side and villages have decided to put off their simple purity and cleanliness of life in wide open spaces and adopt the congested temptations and snares of city life. We don't want to insinuate the cities are all bad but we do know that the tendency of country bred young ladies and young men is to seek the sensational and the riskue. In seeking this element of life in big cities they must find it in the lower strata. In other words they want to "see the world" and in seeing the world they manage to besmurch their decency and avoid morality to an alarming extent. Country life is not as it was a few years ago The foundations for this kind of experience are often laid right in the home territory, where the automobile and night life furnish a medium for exchange of decency and foster immorality. In most communities of the state are located pleasure resorts generally near some lake where the restrictions seem to be lifted, and liquor and dances coupled with Sunday sports banish all thoughts of a strenuous life. A prominent preacher of the Methodist church has dubbed this emigration of young people as "the funeral procession of youth to the city," and he has not gone far away from the actual condition With all the modern improvements the electric lights and the automobile in the country there is yet lacking a certain excitement and riskue which youthful human nature craves. It is sad to relate that nine-tenths of the amusements of the city cater to the sexual and sensual, and no young person is led to higher ideals unless that person is vastly different from the majority. A fact is to be deplored when it is unavoidable, but a square look into the inevitable will convince any logical thinker we are against a hard circumstance. Farming people seek to inculcate ideas of christian decency and love of home into the curriculum of their sons and daughters, but the moment they join this funeral procession to the city, home training is quite apt to take a panic and fly away. Then there's the old old story of the country girl meeting a smooth nice looking guy somewhere in the big city—of being misled and carried away by his blandishments saturated with his yappy tongue and debauched by his rottenness. Please do not get the idea we are against all city life—far from it. We repeat it; nothing rounds out the education of a young person as will associations with business methods and social usages of the big city, but for every one who makes the change and becomes a successful city worker respected and decent, there are twenty five who fall for the ultra—notorious and the gay night life which stingeth like an adder, and leaves its victim a burnt-out cinder.

Reports are coming in from all parts of the township that the Corn Borer is about obliterated. He has evaporated like the mists before a noon-day sun. Let us hope and pray nobody has double crossed us in this corn borer deal. There has been an awful whoop and hurrah all over this little son-of-gun and now that every body has sweated and fumed for one month they claim he is practically nil. The little rascal! If we had supposed such an infinitesmal little worm could have caused all this trouble last winter we should have begun long before to skin him, Seems like we are once again on terra firma and we have the cuss cornered. While we are thinking about it we are moved to inquire how much the International Harvester Company has harvested out of this state wide campaign. Several years ago the honorable president of this great combine began writing little Billet doux to the Editors of this nation telling them what a wonderful stunt it would be to do a little fancy high class advertising for the good of their stomachs—incidentally of course mentioning the International line. We don't think many Michigan editors bit on this tempting bait, but they harked back to the time when we used to buy Osborne Deering and Minneapolis self binders for about one half the present price, and paid too much then, and again we harked back not quite so far when the poor little harvester companies who were trying to sell the farmer a machine at a living price were crowded to the wall and obliged to offer their pelts to the Great octopus which eventually swallowed them. No, we haven't any use for the International Harvester Company's cute little billet doux and we haven't any use for a company with untold millions which seeks to put up the price of all kinds of farming implements which the needy farmer must have, until it takes one whole crop of oats or potatoes to buy a self-binder.

Fine Prizes Await Best Corn Growers

The winner in this year's five acre corn growing contest will receive 80 rods of wire fence and 80 steel fence posts as a sweepstakes prize, according to the statement made by the farm crops department at M. S. C.

The state will be divided into three districts, and identical prizes will be awarded to the winners in each district this season. The first prize in each case will be a ton of acid phosphate fertilizer and a gold medal. Medals and merchandise prizes will be given as second and third prizes. First prize winners in each district will compete for sweepstakes.

First place in the last contest was won by a crop of 90 bushels of shelled corn to the acre. The three high yields last season were produced on alfaifa sods.

The only qualification needed for entry in the corn growing contest is a membership in the Michigan Crop Improvement Association. The membership dues are one dollar a year.

Entry for the contest must be made before July 1. Application blanks can be secured from Ralph H. Morrish, farm crops department, M. S. C. Last year a number of entries were received too late for inclusion in the contest. A record for the cost of producing his crop is kept by each contestant.

They've Done It At Last

After tinkering all spring with the gas tax measure in Lansing the wise guys up there have finally tucked this law onto the statute books of Michigan and a three cent tax is the agreed yoke they have put upon the motorists. Governor Green has signed the measure and she is a go. Well, the unfortunate car owner of this state is the goat and he has been goated until it seems as if he was almost annihilated, yet the dance goes right on. We are happy to state that our representative Mr. Denis Clancy had far too much sense to sanction anything like a three cent gas tax. We presume the new law found most of its support among the multi-millionaire or codfish aristocracy of the big cities of the state—at any rate it is grossly unjust in every sense of the word. We do not believe that the road revenues of this state have suffered to any great extent although Governor Green has attempted to prove that the treasury was bankrupt as a result of the profligacy of the Groesbeck administration. There is one sure fact—the up-keep of the miles of gravel highways which Groesbeck labored and sweltered to build, is getting on the nerves of the tax-payers. This terrific expense could be wonderfully augmented by a system of graft elimination. It is true the highway caretakers of thia section have to report each and every day to their superiors, but the matter of reporting has little effect one way or the other on these bosses. Hundreds and hundreds of dollars are literally fooled away for gas and wages to run these road graders winter and summer whether the road needs it or not. Whoever the bosses seem to be it makes no difference. These road graders are kept going—day in day out when they were absolutely useless. Now we claim that there is absolutely no sense in paying a road care-taker or buying him gas to scrape a road when it don't receive one iota of benefit thereby. These care-takers should be laid off at certain times and these roads visited by a supervisor each and every day. That is where the millions of road up-keep money goes to that pulls so frightfully on the pocket-book of the tax payer. Every man who drives a gas car is being systematically robbed to pay for running road graders and a lot of other machinery which may be needed badly at times but is absolutely useless at some other times. There is neither system nor care in this road upkeep business. The car owner has strained and pinched for the past several years paying an exorbitant weight and horse power tax, and now right on top of it all he must dig up more every time he buys a couple of gallons of gas. We defy any living man to prove this anything but a steal.

Report Of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending May 7th, 1927

A. W. Cramer, Pittsford Township moonshiner, who was arrested Saturday night April 30th for violating the liquor law, possessing and selling, demanded an examination when brought before Justice Fitzsimmons on Monday. He was released on $1000 bail, until the date set.

On Monday the Sheriff and Deputy Wood took Riley Flannery to Ionia to begin serving his sentence and brought back Clare Grosbeck who is being held on a warrant charging him with chicken stealing. Grosbeck was bound over to the Circuit Court on Friday.

Roy Pratt, who robbed the Jonesville Bank, was taken to Jackson to begin serving his sentence of 15 to 25 years on Wednesday.

Lester Mingus and Chas Norton the 2 Indiana bootleggers who "got caught" in Camden on April 30th, were brought before Justice Aldrich on Tuesday. They demanded an examination which was held on Friday and they were bound over to the Circuit Court and are being held in default of $1000 bail each.

Ed Tremaine, Otto Ziegler, Victor Fish and George Metcalf have all been bound over to the May Term of the Circuit Court. Bail of $1000 in each case was furnished.

E. A. Moross of Mosherville was arrested Thursday on a warrant, charged with assault. He was brought before Justice Aldrich and released on $5000 bail, pending an examination.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail 7. No. serving sentence 2. No. awaiting trial 5. Total 7.

China is at the cross-roads of the old and new. The women of the country hold the key for better or worse. After careful consideration and thorough investigation, the W. C. T. U. of China has adopted a well-balanced program to meet the critical situation We hope and pray that our part in the reconstruction of the Republic will be fully realized.—The Union Signal.

July 4th is going to be a mighty big day in Hillsdale this season so they tell us, and we would advise all of the boys and girls to be ready with the fliver all shined up and proper lucre in their pockets to make the occasion worth while. We are promised that July 4th, 1927 is going to be one of the heaviest Independence Days Hillsdale has ever held. This will be for the whole county, and we understand all the towns and villages therein have cancelled their preparations in anticipation of going to the county seat early and staying all day for a monstrous "blow out". The eagle will scream as he never screamed before and everybody will be happy: In the meantime let us all begin now to pray for a real old-fashioned clear as crystal 4th, with the sun rising perhaps with a slight haze in the morning and the birds and bees humming but later about 8 o'clock let the weather become perfectly clear. We don't care if it is a little warm; we can strip to it. Let 'er go Hillsdale.

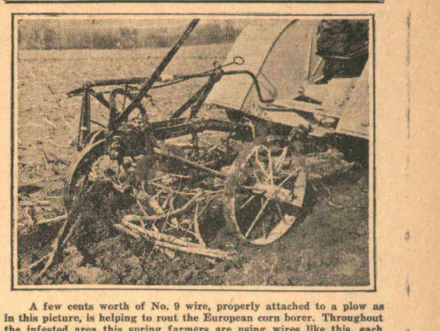
WIRE YOUR PLOW TO BATTLE BORER



A few cents worth of No. 9 wire, properly attached to a plow as in this picture, is helping to rout the European corn borer. Throughout the infested area this spring farmers are using wires like this, each 10 or 12 feet long, to put the stalks and refuse in the bottom of the furrow.

Tea-table Talk

Mrs. A. is having tea with Mrs. W., and they find the O. P. A. Club must have a blue book of By-laws and the U-Go I-Went Class of are needing some programs for their semi-annual Barbecue and Dance.

Says Mrs. A. to Mrs. W: "I am all mixed up in my dates. Had so much to look after this month that I simply forgot to make out the program for our big dance. The fact is, with the S. O. B. Club, The Rolling Pin bunch, and the Instigator's I have been completedy done up."

"Right you are" said Mrs. W. "The printer down at the Advocate was asking me to-day what you were about. He says he must get your copy tomorrow morning in order to deliver the programs in time for the dance." Mrs. A. slammed the percolator, gulped a cup-full of tea and made a bee line for her desk. "I'll do it now!"

MILLION TOLL OF DETROIT THIEVES

The wages of the necessary thief operating in Detroit, according to various police and insurance estimates, far exceed the $1,000,000 mark each year. Automobiles parked along the curb at night or left in unattended parking lots after darkness are the prey of the accessory thief and he uses tools which industry has devised for the furtherance of mechanical perfection.

Certain accessory thieves, operate exclusively on tires.

Of this class, many take only a new tire. To avoid a theft by this operation, the new car owner may be advised to change his new spare tire as soon as one of the other tires is slightly worn. The numbers may also be copied from the new tires purchased separately or with the new automobiles.

The tools of the thieves use are designed to cut the hardest of steel. Few locks and chains are immune from the thief's drill, hack saw, or bull clippers. Spot lights, radiator emblems and tire covers are listed among the most common thefts. Spare tires are, of course, the most common losses but may be guarded against by double locks and chains. Although the lock may not always prevent the theft, it will delay the thief for several minutes and thus in many instances prevent it.

The thief spots a car at night, locates the patrolman, if possible, and swoops down upon the machine with an accomplice in another automobile, who keeps the motor running while the grab is made. It is doubtful if theaverage tire theft requires more than 30 seconds.

35 COUNTIES TO WITNESS SKILL OF COLLEGE WOMEN

Achievement Days for women enrolled in home economics courses conducted by extension workers of the Michigan State College have been scheduled for 35 Michigan counties.

Groups in each county will gather to display work completed during the past year and to take part in special programs. Projects for the past year were home furnishing, home management, nutrition and clothing. Members of various groups have studied menus to meet special needs, rearranged kitchens to save time and steps, made homes more attractive by proper arrangement of furnishings, and have made attractive articles of clothing.

Members of the college home demonstration extension staff and national authorities on the projects studied will be present at the county meetings. These meetings will mark the completion of the project year in the counties which do not have regular demonstration agents. Dates set for Achievement Day meetings are: May 11, Calhoun and Wayne; May 13, Newago; May 14, Van Buren and Muskegon; May 17 Hillsdale; May 18, Washtenaw; May 19, Monroe; May 20, Lenawee; May 21, Berry; May 24, Ottawa and Oceane; May 25, Mason; May 26, Mecosta; May 27, Kent and Clinton; June 1, St. Joseph; June 2, Eaton and Cass; June 3, Saginaw; June 7, Montcalm; June 9, Tuscola; June 10, St. Clair; June 11, Oakland.

DETROIT MAN IS NAMED STATE GIDEONS' HEAD

Reed N. Radford, of Detroit, succeeds Hugh Payne, of Grand Rapidh, as president of the Michigan Gideons, the state branch of the Christian Commercial Travelers' Association of America.

Other officers named for the ensuing year include first vice-president, O. C. Atkinson, Battle Creek; second vice-president, Lyman M. Covey, Grand Rapids; third vice-president, John Ridley, Detroit; fourth vice-president, Samuel Hoekstra, Kalamazoo; chaplain, W. C. McBrayn, Detroit; secretary-treasurer, Frank W. Coote, Detroit, and field secretary, John R. Way, Albion.

JERSEY CATTLE RAISERS PLAN THEIR OWN EXHIBIT

Breeders of Jersey cattle in western Michigan plan to hold a dairy show all their own next fall. Jersey cattle clubs in 11 counties have united to promote the exposition which they hope to underwrite through donations fro mcreameries and manufacturers of dairy supplies, and by payment of entry fees.

The show will be held at some central point in Western Michigan, probably in Grand Rapids at the West Michigan State Fair grounds.

Counties interested in the movement are Kent, Oceana, Newaygo, Mecosta, Ionia, Allegan, Kalamazoo, Ottawa, Muskegon, Eaton and Montcalm.

MAN IS NABBED TRYING TO DRIVE POLICE AUTO

Police flivvers are to be seen, heard and shied away from, and it is considered an infringement on the good nature of the Detroit department to attempt to steal one of them.

This simple lesson of police etiquette was taught to William Vargo. 30 years old, very effectively by Patrolman Howard Dudley who claims that he caught Vargo behind the wheel of the flivver attempting to start it.

The flivver was being used by members of the Detroit police clean-up squad and was parked when Vargo is alleged to have made his attempt to drive it off.

DEATH CERTIFICATES SOLD TO RUSSIANS IN ADVANCE

Death is becoming complicated in the lonely stretches of the Ural Mountains. The Soviet officials there have tightened up their "red tape" and refuse to register deaths without a physician's certificate of the cause of the demise. But doctors are as scarce in the Ural Mountains as deaths are frequent.

A number of corpse have been taken on week-long journeys in search of a physician whose certificate was necessary for proper official burial. But a similar method has been worked out by several old people awaiting death. The Soviet officials report that old people have proviled themselves from physicians declaring that their death, when and if it occurs, will have been from natural causes.

Scientists say human life has exsited on this planet for 250,000 years—just about the age of the first "Pat and Mike" story.

WRITES OF TEUTON PIONEERS IN STATE

After several years of arduous research, John A. Russell, A. M., LL. D., has issued an historical volume devoted to the eGrman element in the state which he calls "The Germanic Influence in the Making of Michigan."

Tracing the earliest migrations of pioneers from the Fatherland, Dr. Russell first deals with their settlement in the East and their eventual removal West, "by the thousands through the Erie Canal because railroads were noe yet fully established." Included in these movements were hundreds upon hundreds of young idealists who left Germany after the Revolution of 1848.

Most of them were influenced to come to Michigan because of an elaborate propaganda set in motion by Edward Hughes Thompson, one time commissioner of immigration. His plan was the first notable beginning in the advertising of the lake district's advantages.

Settlements were made in Washtenwaw, Wayne, Genesee, Shiawassee, Oakland Macomb and St. Clair Counties. Many of the settlers left their names as monuments of early industry in establishing commercial, social and cultural phases of the state's development.

He lists numbers of officers who distinguished themselves through valorous feats in the Revolutionary, Black Hawk, Civil, Spanish and World Wars. Gen. George A. Custer of Little Big Horn fame is described at length in the book and his family ties traced from Monroe to early Pennsylvania where his grandfather was held as a Hessian prisoner.

Col. John Francis Hamtramck, a Revolutionary soldier of eGrman descent, also is described. He was the first United States commandant in Detroit and adjacent territory and upon his death was buried in the old French cemetery in Detroit. Later his remains were removed to Mt. Elliott Cemetery.

Some of the more interesting chapters describe John Astor's play of the fur trade in Michigan; his followers, Kanter and the Buhls; Bishop Baraga's accomplishments in Indian etymology; recollections of the late Rear Admiral A. G. Winterhalter and incidents in the early life of the artist, Gari Melchers, father of the present Cari Melchers, when he was forced to carve cigar store Indians in Detroit for a livlihood. His carving of numerous statues on the City Hall is also reported.

Dr. Russell, a member of the first graduating class of the University of Detroit, is dean of the Commerce and Finance department of that institution.

STEAMER GOES AGROUND IN SERIES OF ACCIDENTS

The passenger steamer Athabasca, loaded with flour from Fort Williams, went aground on Cedar Point, 15 miles above Sault Ste. Marie as the latest of an unusual string of marine accidents. The steamer Filbert, of the Pittsburgh Steamship Co. fleet was badly damaged by its crash on the shoals in the Straits of Mackinac.

NAMED "KING OF THE TRACK"

his husky, "do-or-die"-looking athlete, is Edvin Wide—Swedish phenom whom America's sports writers are terming "kina of the track." He is at present in this country and is expected to upset many runniny records on outdoor cinder paths here this summer.

Wide, it might be explained, is the lad who conquered Paavo Nurmi—the Finnish speed star whose wondrous footwork startled American track fans here a year ago. In beating Nurmi, Wide set a world's record of 9:12 1-5 for a two mile run!

Heroic Rescue of Nine Children Wins Convict His Freedom

Freedom was the reward for Jim Maher, an inmate of the workhouse at New Brunswick, N. J., for saving the lives of nine children. Hearing the cries of distress of the mother, Mrs. Katie Garreston, Maher—who was outsideof the prison grounds at the time—rushed into a burning house and carried out the nine youngsters.

Emil Blasberg made razors for Henry Ford when the billionaire was shaving himself and expenses.

And today Emil Blasberg is filing and grinding away to make blunt instruments sharp, in a little shop in Detroit, just as his forefathers have done since the first Emil Blasberg, a figure almost of antiquity, started the family in the craft.

The "modern" Emil is 34 years old, and he succeeded to the business only about a month ago, upon the death of his father, the Emil who served Henry Ford. Hrere is a new Ford story, by the way, which the "modern" tells of his father:

"Henry Ford came to my father when he first started making automobiles, and offered him the contract to do polishing work on the machines.

"'No, my father said. 'You will never make enough of those contraptions to keep me busy,' and he turned down the job."

T8here is a thing called the pride of craft. It is probably visionary, illusionary and idealistic, and yet the final Emil does not regret so very much that the Ford work did nat come into the family with its inevitable millions. To explain, he is the final Emil, because he has no man child, and even if he had, the ancient profession of cutlery grinding is slowly dying, for the artist cannot compete with his deadly enemy, production.

A synthetic house is manufactured in England, made of felt lined steel plates on a wooden frame. Motor trucks carry one of them fro mfactory to site, where it is assembled in a few hours. The brick walls are painted to resemble brick, or covered with a thin veneer of artificial stone to give a pleasing exterior. Such a house of the bungalow type, with living room, two bed rooms, kitchenette and bath, is said to cost only $1800.

Senator Borah gives back to the givernment $2500 of his $10,000 salary each year—and takes that much out in noise.

FAIR OPENS EXHIBITS TO STIR SCHOOL INTEREST

A new department has been added by the Imlay City Fair association, consisting of agricultural exhibits and judging contests, open to all schools in the section. It is hoped by this means to create interest in agriculture among the boys.

The Lower Thumb Agricultural Teachers' club will have charge of the contest. Schools already entered are Lapeer, Brown City, Almont Romeo, Marlette and Imlay City. Prizes will be given to individual boys, also to the school making the best showing in each section.

Three contests have been arranged for the school to teach some agricultural lesson; project exhibits; and judging contest.

Imlay City business men are backing local boys in a special contest for project work. These exhibits will be shown at the 1927 meeting of the Imlay City Agricultural association, September 13 to 16.

BOY IN AUTO CRASH DIES OF PARALYZED LUNGS

For six hours before his heart and other vital organs ceased their operation, the lungs of Alfred Patria, 11 years old, of Detroit, were paralyzed, and although he was kept alive by artificial respiration during that time, he failed to revive and died at midnight.

Doctors said the case was one of the most unusual ever brought to their attention.

The Patria boy suffered a fractured skull in an automobile accident. His condition improved steadily until his lungs suddenly stopped moving, because, doctors believe, of pressure upon the respiratory centrs of the brain.

50,000 ACRES OF TIMBER IN BARAGA BOUGHT BY FORD

The Ford Motor Company has filed a deed with Register of Deeds Octava Sicotte of Baraga county, conveying nearly 50,000 acres of timber land in Baraga county which it purchased recently from the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company.

With this block of land and the one purchased from the Stearns and Culver Lumber Company, the Charles Herbard & Sons Lumber Company, the Michigan Iron, Land and Lumber Company and other holders, the Ford Motor Company is now theowner of nearly a quarter million acres of land in Baraga county.

The Ford holdings are well blocked and densely covered with hardwood and hemlock. Much of this land is covered with virgin forest from which the pine was never cut. The amount of timber on the Ford holdings is hard to estimate.

There are but few large tracts of timber left in the countw, outside of those of the Ford interests, the largest known tract belonging to the Oval Dish company of Traverse City, whose holdings are of a choice variety.

MISSISSIPPI FLOOD LAID TO LAKE LOSS

"Floods that are devastating lower reaches of the Mississippi are partly due to the "dumping of the waters of the Great Lakes into the Mississippi through the Chicago drainage canal," Attorney General W. W. Potter declares.

"Few people realize how much water is being taken out of the lakes," Potter said. "Or the extent of the damage it is doing to Michigan and other states of the northwest, or the damage it may do when added to the natural Spring water fall going down on the Mississippi.

"The drainage canal is taking out of the lakes and dumping into the Mississippi more water than comes down the St. Mary's river; more than the combined flow of the Grand, the Fox and the St. Joseph rivers. That is enough water to cause serious trouble when the Mississippi is already above its normal level because of water that naturally flows into it."

Potter believes that an investigation by the Federal government following the present floods will disclose the reversal of flow of the Illinois River and the abstraction of water from Lake Michigan as one of the principal causes of the great river's overflow.

RADIO COLLEGE TAKEN TO FARM

Only a few thousand young people in Michigan find it possible to go to college, but hundreds of thousands, both old and young, have been sitting by their firesides the last four months while college has come to them.

Through its radio broadcasting station, WKAR, the Michigan State College has built up a "college of the air," with 32 courses and 320 lectures given by 124 men and women in 20 different departments.

The radio college is intended primarily for the people of the farms, but the scope of its instruction is not limited to farm production and home making. There are lectures on cultural topics such as literature, geology, chemistry and international relations. The non-agricultural topics, of course, appeal to many city dwellers, and even the talks on hens and cows hold a large number of urban listeners who either have come from a farm or dream of owning a farm some time.

The students in this college of the air take their education "straight," just as the yiung men and women in the clahsrooms at East Lansing do. There is no sugarcoating.

"We have discovered it is not necessary to 'sweeten' the programs with music and comedy," explains James B. Hasselman, supervisor of publications and secretary of the radio committee. "If the people want music and entertainment, they can switch to other stations. Those who want to listen will listen anyway."

RAINBOW STUDIED TO LEARN FEEDING HABITS

Do rainbow trout feed extensively upon brook trout?

This age old dispute will be ended this year, according to Dr. Jean Metzlaar of the University of Michigan. One thousand glass containers will be furnished trout fishermen throughout the state beginning May 1 in which they are asked to place the stomach of any rainbow caught.

These will be examined by Mr. Metzlaar and a final report presented on the rainbow's food habits.

MAY TOURNAMENTS TO DECIDE ENTRIES FOR FIELD TEAMS

Seven regional tournaments to decide entries in the state championships will be held for Michigan high school track and field teams in May.

The tournaments will be held May 20 and 21 in Detroit, Kalamazoo, Mt. Pleasant, Ypsilanti, Flint, Cadillac and possibly Grand Rapids. Kalamazoo Normal will hold a tournament for schools in Classes A, B, C and D. Detroit City College will have one for all four classes.

Greater Detroit High School League will hold a Class A competition, Ypsilanti Normal a four-class meet, Flint Central High a four-class meet and Cadillac High School a tournament for Classes B, C and O.

Only qualifiers in regional tournaments will be eligible to compete in the state championships at Michigan State College, May 27 and 28. Four will qualify in each event in each class providing there are eight entris n the regional meet. If there are six or seven entries three will qualify, four or fiv entries, two will qualify and less than four entries one will qualify.

Entries by any school are limited to four entries per event.

All four classes will compete on the same two days at State Col-lege.

SETS VALUE ON ONE FLASH OF LIGHTNING AT 70 CENTS

Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, once calculated that the electric pressure of a thundercloud was 50,000,000 volts, and concluded that the current in the average flash might well amount to 10,000 ampers, with a duration of perhaps one-ten-thousandth of a second. From these figures an electrical engineer would figure that the energy in a lightning flash amounts to 50,000 kilowatt-seconds. Translated into language that the layman can understand, this means that a lightning flash was the energy of a 200-ton train rushing along at the rate of 50 miles an hour. But this energy is applied only by the fraction of a second. Hence Steinmetz concluded that the cash value of a respectable lightning flash is about 70 cents.

CHICKS CHLOROFORMED BY THIEVES IN AUTOS

Chicken thieves who use chloroform to overcome their victims, are being sought by Buchanan officers. According to poultry raisers, the robbers come across the line from Indiana, run a pipe into the chicken house, pump chloroform into the coop and when the chickens are unconscious, stow them into high-powered automobiles.

It is believed the poultry is taken to South Bent and there dressed for the Chicago market. The loss by the thieves is estimated at $10,000 during the last few weeks.

One poultryman declared he sat in his house with a shot gun across his lap all night and watched his chicken house, only to find next morning that 150 birds were missing. He denies the thieves used chloroform on him, however.

ANNAPOLIS GRADUATES MARSHALL BOY IN JUNE

Midshipman William L. Knickerbocker will be graduated at the United States Naval academy June 2. His graduation will be followed by seven weeks' leave which will be spent at his home in Marshall, and he will return to Annapolis in July with about one-half of the members of his class for six weeks' aviation course. Leaving the first of September for the Pacific coast, via Bermuda and Panama, on the srtnsport Henderson he will join his ship, the U. S. S. Omaha, one of the new scout cruisers and flagship of the destroyer squadron basing at San Diego, California.

LIVESTOCK DAY TO BE HELD IN JUNE

Livestock producers from every part of the state will assemble at Michigan State College for the annual Livestock Day, in June, when results of feeding experiments with baby beeves and hogs, conducted by the college animal husbandry department during the year, will be observed.

Three lots of calves are being fed. The animals were bought in Chicago last October, and a gain of 320 pounds has been made by one lot. This year's experiment is a continuation of the work to determine whether a profit can be made from the feeding of linseed meal when the animals are given sufficient alfalfa hay.

A trial is also made of the worth of barley as a substitute for corn in a fattening ration. The animals which are getting barley show a smaller gain than those fed corn thus far in the trial.

Five feeding trials with hogs are being conducted. The use of cull beans as a fattening ration is being checked, as is the worth of alfalfa hay as a supplementary hog feed. It has been found that eight pigs will eat 10 pounds of alfalfa hay a week. Trials are being made to find whether or not alfalfa meal is any better as a hog feed than the hay itself. Gains of the two lots of hogs are geing compared, in an effort to decide if linseed meal can be used economically to replace all or part of the alfalfa.

DRIVER UNHURT WHEN CAR UPSETS IN RIVER

Although his automobile crashed over a 15 foot bank and landed upside down in the Ecorse river, Tat Albrecht, 21 years old, Ecorse, escaped with no more than a ducking and a small burn from battery acid. He opened the door of the half submerged car and crawled out.

Only the windshield and the rear glass of the car, a coupe, were broken by the accident, and after it was pulled out of the water it was driven away under its own power.

EVERY MAN OF THEM IS A MICHIGAN CITIZEN

Michigan State College has not had to go far to round out its record breaking quarter and half-mile relay teams, all five members of these teams boasting Michigan as their home state. Capt. Fred Alderman and Lyle Henson attended Lansing High; Bohn Grim was a student at Sturgis High before entering State; Forrest Lang graduated from Beaverton High School while William Kroll was a city champion and record holder when a student at Detroit Central.

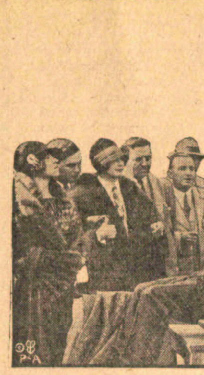
Naturally, we would think it strange if China were to send a gunboat up Grand River opposite Lansing to protect a Chinese laundry.

FALLS HEIR TO RICHES ON 112TH BIRTHDAY

Portrayed above is Ben Hodge of Poplar Bluff, the oldest man in Missouri. Ben may soon be that state's richest, too, if reports he received on his 112th birthday recently from England, are verified. They contained the message that he had been named as chief heir of a multi-millionaire relative who died a couple of months ago. Attorneys have been engaged to look after his interests.

Ben lives alone on a small farm near Poplar Bluff and, despite his great age, is more active than most men of fifty. He does all his own farm work and devotes his spare time to hunting and fishing. Wonder what his "monied" future will be?

"Puncture-Proof" Marvel



Nostradamus, strange man of the East who is said to be possessed of hypnotic power, recently figured in a public exhibition for the benefit of skeptical newspaper folks. While the latter looked on in amazement, Nostradamus pierced his cheek and tongue with hat pins without drawing blood. Then, he placed his bared back on a bed of spikes and allowed a 200 lb. man to stand on his chest. This was done without perforating the flesh of his back, a demonstration that showed his ability to hypnotically control any part of his body. Photo above pictures the stunt.

PASTEL SHADES REMAIN IN FAVOR

The popularity of the pastel shades are not lessened, nor are women, in their desire to look lovely, young and slended, less fervent. The greatest variety is apparent in sleeves, of which there are a hundred kinds, and details continue to vary so much that one may well remark that if the lines have not changed, everything else has. One sees several new belts every day, too. It would make a big catalogue if all the belts worn this season were described.

Blues seem to be the choice of most smart women for day-time wear. For evening, printed mousseline is holding its place securely. Solid gray remains more popular than ever, and black and white follow the blues in popularity for daytime wear at present, with pinks and all the rose shades leading the list for evening. Lames are rare during the summer, but their return to the front line will come with the autumn openings in August.

Next season's madels will not vary much from those of the present season, so far as lines are concerned. They are satisfied with lines as they now exist, but the details must vary as continually as the sky and sea.

Coats remain straight. Many of the coats are beige, varying from the light champagne tones to brown. Beige is holding its own.

The only color that is as generally good as beige is black. In the smart places one counts hundreds of women in solid black—or if not solid, almost so. Both beige and black are becoming to nearly every woman, and then, above all, they are practical.

American women are famed all over the world for their delightful way of wearing sports clothes. Indeed this very way of wearing sports things has won the hearts of French couturiers and they are narrow belt slides under hip panels! Only the front of the spirt is box pleated.

Prints are embraced in the realm of sports as well as for evening and afternoon. The usual order is a printed blouse, plain skirt and plain jacket lined with the print. A variation is the all-print dress with plain jacket. One costume might have been called "the spirit of youth calling a challenge to the world," because it is the essence of youth and aliveness. Its jacket is three-quarter length of printed tussah with bright blue flowers on a white background and collarless; its neckline and patch pockets bound with plain blue. The creamy white sleeveless frock was evidently designed for active sports, with its box pleatings commencing at a shallow yoke and confined by blue scallop-stitching to hip depth where the pleats relaxed for freedom. A white kid belt stitched in blue encircled the waist.

The compose idea was worked out in the standing collar with pointed reveres which showed three shades of coral, the deepest, a rich coral red.

The summer suit is not the rigid strictly tailored affair of the early spring. It is freer and easier and is as much at home in the city as in the country and equally smart both places.

There is a marked change in English lingerie fashions. The latest designs demand that before everything else "undies" should be feminine, even to the extent of the return of that much despised garment, the petticoat. Boudoir caps also are creeping back to favor. Yokes, which have so long been featured on frocks, are now seen on under things. Crepe de Chine is a favorate material. Nightgowns are being made with square necks. Lace and scallops are used to get the "feminine" effect. Pink still retains its superiority as a favored color.

HELD IN DEATH OF BABY DURING SMUGGLING TRIP

Roy Lanstra, 22 years old, arrested at Roseville near Detroit, for violating the immigration laws, is believed by federal immigration authoriteis to be the ailen smuggler who last winter abandoned an alien mother and her two small children on Peche Island, after accepting money to bring them across to Detroit.

One of the children died as a result of exposure and the mother was injured seriously before she was rescued.

Peche Island is Canadian property.

VETERAN HUDSON RAIL EMPLOYE ENDS LIFE

M. B. Smith, Church street crossing watchman on the New York Central railroad at Hudson has been retired. He commenced work for this railroad when it was known as the L. S. & M. S., 47 years ago. For 14 years he was locomotive fireman, station baggageman. Then he left the road, returning nine years ago, when he took the watchman's job. Te is not eligible for a pension because of the break in the service.

M. U. EXPLORERS FIND 200 A. D. GOLD

Reporting discoveries in the Fayoum, in Egypt, which throw light upon an important epoch in the history of civilization, Professor Francis W. Kelsey, director of the archeological research department of the University of Michigan has returned from a three months' survey of excavations being made on the edge of the Lybian desert by the University of Michigan expedition.

Among finds unearthed by the scientists from Ann Arbor ,according to Prof. Kelsey, were a small hoard of gold coins of the second century A. D., two letters written about 200 A. D. by a boy of Karanis who had gone to Italy for military service, and three small shrine paintings, interpretations of which, Prof. Kelsey said, presented some difficulties.

Greco-Roman towns in Egypt, Prof. Kelsey declared, are rapidly disappearing because of the systematic despoiling of ancient sites by the sebbakhan, or diggers of nitrous earth, who cart away ahe sun-dried bricks of ancient ruins to be pulverized and used as fertilizer.

More than three thousand pieces of cloth, many tools and objects of daily life in wood, leather and other perishable materials were found in a good state of preservation. Among these was a child's toy wooden horse with its string leash preserved.

A recent discovery, Prof. Kelsey declared, was a waxed tablet, with the writing on the wax in an excellent state of preservation. It bore the date 145 A. D. and was in the form of a lgal document in which a mother certified to the birth of twins whose names were Sempronius Sarapion and Sempronius Socration.

The two letters of the Karanis boy gone to war were those of a dutiful son to his mother. The youth wrote with a touch of homesickness.

July 10th and 11th

The sixth annual convention of Michigan Department Reserve Officers Association of the United States will be held at the Post Tavern Hotel Battle Creek, Michigan, July 9th and 10th.

Committees are being appointed to make this convention the largest ever held in the state. This being one of the first state conventions to be held in this country, is a very important one, as new policies have been promulgated by the War Department since the last national convention that have been objected to by Reserve officers all over the United States. A committee of Reserve officers has just completed its work in Washington and made recommendations to the War Department for certain changes to be made. These changes will be considered at the State Convention at Battle Creek.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles S. Cole, president of Michigan Department, has purchased a silver cup to be known as the Lieutenant Chas. S. Cole cup, to be given each year to the Reserve Officers chapter securing the largest percentage of Reserve officers in their community as members.

Colonel Raymond Sheldon will command Camp Custer this summer and has offered a tent with equipment to any Reserve Officer who desires to attend the convention and prefers living under canvas, to a hotel.

Lome things have been found to indicate the Mound Builders were cannibals.

PRIEST TELLS KIWANIANS OF BOYHOOD'S PROBLEMS

Director of Escanaba Hockey League Urges More Games and Athletic Sports

Men go wrong because they choose the wrong rather than the right; boys go wrong not from choice but because their energies and imaginations have not been properly directed, the Rev. Fr. Raymond Bergeron, of St. Patrick's Church, told members of the Escanaba, Mich., Kiwanis Club, recently. Speaking on "Boyology" Father Bergeron urged the Kiwanians to take a more active interest in the affairs, particularly the recreations, of the boys of the community.

"Keep the boys busy with out-of-doors sports and games", he said. "Develope the spirit of competition in them through play, let them breathe in the fresh air and develope healthy appetites and a demand for plenty of sleep and you won't have to worry unduly about the men of tomorrow", Father Bergeron declared.

Father Bergeron is director of the Juvenile Hockey League of Escanaba and he explained the aims of this organization to the assembled business men.

GIRLS ACCLAIMED CITY CHAMPIONS

Feminine Debaters Defeat Men From Other High Schools

The all-girl debating team of St. Theresa's high school, Detroit, was recently acclaimed champion of the debating teams of the high schools of the city in a forensic marathon sponsored by the Michigan High School Debating League and the University of Michigan, and embracing 235 high school teams.

St. Theresa's team achieved its distinction by winning four successive debates by unanimous decisions, and the first in the state elimination series by a vote of two to one.

Northwestern, Central and Eastern high schools, all of Detroit, have fallen before the girl orators of St. Theresa's team, in addition to the high schools of Grosse Ile, Salina, Fordson, Belleville, Clawson and Dundee.

The debaters are the Misses Dorothy Broeder, Durive Yates and Catherine Burns. A bronze cup will be awarded the winner of the state tournament by the University of Michigan.

A drive for membership among Catholics all over the United States has been launched by the Catholic Near East Welfare Association in 83 dioceses. The Rev. Fr. E. A. Walsh, S. J., vice-president of Georgetown university, Washington, D. C., and head of the relief organization, conferred recently with the three Michigan bishops concerning the drive in this state. It is the aim of the association to enroll 1,000,000 members as a result of this drive. which has been endorsed by the hierarchy.

A Parisian has been fined 10,000 francs for kissing a young woman against her will. He paid it like a sport and said it was worth the price. So moved was the young lady by this gallantry that she kissed him before the court, and that's that. But doesn't the young man get the 10,000 francs back, or is there no justice in the world?

"One of the most beautiful pageants ever presented in the Hillsdale M. E. Church," was the universal verdict of all those who were privileged to witness the "The Sacred Flame," put on by our Congregational and Methodist young people, last Sunday night. Much credit is due the various committees who were in charge, and notwithstanding a steady downpour of rain made things look discouragign the fifty participants were all present and the church was filled to capacity.

COLLEGIANS NOT IN CITY GIRLS' FAVOR

Ever since the first co-ed piled her hair in a huge know on top of her head, donned her dozen or so petticoats, packed her hair trunk and hied away to college, members of campus fraternities have been struggling with the question of which was the more desirable as a companion, the co-ed or the town girl.

Opinion usually has leaned toward the latter. Several reasons have been advanced by observers of college life, but probably the strongest is that town girls are not supervised as closely as those at college, and are able to attend dances and other social events where co-eds are unable to go because of rulings requiring them to be in their dormitories or sorority houses at early hours.

But while town girls apparently have been favorites with college boys, the college students have not been so popular with the town girls, judging from opinions expressed by half a hundred girls—waitresses, stenographers, capitol employes and sales girls in Lansing. A dozen or so of the girls said they didn't care whether their escorts were college students or not, just as long as they were good dancers and could "show a girl a good time."

SLOW HABITS SHOWN IN DRY TOBACCO TO EUROEPANS' TASTE

American tourists in Europe find it difficult to get satisfactory pipe tobacco. It is always dry and crumbly. Soon the tourist discovers that this desiccated condition isn't an accident; he learns that stores, particularly in eGrmany, make it a point to keep their tobacco dry. Over here, of course, smokers prefer tobacco mildly damp.

Germans are usually fastidious about other things, why do they tolerate sucvh hideously dry tobacco?" was asked of Richard Seitner, local pipe expert who grew up in Vienna.

"The Europeans smoke more slowly," he replied. "They want a tobacco that will hold the fire between puffs. In America, we do everything fast; our smoking too. Dry tobacco would burn away like tinder in an American's pipe. He has to have a brake put into the tobacco to slow down the burning."

Compare the quick, staccato puffs of the American smoker with the slow reflective smoking of the European and you have the best possible index of the tempermental difference that holds for the two continents. As we smoke, so we drink to rather drank. The German caresses his stein for half an evening; we stood up to a bar to get close to the source of supply and tosser down the drinks in single gulps. Quick smokes, quick drinks, quick lunches—and here's where we have it on Europe—also get-rich-quick.

SINK HOLE IN ROAD NEAR PONTIAC IS BEING FILLED

Road-building machinery was installed at the sink-hole north of Pontiac on the Dixie highway, and repair of the stretch is under way.

The sink-hole, declared by road engineers to be the worst in the state, had delayed completion of Dixie highway between Pontiac and Flint since last summer. Thousands of tons of dirt and other filler have beendumped, but have failed to make a firm roadbed.

DETROIT CALLED ACCORDION CENTER

The next time you hear a vaudeville accordion player wheezing out the "Sextette from Lucia" or the "Miserere," while the foldh of his instrument distend and wizen like the wrinkles in a young intellectual's brow, you may reflect that his accordion was probably made in Detroit.

More of the professional players and stage artists buy their instruments from a Detroit factory than from any other source. Detroit is thus also an accordion manufacturing center.

Not only can accordions be obtained there that transform the wind they suck in into siren notes, but the buyer can have his name set into his instrument in rhinestones go that it will blaze in blinding beauty under a theater spotlight.

Though the accordion was invented about 100 years ago by Damian, of iVenna, the piano-accordion is a recent development, being only about 20 years old. Some credit Pietro Deiro with its invention and tales of his fabulous earnings still inspire ambitious young men to follow in his footsteps.

A few years ago Deiro was receiving $60,000 a year just from his phonograph royalties. Since piano-accordions are now less of a novelty, such earnings probably will not be duplicated again.

One obstacle prevents the piano-accordion from ever becoming a popular instrument, and that is its cost. An average large instrument will run around $400 in price. As long as piano-accordions cost as much as flivvers, most young men will prefer to invest in something they can carry their sweethetarts.

The latest varieties of the piano-accordion have 45 keys on the keyboard at the right, which, by turning a switch, will play several octaves higher. Seven full octaves are thus obtained on the right side. More tricky are the 140 or more push-buttons on the left, 80 of which play automatic chord combinations, the rest supplying the bass notes.

Several figures on each hand are used at once and thois complexity, together with the fact that the instrument must be pushed and pulled at the same time, makes it mastery a feat of patience, co-ordination and dexterity.

85,000 PINE SEEDINGS ORDERED FOR BARRY

Thirty-three Barry Counay farmers have ordered 85,000 white pine seedings to be planted on acreage low in fertility. Professor Ralph Kroodsma, Michigan State College forestry extension specialist, conducvted planting demonstrations recently on the farms of Byron Ketcham, John Strang, Heber Pike and Robert eKlly. The planting on the Robert Kelly muck land was to establish a wind brake. County Agent Paul Rood also brought into the county a member of the M. S. C. department of landscaping and home beautification, wha conducted four planting demonstrations for the beautifying of the farm home. These demonstrations were held at the homes of Oscar Finkbeiner, west of Middleville; John C. Ketcham, Hastings; Homer Aldrich, thre miles south of Delton, and the Good Will church and school, six miles south of Hastings on M-43.

MICHIGAN'S SPELL OVER 'BIG TEN' IS SEEMED BROKEN

The spell of Michigan over the Big Ten, in football, basketball, and swimming, seems due to be broken by the baseball teams of the other conference schools.

Champions last year, the Michigan nine in the first week of the season has been defeated twice, once by Purdue and again by Northwestern.

Ohio, with a son of "Red" Ames of the Giants strengthening its twirling staff, has won both its games. Ames held Indiana to six hits, a home run by Correll with one on giving the Hoosters their only runs. Behind him the team fielded perfectly and the next day with Blanchard in the box they did almost as well in the bitterly cold wind against Chicago.

Wisconsin, with the best southpaw in the conference in Captain Stoll, was nosed out by Iowa in a ten-inning battle, 4 to2.

Northwestern, after a series of disasters on its southern training trip, rose to unexpected heights and trimmed Michigan by heavy hitting 10 to 7.

Illinois, with a record of Big Ten baseball championships, started the season auspiciously by a ninth-inning victory over Purdue, conquerors of Michigan, 4 to 3.

Builds World's Smallest Aeroplane Engine

New and startling developments in aeronautics are being brought out quite regularly now. First thing we know, we'll all want to be "canning" the car and buying an airship—yes, build handars instead of garages.

Here's the latest. Our photo above pictures Richard S. Davis holding up the world's smallest aeroplane engine which he built. This running model—known as a two-cycle Porte engine—has a one and one-half inch bore, one and one-half inch stroke and an eighteein-inch propeller. It is aircooled and capable of developing from one-fourth to one-half horsepower energy!

The photographer neglected to state what size aeroplane it would lift. Maybe, Mr. Davis intends to favor us with an "aerial flivver?"

CO-EDS CUT COST BY KEEPING HOUSE

Can a co-ed make corn muffins? Does she understand tne mystery of waffles? Can she plan a meal? Can she roast a leg of lamb or broil a steak?

"We can, too!" report the co-eds.

That is, 20 of them at the University of Michigan take up the challenge. And they proved their point. They not only can perform all these difficult domestic tasks—but they do them and a lot more every day.

They are the 20 girls who live this semester in Alumuae House. They bake, sew, clean, wash dishes, plan meals, and buy supplies with an efficiency that might put many housewives to shame.

It is an attack on the high cost of co-education, and co-education has won. The victory was attained with cook books, carories and general efficiency.

But best of all, the girls have had a gorgeous time winning.

Last September Alumnae House, a comfortable late-Victorian mansion, was determined on as the proper place for his experiment to reducing the high cost of living for college girls. Miss Alice Lloyd, as a member of the executive committee of the University, sponsored the innovation.

"At best it is difficult for girls to earn their way through school," Miss Lloyd said. "Let's try having them do all the work in their own house."

The matter was discussed by the board of directors of Alumnae House. The house had been given to the University by a group of former college students who are still interested in the living conditions of women at the University. The board is composed of Miss Mary Farmsworth, Detroit; Mrs. Thomas E. Rankin, Ann Arbor; Mrs. Edgar Coody, Lansing; Mrs. Percy Martin, Bay City; Miss Bellie Hayes, Grand Rapids, and Miss Lloyd.

The co-operative plan seemed feasible. There was much adding and subtracting. Finally the rates were established. Board at Alumnae House for a semester was set at $63. The girls are paid 35 cents an hour for their work. To earn their entire board and room for the college year, they must work four and a half hours every day. Only two of the 20 girls accomplish that feat. Most of them work only two hours a day.

Now theory and practice are two different things. It was one thing to figure out the proposition on paper, and another to make the plan work.

Miss Frances Broene, who graduated from the University in 1918, was chosen as the social director of the house. It was she who chose the girls to live in Alumnae House, chose them from 100 applications. It is she who has the final word when there is a dispute over dishes or dusting. She keeps the accounts of the house, pays the bills and sees that everyine is properly accredited with her hours of work.

OAKLAND COUNTY GETS TITLE TO COURT HOUSE

Judge Fred S. Lamb, of Cadillac, handed down an opinion in a suit to quest the title to Oakland countyq's courthouse and old jail property in which he holds the county is entitled to absolute ownership and heirs of Stephen Mack have no rights in the property.

The decision has been awaited with interest because on it hinges the right of the county to dispose of the property and build a new building.

The land is valued at upwards of $750,000 and has been in the county's possession for over 100 years.

SAGINAW'S DELINQUENT TAX EXCEEDS LAST YEAR

Delinquent tax returns in Saginaw county this year are already considerably higher than last year, according to Copnty Treasurer Norman F. Dengler. Saint Charles and Thomas townships have declined to make a tax settlement because of a dispute over the payment of Covert road taxes returned delinquent.

According to Dengler, there was returned in 1925 on the state, county and county road taxes, a total of $81,880.50 on a total tax levy of $1,530,427.42, while this year, even with these two townships out of the list, the delinquent return is $9,,447.28 on a total tax of $1,482,965.08.

DETROIT CHINESE IN REVOLT PACT

Detroit dollars are helping finance the great Chinese Nationalist movement, involving the destinies of 400,000,000 persone, for there are naw more than 300 members of the Kuomintang, or the People's party, an organization state as a secret society and numbering 1,500,000 members, scattered in all parts of the world, and directly responsible for the existing embroglio in China.

Detroit Chinese are more frugal than ever these deays. Their annual dues of $10 have been greatly increased by special assessments, that are willingly paid. Unheard of sacrifices are being made by the poorer members of the Kuomintang, while the wealtheir merchants are lavish in their donations to what has been called the common cause of China.

The 300 are but executors of the strangest will in history; that left behind by Dr. SunYat-sen, the faunder of the Kuomintang and the guiding spirit of the Nationalist movement, who died March 12, 1925. It has become a sacred document for Chinese in Detroit, Chicago, New York and, in fact, in every world capital. It reads as follows:

"For 40 years I have devoted my life to a revolutionary cause in an attempt to elevate China to a state of freedom and independence. My experience of thes vnd8tiomandiele1E perience of these eventful years has absolutely convinced me that to attain this cherished goal we must enlist the support of the great mass of people at home and work in oc-operation with those nations which treat us on the basis of equality.

"The revolutionary movement has not yet succeeded, and it is therefore imperative that all my fellowworkers should do their utmost in order to realize my 'Reconstruction Plan,' 'Outline of Reconstruction Policies5 and the "Three Principles of the People,' and the policies enunciated in the manifesto of the Kuomintang at the first national convention.

"Fight on, my fellow workers, with renewed vigor to bring about a People's Convention for the solution of our national problems and to abolish alil unequal treaties with foreign nations. These things must be done in the shortest time possible."

The secret society that was destined to make world history, was organized in 1884 by Dr. Sun in Japan. At the time there were many Chinese intellectuals who sought haven in Japan from the effects of their revolutionary ideas and beliefs.

CATTLE SHIPPERS WARNED OF DANGER IN FIRST HOT SPELL

Warning that the critical period in the shipping of livestock to market is during the first hot spell in the spring, the Michigan Live Stock Loss Prevention Association advises farmers to make sure that any animals they ship do not become over-heated.

A poster has just been ussued by the association and is being placed on display at shipping and other points. Among the recimmendations listed are:

First, handle animals patienaly to avoid excitement.

Second, bed cars with sand instead of straw.

Third, spray water on feet of hogs, but not on their backs.

Fourth, do not feed just before loading.

"The first hot spells come suddenly and usually cause our most severe losses," declared J. H. O'Mealey, of Hudson, president of the association. "One day in May, 1926, more than 1,100 animals arrived dead or crippled in one terminal market on account of an unexpected rise in temperature. Common sense, supplemented with sound judgment, is sufficient to avoid these losses."

FISH HATCHERY AT KALAMAZOO HOPE OF LOCAL SPORTSMEN

Kalamazoo county sportsmen expect to get one of the two new fish hatcheries that are to be established in southern Michigan by the state conservation department this year.

Natural ponds, located in the center of an available 18-acre plot, make the site one of the most desirable to be found anywhere in the lower peninsula, in the opinion of many fishermen and hatchery experts who have looked at the property.

The new hatcheries are to be for the propagation of black bass, perch and bluegills.

The legislature has been asked to appropriate $50,000 for their establishment.

To the $25,000 that would be available for establishing the Kalamazoo hatchery, the Izaak Walton league has offered to add a sufficient amount to pay for the property.

EAST LANSING TO RADIO WEATHER

Fruit growers will be informed of coming frosts in time to protect their orchards and small fruits, through a special service arranged by the Michigan State College horticultural department and the United States weather bureau.

The college station, WKAR, will broadcast "long period" weather forecasts along with the noon program, which is on the air at 12 o'clock eastern standard time, except Sunday. The forecasts will be wired from the district weather bureau office at Chicago, to D. A. Seeley, meteologist in charge of the East Lansing station, and then broadcast by the college announcer.

Later in the season, it is planned to broadcast a number of short talks by horticulturalists on the use of sprays for orchards and the small fruits grown in this state. This will supplement the advance forecast of weather conditions.

RUGS, HOBBY OF EX-LAPEER MAN

Just now he is in London after a tour that took him through India, the Straits settlements, Siam and Egypt in search of fine rugs to add to the collection that has brought him world fame. Forty times he has crossed the ocean and twice he has circled th world.

Mr. Ballard—James F. Ballard, multi-millionaire drug manufacturer of St. Louis—has traveled 425,000 miles in his world quest for rugs. He has been captured by Turkish brigands, and passed through riots and massacres following his quest. A fine rug is to him what champagne is to another man. After an evening spent showing his collection to visitors he says that he is as intoxicated as if he had been drinking champagne. He would cheerfully go to the other side of the globe just to buy one rug.

The man who has spent two good-sized fortunes on his hobby—he presented a collection of 29 oriental rugs and carpets, worth $750,000, to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York—got his start in the business that brought him the millions to gratify his fancies, working after school in Dan Richardson's drug store in Almont, Mich.

The Ballards moved into Lapeer County from Ohio in 1855, taking up a section of land near North Branch. James was still a boy when his mother traded the farm for land just south of Lapeer. The elder Ballard hired a man to work the farm and manufactured washing machines. Many of Lapeer's pioneer citizens recall the long light wagon loaded with washing machines he sold throughout the county.

Then the family moved to Almont and young Jim worked in Dan Richardson's drug store after school. In 1871 the boy came to Lapeer and worked in Shad Vincent's drug store, adding to the knowledge of drugs that was to build a great fortune for him. He worked in Grand Rapids and Nashville, Tenn., then St. Louis and Indianapolis, Ind. In 1883 he started in business for himself in St. Louis, manufacturing a liniment. This business grew rapidly, other drug manufacturing companies were absorbed an dit wasn't long before the Lapeer boy found himself very rich.

BROTHER SISTER, TOP CONSTANTINE CLASSES

,"Readin', ritin' an' rithmetic," studied in a little one-room country school in Mottville Township, St. Joseph County, fitted Victor Scoville and his sister, Miss Olga, for entrance into the Constantine high school. Their grades during the last four years have made Miss Scoville valedicatorian of the class of 1927 and her brother the salutatorian. She is 17 years old, he is 18. Not once during the 12 years she has been in school has Miss Scoville been absent or tardy.

They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scoville, both alumni of the Constantine high school. Their grandfather was the late Rr. B. P. Scoville, a prominent physician for many years of St. Joseph County.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOLS IN STATE'S CITIES IS GRAND RAPIDS PLAN

Establishment of universinty schools in several cities of the state, the graduates of which would receive the Bachelor of Arts degree of the University of Michigan, has been proposed by Mayor Elvin Swarthout of Grand Rapids.

The executive believes the solution o fthe mass difficulty at Ann Arbor may be in the development of a limited number of these university colleges in certain populous centers. He holdh that the proper way to solve the problem of numbers at the University of Michigan will not be served by following the pattern of Procustes or by adoption by the faculty of a policy to lop off at the end of the sophomore year "those who are unfitted by character or mind for a university career," as has been suggested.

HEROES REVERED AT FIRE MUSEUM

Memories of the bygone days when Detroit's prominent men were members of the city's volunteer fire departments, when each man had a leather bucket with his name painted on it amid gilt curlicues, when leather hose carriedthe spouting streams from the hand-pumped engines, and when a fireman's parade was a thing that stopped business all over town, are vividly evoked by a visit to the museum of the Detroit fire department on the third floor of Ladder Company No. 2 East Larned streets near Hastings streets.

The museum's relics of early fire-fighting days in Detroit recall many names of men whe were successful in many fields and who were members of the fire department when to be a fire-fighter was the duty of every men in the city despite his wealth or prominence. Besides these memories one sees relics that are mute testimonials of tragedy. Strung from a rope in the one-room museum, there are perhaps 25 helmets, some of ancient vintage and some of the style worn today, but each one is a silent tribute to heroism. Each helmet—and many are battered, stained by smoke and scarred by flames—was worn by a member of the fire departmen who met death while at his post of duty.

Other grim membrances of brave fire-fighters, beside the line of battered helmets, are photographs. One is of Dick Filbourne, who met death amid the flames that consumed the Detroit Opera house 30 years ago. Filborne's picture is surropnded by wreaths and floral offerings in the form of ladders and buckets, and one floral piece reads in roses, "Last Call, Dick." Other photographs of firemen who were killed while in the line of duty are set ineaseds built from hooks, ladders and axes and all testify to the courage of the early Detroit fire-fighters.

Another tragic relic is an ancient pitchfork with one broken tine which caused the death of Anthony Cort, of Truck Company No. 5, many years ago. Cort was on the truck, speeding to a fire, and was thrown off crossing a railroad track and landed on the pitchfork, one tine of which pierced his brain and caused immediate death.

Across the room from the row of helmets, hangs another row of ancient leather bpckets, which passed from hand to hand in the old days, when a blaze was quenched by manual rather than machine methods. These buckets are scorched and worn and the names on them are nearly all illegible, although one is well enough presereved so that the inscription can be read, "Israel Ward, 1806."

117 TOTAL YEARS SERVED BY BROTHERS ON LAKES

With the opening of navigation, when lighthouse keepers resumed their long vigil over Lake Superior, the three Bennetts brothers of Calumet entered upon a total of 117 years they have served in the lighthouse service. Thomas J. Bennetts, the oldest, is rounding out his fortieth year at the Eagle Harbor light and on June 30 this year will retire from active service. His brother Noah, who is keeper of the Portage Lake ship canal light also is serving his fortieth year, but has no desire to drop from the active list of the lakes' watchmen. William, the third of the trio, has served for 37 years and is keeper of the Sand Hill light, in Keweenaw county, one of the finest stations on the lakes.

The three brothers have lived almost all their lives within a short distance of one another on the Keweenaw county shore line, and despite their long service are active and in the best of health. When Thomas retires from his long watch he plans to make his home where he can be near the great body of water which he has helped to illuminate for four decades.

STURGIS OBSERVES 100TH BIRTHDAY

The finest old pioneer in St. Joseph County was the old pine tree that stood on the Detroit-Chicago road, the old Fort Poatchartrain-Ford Dearborn trail—that ran along the country's southern edge. A sturdy, upright old pioneer was this old tree and before it succumed to old age and a strong east wind it might have told a great many tales about the old settlers.

More than once it had looked down on Black Hawk and his braves winding along the old trail at his feet on their yearly pilgrimage from Ft. Dearbzorn to receive their annuities from the English at Ft. Malden, in Canada.

One day it saw a lumbering prairie schooner come blundering up the hill in the East. It watched the ambling exen stop in its scanty shade; gazed down on two men who unyoked them and made ready for the night; followed them day after day as they broke the rich soil and sowed acres of wheat; and then gazed after them as, once more, they turned to the East and disappeared down the hill. The next year it saw one of these same men come back, one day in early, windy, wet March. This time he had a woman and babies and the makings of a home and the first settlement of Sturgis began.

This was just 100 years ago, for this year Sturgis celebrates its centennial. The city stands at the crossing of the old Chicago road, and the equally old, if not older, Nottawasepi Indian trail, tha ran from Macinack to F. Defiance in Ohio.

This centennial will not only be the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival of the first white settler but it will be the one hundredth anniversary of the completion of the survey of the first Government road through Michigan, the M-23 of today.

It was back in 1825 that the Government, at the instigation of Fr. Richard, a French Recollect missionary, a member of Congress, gave its first appropriation of $10,000 for a Government road that would connect Detroit with Ft. Dearborn, now Chicago, and help to open up the West. Pere Richard, as his French constituency called him, was a member of Congress aftdr a stormy electotral session; he founded the first infant school in the West; with Judge Augustus Woodward he was one of the founders of the University of Michigan; and with the Presbyterian minister, Rev. John Monteith, as president, himself as vice-president, he was one of the two professors to occupy its 12 charis of everything from poglossica to ennoeica.

The act of Congress called for a contract that would insure a highway 100 feet wide, the first 30 to have trees cut to ordinary height; the next 30 to have the trees cut low; and the last 30 to be grubbed. The road was not completed until after the Black Hawk War, 1833-'34; nevertheless, over it as early as 1829, the first mail coach found its way.

The surveyors brought back highly illumined accounts of rich prairie land that could be purchased for $1.75 an acre, or forest land at 50 cents less because it would need clearing.

To Southern Michigan this old Chicago road is rich as the prairie soil in tales of historical value.

Over this road in 1828 wen Black Hawk and 1,800 Fox and Sacs on their way to Ft. Malden, as was their annual custom to receive their allies during the War of 1812.

As they passed the site of what is now Sturgis, they saw a mile away, the log home of John Sturgis and his family. The men of the place were off cutting the long prairie grass for hay for the winter. Black Hawk and his Indians halted, gathering up every bit of food in the little frontier home while Mrs. Sturgis stood by, helpless. But when they started to abduct her 3-year-old son, eGorge, she lost her pacifism G.rabbing a handy rope, she quickly tied a noose, and going up to Black Hawk, she made him understand that if her child was taken, capital punishment would go into effect in Michigan Territory without the aid of the Legislature. The Indians left.

Among the four treks that were taken by Gov. Cass—1813-1831—was one that brought him along the southern boundry of Michigan and, by the same token, near to what is now Sturgis. As the Governor, with his Indian guides and white helpers, made their camp late one afternoon across the intervening mile of prairie from his cabin door John Sturgis watched the commotion. From that log cabin, day after day, not much was seen to vary the monotony of pioneer social life. It was, too, the habit of the early settlers to welcome any strngers who happened along. Sturgis started across to see what it was all about.

When he found it was the Governor, without hesitation, and with the hospitality of those days, he captured him and gladsomely marched him home for supper. But the gladsomeness was confined to the host and not to his wife. As he boomingly ushered His Honor into the roomy cabin, he was met with the same steely glitter that shines from the eyes of the modern wife when any modern husband brings home and jauntily announces the unexpected guest. Perhaps that is the reason he made the governor go with him and not come after.

Mrs. Sturgis, making a mental survey of her larder, realized that all she had was some fish and cornmeal. On the other hand, her fame as a housewife was peopardized. She dug up her coffee grinder, she had her daughter bring wheat from the bin, and she started the family grinding. But the ground wheat was yet to be bolted. From her week store of precious finery she drew out her wedding veil and, folding width upon width, she sifted her floor and made beaten biscuits—a frontier delicacy.

The biscuits did the business. Gov. Cass ate them and ate them, and kept on eating them, and then at some more.

Years afterwards John Sturgis was appointed Judge by this same Governor, or through his influence; and still later, in 1845, when Sherman and Ivanhoe, as the crossroads town was known, came up for incorporation in 1857, the act was quickly passed, and it is a tradition in the Sturgis family that ex-Gov. Cass, still influential, saw to it, as he reminiscently smacked his lips, that the new town was named Sturgis, in honor of the woman whose hospietality he had enjoyed and whose biscuits he had consumed.

PRICE GUESSING TO DRILL FARMERS IN PRODUCE VALUES

Extension leaders of Michigan are considering a series of price-guessing contests among farmers similar to contests held in Missouri.

The usual way of conducting them is for the county agent to distribute among the participants cards on which a price forecast of a commodity can be set down and checked later by the actual course of the market. These cards ask the guesser to select the month or months which he thinks will register the highest and lowest prices for the commodity chosen. There is a column for revising the forecast some time later and another column for filling in the market prices actually paid in the designated months. At the end of the year for which the prices are estimated in advance, the farmers have the opportunity of comparing the guesses with the actual prices paid.

Ordinarily, September is the high month for hog prices, but guesses from 36 farmers mentioned 10 different months for the probability of highest prices for 1927. This work is an aid to the farmers in obtaining all the facts available on seasonal and long-time prices of products as an aid in deciding how much to produce and what time of the year prices are the most favorable.

FREMONT DENTIST IS ON HIS 4TH TERM AS MAYOR

Herman A. Stobbelaar, dentist, is starting his fourth term as mayor of Fremont, with an enviable record for aggressiveness in municipal affairs. Before being elected mayor the first time he was active in library matters, being chairman of the library board for several years. He also is a strong supporter of the movement to expand Fremont's hospital facilities. Dr. Stobbelaar is a native of western Michigan, having been born in Zeeland.

Grandmother Of Three --Only 35 Years Old

Laurels for being one of the most youthful grandmothers in the world are claimed by Mrs. W. Vaughn of Los Angeles, Calif. She entered the ranks of "Grandmas" five years ago when, at the age of 30, her first grandchild was born.

Today, Mrs. aVughn—looks considerably less than her 35 years of age—is the grandmother of three children of her oldest child, Mrs. Zola Young, age 20. Our photo above shows Mrs. Vaughn, Junior, Jakie and Bobbie Young.

FINDS BUSINESS ON STABLE BASIS

How's business? Probably few questions in business life are more frequently ascked, and in equally fer instances will the emphasis placed in answering cover a broader diverstiy of factors. To one man good business means a high general level of profits prevailing throughout industry; to another, it means that securities and real estate are appreciating in value. Again, emphasis will be placed on an absence of business failures; on the presence of large crops and fair prices for the farmer; plentiful employment, steady or rising volume of industrial production—and this list might be continued.

The importance of all these factors readily can be admitted. Good business is a combination, to a greater or lesser extent, of each one of these. In any of their combinations, however, the idea of "balance" is of outstanding importance.

The soundest condition of good business will be that in which agriculture and industry are both prosperous. Furthermore, there will be a nicety of balance between the diferent industries so that there is reasonably full employment throufhout the country, and a group of wage earners with sufficient purchasing power to take from the markets the products—whether automobiles or safety razors—produced by industries which have so carefully guaged the size of their probable markets that, while always able to make deliveries, burdensome inventories are unknown.

A millennium? Possibly, and yet the years 1925 and 1926 stand out as more nearly approaching this idea than any for which existing records are available. During 1920, a year of rapidly declining business, the volume of industrial production, from highest to lowest points, varied nearly 30 per cent from the average scale of operations during the year.

In 1922, a year of steadily improving business, fluctuations again averaged approximately 30 per cent. The year 1923 was generally considered one of unusual prosperity, and the level of industrial production showed variations of but 11 per cent. In 1924 business conditions were favorable during the early months of the year, declined somewhat unexpectedly until a condition was reached that in many industries represented real depression during the summer and autumn months, and recovered equally rapidly toward the close of the year; fluctuations in this year while somewhat smaller than in either 1920 or 1922 were almost double those of the preceding year.

In 1925 and 1926, however, so even has been the general level of industrial production, that the total difference between output in the months of highest and lowest activity, has been but seven per cent. These figures are general averages for the country and it is obvious that fluctuations in individual industries for particular sections of the country will be somewhat greater.

Any manufacturer will readily grant the advantage of a manufacturing schedule which enables him to operate throughout the year on a fairly uniform level of production. His labor turnover is reduced to a maximum. His purchasing problems are simplified, and if his customers are also enjoying equally stable conditions, no serious problems of increasing inventories are confronting him. A year's production can be turned out with a smaller number of square feet of factory space and machines and with less working capital tied up than is required during periods of unstable business, where increasing and decreasing schedules of operation schedules of operation are likely to follow in quick succession.

Nothing pleases a man with a well-developed sense of humor so much as setting two chronic bores to boring each other.

Sunday and the Movies

BY CLARENCE TRUE WILSON
(FROM SPEECH IN WATERLOO IOWA)

"This is a movement to stop the commercializing of the Sabbath by the moving picture trust and the theatre corporations. It is only that and nothing more. It is not a move toward making people go to church or even to send children to Sunday School. People will spend their Sundays as they please as usual. It is not a union of church and state to make people moral, though the Arbuckle case is quite a revelation of how the movie business now in the hands of the lowest and vilest interests, can make people immoral, and will wherever it is not restricted by the decent element of our populatian through law. It is not even a restriction on any other business. It is the moving picture and the theatre that have already every afternoon and evening of every day in the week, and want all the nights and days, even the sacred days and nights, and propose to so utilize them as to obliterate all American distinctions and Christian sentiment about them that there shall be no Sabbath in America. The Continental Sunday is their aim which means no Sabbath at all.

"When our fathers planted our Christian civilization around Plymouth Rock, they set out the sturdy plants of an open Bible, a Christian home life, a free school and a free press, the ballot box and the Christian Sabbath. The growth of these trees has furnished us our national ideals and made our civilization. The integrity and the destiny of the Republic does not depend on money; our fathers did not have that, but they made our government. It does not depend on military prowess; but the foundation of our government was laid in the morality of the people.

"Our moral convictions grow out of our religious nature. The church is the school for the training of this side of your being, but the church without a Sabbath is a cripple. Don't you think if we let the degenerates who have taken over the control of the movie industry in New York and have dropped its standards 100 percent in the last three years, have six days and nights at our youth, they might give the home, the Sunday School and the church a chance at the souls of folks once a week on the Sabbath?

☐ "American citizens, irrespective of creed expect the churches to keep the moral life of the nation on a par with its financial prosperity and its intellectual advance. We ask in return the help of a sacred day for this work. 'The Sabbath was made for man'; we want him to have it as his right, a day of rest from required work; a day to enjoy change from grinding toil; a day for family life and pleasure; a day for the fields and the woods; a day that is different.

"What do the movies propose to do with the American Sabbath? Commercialize it, capitalize it, turn it into a secular day, a degrading day when people congregate to admire the Arbuckles, and Charlie Chaplins, the Pickfords, the types who practice consecutive polygamy by changing husbands over night and swap wives as we used to swap horses. The movies as now conducted are not Sunday institutions. It must fall into different hands before they are. The small group that bought up the liquor interest fifteen years ago and started the brewery-owned saloon with its brothel accompaniment, and its gambling hells, has transferred its interests to the movie film production; they are exceeding the speed limit in their rush to sex plays and general indecency. They see nothing but the dollar and think they can get it faster by appealing to the low and the vile. Let them make their money on secular days not invade our holy days; for Christ and human welfare ask for a seventh of our time to promote morality, religion, education in civic duties, Americanization, Christian ideals in public and private life.

"If these ideals do not convince you that the movie should be restricted from destroying our Sabbath, surely the pleas put up for the rights to do so should amuse you out of taking their arguments seriously. We are told that all Sabbath laws are unconstitutional, but the Second Article of the Constitution of the United States provides that the President shall have ten days to consider any bill, 'Sundays not counted.' So there is one distinguished citizen of the United States at least who is protected from Sunday work by the specific enactment of the Constitution of the Federal Government.

'Sundays excepted' is a phrase that has passed from the Federal Constitution into four-fifths of the State Constitutions and forever proclaims the Constitutionality of Sabbath laws in America.

" 'You can't make men moral by law,' was the old argument used against every restriction of the saloon, the brothel and the gambling hell. But in the old days of agitation against these evils we used to reply that a Christian nation ought not to seek to make its citizens immoral by law. Remember the movies are now exploited, with their holding of certain sections of the Constitution up to scorn, their advocacy of lawlessness, their ridicule for Protestant church and clergy, their lowering and loosening influence upon public thought and caricatures of American life, with the breed of animals they employ to symbolize their ideas, indicate that there ought to be one day at least held sacred from their pollution."

Report of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending May 14th, 1927

The County Seat, or at least a portion of it, was moved to Jonesville for a brief period Sunday afternoon, May 8th, while officers conducted a second clean up campaign in the town. Two Search Warrants were drawn up and executed and Vale Price and Orville Ostrander were arrested and have been charged with violating the Liquor Law. The evidence obtained appears to be sufficient, to warrant the action taken. Manufacture, sale, possession and transportation, the 4 important points in our Liquor Law, were apparently all violated in these cases.

Fidel Sanches, a Mexican, was arrested Sunday May 8th, for driving an auto without license plates. He was brought before Justice Aldrich and fined $20 and costs. Paid

Clare Grosbeck, who was charged with stealing chickens, plead guilty in Circuit Court and was put on probation. Clare must return to Ionia where he is serving time on another sentence.

Victor Fish, Alonzo and Edward Webster, late Hillsdale Co. liquor venders, plead guilty when arraigned in Circuit Court on Monday. Sentence was deferred until the Oct. term.

Clyde Hayden, who was charged with disposing of an auto without a title for same, plead guilty in Circuit Court and was placed on a year's probation.

John Keefus and Robert Simmonds, the young North Adams adventurers, were each put on probation for 2 years.

Fred Camp, late of Hillsdale was arrested in Jackson by the Sheriff's deputies on a Body Warrant (non payment of alimony). Fred was brought back to Hillsdale where he settled the matter to the satisfaction of all concerned, (except perhaps Fred himself) and he was released, Tim Losure, one of Hillsdale's former curbstone liquor brokers, plead guilty when brought befor the Circuit Judge on Tuesday. He was sentenced to 6 months in Jackson Prison.

"Gentleman" Geo. Metcalf, the well known bootlegger, fell still deeper into a streak of bad luck Tuesday, when a Circuit Court jury found him guilty of possessing selling and transporting by auto, intoxicating liquor. Geo. was sentenced to a recommended term of 1 year at Ionia, and his auto was confiscated.

Lester Min us, the Indiana bootlegger who was arrested in Camden several weeks ago, plead not guilty when arraigned on Monday in the Circuit Court. He was granted a trial, which took place Wednesday but during the case, Mingus changed his mind and also his plea to guilty. He was sentenced to Ionia for 8 months and also to pay the costs of prosecution, taxed at $75 Mingus to remain in prison until the costs were paid, but not to exceed one year.

Guy Bruno of Hillsdale plead guilty on Wednesday to violating the Liquor Law. Sentence was deferred till Oct. due to his wife's illness.

C. E. DeGeer, of Hudson, was arrested late Wednesday evening on M-24, between Hillsdale and Jonesville for speeding. He appeared before Justice Aldrich the next morning and was fined $20 and costs. He paid.

Roland Wilson, Monroe bootlegger who was arrested at the time of the raid on the Victor Fish place east of Moscow, plead not guilty upon being arraigned in Circuit Court. His trial took place Thursday and Friday and on Friday the jury found him guilty of possessing liquor. Sentenced was postponed for 20 days to give his attorney time to file a bill of exceptions to appeal the case.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail 10. Serving sentence 6. Awaiting trial 4. Total 10.

Col. Earl H. Kerr, Sheriff.

GRAND RAPIDS HOSPITAL OPENS MODERN ADDITION

Citizens Contribute $500,000 to Building Fund

The new $500,000 addition to St. Mary's hospital, Grand Rapids, was thrown open for public inspection in that city recently. The new building consists of seven stories and a ground floor and conforms in exterior design with the original five-story brick building. The combined buildings now have a capacity of 250 beds.

Some features of the addition are the built-in X-ray illuminators in the wall of emergency operating rooms, and in the regular surgical department, a detail which St. Mary's believes it is the first hospital in the country to use. The addition was erected on the Bacon plan, which requires one central kitchen and one linen storage room.

In the room of every patient is a utility compartment, with lavatory, ice watertap, wardrobe locker and all necessities for patient and nurse. Great savings in labor and time for both attendants and nurses are said to result from this plan.

LOW RATES for time payments on these cars

ANY FAMILY entitled to credit may buy a General Motors car and pay for it while using it, under the GMAC Plan.

When time payments first became an accepted form of car purchase, General Motors organized its own finance company, the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, to make sure that the sale of its cars on time would be in the buyer's interest and that the finance charges would be fair.

GMAC rates have always been low; and the last reduction has saved General Motors' customers more than $12,000,000.

The General Motors line includes "a car for every purse and purpose"— a suitable model for every income. You can buy it out of income, paying no more than the cash delivered price, plus only the low GMAC financing charge. And the whole transaction is so conducted as to keep your goodwill and satisfaction.

CLIP THE COUPON

USE THE GMAC PLAN to enjoy a new car now. Use it to get a better car for what you plan to spend. Have General Motors quality. Share in the economies of volume production. Look over the list of General Motors cars below. See which car suits your purse. Then check and mail the coupon. We will send you full information about that car and about the fair, low-cost GMAC Plan of paying for it out of income. Don't wait. Clip the coupon and mail it TODAY.

New Corn Borer Attachment

From Washington D. C. advices come to this office that a different device is now being tried out by the government for killing the corn borer larva. It consists of a burning apparatus on wheels close to the ground which is heated we suppose electrically to 1400 degrees Fahrenheit, and dragging this over the infested ground by means of a tractor is said to create so intense a heat as to burn all refuse and to kill every vestige of the borer. This is said to be a more expensive process and they do not tell us who has this device for sale but probably somebody is making these burners and selling them at bargain day prices. At present experts are in Europe seeking out a parasite which they claim is just delighted with corn borer steaks and its principal meals are corn borer chops. The expert will carefully select the little buggers so as not to mix the breeds. There is a certain kind of parasite so they claim which is very detrimental to crops and will eat a peck of rye in a short time from a farmers field, providing it cannot get the corn borer steaks. We earnestly hope no rye consumers of any kind will be imported, for the world already knows we have far too many consumers of rye in the liquid state now.

Gathering Them In

The other day a stranger in our county remarked he judged by the newspaper report that few if any "bootleggers" and "hooch makers" could be left in Hillsdale county by this time. He had seen so many reports of fellows convicted and sent to their reward in the hoosegow he could not believe his eyes if a man should offer him a drink. Well, Brother, you are jolly right. These two classes of human riff-raff have been jumping mighty lively since the last administration in Hillsdale courts got into action. We might say that conditions never have been so ideal in this county since the advent of swaddling clothes. With the right men on the bench, the right bunch in the jury box, the right man in the Sheriff department, we are certainly doing business the way it should have been done five years ago, but of course you know it wasn't. "Gentleman" George Metcalf, Mingus, Groesbeck, Wilson, and a host of other delinquents have come on the stage, danced their little jig, and got an official pass to the bootlegger's boarding houses at Ionia and Jackson. They have their dose ladled out, and a lot more are going down the long road to Tipperary with them soon. Jonesville has been slightly scoured but is not yet clean—North Adams will eventually come in for its little bit some day soon—in fact it makes little difference where the Sheriff finds 'em. He is just polishing 'em one by one.

One by one the groggy boys are coming in
Some with jugs, some with jags and some with "tin"
White Mule and Canned Heat, are flowing free
But he who dances must pay the fiddler for his spree.

It is claimed at Washington in the Forestry department that it is exceedingly bad practice for farmers to allow stock the full swing of the woodlot for pasturage as their roaming through the area breaks down young saplings, and tramples underfoot young shoots of various deciduous trees also the cattle and sheep will bark the younger trees which has a tendency to retard their growth seriously. Care for your woodlot as you would your garden—because the day is not far away when ten acres of virgin growth timber will be more precious than the balance of your farm.

Fine Buildings Mark College Anniversary

M. S. C., the oldest land grant agricultural college in the world celebrated its seventieth birthday by dedicating a new chemistry building and an armory.

Members of the first class to enter the College were present when the college paused for a day to commemorate the accomplishments of the past seventy years and to point out goals to be reached in the future.

The first students at the College found three rude buildings among the stumps of a recently cleared space in the woods, the men from this class who were present at the seventh anniversary found thousands of students upon a campus which the generosity of Michigan's citizens has made one of the best equipped and the most beautiful in the world.

Seventy years ago the students experimented with a so-called electrical machine which was regarded with a degree of awe when it generated an electric spark. It was believed that this generated energy might sometime become of use to humanity. At the dedication, the same power activating the radio at WKAR made the voices of the speakers audible to unseen thousands,

Through the years which have seen the discarding of the home made plow, the scythe, the flail, and the ox yoke, M. S. C. has led in the investigation and the recommendation of advanced agricultural practices. The College is now ready to enter an era of still greater service to Michigan farmers.

Voluntary abstinence from food as a method for curing human ills is as ancient as Hipprocrates, the 'father of medicine,' who lived three hundred years and more before the Christian Era. Among the lower animals it is as old, probably as time itself. Instinctively animals choose fasting as a remedy for their ailments. Every naturalist knows that wild creatures will seek some sheltered retreat, there to remain without food until sickness has passed. Even those of us who are unfamiliar with nature have noted the same characteristic in domestic animals. Yet, knowing these things, we invariably stuff our bodies with such quantities of badly chosen food as to make us torpid, sluggish and disagreeable. We overtax our digestive organs to please our sense of taste. We choose edibles for the palate, not for the stomach. We eat a variety and a class of food that would bring an ache to a sausage grinder. And then we wonder why we feel bad! Perhaps it would be better for all of us if we prepared for each day's meals by reciting a little verse which Rudyard Kipling called 'Primitive Theology.'

High School Debates

Ann Arbor High School's affirmative debating team, composed of Thomas Doyle, Roland Stranger, and Franklin Forsythe, defeated Albion High School's negative debating team composed of Robert McCulloch, Milton Williams and Harold Spiegel in the Tenth Annual State Championship Debate of the Michigan High School Debating League which was held at the University of Michigan, Wednesday evening, May 11th.

This final debate which was the last of 500 high school debates held under the auspices of the Michigan High School Debating League during the present year, was one of the finest exhibitions of high school debating and forensic ability that has ever been witnessed in Hill Auditorium. Ann Arbor and Albion came into the final debate of the year as the last two surviving schools of the 235 schools of the State that started out in the state race in November, winning their right to participate in the State Championship Debate by almost perfect records.

The judges of the debate, Dr. Charles McKenny, President of Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti; Stuart Perry, Editor of the Adrian Telegram, Adrian; and Merlin Wiley, Ex-Attorney General of the state of Michigan, voted unanimously in favor of the speakers representing Ann Arbor High School, who were awarded the University of Michigan Extension Division Trophy Cup for the first honors in the State Championship Debate. The second honor cup, awarded by the University of Michigan Extension Division, went to the Albion team.

The audience attending this debate, over 4,000 people, was the largest audience that ever attended a Championship Debate of the League. Seventy-five high schools of the State sent their debating teams to Ann Arbor to witness the debate. Before the debate started, the Albion and Ann Arbor High School bands, followed by their rooters, paraded around the Universary Campus playing their high school songs.

Historic Spot To Go the Route to Commercialism

Old Fort Wayne in West Detroit, historic training grounds for the soldiers of many wars—especially prominent during the Rebellion of 1861-65 and the Mexican war, is about to surrender—not to a hostile foe, but to the ceaseless march of commercialism. For the past three years the United States Government has been abandoning the fort and its historic associations, believing its usefulness ended. For eighty-two years this strong-hold alongside the Detroit River on the high bluffs of west Fort street has frowned on the river traffic, and if it could speak might give some interesting narratives. It is surrounded by a high stone wall and contains several hundred acres of very valuable real estate at the present time. We believe the Spanish War saw its last service for the Government, since which time it has been gradually deteriorating and the ancient guns what few remained have been taken away. On June 30, this acreage will be offered by the United States Government at public auction, the ramparts will be leveled, the ditches filled and a new real estate subdivision will be added to the city. No doubt realtors have by constant agitation brought about this deal, but there is no reason for retaining so much vacant land in such a promising part of Detroit.

Another Mild Winter

A remarkable series of mild winters in the United States has occurred since the severe winter of 1917-18, according to the Weather Bureau of the Unites States Department of Agriculture. The winter of 1926-27, just closed, has been in general, and over most of the country, one of the mildest of the long series. Other outstandingly mild winters were those of 1920-21 and 1923-24.

A few small areas along the northern border of the country were slightly colder this year than usual but in all other regions the winter was warmer than normal, and decidedly so in the South and Southeast, temperatures ranging from 3 to 6 above normal. As result of the mild weather in the South, vegetation there at the end of February was abnormally advanced, with early fruit trees in full bloom and peach buds showing color as far north as the southern Ohio Valley.

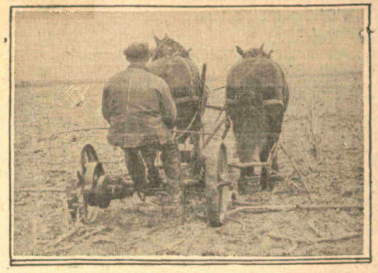
In comparatively recent years zero weather has been experienced as far south as the east Gulf coast, but this year such low temperatures did not extend farther south generally than Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Missouri. No previous low records were broken anywhere in the country, but the maxima equalled or exceeded the previous high record at many stations. There was more than the usual amount of snowfall in the Northeast from the Lake region eastward and south to Pennsylvania, but otherwise, east of the Rocky Mountains there was generally less than the usual fall of snow.

Interesting in comparison is the report from the South Hemisphere where summer time occurs during our winter. In South America, especially Argentina, the outstanding weather feature was the unusual and persistent warmth, averaging 3 above normal, while in Australia the season was generally mild and warm, although with no harmful temperatures, and accompanied by unusually favorable rains.

No. You don't know how. Well Let's see we are told that the very best that has been done in this country, even in Michigan the natural home of the spud, is about 113 bushels per acre. It seems we are "pikers" when it comes to producing the worth while crops of this succulent vegetable. In California it is reported under forced conditions that one chink raised an average of 1,000 bushels per acre from nine acres. He knows how the trick is done. We don't. Over in Old England where they have been cropping the rich soils since the days of Cromwell, they can beat us yet. They say the Englishmen can produce 200 bushels per acre and are doing it right along year after year. How do they do it? Well, there is a way, and you can find out if you send to Washington for a Bulletin on potato culture which is furnished free.

Barnyards Cleaned Up

Corn stalks in barnyards and feed lots as well as in fields are being cleaned up to get the last borer.



Mowing machines are used to cut corn stalks and high stubble to insure clean plowing to control the corn borer in infested counties.

CREMATING THE CORN BORER

Making it hot for the European borer. First corner the pest in piles of corn stalks like this, read the recipe of the farmer in the borer-infested area and and then roast him alive.

PUTTING THE BORER UNDER

Farmers in corn borer infested counties are putting the borer well under with outfits like this. Cutting, raking, and burning the stalks makes cleaner plowing possible.

Tea-table Talk

Mrs. A. is having tea with Mrs. W., and they find the O. P. A. Club must have a blue book of By-laws and the U-Go I-Went Class of are needing some programs for their semi-annual Barbecue and Dance.

Says Mrs. A. to Mrs. W: "I am all mixed up in my dates. Had so much to look after this month that I simply forgot to make out the program for our big dance. The fact is, with the S. O. B. Club, The Rolling Pin bunch, and the Instigator's I have been completedy done up."

"Right you are" said Mrs. W. "The printer down at the Advocate was asking me to-day what you were about. He says he must get your copy tomorrow morning in order to deliver the programs in time for the dance." Mrs. A. slammed the percolator, gulped a cup-full of tea and made a bee line for her desk. "I'll do it now!"

ABANDONS LAKE TO PAINT SHIPS

Sailorman to the inmost fibre of him, Captain Howard Milton Hartman of Detroit has turned artist after following the seas for nearly 40 years.

He has turned from sailing ships to painting ships, because his sailorman's soul has revolted at the "awful unrigged vessels" that he has seen pictured within the last two years to satisfy the present public craze for marine paintings.

Precision is one of the first laws a sailor learns, and the strain put upon such an orderly person's sense of the fitness of things caused Captain Hartman to indulge in an indignant outburst against the pictures hebegan to see crowding art galleries about two years ago.

"Those awful unrigged vessels!" he stormed. "The models were all wrong, they weren't to scale, they hal no proportion. I saw the windows of art shops full of them. I went home and said to my wife that I could paint better vessels than such chaps could, who had never felt the pounding of the propellor under their heels. 'If the people want ships, I'll paint ships for them,' I told her. 'Ships that a man could sail, if he would.'"

For he has served a proud mistress for many years, this sturdy little man. The sea owns no weakling sons, and they allow no trifling with her honor. That any artist chap, who might very well earn his wine and cakes with a clever brush, should presume to compass the immensity of her solitudes within a pigmy frame, such a challenge to the loyalty of a captain of the high seas could not be ignored.

GROUP ON 3,500 MILE GEOLOGY STUDY TOUR

In order to study geology first hand, by viewing stratographic formations in Michigan and bordering states, 16 advanced geology students at Michigan State College, embarked on the first of a series of four field trips in the course of which they will cover more than 3,500 miles.

The first journey of the term carries the students to the Saginaw lake plain, then to Saginaw, to visit oil wells. From Saginaw they will follow the short up through the Thumb district to Bayport , Caseville, and finally to Point-Aux-Barques, where they will study erosional shore features of the lakes. Next the travelers will go to Grindstone City, where they plan to observe the limestone and sandstone quarries.

5 CITIES CONSUME OVER HALF OF U. S. STRAWBERRY CROP

Five cities—New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit—annually consume more than half of all the strawberries shipped by rail in the United States, according to statistics compiled by the United States Zureau of Agfiricultural Economics.

As consumers of berries, these five cities ranked in the order named. About 1,000 carloads of strawberries are unloaded each season in Detroit. Also thousands of truckloads are hauled direct from the farms to the municipal markets or to the commission houses.

Government statistics show that the bulk of Michigan's crop is distributed by motor trucks. Virtually the entire crop ins moved by trucks. Only 155 cars o fstrawberries were shipped by rail last year against 408 cars three years ago when the crop was in about the same volume. Most of the rail shipments are from other states.

Rapid industrial growth of lower Michigan, has favored the marketing of strawberries by motor trucks virtually the entire crop being distributed in home markets of Michigan cities.

Part of the decrease in car lot shipments can be attributed to the larger packs by canning factories.

SECRET POISONER OF PAW PAW DOGS HUNTED

A dog's life is not so pleasant in Paw Paw. Nor is it safe. More than a score of dogs, some of them valuable members of canine aristocracy, have qeen killed by eating poisoned meat that authorities believe has been scattered about the village by someone with a grudge against dogs in general.

Sheriff Glenn Warner has posted a reward of $100 for information that will enable him to establish the identity of the person behind the alleged poison plot, and the entire community is wrought up over the situation. Dogs go about effectively muzzled, else remain tied up at home, and deputies from the sheriff's department are keeping night vigils about the town in an effort to catch the dog-hater in the act of distributing poisoned meat.

POISONED SUMACH AWAITS UNWARY IN STATE WOODS

The glory of outings in the leafy limb-thatched cathedrals of Michigan forests, in the cool, mossy velvet depths of sylvan shades or the wild tangled puzzle work of thicketed swales, may be marred by resulting contacts with some of nature's vegetable life, if one is not at first familiar with some of the shrubs and vines that show in no uncertain manner their resentment of man's presence.

Second to that of poison ivy in Michigan, stands the poison sumach, member of a beautiful family, whose clean cut pinnated leaves in tuffs, swaying about a great thyrsoid panicle of bright red, are particularly attractive; and, whose brilliancy of coloring in autumn, flings magnificent beauty over seared knoll, sun browned plain or soggy bog.

Sometimes called the Staghorn, owing to a fancied likeness between the forking branches and a stag's horn, the sumach, in its various varieties, some 70 in number, is a favorite tree or shrub to those who see beauty in forest tapestries of divine weaving.

TEST OF GOOD EGGS

Do you know a good egg before you eat it? The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a poster explaining the important qualities of a good egg and how to judge it by the condition of the yolk and the white. When the egg is broken out for cooking or baking purposes, the white should be clear and divided into two portions, the thicker and firmer part, which tends to stand up well in a fresh egg, and immediately surrounds the yolk, and the other part which is a little thinner and tends to flatten out into the dish. The yolk itself should be of uniform yellow color throughout and should stand up well.

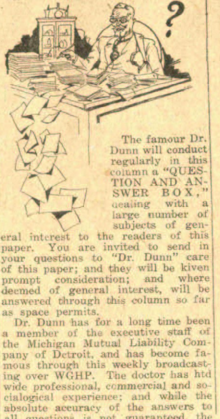
CHINESE SMUGGLE PLOT UNCOVERED AT MONROE

Uncovery of what is believed to be a plot to smuggle Orientals into the United States by means of airplanes, was made by officers at Monroe when they arrested a Chinese in the woods and found a wrecked airplane nearby.

The Chinese said he lived at 24 Mott street, New York city, and admitted having been in San Francisco. Officers say the Oriental was hiding in the brush and was seen alighting from the plane by farmers.

The airplane carried no name. The propellor was broken whenthe plane struck by soft ground and turned over.

DO YOU KNOW ?



The famour Dr. Dunn will conduct regularly in this column a "QUESTION AND ANSWER BOX," dealing with a large number of subjects of general interest to the readers of this paper. You are invited to send in your questions to "Dr. Dunn" care of this paper; and they will be kiven prompt consideration; and where deemed of general interest, will be answered through this column so far as space permits.

Dr. Dunn has for a long time been a member of the executive staff of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company of Detroit, and has become famous through this weekly broadcasting over WGHP. The doctor has htd wide professional, commercial and socialogical experience; and while the absolute accuracy of the answers to all questions is not guaranteed, the most authentic sources of information will be the basis of all replies.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn:
Please describe the Vitaphone.

A. The Vitaphone is one of the marvels of this modern age. Through a combination of the principles involved in radio reception, photography, moving picture projection, and the phonograph—there appears upon the screen the usual type of motion picture, but accimpanying it and apparently emanating from the instrument or from the person on the screen, are the realistic sounds and voices naturally to be expected, and in sufficient volume and with sufficient naturalness to defy nature. The sounds are so perfectly synchronized with the motions of the picture that the words fall from the lips of the singer or the sounds emanate from the piano with the accompanying movements of the lips or the hands, just as in life. No person shall fail to witness this mechanical miracle.

Dear Dr. Dunn:
Q. Is co-operative marketing successful in the United States?

A. Like every other human endeavor there are examples of co-operative marketing which have been failures and others which have been tremendously successful. Pernaps the most successful are those which have been operating in the fruit districts of the West for many years; and through these co-operative marketing companies and harticulturists have profited hugely. Just as in mutual insurance, the principle involved is "One For All and All for One." The individual cannot hope to cope with competition as can a well organized group; and so like the strong mutual life and mutual casualty insurance companies, which fundamentally are co-operative concerns, a well managed and honestly conducted co-operative marketing company should succeed, and be productive of much benefit.

Dear Dr. Dunn:
Q. Who organized mutual insurance in the United States?

A. The organization of the Philadelphia Contributionship on April 13, 1752, is generall attributed to Benjamin Franklin, the man of marvelous mentality and patriotism. Franklin undoubtedly conceived the idea and was a member of the directorate of that company, which was a fire insurance company and which has continued until the present day, thus proving the soundness of its foundation and the soundness of the mutual principles involved. Because all other mutual companies now in existence have been patterned after this cornerstone of mutual insurance, Benjamin Franklin is generally regarded as their "Patron Saint."

Dear Dr. Dunn:
Q. How often should abtomobile brakes be tested?

A. Automobile brakes should be tested each day. Fefore going half a block from the garage make a service test by throwing out the clutch and applying the brakes. If possible, select a dry spot for making the test Under no circumstances should the car be taken farther if the brakes are not operating properly; drive back to the garage and see that the faults are corrected before driving out again.

Please address all inquiries, criticisms and comments to 'Doctor Dunn' care of this paper, or the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, General Necessities Building, Detroit.

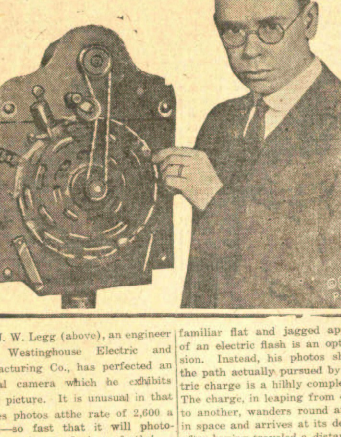
HANCOCK SEEKS FAIR FOR HOUGHTON COUNTY

If plans of Aancock business men meet with success, the Houghton county fair will be held in their city this year. A concerted campaign has been started by the Hancock Chamber of Commerce, since the Amphildrome skating rink, home of the county fair, in Houghton, was destroyed by fire several weeks ago.

PHOTOGRAPHERS PLAN SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING

Forty members of the Michigan Photographers' society, listing some nationally noted craftsmen, will assemble at Traverse City for their fall semi-annual meeting, according to President George Imes, of Lansing. The picture takers will meet October 2, it is planned, and the convention will last three days.

Electric Flashes Photographed With High-Speed Camera



Mr. J. W. Legg (above), an engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., has perfected an unusual camera which he exhibits in this picture. It is unusual in that it takes photos atthe rate of 2,600 a second—so fast that it will photograph an electric flash perfectly!

With this invention, Mr. Legg has demonstrated the fact that the familiar flat and jagged appearance of an electric flash is an optical illusion. Instead, his photos show that the path actually pursued by an electric charge is a hilhly complex spiral. The charge, in leaping from one point to another, wanders round and round in space and arrives at its destination after having traveled a distance many times greater than the straight line between the two points.

LYMNAEIDAE ARE MYRIADS IN STATE

What art the lymnaeidae?

It is doubtful if one person out of 50 can answer this question. Yet, lymnaeas are among the most numerous of living things found in Michigan. They inhabit many of the inland lakes of the state, and thousands of bathers and anglers have witnessed their queer antics without knowing them by any other name than snails.

Michigan shell collectors and amateur conchologists tell of seeing these little creatures traveling through the water on invisible threads, which they spin in a manner similar to that of the spider weaving its web. It is not unusual to see the lymnaeas hang for long periods from the surface of the water by these invisible threads. The thread is anchored to the surface by a minute concavity at the upper end, which acts like a small float.

The lymnaeidae are compelled to make periodic visits to the surface to inspire oxygen. It is a favorite habit with them to float just under the surface, or crawl about on its under side, perhaps in pursuit of tiny vegetable

428 Distinct Species

These creatures often fight with the ferocity of jungle beasts when their threads become crossed; or one may attach itself to the thread of another and invite certain combat.

Four hundred and twenty-eight species and hundreds of varieties of mollusks inhabit the lands and waters of the state, offering a unique field for research; but less than a dozen persons of Michigan's five million population are interested in them or know anything about them. Miss Mina L. Winslow, curator of Mollusks at the University of Michigan, has received little help from amateurs in adding to the collections at the museum. At one time, she says, there was a center of interest in mollusks at Grand Rapids, where a group of enthusiastic amateurs collected and studied the local shell fauna.

EATON COUNTY IS BEING SEARCHED FOR OIL, GAS

Rumors that oil or gas mal be found in southern Michigan are gaining support in the fact that several eastern companies have obtained leases from Eaton county farmers. Paul Z. Lauten, representing the Lisbon Oil and Gas Company, Wittmer Oil and Gas Properties, of Pittsburgh, is now in Eaton County investigating oil prospects, and has obtained leases from a number of farmers along Battle Creek river and tributaries.

MAIL COURSE OPENED BY MICHIGAN STATE COLLEGE

"How to manage family and home" is the unofficial title of a new home economics course which will be distributed by mail to all who apply, it was announced at the office of continuing education, which is in charge of the correspondence courses conducted by Michigan State College.

This course in the "Modern Family" and a supplementary course in "Household Administration," will be available June 1, according to plans of the department. Another home economics course, dealing with principles of nutrition and dietetics, also is to be offered by the college as part of the "continuing education" program.

RECORD SYRUP TREES PLANTED HALF CENTURY

Some 50 years ago the father of Duncan McCullum planted a row of hard mapjle trees in front of his farm south of Hesperia, in Oceana county. Now the trees have reached maturity, and 30 of the best roadside maples were tapped by Mr. McCallum with most astonishing results.

The 30 trees tapped produced more than 50 gallons o fthe finest golden maple syrup. This i san average of more than one and a half gallons to the tree, or nearly threetimes the average yield of forest trees of the same size and age.

Growing in the open they seem to flow better than the more shaded forest trees. A deep, wide root system, supporting a huge crown, calls for a rapid and copious flow of lifegiving sap. Withh maple syrup selling for $3 a gallon, this strip of roadside trees produces a larger net return than any similar area on the farm.

PRISONER OF CZAR FOR FOR 41 YEARS FORGOTTEN

A pioneer of the former Tzar Nicholas II who spent 41 years in solitary exile on the Island of Sakhalin, including 10 unnecessary years because he was so isolated that he did not know the Tzar had been overthrown, has just been found by the historical research bureau of the communist party. His name is Bugaiski. With 28 others, he was sentenced to hard labor and exile in solitary confinement for life in 1885, after a trial for political offences against the Tzar. He was 19 years old at that time.

EAGLE ABSENT 2 YEARS RETURNS TO OLD HOME

After an absence of two years the monarch of the air zones above Sugar Island, a large bald eagle, returned to his former home the other day so settle down for the summer.

The familiar sight of the feathered king soaring over the rapids of the St. Mary's River at evening has been missed for the last two years. It was believed that he had died or found himself too old to make his annual summer visit to northern Michigan.

But through the mists of dawn he can today be seen in his old haunts. He came to rest at the old ferry dock two weeks earlier than he had ever come bfore.

Th eagle makes his home on Sugar Island. With the exception of the last two years he has been a steady visitor for the last 10 years.

BOYS GIRD FOR ALASKA JAUNT

Mountainous Alaskan glaciers to shin up and down, primeval forests to roam, thousands of miles of land and ocean travel in the great narthwest away from the htat of the midsummer sun—that is the adventure that has captured the imagination of half a hnudred boys of Detroit and other cities this summer.

Having earned in various ways at least a sizeable part of the cost of their tour of exploration, under guidance of George E. Buchanan, millionaire fuel dealer of Detroit, the boys' plans for the fifth annual expedition of the "On to Alaska" group are maturing rapidly and the date of departure from Detroit soon will be set. Altogether there are more than 90 lads from Michigan and a score of states and Canadian provinces striving to qualify for the trip. That this year's quota of 50 will be quickly filled is certain.

In the years that have elapsed since 1923, Mr. Buchanan has sponsored Alaskan tours for 200 boys, divided in groups of 50 yearly—the lads ranging in years from 10 to 10.

Built on the cornerstone of self-reliance, the "On to Alaska" venture has become one of the most ambitious brought within reach of American boyhood. His own experience as a lad in Chatham, Ont., when his yearning to see beyond the small town horizon was held in leash by the modest limits of the family purse until a kindly old Scotch shipmaster helped him to solve the priblem, was the inspiration for Mr. Buchanan's project. His own boyhood travels, paid for as he was able to earn the money with the encouragement of his helpful friend, were never to be forgotten. Through his bachelor years Mr. Buchanan has continued his interest in travel and also his intense interest in boys.

Gentlemen:—

On Friday, April 15th at 7:15 A. M., your bus No. 725 struck and practically demolished my Chevrolet Sedan.

At 12:15 P. M. the same day your Insurance Company, the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, delivered to me a car of the same model in perfect mechanical condition to replace the car wrecked but five hours previously.

The entire transaction was handled with such expediency and courtesy as to deserve unusual commendation and to earn my sincere appreciation.

I congratulate you in having your insurance in an organization that will so efficiently foster the good will of the public.

Faithfully yours,

The Sign of The Four

By A. CONAN DOYLE

"'I was still pondering over the matter, when, looking up, I saw my servant, Lal Chowdar, in the doorway. He stole in, and bolted the door behind him. "Do not fear, sahib," he said. "No one need know that you have killed him. Let us hide him away, and who is the wiser?" "I did not kill him," said I. Lal Chowdar shook his head, and smiled, "I heard it all, sahib," said he. "I heard you quarrel, and I heard the blow. But my lips are sealed. All are asleep in the house. Let us put him away together." That was enough to decide me. If my own servant could not believe my innocence, how could I hope to make it good before twelve foolish tradesmen in a jury-box? Lal Chowdar and I disposed of the body that night, and within a few days the London papers were full of the mysterious disappearance of Captain Morstan. You will see from what I say that I can hardly be blamed in the matter. My fault lies in the fact that we concealed, not only the body, but also the treasure, and that I have clung to Morstan's share as well as to my own. I wish you, therefore, to make restitution. Put your ears down to my mouth. The treasure is hidden in—' At this instant a horrible change came over his expression; his eyes stared wildly, his jaw dropped, and he yelled, in a voice which I can never forget, 'Keep him out! For Christ's sake, keep him out!' We both stared round at the window behind us upon which his gaze was fixed. A face was looking in at us out of the darkness. We could see the whitening of the nose where it was pressed against the glass. It was a bearded, hairy face, with wild, curel eyes and an expression of concentrated malevolence. My brother and I rushed toward the window, but the man was gone. When we returned to my father, his head had dropped and his pulse had ceased to beat.

"We searched the garden that night, but found no sign of the intruder, save that just under the window a single footmark was visible in the oower-bed. But for that one trace, we might have thought that our imagination had conjudel up that wild, fierce face. We soon, however, had another and a more striking proof that there were secret agencies at work all around us. The window of my father's room was found open in the morning, his cupboards and boxes had been rifled, and upon his chest was fixed a torn piece of paper with the words, "The Sign of the Four' scrawled across it. What the phrase meant, or who our secret visitor may have been, we never knew. As far as we can judge, none of my father's property had been actually stolen, though everything had been turned out. My brother and I naturally assiciated this peculiar incident with the fear which haunted my father during his life; but it is still a complete mystery to us."

The little man stopped to relight his hookah and puffed thoughtfully for a few moments. We had all sat absorbed, listening tod hos extraordinary narrative. At the short account of her father's death Miss Morstan had turned deadly white, and for a moment I feared that she was about to faint. She rallied, however, on drinking a glass of water which I quietly poured out for her from a Venetian carafe upon the side table. Sherlock Holmes leaned back in his chair with an abstracted expression and the lids drawn over his glittering eyes. As I glanced at him I could not but think how on that very day he had complained bitterly if thet commonplaceness of life. Here, at least, was a problem which would tax his sagacity to the utmost. Mrfl Thaddeus Sholto looked from one to the other of us with an obvious pride at the effect which his stry had produced, and then continued between the puffs o fhis overgrown pipe.

"My brother and I," said he, "were, as you may imagine, much excited as to the treasure which my father had spoken of. For weeks and for months we dug and delved in every part of the garden, without discovering its whereabouts. It was maddening to think that the hiding-place was on his very lips at the moment that he died. We could judge the splendor of the missing riches by the chaplet which he had taken out. Over this chaplet my brother Bartholomew and I had some little discussion. The pearls were evidently of great value, and he was averse to part with them, for, between friends, my brother was himself a little inclined to my father's fault. He thought, too, that if we parted with the chaplet it might give rise to gossip, and finally bring us into trouble. It was all that I could do to persuade him to let me find out Miss Morstan's address and send her a detacvhed pearl at fixed intervals, so that, at least, she might never feel destitute."

"It was a kindly thought," said our companion, earnestly. "It was extremely good of you."

The little man waved his hand deprecatingly. "We were your trustees," he said. "That was the view which I took of it, though brother Bartholomew could not altogether see it in that light. Wehad plenty of money ourselves. I desired no more. Besides, it would have been such bad taste to have treated a young lady in so scurvy a fashion. 'e mauvais gout mene au crime.' The French have a very neat way of puttinng these things. Our difference of opinion on this subject went so farthat I thought it best to set up rooms for myself; so I left Pondicherry Lodge, taking the old khitmutgar and Williams with me. Yesterday, however, I learned that an event of extreme importance has occurred. The treasure has been discovered. I instantly communicated with Miss Morstan, and it only remains for us to drive out to Norwood and demand our share. I explained my views last night to brother Bartholomew; so we shall be expected, if not welcome visitors."

Mr. Thaddeus Shalto ceased, and sat twitching on his luxurious settee. We all remained silent, with our thoughts upon the new development which the mysterious business had taken. Holmes was the first to spring to his feet.

"You have done well, sir, from first to last," said he. "It is possible that we may be able to make you some small return by throwing some light upon that which is still dark to yuo. But, as Miss Morstan remarked just now, it is late and we had best put the matter through without delay."

Our new acquaintance very deliberately coiled up the tube of his hookah, and produced from behind a curtain a very long befrogged top-coat with astrican collar and cuffs. This he buttoned tightly up, in spite of the extreme closeness of the night, and finished his attire by putting on a rabbit-skin cap with hanging lappets which covered the ears, so that no part of him was visible save his mobile and peaky face. "My health is somewhat fragle," he remarked, as he led the way down the passage. "I am compelled to be a valetudinarian."

Our cab was awaiting us outside, and our programme was evidently prearranged, for the driver started off at once at a rapid pace. Thadeus Shalto talked incessantly int voice which rose high above the rattle of the wheels.

"Bartholomew is a clever fellow," said he. "How do you think he found out where the treasure was? He had come to the conclusion that it was womewhat indoors; so he worked out all the cubic space of the house, and made meausurements everywhere, so that not one inch should be unaccounted for. Among other things, he found that the height of the building was seventy-four feet, but on adding together the heights of all the separate rooms, and making every allowance for the space between, which he ascertained by borings, he could not bring the total to more than seventy feet. There was four feet unaccounted for. These could only be at the top of the building. He knocked a hole, therefore, in the lath and plaster ceiling of the highest room, anr there, sure enough, he came upon another little garret above it, which had been sealed up and was known to no one. In the center stood the treasure-chest, resting upon two rafters. He lowered it through the hole, and there it lies. He computes the value of the jewels at not less than half a million sterlings."

At the mention of his gigentic sum we all started at one another open-eyed. Miss Morstan, could we secure her rights would change from a needy governoress to the richest heiress in England. Surely it was the place of a loyal friend to rejoice at such news; yet I am ashamed to say that selfishness took me by the soul, and that my heart turned as heavy as lead within me. I stammered out some few halting words of congratulation, and then sat downcast, with my head drooped, deaf to the babble of our new acquaintance. He was clearly a confirmed hypochondriac, and I was dreamily conscious that he was pouring forth interminable trains of symptoms, and imploring information as to the composition and action of innumerable quack nostrums, some of which he bore about in a leather case in his pocket. I trust that he may not remember any of the answers which I gave him that night. Holmes declares that he overheard me caution him against the great danger of taking more than two drops of castor oil, while I recommended strychnine in large doses as a sedative. However that may be, I was certainly relieved when our cab pulled up with a jerk and the coachman sprung down to open the door.

"This, Miss Morstan, is Pondicherry Lodge," said Mr. Thaddeus Sholto, as he handed her out.

CHAPTER V

The Tragedy of Pondicherry Lodge

It was nearly eleven o'clock when we reached this final stage of our night's adventures. We had left the dampj for of the great city behind us, and the night was fairly fine. A warm wind blew from the westward, and heavy clougs moved slowly across the sky, with half a moon peeping occasionally through the rifts. It was clear enough to see for some distance, but Thaddeus Sholto took down one of the side-lamps from the carriage to give us a better light upon our way.

Pondicherry Lodge stood in its own grounds, and was girt round with a very high stone wall topped with broken glass. A single narrow, iron-clamped door formed the only means of entrance. On this our guide knocked with a peculiar postman-like rat-tat.

"Who is there?" cried a gruff voice from within.

"It is I, McMurdo. You surely know my knock by this time."

There was a grumbling sound, and a clanking and jarring of keys. The door swung heavily back, and a short, deep-chested man stood in the opening, with the yellow light of the lantern shining upon his portruded face and twinkling, distrustful eyes.

"That you, Mr. Thaddeus? But who are the others? I had no others about them from the master."

"No, McCurdo? You surprise me! I told my brother last night that I should bring some friends."

"He hasn't been out o' his room today, Mr. Hhaddeus, and I hace no orders. You know very well that I must stick to regulations. I can let you in; but your friends they must stop where they are."

This was an unexpected obstacle! Thaddeus Sholto looked about him in perplexed and helpless manner. "This is too bad of you, McMurdo!" he said. "If I guarantee them, that is enough for you. There is a young lady, too. She cannot wait on the public road at this hour."

"Very sorry, Mr. Thaddeus," said the porter, inexorably. "Folk may be friends o' yours, and yet no friends o' the master's. He pays me well to do my duty, and my dut I'll do. I don't know none o' your friends."

"Oh, yes, you do, McMurdo," cried Sherlock Holmes, genially. "I don't think you can have forgotten me. Don't you remember the amateur who fought three rounds with you at Alison's rooms on the night of your benefit four years back?"

"Not Mr. Sherlock Holmes?" roared the prizefighter. "God's truth! how could I have mistook you? If, instead o' standin' there so quiet, you had just stepped up and given me the cross-hit of yours under the jaw, I'd ha' known you without a question. Ah, you're one that has wasted your gifts, you have! You might have aimed high, if you had joinned the fancy."

"You see, Watson, if all else fails me I have still one of the scientific professions open to me," said Holmes, laughing. "Our friend won't keep us out in the cold now, I am sure."

"In you come, sir; in you come—you and your friends," he answered. "Very sorry, Mr. Thaddeus, but orders are very strict. Had to be certain of your friends before I let them in."

Inside a gravel path wound through desolate grounds to a huge clump of a house, square and prosaic, all plunged in shadow save where a moonbeam struck one corner and glimmered in a garret window. The vast size of the building, with its gloom and its deathly silence, struck a chill to the heart. Even Thaddeus Sholto seemed ill at ease, and the lantern quivered and rattled in his hand.

"I cannot understand it," he said. "There must be some mistake. I distinctly told Bartholomew that we should be here, and yet there is no light in his window. I do not know what to make of it."

"Does he always guard the premises in this way?" asked Holmes.

"Yes; he has followed my father's custom. He was the favorite son, you know, and I sometimes think that my father may have told him more than he ever told me. That is Bartholomew's window up there where the moonshine strikes. It is quite bright, but there is no light from within, I think."

"None," said Holmes. "But I see the glint of a light in that little window beside the door."

"Ah, that is the housekeeper's room. That is where old Mrs. Bernstone sits. She can tell us all about it. But perhaps you would not mind waiting here for a minute or two, for if we all go in together, and she has had no word of our coming, she may be alarmed. But hush! what is that?"

He held up the lantern, and his hand shook until the circles of light flickered and wavered all around us. Miss Morstan seized my wrist, and we all stood with thumping hearts, straining our ears. From the great black house there sounded through the silent night the saddest and most pitiful of sounds—the shrill, broken whimpering of a frightened woman.

"It is Mrs. Bernstone," said Sholto. "She is the only woman in the house. Wait here. I shall be back in a moment." He hurried for the door, and knocked in his peculiar way. We could see a tall old woman admit him and sway with pleasure at the very sight of him.

"Oh, Mr. Thaddeus, sir, I am so glad you have come! I am so glad you have come, Mr. Thaddeus, sir!" We heard her reiterated rejoicings until the door was closed and her voice died away into a muffled monotone.

Our guide had left us the lantern. Holmes swung it slowly round, and peered keenly at the house and at the great rubbish-heaps which cumbered the grounds. Miss Morstan and I stood together, and her hand was in mine. A wondrous subtle thing is love, for here were we two who had never seen each other before that day, between whom no word or even look of affection had ever passed, and yet now in an hour of trouble our hands instinctively sought for each other. I have marveled at it since, but at the time it seemed the most natural thing that I should go out to her so, and, as she has often told me, there was in her also the instinct to turn to me for comfort and pdotection. So we stood hand in hand, like two children, and there was peace in our hearts for all the dark things that surrounded us.

"What a strange place!" she said, looking round.

"It looks as though all the moles in England had been let loose in it. I have seen something of the sort on the side of a hill near Ballarat, where the prospectors had been at work."

"And from the same cause," said Holmes. "There are the traces of the treasure-seekers. You must remember that they were six years looking for it. No wonder that the grounds look like a gravel-pit."

At that moment the door of the house burst open, and Thaddeus Sholto came running out, with his hands thrown forward and terror in his eyes.

"There is something amiss with Bartholomew!" he cried. "I am frightened! My nerves cannot stand it." He was, indeed, half blubbering with fear, and his twitching, feeble face, peeping out from the great astrakhan collar, had the helpless, appealing expression of a terrified child.

"Come into the house," said Holmes, in his crisp, firm way.

"Yes, do!" pleaded Thaddeus Sholto. "I really do not feel equal to giving directions."

We all followed him into the housekeeper's room, which stood upon the left-hand side of the passage. The old woman was pacing up and down with a scared look and restless, picking fingers, but the sight of Miss Morstan appeared to have a soothing effect upon her.

"God bless your sweet, calm face!" she cried, with a hysterical sob. "It does me good to see you. Oh, but I have been sorely tired this day!"

Our companion patted her thin, work-worn hand, and murmured some few words of kindly, womanly comfort which brought the color back into the other's bloodless cheeks.

"Master has locked himself in and will not answer me," she explained. "All day I have waited to hear from him, for he often likes to be alone; but an hour ago I feared that something was amiss, so I went up and peeped through the keyhole. You must go up, Mr. Thaddeus—you must go up and look for yourself. I have seen Mr. Bartholomew Sholto in joy and in sorrow for ten long years, but I never saw him with such a face on him as that."

Shelock Holmes took the lamp and led the way, for Thaddeus Sholto's teeth were chattering in his head. So shaken was he that I had to pass my hand under his arm as we went up the stairs, for his knees were trembling under him. Twice as we ascended Holmes whipped his lens out of his pocket and carefully examined marks which appeared to me to be mere shapeless smudges of dust upon the cocoanut matting which served as a stair-carpet. He walked slowly from step to step, holding the lamp low, and shooting keen glances to right and left. Miss Morstan had remained behind with the frightened housekeeper.

The third flight of stairs ended in a straight passage of some length, with a great picture in Indian tapestry upon the right of it and three doors upon the left. Holmes advanced along it in the same slow and methodical way, while we kept close at his heels, with our long black shadows streaming backward down the corridor. The third door was that which we were seeking. Holmes knocked without receiving any answer, and then tried to turn the handle and force it open. It was locked on the inside, however, and by a board and powerful bolt, as we could see when we set our lamp up against it. The key being turned, however, the hole was not entirely closed. Sherlock Holmes bent down to it, and instantly rose again with a sharp intaking of the breath.

"There is something devilish in this, Walton," said he, more moved than I had ever before seen him. "What do you make of it?"

I stooped to the hole, and recoiled in horror. Moonlight was streaming into the room, and it was bright with a vague and shifty radiance. Looking straight at me, and suspended, as it were, in the air, for all beneath was in shadow, there hung a face—the very face of our companion Thaddeus. There was the same high shining head, the same circular bristle of red hair, the same bloodless countenance. The features were set, however, in a horrible smile, a fixed and unnatural grin, which in that still and moonlit room, was more parring to the nerves than any scowl or contortion. So like was the face of that of our little friend that I looked round at him to make sure that he was indeed with us. Then I recalled to mind that he had mentioned to us that his brother and he were twins.

"This is terrible!" I said to Holmes. "What is to be done?"

"The door must come down," he answered, and, springing against it, he put all his weight upon the lock. It creaked and groaned, but did not yield. Together we flung ourselves upon it once more, and this stime it gave way with a sudden snap, and we found ourselves within Bartholomew Sholto's chamber.

It appeared to have been fitted up as a chemical laboratory. A double line of glass-stoppered bottles was drawn up upon the wall opposite the door, and the table was littered over with Bunsen burners, test-tubes, and retorts. In the corners stood carboys of acid in wicker baskets. One of these appeared to leak or to have been broken, for a stream of dark-colored liquid had trickled out from it, and the air was heavy with a peculiarly pungent, tar-like odor. A set of steps stood at one side of the room, in the midst of a litter of lath and plaster, and above them there was an opening in the ceiling large enough for a man to pass through. At the foot of the steps a long coil of rope was thrown carelessly together.

By the table, in a wooden armchair, the master of the house was seated all in a heap, with his head sunk upon his left shoulder, and that ghastly, inscrutable smile upon his face. He was stiff and cold, and had clearly been dead many hours. It seemed to me that not only his features but all his limbs were twisted and turned in the most frantic fashion. By his hand upon the table there lay a peculiar instrument—a brown,close-grained stick, with a stone head like a hammer, rudely lashed on his coarse twine. Beside it was a torn sheet of note-paper with some words scrawled upon it. Holmes glanced at it, and then handed it to me.

"You see," he said, with a significant raising of the eyebrows.

In the light of the lantern I read, with a thrill of horror, "The Sign of the Four."

"In God's name, what does it all mean?" I asked.

"It means murder," said he, stooping over the dead man. "Ah, I expected it. Look here!" He pointed to what looked like a long, dark thorn stuck in the skin just above the ear.

"It looks like a thorn," said I.

"It is a thorn. You may pick it out. But be careful, for it ispoisoned."

I took it up between my finger and thumb. It came away from the skin so readil ythat hardly any mark was left behind. One tiny speck of blood showed where the puncture had been.

"This is all an insoluble mystery to me," said I. "It grows darker instead of clearer."

"On the contrary," he answered, "it clears every instant. I only require a few missing links to have an entirely connected case."

We had almost forgotten our companion's presence since we entered the chamber. He was still standing in the doorway, the very picture of terror, winging his hands and moaning to himself. Suddenly, however, he broke out into a sharp, querulous cry.

"The treasure is gone!" he said. "They have robbed him of the treassure! There is the hole through which he lowered it. I helped him to do it! I was the last person who saw him! I left him here last night, and I heard him lock the door as I came downstairs."

"What time was that?"

"It was ten o'clock. And now he is dead, and the police will be called in, and I shall be suspected of having had a hand in it. Oh, yes, I am sure I shall. But you don't think so, gentlemen? Surely you don't think that it was I? Is it likely that I would have brought you here if it were I? Oh, dear! oh dear! I know that I shall go mad!" He jerked his arms and stamped his feet in a kind of convulive frenzy.

"You have no reason to fear, Mr. Sholto," said Holmes, kindly, putting his hand upon his shoulder. "Take my advice, and drive down to the station and report the matter to the police.. Offer to assist them in every way. We shall wait here until your return."

The little man obeyed in a half-stupefied fashion, and we heard him stumbling down the stairs in the larw.

HOBBY WINS JOB IN STATE LIBRARY FOR LIGHTLESS MAN

What began as a hobby has ended as a vocation for Thomas Higgins, assistant librarian at the Michigan Encampment Institution for the Blind at Saginaw.

Mr. Higgins, who has been sightless since early childhood, took an interest in mastering the various systems by which raised lettering makes reading available for the blind. For 17 years he was a tuner of pianos in Detroit, and his leisure was spent in learning the four principal systems. He had been graduated at the Perkins Institute at Watertown, Mass., and his academic training there had created in him an insatiable demand for the larger world of thought and feeling represented by the literature to which raised lettering formed his only key.

Today Mr. Higgins is a valuable employe of the state, largely because he knows each one of the systems in which books for the blind are printed. Ambrose M. Shotwell, chief librarian, is in chargo of the teaching and other educational work at the institution, and Mr. Higgins supervises the circulation of the more than 6,000 volumes which Michigan lends to sightless ones throughout the state.

SKATES DISPLACE CAMPUS AUTOS

In the spring a young man's fancy, provided he is a University if Michigan student, doesn't turn to things amorous this season.

It turns to roller skates!

For, the campus has gone roller skate crazy. Everybody is skating. Co-eds and college mei swing across Ann Arbor's wide sidewalks to classes and from classes. They skate at lunch time. They skate in the afternoon. They skate in the evening across Diagonal Walk, through the campus, which one and all declare is the best bit of cement for their new out-door sport in all the city.

Shops are deluged with demands for roller skates. Show windows art piled high with displays of every kind and price. Students rush from one shop to another searching for the right size and kind of equipment for this new college fad.

There are skinned knees, and bruised ankles, but everybody seems to be enjoying themselves. They even are negleting dances this spring for skating.

Co-eds with books under their arms swing along the street. Men skate to the tennis rourts, to Ferry Field, to the Boulevard and back.

Even the collegiate flivver, the smart sport roadster and the touring model of acient vintage capable of carrying a score of students in a case of emergency, stand neglected back of fraternity houses and dormitories. The students have lost interest in these cdudely modern things, except as vehicles to pull roller skaters up hill.

And as for the old-fashioned horse and buggy, every livery stable in the city is busy supplying the demand. Twenty ears ago the fashionable thing at the University waa to take your girl buggy riding. Well, the buggy has come back in style.

"Sure, I can drive a horse," proudly boast the college men. "I've driven horses a lot."

Then with fear and trembling the co-eds mount the gig or the surry, as the case may be, and the drive begins. In an automobile speed means nothing to the modern girl. But behind a galloping horse handled by a youth accustomed to "stepping on the gas" when he wants speed—that is something else again.

So fashionable has the buggy ride become, that one fraternity has made a hobby of collecting wagons. The back yard of this State street group was filled with vehicles of every model and vintage until the order came from the house president for a cleanup.

Even express carts and wheel barrows are pressed into service by students looking for something new and amusing. Certainly the equipages they have discovered meet the latter requirement.

Enthusiasm for skating and buggy riding got its start from threats of the faculty to ban the automobile. That started the fashion, but desire for a change has kept the fad going.

28 TO BE GRADUATED AT NEWAYGO NORMAL

The Newaygo county normal will graduate 28 seniors at its commencement June 16. This will be the first graduating class since the normal was re-established, and will be one of the largest classes ever sent out from the county normal. The normal was tabloshed again last September, after being discontinued for several years because of lack of room.

Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, pastor of Central church in Chicago, will be the commencement speaker.

HIGH SCHOOL COACHES BACK CITIZENS' CAMP

Athletic directors of both Saginaw and Arthur Hill High schools have endorsed the citizens' military training camp movements as a sound policy to fit students for improved scholastic standings and athletic triumphs. According to Coach Howard E. Beatty of Saginaw high school, a month spent in a training camp is a great method to benefit his charges and the opinion is shared by Coach Elmon Vernier of Arthur Hill.

Now in de fust place does yo' know Nigger, that the Savior was a sho powerful sho't man?" "Ah don't know nuffin bout dat" said Rastus, "Well suh" replied the wise guy, "Doan you remembah what the scriptures says jus' befo' the last suppa?" "It says 'Lo He cometh" Dat certan'ly indicates He was a sho't man "

WILL SPEAK ON ART

Interest in Detroit art and musical circles has been aroused by the announcement of the forthcoming visit of the Rt. Rev. Raphael Walzer, Archabbot of the famous Beuronese Benedictine congregations, who recently arrived in New York. The Archabbot comes to the U. S. at the invitation of a number of distinguished Catholics who have visited Beuron, Germany and are interested in the musical character of its work.

GIRLS' HOME DEDICATED BY BISHOP GALLAGHER

Will Shelter Employed Girls Recently Arrived in City

In the presence of a large group of representative Catholics, both clerical and lay, the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, recently laid the cornerstone of the new Catholic Women's Activities Building, in Detroit. In addition to being a center for all Catholic women of the city the building will serve as a residence club for 250 employed young women.

Among those present at the dedicatory ceremony were delegations from the League of Catholic Women organizations of Flint, Ann Arbor, Mt. Clemens, Pontiac, Saginaw, Jackson and other lower Michigan cities. The sermon was preached by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael Grupa, D. D. of S. S. Cyril and Methodius Seminary, Orchard Lake.

In the new building, young women who have come to the city to work will be able to live in home-like surroundings at a reasonable cost to themselves. The problems of the employed young woman in the city will be solved by intelligent and sympathetic advice from trained social workers who will always be at the service of employed women.

A campaign for $500,000 to enable the League of Catholic Women to complete the building free from financial encumbrances which was conducted for six weeks will be continued informally until the whole amount is raised.

DR. DERRY CHOSEN HEAD OF CATHOLIC COLLEGE

For the first time in the history of Catholic education a man has been chosen to head an institution of learning for women. He is Dr. George Hermann Derry, formerly of the faculty of Marquette University, who has been named as president of Marygrove College, Detroit.

Dr. Derry received his early education under the Jesuit Fathers in Maryland. Later he was graduated from Holy Cross College and went to the famous English university at Oxford for post-graduate work. He was later given the degree of Doctor of Philosophy upon the completion of his work at Stonyhurst, England.

Returning to the United States, Dr. Derry took up teaching actively and has been connected with the faculties of a number of leading educational institutions. Before his recent appointment as the head of Marygrove College, he headed the department of Economics and political science at Marquette University.

Biscuit Chicken Sandwiches

Make baking powder biscuits cutting them rather larger than usual, bake in a hot oven. Split, butter and spread with chopped chicken, mixed with a very little white sauce well seasoned. Put together in sandwich fashion and wrap when cool in paraffin paper. Ham or any preferred meat may be used in place of chicken.

Prune Rice Puddings

Wash a tablespoonful of rice and cover with a quart of milk, place in a moderate oven, in half an hour add one-half cupful sugar, one-half teaspoonful vanilla, and one-half teaspoonful salt. Stir and cook slowly for an hour then add a cupful of prunes cooked in the usual manner, then drain, pit, and cut in small pieces. Continue baking one hour longer. For the lunch box fill paper drinking cups with the pudding when cold, sift a little powered sugar over the top, and cover with paraffin paper.

Peanut Butter and Lettuce Sandwiches

Spread thinly sliced whole wheat or graham bread lightly with peanut butter, and arrange lettuce leaves, washed and carefully dried, on half the slices. Put together sandwich fashion, press lightly and wrap in paraffin paper.

Stuffed Eggs

Hard cook the eggs, and drop them in cold water, remove shells, and cut in halves lengthwise. Take out the yolks and chop fine, adding any cold ham or bacon that may be at hand. Salmon or sardines may also be used. Season nicely and moisten with a little mayonnaise. Fill the cavities in the eggs, and put the halves together, wrap in paraffin paper twisting the ends slightly to hold firmly.

Pickled Prunes

Wash and soak one pound of prunes in a quart of cold water, then place over the fire in the same water, adding the juice of a lemon and the thinly pared rind; also six cloves and a small piece of stick cinnamon. Simmer one hour, then add a cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of vinegar. Continue to cook for fifteen minutes longer. Remove the spices when the prunes are done.

Brown Sugar Cookies

Cream a cupful of butter with two cupfuls of brown sugar, add a teaspoonful of vanilla, two well beaten eggs, one-third cup of milk in which three-fourths teaspoonful of soda is dissolved, and add gradually three cupfuls of flour. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered tins, bake in a moderate oven. A cup of chopped black walnuts or other nutmeats may be added to this recipe for variety.

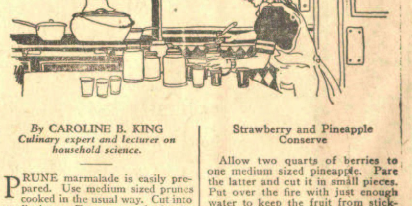
Food Preservation

Food may be preserved by freezing, such as fish and poultry; by refrigeration, such as meat, butter, milk, eggs; by canning, such as fruit; by sugar, such as fruit juices and condensed milk; by exclusion of air, such as eggs in lime water; by drying, such as prunes and peaches; by evaporation, such as ham, beef and fish; by pickling, such as cucumbers; by oil, such as sardines.

Samson Toad Stools

All the Samsons are not humans. There is tremendous power wrapped up in the spores of a toadstool. In the tropics a growth of fungus will in a few days smother a village or fill a gully. The other day in an English town newly laid paving stones measuring 22 by 21 inches and weighing more than 80 pounds, were lifted and pushed out of place by a patch of toadstools.—Capper's Weekly.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE JAM POT



By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary expert and lecturer on household science.

PRUNE marmalade is easily prepared. Use medium sized prunes cooked in the usual way. Cut into small pieces. To one pound of pulp, add one orange cut in tiny particles. Cook slowly. Add one pound of sugar to one and one-half pounds of prunes. Simmer till thick and add three tablespoonfuls of chopped pecan meats.

Polychrome Conserve

One-half pound of dried peaches, one-half pound of apricots, one-half pound of prunes, one orange, one-half cupful seedless raisins, one-quarter cupful nut meats, one and one-half pounds of sugar. Press the dried fruits, which have been cooked in the usual way, through a sieve, add grated peel and juice of the orange, and the raisins chopped fine, nutmeats and sugar and simmer altogether until thick.

Amber Marmalade

One grapefruit, one orange and one lemon are required for the marmalade. Wash the fruit well and cut it in slices, removing all seeds. Run the fruit through the food chopper, using the coarse blade and save all the juice. Measure the fruit and juice and cover it with three times its quantity of water. Let it stand for twenty-four hours, then put on the fire and cook for twenty minutes. Let stand again till cool, then measure and allow a cup of sugar for each cup of fruit and juice. Mix well and let stand again for twenty-four hours, then bring slowly to the boiling point and simmer for three hours. This amount of fruit and sugar will make nine or ten glasses of delicious marmalade.

Strawberry and Pineapple Conserve

Allow two quarts of berries to one medium sized pineapple. Pare the latter and cut it in small pieces. Put over the fire with just enough water to keep the fruit from sticking, and cook for half an hour. Then add the berries which have been hulled and washed. Cook ten minutes, stirring often so that the berries will become broken, add an equal amount of sugar as the fruits are mixed, and cook till thick, stirring frequently.

Sunshine Chips

Pare carrots and cut them into the thinnest wafer-like slices, and allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of the vegetable; also half a cupful of lemon juice. Place the carrot slices in layers in a saucepan, sprinkling the layers with the sugar; pour the lemon juice over all and leave to marinate for twenty-four hours. Then add water just to cover, and drop in a few pieces of ginger root cut in slices. Simmer till the carrot slices are tender, then set aside to cool. After three or four days, drain the syrup from the vegetable and cook it slowly till very thick. Then arrange the carrots in sterilized jars, pour the hot syrup over them and seal when cool.

Prune and Date Jam

1 pound prunes
1 pound dates
¼ cupful sugar
2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice
2 tablespoonfuls of orange juice

Cook prunes until tender in a small amount of water. Remove stones and add dates, which have been stoned and chopped. Add lemon and orange juice and sugar. Cook the mixture until thick.

The famous New York Central train "Twentieth Century Limited" between New York and Chicago, on June 15, 1927, will have completed 25 years of existence. 'Twas in June 1902, that the officials and higher-ups gathered in Grand Central Terminal, New York City to witness the departure of this palatial train and every day since the service has been continued. So much have things changed during the quarter century that the small engine which handled the first train, could srarcely move the present train with its parlors and sleepers The entire cost of the first train was $115,000, but to-day that money would not buy an electric locomotive required for handling the trains in New York suburbs. To-day the company estimates its investment in the Twentieth Century equipment at eight millions of dollars.

Federation of Womens Clubs

The Federated Womens Clubs of this county were entertained at the Methodist church in North Adams on May 21st by the Womans Improvement Club and the Sorosis Club of this vicinity.

Morning session was called to order by President Mrs. Fay Elliott of Hillsdale, at 9;30 a. m. and after the invocation by Rev. Wylie, the president made some remarks concerning her pleasant memories of girlhood days passed in this village.

A notable program was carried out and we have not space to mention any but the high spots. Reports of last meeting at Moscow were given by Mrs. Guy Chester, other reports by Mrs. F. E. Randolph, Mrs. S. G. Tracy, Mrs. Ernest Gilbert, Mrs Pearce. The forenoon closed by singing "Michigan, My Michigan" At noon the North Adams Ladies Aid served a sumptuous three-course dinner in the dining room beautifully decorated and High school girls costumed in white acted as waitresses.

Afternoon session opened at 1:30 with orchestra music by Mesdames Wamsley, Kirk, Westcott, Misses Searles, Edith Westcott, which received an enchore. The next was a Cantilla by Lestia Kies, accompanied by Ruth Westcott. Mrs. J. R. Kingsley, district president, gave an account of her European trip including the battlefields of the World War. She states that contrary to the general impression, Americans do not receive the warm welcome in France they once did, furthermore they are not popular in Paris.

As an example 25,000 wounded disabled veterans of the war paraded the streets of Poris carrying mottos more or less offensive to Americans some inscribed thus; "Down with America until she cancels the war debt." This sentiment among French people seems to be more or less interwoven with a hallucination that we are Shylocks and are as likely as any nation to swallow their country. They have assimiloted the idea that America's motives for entering the struggle were selfish and mercenary.

Mrs Kingsley spoke feelingly of the destruction wrought on the venerable old cathedrals of France, especially the one at Rheims where it is claimed 3,000 German shells entered the building's walls and a few still stick there (unexploded we presume) The beautiful leaded glass windows were removed at the outset add buried in the earth, and to-day they are still entombed but it will require fifty years to repair the damage, if it can be done at all

Our own John D. Rockafellar has already donated over 12 million francs to rebuild Rheims cathedral. Mrs. Kingsley saw a gigantic oil painting called "Panorama of Nations" 400 feet long and 42 feet high requiring two artists fou years to paint, at a cost of one million dollars which has been bought by New York City.

In Belgium the party were warmly welcomed and found the principal occupations of women there were lace making and brass hammering. On the outskirts of Brussels was a dismal building where the English war nurse Editn Cavell met her fate as a spy. Her grave is marked by a small headstone and a brass plate as are also the graves of thirty other spies shot by the Germans.

The program closed with music after the appointment of committees as follows; Mrs. Gilbert of Waldron was appointed delegate to State convention; Mrs. Angie Bengealtternate; Mesdames Gregory of Jonesville and VanAken and Othoudt of North Adams were appointed as committee to investigate the matter of joining several federations.

Messages of condolence and sympathy were sent to Purl Walters who is confined to the house with a bad ankle and to Merrill Hudnutt who is confined to the hospital with a broken leg. Meeting adjourned to meet next year at Jonesville.

BOY HIKERS MAKE 2100 MILES ON $19

An unruly Mississippi, overflowing its banks and spreading devastation from St. Louis to the gulf, upset the hopes of two teams of Ottawa Hills high school hikers to establish long distance records during the spring vacation. A third team, blessed by the weather man and the rain gods, reached New York City, thereby winning cherished medals of the Cordelier Club of the high school, and chairs of honor at a banquet of the club.

Seven students engaged in the contest, and formed three teams. The requirements were that the team covering the most miles five days after the start, was to be declared winner, and that contestants should obey the Scotch dictum of not paying a penny for transportation.

Two of the hikers, Stuart Long, 17 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert M. Long, and Robert Ogden, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Ogden, started for the southwest. They soon discovered that flood-swollen rivers blocked their way, but they did cross the Mississippi at St. Louis.

In Mounds, Ill., they found all rooms taken by flood refugees. The only high ground proved to be a cemetery, so among the tombstones the pair spent the night, determined to rest despite the rising water about them.

An attempt to reach Cairo, four miles away, proved futile, and the pair learned that all men and boys in that town were being impressed for service on the levees. In Mounds, water filled the stores and shoppers used boats. A sign on the post-office read: "No Boats Allowed," and the nautical "no parking" sign was being heeded. The pair returned north and estimated that they covered 1,300 miles on a cost of less than $10 apiece.

Arthur Stainforth, Jr., 17, and Austin Veltman, 17, hiked south through South Bend, Indianapolis, Louisville and Bowling Green, Ky. They intended to continue on to Memphis, but floods also checked them. They held down their expenses to less than $10 apiece, and said they found ready aid, whenever they were in danger of not finding shelter, through the friendship of motorists and truck drivers.

Lady luck smiled on the winners, Kent Hall, 18; Robert Miller, 16, and Charles Mulder, 17.

They hiked east by way of Adrian, Toledo, Cleveland, Akron, Canton, Pittsburgh, Lancaster and York, Pa., and Newark, N. J., and then passed through the Hudson river tubes into New York City, reaching their destination within 75 hours after leaving Grand Rapids. They covered 2,100 miles and spent about $19 each for food.

NATURE UPSETS PLANS IN ORCHARD EXPERIMENT

Pomologists at the station three years ago set a block to Red and Golden Delicious apple trees to show fruit growers how to prune these varieties according to the "modified leader system." The Golden Delicious were "winter injured" and instead of using the trees for a pruning demonstration, the experimenters now are seeking ways to save the trees and also improve the hardiness of the trunks or root stalks. The Red Delicious were uninjured.

BACK WOLVERINE RULE OF WRECKED OKLAHOMA OIL CO.

Two legal missionaries from Oklahoma, Miss Althea Arceneaux and H. B. Hopps, who came to Detroit with a "new deal and a square deal" for stockholders in the Noble Oil Company, were pained to discover that the majority of a large gathering of stockholders endorsed the Michigan men who have salvaged the wreckage left by the Oklahoma promoters of the company four years ago.

The progress made by these representatives of the stockholders was declared by the substantial business men present to be all that could be expected, in view of the complete disposition of $10,000,000 of assets by the Oklahomans who appeared more expert in drilling for cash than oil.

It appeared that the employee who absconded with $10,000, and about whom revolved the concern of the Oklahoma delegation, was under bond and that due measures were being taken to collect from his sureties.

It further appeared that the fiscal management of T. B. Preston, of Ionia, and George Kirchner, of Detroit, had retired some $325,000 of the company's debt during this hard year.

RHYTHM REPLACES SWITCH IN SCHOOL

Reading and writing and 'rithmetic, taught to the tune of a hickory stick," are out of date at Highland Park High School.

The three R's are still a part of the curriculum, but there is another study, typewriting with a capital T, which is gaining the favor of more and more students each year.

For Highland Park—which is admitted by educators all over the country to be one of the finest high schools in the United States—teaches typewriting by music and the hickory stick has gone the way of all flesh.

A typewriting class at Highland Park High School sounds like a busy newspaper office just before edition time except for the strains of band music which float above the rattle of the keys. The boys and girls learn to typewrite skillfully, quickly and well—not by the famous "one-finger hunt system," but by the most modern method set to music.

"Rhythm is the basis of speed," says Miss Helen S. Tibbals, who teaches typewriting to the spirited strains of a portable phonograph. And the truth of Miss Tibbal's statement is apparent to anyone who has watched "Red" Grange drift through an opposing team in his famous role of "The Galloping Ghost," to anyone who has seen Ty Cobb in his prime streaking from first to third on an infield out, or to anyone who has watched Paavo Nurmi's peculiar rhythmic stride leave opponents far in the ruck.

The two requirements for a typist of excellence, according to Miss Tibbals, are speed and accuracy. When the youthful key-pounders begin their elementary typewriting training, they are taught first of all, rhythm, and after they have mastered a rhythmic touch, they then are trained to reach a pinnacle of accuracy.

1,000 TO GRADUATE NEXT MONTH FROM COUNTY NORMALS

Michigan's county normal training classes will graduate more than 1,000 students early in June, the largest number ever granted certificates in a single year since the establishment of these institutions in 1903.

A forerunner among the states in this class of training, Michigan early assumed the lead, and today serves as a model for rural school training of teachers. Each year the number of graduates increased and the classes spread until today they are conducted in 47 counties. This year's graduates is double the number of five years ago.

Unlike other educational institutions, the county normal training classes turn out graduates for only one purpose, that is rural teaching. The leading percentage of students in state normals have no intention of ever teaching school, but those attending the county classes are pledged to take up teaching duties. Their field, however, is restricted to the rural districts.

The classes are conducted in high schools and grammar schools throughout the state, and each has at least two full time teachers. Up until the present time the state has paid $2,000 to each county for this purpose, and the additional expense was met by the county.

BIG HATS IN FAVOR FOR SUMMER DAYS

For mid-summer and resort wear, the large hat will predominate this season, but for town wear, certainly for spring, the small and medium sized models will be featured.

Paris is endeavoring to introduce new lines and new treatments, and in Reboux's new collection are tri-corners and round crowned models with slightly wider brims than we have been seeing.

There is also a tendency to change the silhouette by suggesting an irregular brim line, and a cut in the front or in the back that relieves the severity and forces in a wedge toward restoring the more formal type of hat.

Flowers are returning as trimmings, on the small as well as the larger models—an effective method on the large brim is to place a large, rather flat flower under the brim.

Much ribbon is used in color combinations as well as matching the color of the hat. Many loops and small bows of grosgrain ribbon are seen on the small models, and feathers, too, particularly those that point downward or carry the line of trimming down to the shoulder are favored.

Certainly the crown has reached the peak of its extension, and will gradually be lowered. In fact, now the crown that fits the head is newer than the one extended in the back.

Colored hats will be more popular than ever—all shades of blue, from the lightest periwinkle to navy are shown in straw and felt, and green and yellow will be much in demand for sport.

This is the day of beauty in clothing that approaches the dignity and simplicity of that worn by the Grecian woman of long ago. A woman who, from lack of money or inclination, does not take an interest in the styles, has only to study herself, and learn the colors and lines that are most becoming to her figure. If she uses this knowledge in her clothes, she will always be considered well dressed, particularly so as regards evening wear. Daytime wear is somewhat limited to conservative colors and orthodox lines, but afternoons see a renewed interest in ornamental possibilities which, after dusk, have full sway.

Never has there been such latitude in style! One simply has to decide upon certain lines and colors that are becoming, choose a wardrobe that has them, and one is in the mode.

There is no more lovely fashion caprice than this! And its suitability can not be overlooked even though its charm might cause one to overlook possibilities of anything practical in connection with lace.

For afternoon tea, bridge parties, matinee, an informal evening or that unexpected cafe party, tailored black lace with its inevitable tailored belt of moire or taffeta is ideal.

The two-piece effects, particularly when the edge of the blouse makes the first tier of a two or three tiered skirt, are the most popular.

Some less tailored versions of black lace are smart, showing some skirt fullness and rather large sleeves, but the simple frocks are the best.

The mode of chiffon party frocks, started last summer, shows no intention of relinquishing its hold upon the feminine imagination. What is more appropriate, more charming, more in keeping with a soft warm summer night than a pastel chiffon colored frock in all its wistful loveliness? A bit of brilliant trimming, a shoulder flower of matching color, a slight blousing, or a girdle rather tightly worn about the hips—these are the new notes for this season.

With these frocks one wears a matching chiffon coat, more or less trimmed according to taste. Applique designs of lame, silver embroideries or feathers are smart for trimming.

Of course, the frocks with matching coats are ensembles and one must wear with them an outer wrap as well, unless the weather is very warm.

Other wraps of this season would be velvet or llama, or possibly a combination of both. And they are smart if made into a coat or cape that is square, worn more or less shawl-wise.

The "feminizing" of fashion seems to be the thought uppermost in the minds of couturiers at present, and everywhere there is evidence of a retreat from the severely mannish styles of several seasons past.

Although simplicity remains the rule, softer lines and more feminine trimmings are noted. Flounces, pleats, yokes, belts, the blousant—all these are important in the mode and all bring relief from the monotony of the absolutely straight line frock.

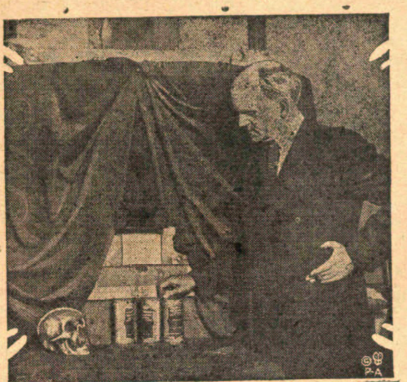
Makes Things Human Become Invisible By Rays



This is W. H. Chandlee, a Washington artist, with his newly perfected apparatus which he manipulates so as to make things—human and material—become invisible and transparent! In his first experiment before a number of scientists, he made a person sitting in a chair invisible—just the chair being in view. His device is controlled by colored light rays through a refraction screen. The late Houdini was to use this device to make an entire theatre audience "melt" from its seats.

HIGHWAY CAVE-IN BARES LAKE BED

Millions of years ago strange monsters roamed the banks of a lake near what is now Pontiac.

Dinosaur and pterodactyl long have been gone from the face of the earth, but the lake, though lost to sight, remained to trouble man.

Sixty-five feet below the surface, it created a sinkhole in the old Saginaw Trail, now the Dixie Highway, in which ox-cart, horse and auto bogged despite repeated efforts to build a firm road across it.

After a struggle of a century, man and engineering skill have at last conquered a prehistoric lake.

A lake created by the jagged finger of a glacier back in the Pleistocene Age—whose reedy shores heard the cry of the pterodactyl and the tread of the dinosaur—where shaggy men in skins hunted the mammoth and the three-toed horse.

A lake that eventually filled with vegetation, burying its population of small, white shell-fish and choking the life from a forest of cedars—a lake converted into a marsh by the slow processes of time long before Columbus discovered America. A lake 65 feet deep and that paralyzed Michigan's greatest traffic artery—the Dixie Highway!

Tons of dirt and steel, carloads of cement, truck and dump carts by the dozens, ponderous machines and scores of human toilers, directed by engineers of the state highway department, have achieved the victory over the invisible forces of Nature—have built a concrete road over the notorious "sink hole" three miles north of Pontiac.

For a century man proceeding north on the old Saginaw Trail, now the Dixie Highway, and even better known to the motorist as M 10 or the Woodward Avenue road, has encountered an obstacle in the bed of the lake created 500,000 years ago by the glacial ice sheet.

First, the muck oozed through the road to mire the pioneer's oxen—to halt the caravans of homeseekers winding their way to Flint through Michigan's virgin timberlands after the beginnings of the present highway had been constructed of heavy logs—logs that quickly rotted from the dampness of their prison.

Then it was the farmer who saw his horses sink to their shoulders, whose hay rakes and wagons dropped axle deep through the thin crust of gravel—then it was the farmer who suffered.

And then last spring and during the fall of 1927 the lake bed, which man spanned for the first time with a corduroy road in 1825 or thereabouts, lapsed into its old behavior. It sucked the asphalt highway of six years standing into its murky depths, and motorists and truck drivers found themselves inextricably stalled—as helpless as the pioneer and his panting, goaded oxen.

$150,000 GYMNASIUM TO BE BUILT AT OLIVET

President Axel E. Vestling, of Olivet College, has announced that plans have been completed for the erection of a new $150,000 gymnasium for Olivet. The edifice will be typical of a practical and adequate building to serve the athletic wants of the Olivet student body.

WOMEN RULERS OF PENTWATER HEADS

Pentwater today is without a single woman on its village council, and yet women rule the town!

The women of Pentwater are the power behind the throne. Every political campaign, every community project for several years has had the women as the guiding force. The result is that Pentwater, located on a lake by the same name, and Lake Michigan, has prospered as never before. And today even the men concede that the credit for the achievements is a result of the new civic spirit directed by the women.

Since they got the vote Pentwater women have been a force in politics and good government. Energy and time usually given to bridge and other social functions are devoted toward making Pentwater a more progressive village.

Pentwater recently staged the most interesting election in its history, a record vote being cast. E. A. Daggett, business man, was elected president, largely through the activities of the women. They directed his campaign and saw to it on election day that all their forces went to the polls.

Incidentally, Mr. Daggett today holds three offices. He also is supervisor and president of the Board of Education. The women have elected him to all three offices.

Pentwater has one of the most beautiful harbors on Lake Michigan. Ten years ago the government decided to abandon the harbor. This was a severe blow and civic spirit was at a low ebb for a time. Then the women took hold and Pentwater soon forgot about its loss.

The women decided that steps should be taken to increase the resort and tourist business. As a result 4,000 persons come to Pentwater and neighboring resorts to spend the summer months and new cottages and homes have been erected along the sandy beach of Lake Michigan.

BARS BOBBED HAIR AND ROUGED CHOIR AT MISSION

Classing rouged faces, painted lips, bobbed hair and short skirts as "Sodomite evils," Rev. A. B. Ost, who is conducting a revival campaign at the Swedish mission at Muskegon, has refused to allow the choir to sing while the campaign is in progress. "The usual church choir looks more like a group of fashion models than sanctified believers in God. Their mirrors play a far more important part in their lives than their prayers," the young pastor vowed.

HOME LOVE LURES WILDLIFE TO DOOM

As an example of the influence of the homing instinct among our animals and birds, no better illustration can be uncovered than the actions of these creatures during a forest fire.

During the late spring and early summer, particularly, tragedy is written in bold letters through many of the fire-swept stretches of the north. It is mute evidence of the love of the dumb creature for its home; its nest with the helpless fledglings; its feeding grounds and sheltering cover.

In Michigan the danger from the roaring, fast-traveling crown fire is past, and in its stead has come the slow-creeping ground fire devouring everything in its path. It is this type of fire that claims the life of the brooding grouse, the nestling warbler, the panic-stricken rabbit, and the bewildered fawn. Unless accompanied by extremely high winds, these fires do not travel fast enough to overtake any fleeing animal or bird, but fright, panic or maternal love leads them into the death trap rather than away. Even though their brute judgment tells them that danger is approaching and drives them into other fields, they very often will return before the fires have died down, only to fall victims to their insatiable homing instinct.

Hunters very often bag a deer during the fall hunting season that carries with it evidence of having gone through a forest fire. The antlers may be fire-seared, the legs deformed or the flanks scarred. There is no mistaking these tell-tale marks.

Fire, the scourge of the north country, is undeniably our greatest destroyer of wild life.

ISLE ROYALE SURVEY SOON TO BE RESUMED

A survey of Isle Royale, started late last summer for the purpose of revaluing the island for taxation purposes, will be resumed in the near future. It will be in charge of E. J. McNally of the state tax commission, who will be assisted by Willard E. Smith, Houghton engineer, and Michael Labby and Amos Bammert, timber cruisers.

The survey is being made for the purpose of revaluing the timber, mining properties and real estate holdings. A revaluation has not been made for more than 25 years, and much of the shore line property has increased considerably in value in recent years. Isle Royale is a part of Keweenaw county. Of the timber on the island, 125,000 acres are held by private owners, and more than 10,000 acres by the state or federal governments.

PHEASANTS BATTLE TO DEATH ON CAR TRACKS

The cock pheasant is a vicious fighter. Many stories are told of pheasants invading barnyards and whipping the biggest and gamiest roosters. When a pair of pheasant cocks join in a clash, each is so intent on tearing the other to ribbons with his long spurs, that nothing distracts them. Not even an interurban car coming down the track at high speed with the motorman tooting his whistle.

F. G. Mensch, commercial agent of the Detroit United Lines, tells of two cocks duelling in the center of the interurban tracks near Almont with such gusto that they refused to get out of the way of an oncoming car.

"The motorman blew his whistle but the pheasants refused to pay any attention to it. They were still fighting when the car thundered upon them. One of the cocks was killed, the other somehow escaped death."

The body of the dead pheasant adorned the cow catcher when the interurban came into Almont.

CONSUMPTION OF MILK ON INCREASE

Michigan's 5,000,000 inhabitants consumed at the rate of one and two-thirds pints of milk a day during the fiscal year ending July 1, the annual report of T. H. Broughton, director of the State Bureau of Dairying, reveals.

During the year 2,390,021,000 pounds of milk, equivalent to about the same number of pints, were consumed in Michigan, the report showed. This represented a substantial increase over the previous year.

Mr. Broughton's report also showed the 265 co-operative and independent creameries in the state are gradually crowding the farmer's wife out of the butter business. Production of creamery butter jumped 1,000,000 pounds during the year, reaching the grand total of 75,399,553 pounds, while dairy butter, largely made by the farmers' wives, decreased 480,000 pounds to 19,200,000 pounds.

Cheese production decreased. There were 55 licensed cheese factories operating and they purchased 79,741,000 pounds of milk, compared with 111,551,703 pounds the previous year.

Michigan now ranks third among the states as a manufacturer of ice cream, producing 10,427,920 gallons, compared with 9,127,000 in 1925. There are 272 ice cream plants in the State.

The report showed there were 407 milk distributing plants in the state at the close of the fiscal year. Milk condenseries totaled 32. Their output showed a slight decrease.

Wolf Tamed By Keeper Faces Fate at State's Hand

Three days after being trapped, Jack, the Wolf, a 70-pound timber wolf caught by Ray Walker, a state trapper, at Strongs, became as tame as a dog, so much so that he allowed himself to be petted, fed by hand and led around without snapping at his keeper, Dr. J. F. Deadman, explorer, hunter, trapper and tamer of wild animals.

Dr. Deadman has a way with wild animals. He has tamed wolves before and has had a team of wolves in harness in sleighs. When Jack was captured Dr. Deadman immediately took him in charge. He loosened the ropes around his legs and otherwise made him comfortable. He fed him and talked to him and gradually the hunted look disappeared from the animal's eyes. He recognized Dr. Deadman whenever he approached him.

For three days Dr. Deadman petted and played with Jack. The trapper came, however, and took Jack away in fetters and his fate rests with the conservation commission.

Monroe Dickenson is Alba's only Civil war veteran. He first enlisted in the infantry in April, 1861. His second enlistment was in the cavalry in August, 1865.

He entered the service at the age of 20 and returned at the close of the war unscathed. He contracted typhoid while in the service, and was lying in a critical condition in one of the service hospitals when the fire alarm sounded. Clearly he recalls the excitement of that night and his eyes brightened as he related how the wounded were tenderly carried to safety.

Mr. Dickenson is also Alba's oldest citizen, having reached his eighty-sixth year, while his wife, Jean, is just 76.

TOWN HAS BALLOT BOX USED IN 1853

At the historical pageant at Grand Rapids recently was exhibited one of the oldest relics of Kent county's history—a ballot box used in the Caledonia township election in 1853.

The box is the property of Frank Marsh, of Fremont, and was made by his grandfather, Henry Jackson, one of the earliest settlers of Caledonia, for his daughter, Hannah, as a trunk to keep doll clothes in. Hannah Jackson married Henry Marsh, father of Frank, and the old box has been handed down to the latter and constitutes a very desirable heirloom.

The first settler in Caledonia was Ashael Kent, who in 1838 conceived the idea of starting a public house in the woods on the Battle Creek-Grand Rapids trail. Kent's Tavern became a favorite stopping place. Kent died and his widow married Peter McNaughton, who continued to run the tavern. But in time other lines of travel opened up, the Battle Creek trail was deserted, and the tavern became only a memory.

Meanwhile settlers, attracted by the fertile lands, took up homesteads. Among these was Henry Jackson who located in 1851 on Section 22.

In 1853 the town meeting was held at the home of Henry Jackson who was elected clerk. Improvised ballot boxes were used at these elections and in this year the sturdy little doll trunk was pressed into service by making a hole through the top.

Grand Rapids Girl on Trail of Elusive Fly

"The Effect of Temperature on the Developmental Stages of the Mutant Double-Infrabar of Drosophilla Melanogaster."

Such is the theme which Miss Marie McCabe, an instructor in the biology department of Junior college, Grand Rapids, is pursuing and the evidence obtained is to be incorporated in her master thesis and will form a part of the chain which eventually will determine just what the relation of environment to life really is.

The mutant double-infrabar, the insect under observation, is an exceedingly rare species of fruit fly. It is found in the normal brood of the fly but differs from its parents in the size and shape of the compound eye. These differences are transmitted through its offspring to the following generations.

Experiments along this line were conducted by Miss McCabe at the University of Illinois last summer. She brought a large part of the entire "race" of mutants to Grand Rapids. This winter, in her experiments, she plans to change the diet, which consists of a banana and yeast preparation, to a different food to determine whether the diet has any effect on the development of the species.

Fags, Sweets Barred to -Co-eds in Athletics

Cigarettes, sweets, rich pastries, and late hours, are on the list of forbidden things for Michigan State college co-eds, if they are athletically inclined, and have any desire to "make" class and varsity teams in any sport. The rules are so rigidly enforced that one infringement of the "no smoking" order means the culprit is dismissed from the squad.

Sports are going to be just as serious a proposition for women as for men, the co-eds have decided. So a "training card" has been made out by the Women's thletic Association, and each girl who is in the race for athletic glory is required to report her fulfillment of the requirements at the close of each week.

Holland Poultry Show Planned for Dec. 14-18

Gowns Smack of Ye Olden Times; Hats, Shoes, Modern

Jeweler Will Hunt Deer Equipped With Weapon of Indians

robably the most unusual deer hunting expedition to leave etoskey this month will be that of S. C. Newton, etoskey jewelry store owner and manager, who takes a great hand-made Indian bow and quiver full of specially designed arrows as his only weapon into the Lake Superior country.

Newton believes he will be the first white hunter to invite the fastness of the rugged country north of the Tequemenon to hunt deer in the good old Indian way.

After more than a score of years during which he has never failed to "fill his license," Mr. Newton will enter the woods Nov.15. The bow he will carry is of English make with a test of about 60 pounds. The arrows are 28 inches in length, broad headed, and sharp enough to pierce a full-grown deer at a distance of ten rods.

The bow is made of lemon wood, imported from Spain, and considered one of the best woods obtainable for the purpose anywhere in the world. The arrows are all hand-made and patterned after those used by the greatest archerists of all times. The high tempered steel points are sharpened to a razor edge.

90,552 Ears of Corn Seized in Borer Fight

State and Federal inspectors along the European corn borer line in East-central Michigan found much infested sweet corn being transported westward out of the infested area this year, according to their reports to the State Department of Agriculture.

A compilation of these reports for the period August 1 to October 1 showed the inspectors had stopped and searched 1,504,768 automobiles and had confiscated 90,552 ears of infested corn. This corn was mostly in possession of tourists.

Montcalm Potato Crop Is Equal of Last Year's

Montcalm county potato growers, who are hard at harvesting, will have as large a crop as last year. Several growers have turned out 300 bushels to the acre and the quality is pronounced good. Buyers declare that the early freeze proved a bonanza to growers. The potatoes had grown large enough and would have grown too large and been culled for oversize if the freeze had not come.

As the result of experiments made by Professor Borlases Matthews, a poultry expert of Newport, England, young chicks have been made to grow twice as fast by use of electricity. The young birds can be treated for nine days with ultra-violet rays.

MICHIGAN CONCERN AT REOCRD PROFIT

One organization to which Michigan gave birth has established a world record for net profits.

According to an official summary of the income account and balance sheet, the earnings of General Motors for the nine months ended September 30, 1926, not only exceeded any nine months in its history, but also were greater than the earnings of any previous entire calendar year.

Net earnings, including the corporation's equitq in subsidiary companies were $149,317,553, compared with $80,921,018 for the corresponding period of 1925. After deducting $5,733,325 on account of dividends on the senior securities there remains $143,584,228 is equivalent to $17.77 per share on applicable to the common stock. This the common stock which compares with $9.71 per share for the corresponding period of 1925, after making allowance for the dierence in the number of shares outstanding.

Quail Scarce in State Is Report of Warden

Harry Collins, warden of Ironwood, gives some idea of the scarcity of partridges in the upper peninsula when he says that he has only seen seven since last spring.

"I have tramped a thousand or so miles in the woods this summer and fall," declares Collins. "You no longer hear the cocks drumming—a sure sign that partridge are mighty scarce."

Rabbits are very plentiful, however, according to Collins.

Woodcock Gone Before Protective Law Lifted

The fact that the woodcock season extended from October 25 to 31 did not mean a great deal to Michigan sportsmen. Most of the woodcock had gone south.

Last year the greater share of Michigan woodcock went south in the second week of October, when the state was gripped by snow and cold weather. The ground is the oodcock's favorite feeding place and it was frozen to a dept hof half an inch so they could no longer probe for worms. Consequently they picked up and left the state overnight.

Good Read Near Every Kent County Farmer

A good road within a distance not gerater than one and one-half miles of every farmer in Kent county is the comprehensive highway program adopted by the county road commission and which has been put into effect.

Among the items used to manufacture large city telephone books are salt, molasses, glycerin and glue.

Chairmen Named At State College For 1928 Junior Hop

Men and women students at Michigan State college who will serve as chairmen on 12 special committees in charge of arrangements for the 1928 Junior hop, major social event of the college year, have been named by George Macier, of Richmond, class president.

The hop, attended by about 200 couples, usually is held in the ballroom of the Union Memorial building, early in February.

Following is a complete list of committee chairmen:

Carl Davies, Lansing, music; Arthur Carls, Sturgis, favors; William Sparling, Bad Axe, decorations; Miss Mary Marshall, Bear Lake, banquet; Oliver Hood Ionia, acts and novelties; Levon Horton, Lansing, publicity; Bryson McCullough, Saginaw, invitations; Ward Estes, Cleveland, program; John Kelly, Grand Haven, elegibility; Paul Smith, Saginaw, printing and engraving; Walter Neller, Lansing, finance; John Breyfogle, Three Rivers, sub-serving.

Triple Time is Penalty At Albion for Liberties

"Triple time" is the novel penalty that is effectively preventing girls at the new Albion college women's dormitory from taking too many liberties with the closing hour rules.

For every five minutes a girl is late, she must be 15 minutes early in arriving at the "dorm" on the corresponding evening of the next week. A half hour tardiness, therefore, means an hour and a half penalty.

Yost Held Richest of U. S. Football Mentors

"Hurry Up" Yost, coach at Michigan since 1901, has won considerable success in the practice of law as well as in football and is reputed to be the wealthiest football mentor in the land.

Club Members Patrol Huron Shore Property

To protect property on the Huron shore and enforce the game and fish laws of the state, 30 members of the Harbor Beach Conservation Club have been sworn in as deputy conservation officers. They will patrol the lake shore and game covers for many miles.

British engineers, by studying the effects of ripples in a tank of water, are designing flying field parallel "plates" or sound screens to reduce the terrific noise created by a number of commuting airplanes when leaving the field.

STYLE FOUNDED ON OLD FASHION LINES

Quaint, old-fashioned lines are often used to fashion the gowns of milady, but when it comes to hats and shoes, strictly up-to-date modes prevail. No bonnets or feather laden hats for the modern woman. She prefers a sports type hat for almost all occasions. And when it comes to shoes—well, since the advent of the short skirt they have become so important that they often not only supplement the costume but are the most colorful part of it.

All of which is illustrated. At the left is the wide brimmed felt trimmed with a narrow contrasting band. Below that i asnother felt, narrow of brim and worn with a wide trim—the antithesis you see, of the one above it.

Below the hats is a pair of the most colorful of the new shoes. They are oxfords of rattlesnake skin. They are laced with silk cord which has large wooden beads on each end. With these shoes the wearer should carry an underarm purse of rattlesnake skin to match.

In the wardrobe of the really smart woman every costime has its suitable shoe. Shoes dyed to match the color of the dress are becoming the rule rather than the exception with many women. The smart shops are showing shoes in the same shades as the prevailing style colors. Reptile is exceedingly popular, alligator, lizard and snakeskin being used to fashion the whole shoe or for trimming with leather.

The period gown has had a considerable vogue for some time and its charm promises it a continuance of this popularity. The model pictured at the right is made of white satin with gold cloth decorations. A wide band of the gold forms the hem and medallions of gold cloth is graduated sizes trim the entire skirt. The full skirt is long and gathered at the waist, and the short, tight sleeves add to its quaint charm.

Farm Prices Drop To Level of 1923; 40% Over Pre-War

Prices of Michigan farm products, which showed a decided gain during 1924 and 1925, have receded again to the level of the winter of 1923, according to Dr. G. F. Warren, agricultural economist and price expert at Cornell University. They are now approximately 40 per cent above pre-war prices, he says.

"Conditions would not be serious if the prices in all states were 40 per cent above the pre-war level," he declares. "In certain states, however, the average is above this level and in others, which are intensive food producing regions, the prices are much below that level.

"The products that have continued low for the longest period are corn, oats, barley, hay, horses and beef cattle. Hogs, which were cheap for four years, have advanced slightly above the general level and are now about as high as the average index of non-agricultural commodities.'

Tractors Used on State Fight on Forest Fires

Althoug hthe fall forest fire hazard has been reduced to a minimum by continuous rains, the state conservation department is taking no chances and is engaged in the most extensive fire program in its history.

The work is aimed, eventually, to set up a network of north and south fire lines throughout the entire north wood section. Particular attention will be paid to virgin stands and progressive second growth.

The state now has 10 tractors with as many full crews of men working 10 hours a day in establishing the lines. So far, the work has been in protecting old and new state game preserves.

3,000 Acres Bought By State Sportsmen

Another large tract of land, formerly the public hunting grounds of hundreds of lower Michigan sportsmen, has been acquired by a group of Birmingham, Mich., sportsmen. The area embraces over 3,000 acres all under wire, bordering on the south line of the 26,000-acre Turtle Lake Club.

Deer Are Seen Near Oceana County Towns

Excitement is running high among Hart sportsmen, who believe they have a "happy hunting ground" all their own in the vicinity of Juniper Beach in Golden Township. Bob Munger, son of Hart and Oceana county's cherry "king," L. P. Munger, is authority for the story of seeing deer, several of them, on various occasions in the vicinity of the beach and on the state park lands adjoining, where there are immense sand dunes and long wooded stretches.

BRAVE LAKE PERIL FOR SILVER FISH

Michigan waters every year yield nearly 6,000,000 herring—some of which posthumously brighten up their corners in jewelry shops. Others are eaten—shimmer and all—with the more than 6,000,000 trout and the 3,000,000 white fish gathered from our Great Lakes.

To provide fresh fish for Detroit tables, weather-beaten and furrowed men are rising long before dawn in Bayport, Tawas City, Au Sable, Grand Marais and many other parts.

Smoky oil lanterns set off their oil-skinned silhouettes from the surrounding darkness as they make ready to dare the hazards of late fall and early winter fishing in the Great Lakes. They do not pretend to be heroes. Autumn and winter fishing happens to be dangerous. But also it happens to be profitable.

The catch of Michigan commercial fishermen, according to a recent report of the state Department of Conservation, has declined 38 per cent in a 12-year period. Higher prices, however, partly make up for the 12,000,000 fish that are not caught now, but were caught then. As the drums which haul the gill nets to the tugs revolve and th eshining captives are brought in the boat, one can be almost sure that every bright gleam in the nets represents the gleam of a silver dollar for the tug's owner.

Increased operating costs, of course, partially offset the advantages of increased prices. It costs a lot more now than it did years ago to maintain the more than 1,000 boats used by Michigan fishermen.

Their nets alone—if stretched in a straight line—would span 4,685 miles.

Fishy fashion has raised the one-time pariah, the Michigan sturgeon, to high caste. Not so many years ago he was cursed as a nuisance by fishermen whose nets his 100 pounds or more of weight tore into ribbons whe nhe blundered into a mesh and shifted into reverse in an effort to extricate his gills. Usually he could not get away. But before he died he caused a lot of damage to valuable linen netting. No defunct fish—even though valueless—may legally be thrown back into Michigan waters. So in those days the sturgeon were piled in haystack fashion on the shore, with driftwood stacked about them, and burned, like Homer's heroes, in a waterside funeral pyre.

Today the sturgeon is the highest priced fish in the world. If the catch is an adult the weight may be 100 pounds or more. Which means that the value is $100 or more. If roe—another nam efor eggs—is found within, then the value soars. For sturgeon roe is the precious caviar of the gourmand's table. It is worth from $15 to $20 a pound.

Judges Named for Apple Show at Grand Rapids

Fruit in the State Apple Show, at Grand Rapids, November 30 to December 4, will be judged by Professor J. H. Gourley, chief horticulturist at the Ohio Experimental Station, Wooster, O., and R. W. Rees, Syracuse, N. Y., horticulturist for the New York Central Railroad, according to Secretary H. D. Hootman, of the Michigan State Horticultural Society.

Plan Monorail Line

Officials of the Rapid Transit corporation of America ,successors to the Michigan Transit company, have drive nthe first stakes near St. Clair for what they said would be a monorail transportation line from Port Huron to Detroit. The plan is said to involve the expenditure of several million dollars.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

If You Are a Poultry Raiser

you need this protection and this paper is cooperating in this campaign by offering three signs, (size 6x8 inches like the above) to be posted on your farm buildings, a certificate of membership in the Michigan Business Farmer Service and Protective Bureau, a one year new or renewal subscription to

Al Smith Is Quite Damp

Many of Al Smith's political friends advocate him on the ground that he is wet but opposed to the saloon. In reality, Al Smith, judging by his record, is the best friend the saloon has in the U. S. A. The W. C. T. U. recognizes in Al Smith the man it fought in New York ever since he was a small east side politican doing errands for the gang and getting his votes from the saloon.

Al Smith has fought every proposal made to reduce the number of saloons or keep them closed on Sundays. He fought us when we tried to keep a decent distance between the churches and the saloons He has declared openly that he was in favor of a return to the brass rail and the foam on the beer. The first public statement he made in favor of a saloon was when he opposed the decent New York element which was trying to get rid of a notorious dive in his district, some twenty years ago. Al Smith blocked their efforts.

His most conspicuous act as governor was signing the bill to repeal the New York State Prohibition enforcement laws.

In a signed statement in a Blytheville, Ark., paper, May 3, one of his wet advocates declared that if Smith should be elected president there would be "no such foolishness as appropriating public money to enforce prohibition." No one in New York ever heard of Blytheville, perhaps; but no one in New York could express the case in better language.

We believe that Al Smith, the friend of the saloon, by his own public acts against law enforcement, has unfitted himself to stand as candidate for the presidency.—National W. C. T. U.

Report Of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending May 22nd, 1927

On Monday, Geo. Metcalf, Lester Mingus and Clare Grosbeck were taken to Ionia to serve their respective sentences.

John Philip Sousa and John Phillips

John Phillips is leader of the Jamaica Band of the Salvation Army.

John Philip Sousa is a bandmaster too. John Phillips and John Philip Sousa now have more in common than vocation and similarity of name. They also have a uniform in common. John Philip Sousa, recognizing a genuine need on the part of a brother musician, has presented his less famous colleague with one of his finest blue uniforms.

For a time it looked as if the condition of the exchequer of the Jamaica Corps, depleted by the demands of Home Service and Flood Relief, would compel the band to perform in "civies". Then along came Mrs. John Sousa who lives in Port Washington and has a keen in mind the needs of musicians.

A conference was called in the Sousa household, and as a result at least the leader of the Army's Band has a uniform, Since then John Phillips has been very busy ripping off gold braid and substituting Salvation Army insignia. But, when the Army's Band plays in Jamaica now the leader will throw out his chest a little further, wave his baton with added confidence and go through the old hymns with a new zest.

Need Clean Surface To Kill Corn Borer

The importance of a clean surface on corn fields in the infested area in order to control the borer and to meet the requirements of state and federal regulations can not be stressed too strongly, according to L. H. Worthley, federal administrator of corn borer control work.

"If the borer is to be controlled", says Worthley, "the surface of last year's corn land in the infested area must be 100 percent clean. A field is either clean or it is not clean. Only thorough clean-up jobs will pass inspection."

Some farmers in the corn borer area have asked whether there will be any compensation paid to a man who has cleaned up only half of his acreage. There will be no distinction between degrees of cleaning up, according to Worthley. The whole farm must be clean in order to qualify for the extra labor award.

Partial clean-ups cannot be approved. In case the regulatory have to complete the work, the cost will be assessed against the owner of the property, and no compensation will be awarded for what has been done.

County borer supervisors and inspectors report that a little hand picking and finishing touches here and there are all that is needed to complete the clean up in the area, They urge that farmers finish their jobs and qualify for the extra labor award.

The Bath Incident

The papers throughout Michigan have certainly gone the limit of blatteration on the Bath Schoolhouse catastrophe and now it seems about time to quit it. Most of the editors apparently have stayed up nights planning and writing hair-raising articles with great scare-heads about the work of this maniac. Motorists have journeyed hundreds of miles to witness the scene of destruction wrought by dynamite and powerful explosives, but the fact remains, nobody has yet been able to prove anything but just a case of hatred nursed into temporary insanity, to cause the deed. Such an affair might happen in any community of the state, and of course it was atrocious, and no doubt if the perpetrator had lived through it, he would have been sentenced to the worst punishment it is possible for Michigan to give, and yet there are a lot of folks who do not want any capital punishment here. They have put up nearly every kind of stall to discourage the passing of such a law, and will continue to do so. One very logical argument is that no criminal ever thinks of the penalty when he commits murder. This is quite possible, but it does not help out in solving the problem. With our penitentiary at Jackson filled with more than its capacity of prisoners many of them the blackest murderers, with no hope of reformatity, no possible destination except to remain at the expense of the tax payers the rest of their worthless lives, with no possible way of setting them at any kind of labor which will recompense the state for their keep (it is well established that for every dollar the prisoner returns to the state the costs are about two at any kind of a job) we believe it is high time to begin to consider some ways and means of unburdening the municipality. With these condemned murderers to the chair or the gallows as the case might be, each year the tax payers would be relieved of the care of deadwood, and the less serious offenders who are just started in crime might be given a chance to mend their ways and become again decent law abiders.

Somebody arises to remark "we see no connection in this with the Bath catastrophe". We do. There is a sequel to the Bath explosion and there is a sequal to every murder committed in this state, which hinges on what is coming to the perpetrator of such deeds. Many years ago when Michigan abolished capital punishment, crime was not such a gigantic problem.

They are all boosters and deserve your business.

With our comparatively back woods population, crimes of murder were largely committed from provoked anger and bickering. But today we have a very different class of criminals—cunning, scheming, foresighted. Like Kehoe for instance whom acquaintances claim, was never crazy, unless it might have been a few moments before he touched off the fatal charge. He was simply a ferocious dispositioned ugly tempered brute who because circumstances had drawn him into heavy taxation, and financial matters went wrong, turned on the whole of humanity, even innocent children, and wreaked revenge. This deed must have been planned for months in advance and none but a fiend could have planned it better. In such cases we claim the only solution of the penalty is to put such criminals out as a lesson to others, and we claim the more publicity it is given the better the effe . Husbands and wives plan atrocious crimes to dispose of their life partners for no other reason apparently than to marry a paramour who has come on the scene of [illegible] later, and is in all ways more pleasing. The law must put a stop to this wholesale devilishness, even at the cost of barbarity.

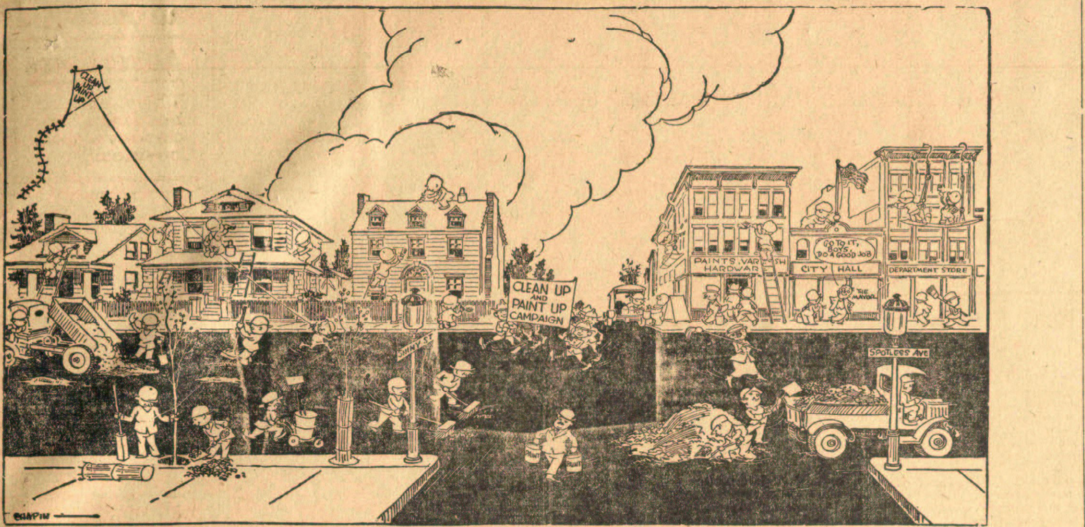
Don't Send Your Order Out of Town Until You See What We Can Do



According to the report of crop reporters alfalfa in Michigan is getting on very rapidly and few farms now used in southern Michigan are without patches of this succulent hay crop. Long ago the Michigan farmer found he could not successfully raise red clover. He then tried alsike, with no better results. This condition is probably owing largely to run-out soils, or soils everywhere that after 75 years of cropping have failed—lost some of the elements which red clover must have. Chemists in M. S. C. have diagnosed and studied the soils far and wide—they have made long arduous reports as to their opinions of a remedy but all has gone for naught, the red clover don't seem to thrive. Have the Michigan farmers forgot how to do the trick? At least it seems so, but anyhow alfalfa is coming on the stage apparently to stay. With its long roots it manages to obtain some chemicals deeper down, which red clover cannot reach, and probably the day will come when even alfalfa will be a failure. Experts point us to the soils of China ancient as the sun, telling us the crops have never failed. This may be true, but the fact remains that certain chemicals in soils fade out and disappear after years of use and can't be put back by any artificial means known to man. The M. S. C. Professors will tell you how to use common barnyard manure and they'll orate on certain commercial fertilizers, but there is yet a mysterious "something" which nobody knows much about, strange as human life germ which they have never been able to manufacture. While this nonsense is no doubt believed by many tillers of the soil, experience will show it is not practical and the soils of China with their thousands of years of operation are not what they were once and they never will be again.

Do They Like It?

Judging from the long articles we are reading in the Hillsdale Daily from practical farmers around the county it is quite evident the farmers have a very different idea of the Corn Borer than the United States Government.

The idea of some farmers is the United States Government is too strenuous concerning the clean-up and but little is accomplished after all to do the job—in the meantime the farmers are put to considerable worry and bother and in some cases their wheat crops are ruined by the work. Of course we know that it never has been possible for the farmers to form a combine on anything to combat it successfully. When it comes to uniting on any issue the farmers are down—and always will be. You can discover that fact by a short study of the country telephone line situation. For years the users of country telephone lines have tried to manage their lines in such a way that they will be kept up and at the same time not be burdensome to any but be a convenience to all. In many cases the final result has been the Bell Company has stepped in at the right moment or possibly the wrong moment and bought up the remains, whence by its wonderful system it has built up a business which reaches to the ends of the earth. Of course the average farmer realizes the danger that menaces the corn crop— he knows that if he loses it he is handicapped very severely for the subsequent winter. He knows that hogs, the staple crop of southern Michigan, would be a failure without the corn but at this time he don't see the necessity of system nor can he see the results of the clean-up. In connection with this work we are obliged to consider the graft tendency which will seep in, as it always does into anything which is government controlled. Up to this time there never has been found a remedy when the head-quarters were located so far from the scene of operations. Many sticky fingers are in the pie, and too many officials of dead or callous consciousness are on the job. The farmers of Southern Michigan as a rule are wide awake to the necessity of ridding their fields of the corn borer, but they feel it has degenerated as usual into a sucker proposition, and there you are!

The Bacon Case Ended

The case of Charles A. Bacon of Pittsford township the accused "Jack the Peeper" who was suspected of taking an erstwhile look occasionally through the windows of the co-eds dormitory at bed time on College Hill, was finished last week, and the jury awarded Bacon a damage of $1,000 for the mauling which he received at the hands of Albert Bentz, Dean Stock and Louis Oliver. Attorneys for the defense were Merton Fitzpatrick and Paul Chase, and for the complainant was Bert Chandler of Hudson and the foreman of the jury was a woman Mrs. Emma Hackett. It is evident from the reports of witnesses that Bacon received worse injuries then was at first supposed and the lawyers switched the evidence around to suit themselves making it appear that Bacon had done considerable prevaricating on the stand. However the jury did not seem to agree with them. This case has attracted considerable attention all over the county inasmuch as Bacon has not borne the best of character in days gone by and for other reasons. It was surmised he maintained a room on College Hill for what purpose nobody knows exactly although he is a married man and lives with his family.

In view of the trouncing Bacon received at the hands of Messrs Chase and Fitzpatrick in court he probably will not care to enter any more law suits.

The languages of these men in their final arguments to the jury indicated Bacon was a slightly soiled dove.

President Spencer of the College who has unwillingly been drawn into a very unsavory scrape, has keep aloof as much as possible but his name has come in quite noticeably for both criticism and applause.

Naval War in the Future

Admiral William S. Sims, commander of all American naval forces in Europe during the world war, declared in a recent interview that the battle ship and giant cruiser are backnumbers and will be about useless in another war. The submarine and airplane, he is sure have ended their reign over the seas. But he sees American security guaranteed because of our industrial pre-eminence.

"The naval strategy of another war," said the Admiral, "will be greatly concerned with assuring continuous supplies of petroleum because it is essential as fuel not only for surface craft, but even more so for submarines and aircraft. England, having no significant oil supplies at home, must keep open the routes to the Near East, the Middle East, the Straits Settlements because from these she must get her oil. The problem is not so urgent with us, because of our huge supplies of oils within our own borders. For a naval campaign in the Atlantic the fighting craft, whether on the surface, in the air or under the sea, would be supplied with oil from the eastern and mid-continent fields. If the war be in the Pacific, California would assure ample supplies. With the disadvantage of having two ocean fronts to protect, the United States is compensated by the possession of vast oil resources on either front. Over 70 percent of the world's petroleum production is in the United States, and the industry has seen its greatest expansion in the years since oil began to be used as maritime fuel.

"The fact that the Allies had great oil resources of the United States to draw on is now recognized as one of the important factors in giving them victory."

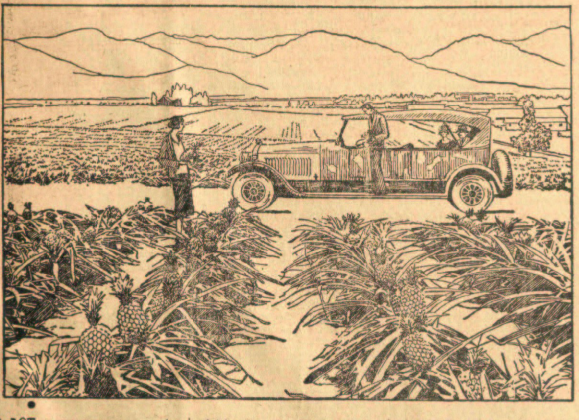
Everybody is talking now about the wonderful flight of the aeroplane from New York to Paris in so short time. The Aviator left New York in the early forenoon of a day and reached Paris in the evening of the next day by continuous flight with no stops. Well, this is wonderful and wonders are never ceasing, as a review of the progress of air navigation will reveal. This means simply that most Ocean travel will soon be conducted through the air instead of on boats From the present time to the day of big regular passenger airships will be a mere step. Rivalling the commodious and swift flying train of steam propelled cars known as the "Twentieth Century Limited" these air ships will encircle the Globe landing at advantageous points and dropping passengers. Many lives will be lost before the system is perfected. The only way of developing this great scheme is to keep at it, and science has only the mistakes of the past to learn from. The non-stop flight from New York to Paris is nothing extraordinary in itself, but that a man had the nerve to try it, was another matter. We shall watch this line of endeavor with much interest.

The District Convention of the Y. M. C. A., was held Monday, May 23, at 6;15 o'clock, at the First Methodist Church, Hillsdale Mich. A New Constitution, involving a complete reorganization of the Y. M. C. A., in this District, will be presented for adoption. The election of the Executive Committee for the coming year will be held and other matters of business transacted. Registration may be made through your school superintendent.

Beauty Stripes

The women of Paraguay have marks on their faces like army stripes, to indicate rank. The pigment used consists of ashes mixed with blood, while the instrument is a sharp thorn. If a woman being tattooed cries out with pain she is told that she is a disgrace to her family and unworthy of a husband.

EXPLORING PINEAPPLE PLANTATIONS A NEW TRIP FOR TOURISTS



NOT so many years ago, pineapple was a fruit for kings. Poets used it as a symbol of rare luxury. Balzac spent months scheming to get rich by raising pineapples under glass, in a suburb of Paris.

Today, any family can have it on their table.

The enormous growth of the pineapple industry and the novel features of growing and canning this fruit, have made the exploration of pineapple plantations and canneries one of the most popular sight-seeing trips for tourists who visit Hawaii.

Besides giving the tourist a view of the endless pineapple fields as they can be seen from the roads that wind in and out among them, guides also make a stop at the plantations of Oahu where experts explain the interesting facts about pineapple culture. Then at the invitation of the guide, visitors delight in eating samples of the Monarch of Fruits as it comes direct from the sun-ripened fields.

If the novice is allowed to break the fruit from the stem, he is surprised to find how heavy the "Smooth Cayenne" variety feels. Its average weight is ten pounds.

Then follow very enjoyable moments of dashing the big pineapples against a rock, so that the shell can be broken away from the choice fruit inside. Still warm from the sun, and with all of the fully ripened goodness intact, tourists claim that there is no more delectable food in the world.

The guide suggests that those uninitiated to the richness of pineapple sample some of the meat close to the shell, since it is this part,—from which, incidentally, the "crushed" pineapple is canned, that is most choice.

A brief glance at the history of the pineapple gives some idea of what modern inventions have done to supply this luxury at so low a price.

Indians were the first to offer the fruit to Spanish explorers as something unusually luscious. Since it took a long time to get back home to Spain and pineapple was too perishable to stand the long voyage, the Spaniards took the suckers from which pineapples are grown, and it was raised in Morocco under glass. From Spain it spread to other countries, and in London a breeder developed the variety known as "Smooth Cayenne."

It is this variety for which Hawaii has become famous, since it is the very finest pineapple grown. Captain Kidwell, an Englishman who heard much of the wonders of Hawaii, went over and established a modest canning plant there, and began to raise this choice variety.

The fruit is raised by planters who sell it to canners and the farming is done in a modern way with tractors for preparing the soil and plowing, after which native and South Sea Island workers set out the slips and keep them free from weeds. The plants grow from two to three feet in height, with saw-edge spiky leaves, and in eighteen to twenty months after planting, the fruit is picked dead ripe, a delicious sun-ripened product.

To be at its best, pineapple must be picked thus, when ripened in the fields. And since it spoils too quickly to stand shipping when ripe, it is rushed to the canneries and quickly packed into cans so that none of the exquisite flavor of the thoroughly matured fruit is lost.

The canneries are big central plants in Honolulu and other cities. Twice a day, trains laden down with pineapples leave for the canneries, and an illustration of the speed with which they are canned is that of a single Hawaiian cannery which puts up in one day 644,000 pineapples.

The Ginaca machine invented by an Hawaiian, peels off the pineapples' hard irregular "shell," sizes the fruit to fit the can, cuts out the core and cuts off the ends, all at the whirlwind rate of thirty-five to sixty pineapples a minute.

An interesting device pours heavy syrup into each can after which they are sealed and passed through long steaming boxes, where they are cooked from seven to twelve minutes. After cooling and storing, so that any defective can will be revealed, the perfect cans are ready for export.

And although the can is opened in the modern kitchen and poured into a glass dish, perhaps, instead of being prepared in the castle on a silver platter to be placed before the king, its rare flavor makes it relished no less than in the days when it was a royal luxury.

A NEW JOB FOR A HOE

Hoes are being pressed into service this spring in territory infested by the European corn borer to cut cornstalks and stubble close to the ground and so prepare for burning or plowing. Both farmers and city gardeners are relying on this method of cleaning up remnants of the 1926 corn crop, in order to meet the government regulations.

ROASTING THE CORN BORER

In badly infested fields Uncle Sam's corn borer fighters roast the borers to a turn with a high-pressure oil burning machine generating 1,400 degrees of heat.

PEACH SURVEY IN FIGHT ON BLIGHT

An orchard-to-orchard survey of the "peach belt" in southwestern Michigan, results of which may lead to a request that the state legislature amend the present law regarding eradication of diseased trees, has just been completed, the state department of agriculture and Professor C. W. Bennett, plant pathologist at Michigan State college, cooperating on the project.

A report on the investigation will be made at the annual winter meeting of the Michigan Horticultural society at Grand Rapids, in December, when the association will confer on plans for controlling the "yellow" and "little peach" diseases which threaten the future of the industry in the state.

If the situation proves as serious as it is thought, growers are considering a united effort to have the state legislature pass a new law covering methods of orchard clean-ups. When the two diseases first appeared in the state, 1866-90, and nearly destroyed the peach crop, a state ruling providing for the appointment, of commissioners by township horticultural boards, was passed. This law is in force still, but members of the horticultural society consider it unsatisfactory, because of the limited number of men who have any scientific knowledge of peach-growing.

Wild Fowl Scarce In Livingston and Genessee Counties

Migrating wildfowl are growing scarce in the waters of Genesee and Livingston counties, say sportsmen.

It was not so many years ago that a large number of water fowl, on their way southward, early in the fall, dropped down into the lakes and rivers that lay scattered thickly over southern Genesee and northern Livingston counties, where they remained until the lakes became sheeted with ice, often clinging to the waters of the rivers until late in December.

The fact that privately owned waters, where hunting by the public is forbidden, has evidently been an incentive to draw a number of wild fowl into security. In addition to this, the disappearance along the shore lines of lakes and rivers of wild rice and other wild grain has contributed to this scarcity. The duck is guided by his sense of hunger to a far greater extent than to any intuitive sense of fear.

Michigan Golfer Is Among Skilled In Los Angeles Test

A Michigan golfer is among the 30 so far entered in the Los Angeles $10,000 open golf championship, carrying an additional $5,000 in complementary competitions, the richest golf tournament in the world.

Although the tournament will not be held until January, some of the best known golfers in the country have forwarded their entries. Outstanding among them is Mike Brady, of New York; McDonald Smith, John Battini, Tom Kerrigan and Bobby Cruickshank, also of New York; Harry Cooper of Kansas City and Los Angeles; Eddie Loos of Lake Shore Country Club, Illinois; Tom Lally of San Antonio and Johnny Black of Witchita, Kansas.

Other entrants are Fred Barana, ittsburgh, Charles Johnston, Omaha; Joe Novak, San Francisco; Frank Sprogell, Saginaw, Mich.; John Golden, Paterson, N J.

ENORMOUS PROFITS

Made by Investors

"No investment on earth is so safe, so sure, so certain to enrich its owner as undeveloped realty. I always advise my friends to place their savings in realty near some growing city. There is no such savings bank anywhere."
—Grover Cleveland.

The AVERAGE annual rate of increase in value of Wayne County real estate outside the city limits—60% per year —AND CUT THAT INTO ONE-THIRD.

Let us say that instead of increasing 60% in value in ONE year, it takes THREE years for a piece of well located subdivision property to increase 60% in value.

On this assumption, a well located $1,000 lot bought today, would be worth $1,600 three years from now.

Our properties are strategically located, being surrounded by the greatest industrial activity the world has ever known.

Mile-a-Day Run to Keep Swimmers Fit Before Dip in Pool

Matt Mann, varsity swimming coach of Ann Arbor, has a unique method of getting his charges into condition. Before his swimmers report for regular practice in the pool he orders them to run a mile a day at the Yost field house. Imagine the swimming team in swimming suits and tennis shoes running a mile at the field house while most of the remainder of the athletes in the building are in football togs.

The Michigan team placed second in the conference meet a year ago, and Coach Mann is starting this year early in an effort to come out on top.

George Morine, holder of the world's plunging record with the distance of 83 feet, is now enrolled in the law school. He has been working out in the pool of late, and his amazing plunges have set the spectators to inquiring as to his identity.

TOURIST TRAVEL IN STATE RECORD

"Eastern Michigan," says T. F. Marston, of Bay City, "has just closed its greatest summer tourist and resort season. The warm weather was late in arriving, but when it did come the tourists came with it in a rush. The visitors, according to the registers in the various hotels and camps, were from every state in the Union, every province in Canada, the Panama canal zone, the Philippines, England, France, India and Japan."

Mr. Marston is secretary and treasurer of the East Michigan Tourists association, an organization which keeps careful track of the northward movement of the summer population.

"Attendance at the 33 state parks in East Michigan," he says, "show big increases over last year, in some cases these increases running as high as 200 per cent. Total attendance leaped from 2,500,000 to 4,000,000. At one park among those registered were residents of England, France, Bombay, India, Lagonay Gamarines, France, and Japan. The regular resorts show increased business ranging from 10 to 150 per cent.

Last year state authorities estimated the tourist and resort business of the state as a whole at $200,000,000. This year it is estimated that the business amounted to at least $250,000,000.

Calhoun Women Will Have Sewing Lessons

Arrangements have been made with the home demonstration department of Michigan State college whereby the women of Calhoun county will be permitted to take part in a series of lessons in sewing.

The course is designed to teach the selection, care and construction of clothing. It will be conducted on a group system. Any group of not more than 12 women may take the work. From their number two leaders or teachers will be selected to go once a month to the county seat to receive instructions direct from a Michigan State college teacher. They will relay these instructions to the other members of their group.

Series Stress Need of Regulation Ball Park

Regulation ball parks must come sooner or later. The world series of the past three or four years is making apparent the necessity of such a thing.

Football games are played on regulation fields. The distance from goal post to goal post on every gridiron is exactly the same. All tennis courts are laid out the same way. There is a set distance for every regulation bowling alley. It is the same in most every sport.

Not so in baseball. There is nothing regulation about the big league ball parks. A home run on certain grounds would be an easy out on others.

The desire to get the utmost seating capacity has done away with the thought of regulation fields.

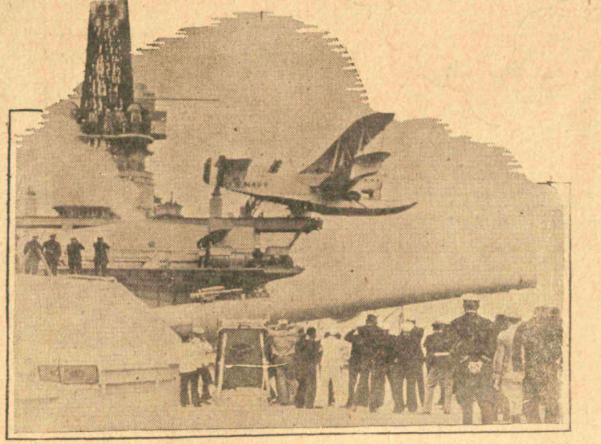
"Hort" Show at State in Hands of Students

The annual display of fruits, flowers and vegetables, known as the "Hort Show," one of the main attractions of Farmers' week at Michigan State college, will be entirely in the hands of students this year, and is planned to occupy all available space in the first and second floors of the $400,000 horticultural building. Kenneth Lyle, of Paw Paw, student manager of the show, has announced.

Students already have commenced preparations, for the yintend to make the event one worthy of a prominent place in the annals of agricultural history at Michigan State. The dates have been announced as January 31 to February 4, or the first five days of Farmers' week.

Ninety million pounds of bromide is needed to treat the gasoline consumed annually in the United States.

First Plane Catapulted From Battleship by Powder



"History in the Making" may be the term applied to the shooting of a 5,100-pound amphibian plane from the top of the turret of the U. S. S. "West Virginia" in Los Angeles harbor. It never had been done before. A charge of powder equivalent to that used in an eight-inch shell was exploded. Lieut. D. S. Fahrney piloted the plane in the experimental take-off.

Hydro-Electric Co. Unit On Thornapple River Is Completed

One unit of two hydro-electric plants located on the Thornapple river at Cascade and Ada has been completed and placed in operation, according to the engineers in charge, and the second will be completed during the winter.

The annual production of the two plants will be around 17,000,000 kilowatt hours.

The Ada dam, with a head of 23 feet, was the first to be completed. Work was started about Jan. 1.

The total cost of both projects will be nearly a million dollars.

The two sites on the Thornapple have long been considered desirable locations for such a development. In the possession of Burd, Giffels and Hamilton, the designing engineers, is a copy of a bill introduced into the Michigan legislature in 1837, a year after the states entered the union, in which permission was asked to erect a water power plant on the sites now occupied, taking advantage of the drop of about 50 feet in elevation at that point.

The project, however, was never completed, but was renewed at intervals until 1923.

State College Teachers Physical Educators

Another step to broaden the scope of education at Michigan State College has been made in the addition of a four-year course to train men for the teaching of physical education, according to an announcement by Dean John Philen, head of the education department.

Washington Girls Issue Albion Debate Challenge

An invitation to meet Albion college co-eds in debate has been received from girls of George Washington university at the national capital. It may not be possible to accept the date on account of the crowded condition of the Methodist girls' schedule. Randolph-Macon college of Ashland, Va., also has asked for a meeting with the men's team of Albion.

Man Lost for Five Days Walks in 6-Mile Circle

Gunnard Norman, 26, Grand River, woodsman for whom a large band of men had been searching in the woods 15 miles north of Rapid River, returned to his home hungry, exhausted and his clothes in tatters. Norman had been wandering about in the woods, swamps and sand plains for five days, and, it is estimated, covered a territory in his wanderings of only six miles in diameter.

Daily Weather Data Given Air Mail Pilots

A new service to the airplanes carrying mail between Grand Rapids and Detroit will be furnished by the government weather bureau office.

D. A. Seeley, meteorologist, in charge of the East Lansing station, announces that the office would furnish daily reports on upper air currents obtained through pilot balloon observations.

No beaver dam is ever finished, nor is it ever without need of repair, which explains why beavers always are busy.

BEAUTY SPOTS OFF MAIN HIGHWAYS

They who travel only the main highways of Michigan see but a small part of its beauty and enjoy but a small part of the pleasure afforded by the Peninsular state. Through the trivial discomforts of a few miles over comparatively poor roads find rich recompense at "the end of the trail" in many of the out-of-the-way places, few ever take the trouble to go to the end.

One such place is the little village of Wellston, tucked away in the southeast corner of Manistee county, serene in its beauty, unspolled gift sof nature, and just waiting to be "discovered" and used as a playground by the heat-weary, city-weary folks who rush northward during the summer months.

For th eearly spring fisherman, lover of the fly rod, there is the Pine river with its inducements—and the Pine needs no introduction to well versed lovers of the sport. For the later months there are Crystal lake, Long lake and Pine lake, almost within the village limits, one might say, abounding in bass and other fish, surrounded by wooded camping sites, and all having excellent bathing beaches. Regular camping grounds are provided for tourists by the village at Pine lake, and there are also hotel accommodations for those who prefer that to living in the open.

Should one tire of the immediate vicinity there is the Big Manistee river, for the Wellston region extends from downsteam at High Bridge on up to and past Loomis Landing, with Junction Dam and the broad expanse of its beautiful backwater lak esituated somewhere about midway between.

A new electric washing machine has been designed weighing only 22 pounds and small enough to be stored on a shelf.

New Commander of U. S. Fleet in European Waters

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage.

Command of the American fleet in European waters has been placed in the hands of Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, who formerly was head of the Navy Department Bureau of Inspection in Washington. He replaces Rear Admiral Roger Wells, and has already sailed to assume his new duties.

Prairie Chickens In Michigan Now Are Ample For Hunting

The pinnated grouse or prairie chicken, rescued from extinction by protective legislation, has become common enough in Michigan to afford good shooting.

A few years ago prairie chickens were scarce indeed—they existed only in scattered covies which dwelt in remote swamp areas. Once in a while a rabbit hunter would follow his baying hounds into one of these swamps and then he would receive the surprise of his life when, with a roar, a big, yellowish cock would burst from the grass and go sailing away. Chances are that the hunter would tell of the incident months afterward for, generally speaking, the prairie chicken had vanished. Even the most optimistic of conservationists were gloomy over the future of this splendid bird of the uplands.

But today there are thousands of prairie chickens in Michigan and it is not extravagant to say that they far outnumber the ruffled grouse.

Alpine Experiment In County Building Of Roads Watched

Road builders and members of the boards of supervisors from several western Michigan counties are watching the experiment undertaken this year by Alpine township which turned a $10,000 appropriation over to the county road commission for use in making its township roads passable at all seasons.

Alpine township had 65 miles of dirt road. Upon its assessed valuation, which is not quite $2,500,000, at the present time, the township board had levied various assessments for road appropriations which annually were expended for repairs, with little permanent result.

At last spring's town meeting, the voters of the township, by a large majority, directed its board to turn over its $10,000 road fund to the county road commission in an effort to determine if the money could not be more economically used by the road builders than it had been expended under the township supervision in the past. The road commission accepted the task.

James Whitcomb Riley Highway Route Decided

Routing of the James Whitcomb Riley Memorial highway through Grand Rapids over the present course of the Mackinaw trail, M-13, as against a proposed routing through the residential section of the city has been decided.

Steps were also taken to form an organization to look after the interests of the Riley highway in Grand Rapids and Kent county.

Fat Girls Barred At Ann Arbor For Athletic Teachers

To be "pleasingly plump" is a practice not frowned upon by women beauty experts of a certain type, but to be fat—that is a different story, at least in the eyes of the physical department of the Educational School of the University of Michigan.

And as a result, three would-be gymnasium teachers have been refused admission to the school and have been sent elsewhere to reduce and repent their excessive corpulence.

While the names of these three damsels of overplump build are strictly withheld, even from the carriers of campus rumors, the school authorities are not reluctant to state their reasons for refusing admittance. They even say that one of the three has been sent to the literary school, where weight is not a factor, to serve a term while she improves her figure.

CHAPTER VI.

Sherlock Holmes Gives a Demonstration

"Now, Watson," said Holmes, rubbing his hand, "we have half an hour to ourselves. Let us make good use of it. My case is, as I have told you, almost complete; but we must not err on the side of over-confidence. Simple as the case seems now, there may be something deeper underlying it."

"Simple!" I ejaculated.

"Surely," said he, with something of the air of a clinical professor expounding to his class. "Just sit in the corner there, that your footprints may not complicate matters. Now to work! In the first place, how did these folks come, and how did they go? The door has not been opened since last night. How of the window?" He carried the lamp across to it, muttering his observations aloud the while, but addressing them to himself rather than to me. "Window is snibbed on the inner side. Framework is sold. No hinges at the side. Let us open it. No water pipe near it. Roof quite out of reach. Yet a man has mounted by the window. It rained a little last night. Here is the print of a foot in mold upon the sill. And here is a circular muddy mark, and here again upon the floor, and here again by the table. See here, Watson! This is really a very pretty demonstration."

I looked at the round, well-defined, muddy disks. "This is not a footmark," said I.

"It is something much more valuable to us. It is the impression of a wooden stump. You see here on the sill is the bootmark, a heavy boot with a broad metal heel, and beside it is the mark of the timber-toe."

"It is the wooden-legged man."

"Quite so. But there has been something else—a very able and efficient ally. Could you scale that wall, doctor?"

I looked out of the open window. The moon still shone brightly on that angle of the house. We were a good sixty feet from the ground, and, look where I would, I could see no foothold, nor as much as a crevice in the brick-work.

"It is absolutely impossible," I answered.

"Without aid it is so. But suppose you had a friend up here who lowered you this good stout rope which I see in the corner, securing one end of it to this great hook in the wall. Then, I think, if you were an active man you might climb up, wooden leg and all. You would depart, of course, in the same fashion, and your ally would draw pu the rope, untie it from the hook, shut the window, snub it on the inside, and get away in the way he originally came. As a minor point it may be noted," he continued, fingering the rope, "that our wooden-legged friend, though a fair climber, was not a professional sailor. His hands were far from horny. My lens discloses more than one blood-mark, especially toward the end of the rope, from which I gather that he slipped down with such velocity that he took the skin off his hands."

"This is all very well," said I, "but the thing becomes more unintelligible than ever. How about this mysterious ally? How came he into the room?"

"Yes, the ally!" repeated Holmes, pensively. "There are features of interest about this ally. He lifts the case from the regions of the commonplace. I fancy this ally breaks fresh ground in the annals of crime in this country—though parallel cases suggest themselves from India, and, if my memory serves me, from Senegambia."

"How came he, then?" I reiterated. "The door is locked, the window is inaccessible. Was it through the chimney?"

"The grate is much too small," he answered. "I have already considered that possibility."

"How then?" I persisted.

"You will not apply my precept," he said, shaking his head. "How often have I said to you that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however, improbable, must be the truth? We know that he did not come through the door, the window, or the chimney. We also know that he could not have been concealed in the room, as there is no concealment possible. Whence, then, did he come?"

"He came through the hole in the roof," I cried.

"Of course he did. He must have done so. If you will have the kindness to hold the lamp for me, we shall now extend our researches to the room above—the secret room in which the treasure was found."

He mounted the steps, and seizing a rafter with either hand, he swung himself up into the garret. Then, lying on his face, he reached down for the lamp and held it while I followed him.

The chamber in which we found ourselves was about ten feet one way and six the other. The floor was formed by the rafters, with thin lath and plaster between them, so that in walking one had to step from beam to beam. The roof ran up to an apex, and was evidently the inner shell of the true roof of the house. There was no furniture of any sort, and the accumulated dust of years lay thick upon the floor.

"Here you are, you see," said Sherlock Holmes, putting his hand against the sloping wall. "This is a trap-door which leads out on to the roof. I can press it back, and here is the roof itself, sloping at a gentle angle. This, then, is the way by which Number One entered. Let us see if we can find some other traces of his individuality."

He held down the lamp to the floor and as he did so I saw for the second time that night a startled, surprised look come over his face. For myself, as I followed his gaze, my skin was cold under my clothes. The floor was covered thickly with the prints of a naked foot—clear, well defined, perfectly formed, but scarce half the size of those of an ordinary man.

"Holmes," said I, in a whisper, "a child has done this horrid thing."

He had recovered his self-possession in an instant. "I was staggered for the uoment," he said, "but the thing is quite natural. My memory failed me, or I should have been able to foretell it. There is nothing more to be learned here. Let us go down."

"What is your theory, then, as to those footmarks?" I asked, eagerly, when we had regained the lower room once more.

"My dear Watson, try a little analysis yourself," said he, with a touch of impatience. "You know my methods. Apply them; and it will be instructive to compare results."

"I cannot conceive anything which will cover the facts," I answered.

"It will be clear enough to you soon," he said, in an offhand way. "I think that there is nothing else of importance here, but I will look." He whipped out his lens and a tape-measure, and hurried about the room on his knees, comparing, examining, with his long thin nose only a few inches from the planks, and his beady eyes gleaming and deep-set, like those of a bird. So swift, silent, and furtive were his movements, like those of a trained bloodhound picking out a scent, that I could not but think what a terrible criminal he would have made had he turned his energy and sagacity against the law instead of exerting them in its defense. As he hunted about, he kept muttering to himself, and finally he broke out into a loud crow of delight.

"We are certainly in luck," said he. "We ought to have very little trouble now. Number One has had the misfortune to tread in the creosote. You can see the outline of the edge of his small foot here at the right of this evil-smelling mess. The carboy has been cracked, you see, and the stuff has leaked out."

"What then?" I asked.

"Why, we have got him, that's all," said he. "I know a dog that would follow that scent to the world's end. If a pack can track a trailed herring across a shire, how far can a specially trained hound follow so pungent a smell as this? It sounds like a sum in the rule of three. The answer should give us the—— But halloo! here are the accredited representatives of the law."

Heavy steps and the clamor of loud voices were audible from below, and the hall door shut with a loud crash.

"Before they come," said Holmes, "just put your hand here on this poor fellow's arm, and here on his leg. What do you feel?"

"The muscles are as hard as a board," I answered.

"Quite so. They are in a state of extreme contraction, far exceeding the usual 'rigor mortis.' Coupled with this distortion of the face, this Hippocratic smile, or 'risus sardonicus,' as the old writers called it, what conclusion would it suggest to your mind?"

"Death from some powerful vegetable alkaloid," I answered; "some strychnine-like substance which would produce tetanus."

"That was the idea which occurred to me the instant I saw the drawn muscles of the face. On getting into the room I at once looked for the means by which the poison had entered the system. As you saw, I discovered a thorn which had been driven or shot with no great force into the scalp. You observe that the part struck was that which would be turned toward the hole in the ceiling if the man were erected in his chair. Now examine this thorn."

I took it up gingerly and held it in the light of the lantern. It was long, sharp, and black, with a glazed look near the point as though some gummy substance had dried upon it. The blunt end had been trimmed and rounded off with a knife.

"Is that an English thorn?" he asked.

"No, it certainly is not."

"With all these data you should be able to draw some just inference. But here are the regulars; so the auxiliary forces may beat a retreat."

As he spoke, the steps which had been coming nearer sounded loudly on the passage, and a very stout, portly man in a gray suit strode heavily into the room. He was red-faced, burly, and plethoric, with a pair of very small twinkling eyes, which looked keenly out from between swollen and puffy pouches. He was closely followed by an inspector in uniform, and by the still palpitating Thaddeus Sholto.

"Here's a business!" he cried, in a muffled, husky voice. "Here's a pretty business! But who are all these? Why, the house seems to be as full as a rabbit-warren."

"I think you must recollect me, Mr. Athelney Jones," said Holmes, quietly.

"Why, of course, I do!" he wheezed. "It's Mr. Sherlock Holmes, the theorist. Remember you! I'll never forget how you lectured us all on causes, and inferences, and effects in the Bishopsgate jewel case. It's true you set us on the right track, but you'll own now that it was more by good luck than good guidance."

"It was a piece of very simple reasoning."

"Oh, come now, come! Never be ashamed to own up. But what is all this? Bad business! Bad business! Stern facts here—no room for theories. How lucky that I happened to be out at Norwood over another case! I was at the station when the message arrived. What d'you think the man died of?"

"Oh, this is hardly a case for me to theorize over," said Holmes, dryly.

"No, no. Still, we can't deny that you hit the nail on the head sometimes. Dear me! Door locked, I understand. Jewels worth thalf a million missing. How was the window?"

"Fastened; but there are steps on the sill."

"Well, well; if it was fastened, the steps could have nothing to do with the matter. That's common sense. Man might have died in a fit; but then the jewels are missing. Ha! I have a theory. These flashes come upon me at times. Just step outside, sergeant, and you, Mr. Sholto. Your friend can remain. What do you think of this, Holmes? Sholto was, on his own confession, with his brother last night. The brother died in a fit, on which Sholto walked off with the treasure. How's that?"

"On which the dead man very considerately got up and locked the door on the inside."

"Hum! There's a flaw there. Let us apply common sense to the matter. This Thaddeus Sholto was with his brother; there was a quarrel; so much we know. The brother is dead and the jewels are gone. So much also we know. No one saw the brother from the time Thaddeus left him. His bed had not been slept in. Thaddeus is evidently in a most disturbed state of mind. His appearance is—well, not attractive. You see that I am weaving my web round Thaddeus. The net begins to close upon him."

"You are not quite in possession of the facts yet," said Holmes. "This splinter of wood, which I have every reason to believe to be poisoned, was in the man's scalp where you still see the mark; this card, inscribed as you see it, was on the table; and beside it lay this rather curious stone-headed instrument. How does all this fit into your theory?"

"Confirms it in every respect,'" said the fat detective, pompously. "House is full of Indian curiosities. Thaddeus brought this up, and if this splinter be poisoned, Thaddeus may as well have made murderous use of it as any other man. The card is some hocus-pocus—a blind, as like as not. The only question is, How did he depart? Ah, of course, here is a hole in the roof." With great activity, considering his bulk, he sprung up the steps and squeezed through into the garret, and immediately afterward we heard his exulting voice proclaiming that he had found the trap-door.

"He can find something," remarked Holmes, shrugging his shoulders. "He has occasional glimmerings of reason. Il n'y a pas des sots si incommodes que ceux qui ont de l'esprit!"

"You see!" said Athelney Jones, reappearing down the steps again. "Facts are better than mere theories, after all. My view of the case is confirmed. There is a trap-door communicating with the roof, and it is partly open."

"It was I who opened it."

"Oh, indeed! You did notice it, then?" He seemed a little crestfallen at the discovery. "Well, whoever noticed it, it shows how our gentleman got away. Inspector!"

"Yes, sir," from the passage.

"Ask Mr. Sholto to step this way. Mr. Sholto, it is my duty to inform you that anything which you may say will be used against you. I arrest you in the queen's name as being concerned in the death of your brother."

"There, now! Didn't I tell you?" cried the poor little man, throwing out his hands, and looking from one to the other of us.

"Don't trouble yourself about it, Mr. Sholto," said Holmes. "I think that I can engage to clear you of the charge."

"Don't promise too much, Mr. Theorist—don't promise too much!" snapped the detective. "You may find it a harder matter than you think."

"Not only will I clear him, Mr. Jones, but I will make you a free present of the name and description of one of the two people who were in the room last night. His name, I have every reason to believe, is Jonathan Small. He is a poorly educated man; small, active, with his right leg off, and wearing a wooden stump which is worn away upon the inner side. His left boot has a coarse, square-toed sole, with an iron band round the heel. He is a middle-aged man, much sunburned, and has been a convict. These few indications may be of some assistance to you, coupled with the fact that there is a good deal of skin missing from the palm of his hand. The other man——"

"Ah, the other man?" asked Athelney Jones, in a sneering voice, but impressed none the less, as I could easily see, by the precision of the other's manner.

"Is a rather curious person," said Sherlock Holmes, turning upon his heel. "I hope before very long to be able to introduce you to the pair of them. A word with you, Watson."

He led me out to the head of the stair. "This unexpected occurrence," he said, "caused us rather to lose sight of the original purpose of our journey."

"I have just been thinking so," I answered. "It is not right that Miss Morstan should remain in this stricken house."

"No. You must escort her home. She lives with Mrs. Cecil Forrester, in Lower Camberwell; so it is not very far. I will wait for you, here, if you will drive out again. Or perhaps you are too tired?"

"By no means. I don't think I could rest until I know more of this fantastic business. I have seen something of the rough side of life, but I give you my word that this quick succession of strange surprises tonight has shaken my nerve completely. I should like, however, to see the matter through with you, now that I have got so far."

"Your presence will be of great service to me," he answered. "We shall work the case out independently, and leave this fellow Jones to exult over any mare's-nest which he may choose to construct. When you have dropped Miss Morstan I wish you to go on to No. 3 Pinchin Lane, down near the water's edge, at Lambeth. The third house on the right-hand side is a bird-stuffer's; Sherman is the name. You will see a weasel holding a young rabbit in the window. Rouse old Sherman up, and tell him, with my compliments, that I want Toby at once. You will bring Toby back in the cab with you."

"A dog, I suppose?"

"Yes, a queer mongrel, with a most amazing power of scent. I would rather have Toby's help than that of the whole detective force of London."

"I shall bring him, then," said I. "It is one now. I ought to be back before three, if I can get a fresh horse."

"And I," said Holmes, "shall see what I can learn from Mrs. Bernstone, and from the Indian servant, who, Mr. Thaddeus tells me, sleeps in the next garret. Then I shall study the great Jones' methods, and listen to his not too delicate sarcasms. 'Wir sind gewohnt, dass die Menschen verhoehnen, was sie nicht verstehen.' Goethe is always pithy."

CHAPTER VII.

The Episode of the Barrel

The police had brought a cab with them, and in this I escorted Miss Morstan to her home. After the angelic fashion of women, she had borne trouble with a calm face as long as there was someone weaker than herself to support, and I had found her bright and placid by the side of the frightened housekeeper. In the cab, however, she first turned faint, and then burst into a passion of weeping, so sorely had she been tried by the adventures of the night. She has told me since that she thought me cold and distant upon that journey. She little guessed the struggle within my breast, or the effort of self-restraint which held me back. My sympathies and my love went out to her, even as my hand had in the garden. I felt that years of the conventionalities of life could not teach me to know her sweet, brave nature as had this one day of strange experiences. Yet there were two thoughts which sealed the words of affection upon my lips. She was weak and helpless, shaken in mind and nerve. It was to take her at a disadvantage to obtrude love upon her at such a time. Worse still, she was rich. If Holmes' researches were successful, she would be an heiress. Was it fair, was it honorable, that a half-pay surgeon should take such advantage of an intimacy which chance had brought? Might she not look upon me as a mere vulgar fortune-seeker? I could not bear to risk that such a thought could cross her mind. This Agra treasure intervened like an impassable barrier between us.

It was nearly two o'clock when we reached Mrs. Cecil Forrester's. The servants had retired hours ago, but Mrs. Forrester had been so interested by the strange message which Mrs. Morston had received, that she had sat up in the hope of her return. She opened the door herself, a middle-aged, graceful woman, and it gave me joy to see how tenderly her arm stole around the other's waist, and how motherly was the voice in which she greeted her. She was clearly no mere paid dependent, but an honored friend. I was introduced, and Mrs. Forrester earnestly begged me to step in and tell her our adventures. I explained, however, the importance of my errand, and promised faithfully to call and report any progress we might make with the case. As we drove away, I stole a glance back, and I still seem to see that little group on the step, the two graceful, clinging figures, the half-opened door, the hall light shining through stained glass, the barometer, and the bright stair-rods. It was soothing to catch even that passing glimpse of a tranquil English home in the midst of the wild, dark business which had absorbed us.

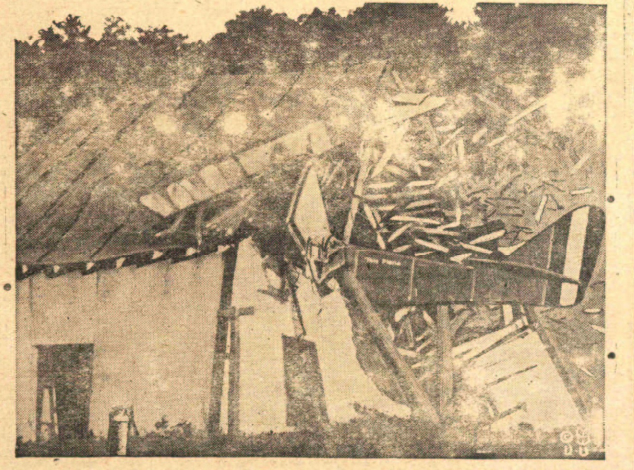
Some men are so mean that they won't even pay back borrowed trouble.

And The Aviator Didn't Get A Scratch!



This remarkable photo shows what happened when a former army aviator, flying his own machine at about 100 miles an hour, crashed through two telephone poles and ripped into this house. To the amazement of the onlookers, the lucky fellow crawled uninjured from the wreckage—bearing in arms his black cat mascot. The mystery of how he got away without a scratch, however, was solved when it was seen that every part of his body had been well padded with athletic wearing apparel—chiefly football pad arrangements.

TRACES FAMILY BACK TO 870 A. D.

How far back can your family history be traced?

Fridolin Tschudy, pastor of the Salem Evangelical Church, Highland Park, can trace his to 870 A. D. Can you do as much? The chances are that you can't and it is also possible there are some ruling heads of European countries who cannot.

The Rev. Mr. Tschudy not only can claim Johann I, of Switzerland, as the founder of his family, but he can prove it by means of a real family tree, a great map of ancestry that measures 8 by 5 feet, with dozens of main branches and thousands of small twigs.

"A Mr. Bloomer, who married into the family, became interested in family history and proposed to my grandfather that he trace the family tree," declared the Detroit Tschudy. "He started working on the venture in 1835 and completed it 17 years later."

The Tschudy family history is remarkable in many respects as proven by the tree records. There seems to have been a desire for all Tschudys to enter public service, as the record of 1,157 years prove.

On the main branch of the tree stands the name of Rudolph Tschudy, and he is the one responsible for the uprooted pine trees in the family coat of arms. It is said that the ancient Tschudy got into a controversy with nine other persons. During the conflict he broke his sword and could find no other weapons than the pine trees about him. He pulled one of these up by the roots and smote the nine dead.

The tree history discloses that several members of the family fought as officers with Napoleon. Another became the chief of police for all Russia. Still another became "secretarie of the king's legations" in Germany.

"I believe the most remarkable man of all is the distant relative, who, according to the records, could recite the entire Bible by heart," declared Mr. Tschudy.

Eleven centuries brought about many changes in the family religion. A division is shown at the time of the Reformation, some of the branches retaining the old religion, others joining the new movement. There are two main Tschudy descendants in Detroit. One of these is an Evangelical preacher and the other a Catholic. And, so it has gone on through the centuries.

The first Tschudys, as the tree discloses, came to America in 1826. There were three brothers, J. Jacob Tschudy being the grandfather of the Detroit minister.

QUITS OFFICE WHEN FIVE-DAY LAW HITS MARRIAGE BUSINESS

Charles N. Dickinson, 86 years old, who has served Grand Haven as a justice of peace for 15 years, has resigned. He's going to take life easy now, he says, although he is active and will keep an office in the county building where he has been for 15 years.

Justice Dickinson says that the new five-day marriage law in Michigan has reduced business. Before this law was enacted, Justice Dickinson was called on frequently to officiate at marriages. During the 15 years he performed 374 marriages.

"When the five-day law went into effect," he said, "the young people gave more attention to planning their wedding and usually obtained a minister. My marriage business was reduced."

Mr. Dickinson was the oldest justice in Michigan. During his 15 years of service he presided at the trials or examinations in more than 1,600 criminal cases. He is a native of Ottawa County.

FAGS AND SWEETS REPAY SERENADERS AT STATE COLLEGE

When 13 husky young voices open up on the barber shop harmony of "Sweet Adeline," it is the signal for Michigan State College co-eds to rush to the dormitory window, bearing gifts of cigarets, candy and cake for the "Thursday Night Serenaders," the most popular group of troubadours on the campus.

Now, there are serenaders and serenaders, as co-eds—and townspeople—have long since discovered. But this particular group gained the special cognomen and their campus-wide reputation because of a certain habit of sallying forth on Thursday evenings, weather permitting.

Although the Thursday Nighters organized last spring, their tuneful efforts were not fully recognized until a short time ago. In spite of the fact that the group is entirely unofficial, and is not affiliated directly with the college glee club or music department, the serenaders succeed in producing some rich and touching harmony.

Growers To Study Stock Feed Tests

More economical and efficient fattening rations for cattle and hogs will be discussed by Michigan farmers at a Livestock Feeder's Day to be held at East Lansing, June 9. Results of recent feeding experiments at M. S. C. will form the basis for the discussion.

Members of the animal husbandry department at the college say that the experiment to determine the relative worth of cottonseed and linseed meal in a ration for calves apparently will contradict the popular opinion that feeding of cottonseed meal to calves for long periods is injurious to the animals.

Selected cuts from prime baby beeves will be served at the noon luncheon. In addition to determining the value of rations in producing gains, the value of the feeds for producing high grade cuts of meat will be determined by slaughter tests of the animals. Tests of carcasses will be made at the Bellsville, Maryland, laboratory.

One of the experiments is a continuation of the work to find how high a percentage of the the fattening ration for hogs can be made up of cull beans before the quality of the work produced is lowered Cull beans are a standard feed in Michigan, and it is believed that the experiment will show whether the packers are justified in their contention that too many beans produce soft pork.

HAWAIIAN PINEAPPLE IN PIES AND TARTS

EVERY mother of boys is aware that pie must appear on the table "every so often". If she thinks too much of the regular kind of pie is not good for her family, she still pleases them by providing pie, but uses occasionally just the bottom crust, or substitutes a cake crust.

It is amazing how, during the last few years, pineapple pie has supplanted in favor many of the old-time favorites. It won enthusiastic acceptance with pie-fanciers at the first taste, and has steadily increased in popularity.

This delicious fruit lends itself particularly well for use in uncovered pies, which are both more wholesome than the covered and may be made more decorative. Topped with a golden meringue, or in tart form, the fruit showing a glacé surface, pineapple pies are decidedly appetizing. Three well-tested recipes follow.

PINEAPPLE MERINGUE PIE: Mix ½ cup each hot water and syrup drained from crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Bring to the boiling point and add slowly 3 tablespoons cornstarch and ¾ cup sugar which have been well mixed together. Boil for 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and add 1 teaspoon butter, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, ¾ cup drained crushed Hawaian pineapple, and 2 beaten egg yolks. Pour into a pastry-lined pie-dish and bake until pastry is well browned. Remove from the oven, cool slightly and cover with a meringue made from 2 stiffly beaten egg whites and 2 tablespoons powdered sugar. Brown the meringue in the oven.

RICH PINEAPPLE TARTS: Add ½ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon butter to 1 can crushed Hawaiian pineapple which has been carefully drained. Cook slowly for 8 or 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour into small pastry shells that have been baked but not allowed to brown. Bake until a film forms over the fruit, or about 10 minutes. Serve cold. These tarts look prettier if red cherries are mixed with the pineapple.

COVERED PINEAPPLE PIE: Heat 1½ cups of syrup drained from crushed Hawaiian pineapple, and into it pour the following mixture; ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Stir constantly and boil 5 minutes Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¾ cup seedless raisins, and ⅛ cup well-drained, crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Pour into pastry-lined pie pan, cover with top layer of pastry and put into a hot oven. After 10 minutes reduce the heat. Bake altogether ½ hour.

COMPANY PIES FOR EVERY DAY TASTES

By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary expert and lecturer on household science.

PRUNE meringue pie is a delicious dessert. Soak and stew as usual one pound of prunes, cool, drain and remove the stones. To the the pulp add two-thirds of a cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a tablespoonful of orange juice, and the prune juice reduced by cooking to one cupful. Line a pie pan with pastry and place the prune mixture in it, bake until the pastry begins to brown slightly, top with a meringue made by whipping the whites of two eggs to a stiff dry froth, then add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, beat again vigorously and finally fold in four additional tablespoonfuls sugar and a tablespoonful of orange juice. Arrange over the pie, and brown in a very slow oven, 250 to 300 degrees.

Cocoanut Apple Pie

Peel and slice thin, four large tart apples, place in a sauce pan with one-fourth cupful water, half a cup of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Simmer gently, until just tender, cool, line a pie pan with flaky pastry and fill with the cooked apples, sprinkle thickly with shredded cocoanut, cover in lattice fashion with criss cross strips of pastry, bake in a moderately hot oven. Just before serving, dot here and there with halved maraschino cherries.

Lemon Cream Pie

Cream together one-fourth cupful butter and one cupful sugar, beat in a tablespoonful of cornstarch and the well beaten yolks of three eggs, and the grated rind and juice of one large lemon. Beat the mixture until light, then add a cupful of rich milk and finally fold in the stiffly whipped whites of three eggs. Pour into a pastry lined pan and bake in a moderate oven. If the pie seems to brown too quickly, cover with a sheet of heavy paper. The filling should be firm in the center when the pie is finished.

Prune Cream Pie

Wash, soak and cook in one and one-half pints of water a pound of prunes. Cool, drain and remove pits, arrange the prunes in a pastry lined pan. Bring the prune juice to boiling point and thicken with two teaspoonfuls cornstarch blended with one-fourth cup of cold water, add three-fourths cupful sugar, and a tablespoonful of butter, pour over the pie and bake in a moderate oven. Cool and top with whipped cream sweetened and flavored to taste.

Coffee Nut Pie

Scald two cupfuls milk and pour it over half a cupful of sugar mixed with three tablespoonfuls cornstarch, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, and add one cupful clear strong black coffee. Cook over hot water till slightly thickened, then add two eggs beaten with one-fourth cupful sugar, cook five minutes longer, add half a cupful chopped nut meats and a teaspoonful vanilla. Pour into pastry lined pie shell, scatter granulated sugar and chopped nuts over surface, and bake in a moderate oven.

The Outstanding Feature

Of Modern Optometry is the ability of the Doctor of Optometry to successfully handle cases that heretofore were considered impossible. Within the past two weeks this office has been consulted by two cases, both of whom have made the rounds and been examined by the most renowned eye specialists of Ann Arbor and Toledo. In every instance glasses alone were prescribed to correct conditions hat no glasses in existence would cure. One of these cases in particular, Warren Delcamp of Fayette, Ohio, has gradually grown worse since childhood until binocular vision finally became impossible. He has consulted a number of specialists and every time been given a pair of glasses which gave no relief and was finally advised to go to the hospital at Ann Arbor. He did so, and his case was diagnosed as "one that would not respond to glasses"' and advised an operation was the only chance left of assisting in the restoration of his sight.

In six weeks time by the use of Modern Optical Equipment and Methods, Mr. Delcamp enjoys normal vision in both eyes with glasses proscribed by this office. Nothing startling about it.—Results that were obtained by the Application of the New Principles of OPTOMETRY by one thoroughly trained in their use.

If you are in need of glasses or lenses it will be to your advantage to consult a "Modern Doctor of Optometry" whose specialty is the conservation of sight. With such fitting of glasses is a profession, not a side line. If you have a child suffering with cross eyes, bring it in for examination and we will tell you frankly what can be done toward correcting them. There will be no charge for consultation.

Annual Commencement Draws Near

Rev. Jandy will deliver the baccalaureate address at the Congregational church from the subject "The Spirit of the Builders" on Sunday evening next at 7:30 central standard time. Music will be furnished by the choirs of two churches.

Commencement exercises will be held at Community Hall June 9th at 7;30 standard time. The graduating class this season is one of the largest in the history of our High school including twenty two as follows; Edward Lawrence, Anna Lawrence, Geraldine Taylor, Kathleen McFarland, Franklin Kempton, Herman Walters, Gordon Walworth, Harold Hersh, Donna Hersh, Henry Meyer, Jean Young, Berton Holcomb, Paul Williams, Marguerite Rogers, Eva Gary, Margaret Shambaugh, Richard Benge, Jeanette Roberts, Edith Bohn, Thelma Horton, Helen Draper, Frances Ambler. As these representative young people go out from our midst we believe they all have a remarkable future, From them are to be recruited our business men, our professional girls, our homemakers and best of all our most honorable and highly enlightened citizenship. It is seldom if ever that a graduate of the North Adams High School has proven a failure or anything but an honor to the institution, and as we look back and recall the beautiful characters and snappy intellectual young people who have made their debut in the social and business world during the past twenty five years after being tutored by our best instructors, we believe it ranks ahead of even the church for an uplifting influence without which no community could long hold its respectability. Some of the older alumni are scattered widely throughout this country but wherever they are, they make a mark for themselves as being upright, highly cultured and leaders in their classes. North Adams graduates never lack that strange and often concealed atom known as "pep" and when the right time arrives they use it to the amazement of the world at large. Let the good work go on. But for our unfortunate loss of a building rich in memories, we have nothing to regret. Our graduates will uphold the honor of the village wherever they abide.

It is with regret we learn the present Faculty is to be broken up next year and most of them will go elsewhere.

Get the Big Value in the Fence Post Field

STEEL fence posts are no longer all alike. The RED TOP Double Strength Studded Tee has set a new standard. It is a stronger post of longer life, easier and cheaper to set and easier and cheaper to fasten fencing to.

Greater Strength—due to adding more metal in a reinforcing rib (see illustration) and also due to the fact that there isn't a single hole punched in the post either for staples or anchor plate. No rivets required to attach anchor plate. (See illustration.)

Easier, cheaper setting—with the One Man RED TOP Driver one man without a helper can set 200 to 300 posts per day.

More efficient fence fastening—RED TOP Handy Fasteners makes it possible for one man to attach fencing to posts. And fastener holds fencing tighter.

VETERAN FARMERS ON HONOR ROLL

There long has been honor for veteran soldiers, veteran athletes, veteran teachers, veteran ministers, veteran statesmen, veteran this and that. And in Lapeer County there now is honor for veteran farmers, too.

Through the "Half Century Farmers' Club" the achievements of Lapeer's veteran agriculturists are being recognized. Anyone who has farmed for 50 years or more in the country is eligible. Each member is given an engraved certificate, stating that he belongs to "an honor association of agriculturists, tillers of the soil, breeders of stock, dairymen, poultrymen and orchardists who have devoted 50 years to the best calling allotted to man."

There are now 218 members.

The club is one of the first, if not the first, of its kind in the United States. It is attracting nation-wide attention. Letters of commendation have been received from President Coolidge; William M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture; Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois; Gov. Fred W. Green, of Michigan; Congressman Gilbert N. Haugen, of Iowa; Congressman Louis C. Cramton, of Lapeer; Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of Michigan State College; Gen. George O. Squier, of Washington, and others.

These men point out the value of the club in giving recognition to a calling that has received all too little recognition in the past and they recommend that the idea be adopted elsewhere.

In these days when the cities are luring the people away from the farms by the million, it is perhaps surprising that there should still be in one county upwards of 100 men who have spent 50 years of their lives on farms. From all parts of the county nominations for membership have poured in, and the list is still growing.

FOREST CONSERVATION FINDS FAVOR IN STATE

American Forestry Week has disclosed many interesting things, not the least of which was the widespread interest in the subject now prevalent throughout Michigan.

Carrying the need of conservation of our natural resources to the people by educational methods seems to be showing results as evidenced by the activities of organizations, private and civic, during the week set aside for public consideration of our forest needs.

Education of the public seems foreordained to accomplish more in bringing about a proper conservation of our remaining resources than all the activities carried on toward that end in the past.

DYNAMITE TAKES PLACE OF FARM DITCH DIGGERS

Dynamite is going to do the ditch digging in Michigan in the future. This is indicated by the demonstration given under the direction of C. P. Milham, Ottawa County agriculture agent, at various farms in this section. The demonstrations convinced farmers that the old back breaking methods are out of date.

Digging ditches by dynamite is faster and less expensive, it was demonstrated by Mr. Milham. The charges of explosive are placed every 20 inches and it was found that on the rod basis a ditch three feet deep and seven feet wide was made at a cost of 62 cents. A ditch 12 rods in length was dug in a few minutes.

SAVE STATE'S GREAT FALLS AS PARK FOR PUBLIC IS APPEAL

Thirty-five miles below the city of Newberry on one of Michigan's greatest trout streams is the Tahquamenon Falls, little known to the public, but one of Michigan's scenic beauty spots which is destined to rank with its chief attractions to tourists as well as citizens of the state in years to come.

Here the wide, swiftly flowing Tahquamenon river, after a hundred miles of meandering through one of the state's greatest expanse of swamp and original wilderness, takes a sheer plunge of 41 feet, a miniature Niagara in a setting of forest primeval—an awe-inspiring, thundering, roaring leap to seething, swirling angry waters, frothing in white anger at this desecration of nature's peaceful solitude.

Inaccessible except by trail through uncut forests or by boat or canoe trip by river, this beautiful waterfalls has, until lately, been known only to the occasional hunters or fishermen who briefly sojourned in the region during the open seasons on game and trout.

Lately its attractiveness, its value as a point of interest among the many throughout our interesting lake bound peninsulas, has become more generally known; and demand has been voiced that the territory and the falls be acquired by the state as a public park, a demand which seems to be looked upon favorably by the State Conservation Department.

ENGLISH GAINS AS WORLD LANGUAGE

In 1801 the number of persons who spoke English was only 20½ million; by 1890 it had grown to 111 million; today it is 170 million and is rapidly increasing. More than 10 per cent of the world's population uses English as their own language.

By 1950, if nothing unforseen occurs, English will used by twice as many persons as any other language, and by the year 2000 it will be the means of communication between one-quarter of the inhabitants of the globe, says The London Daily Mail.

More than that, since English is being taught in the schools of almost every civilized country, it seems certain by that time more than half the world's population will be able to read English. There can be hardly any doubt but that, in course of time, English is bound to become the world language.

The only European language apart from English which has increased on a grand scale is Russian, which is today used by about 100 million people. With all due respect to the use and beauties of the Russian language, it can hardly be said to be a serious rival to English.

Chinese is still used by an immense number. The present population of China is supposed to be about 420 million. But Chinese is so cumbrous a language that educated Chinese themselves admit that it cannot possibly survive.

The only living language besides English which is at present growing with any rapidity is Spanish. Spanish is the principal language of America from Mexico southward, and the population of the South American countries is increasing rapidly. Yet even Spanish is no likely rival to English as a world language.

NEW $3,500,000 PHONE CABLE TO CROSS STATE

Michigan Bell Telephone company is constructing a storm-proof transstate telephone cable, carrying 250 pairs of wires, that will reach from the east to the west coast of the state by the summer of 1928 and will cost approximately $3,500,000. As a part of the project, the company is expending upwards of three-quarters of a million dollars this year on the construction of the section of the cable between Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo and more than $600,000 to build the section between Ann Arbor and Jackson. The Detroit-Ypsilanti-Ann Arbor section already has been completed, at a cost of 1,000,000.

IMPROVED POTATO CROP PLANNED FOR MICHIGAN

As part of its program to market super-quality potatoes, the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange has supplied 14 "hand picked" growers in the tuber belt with enough certified seed potatoes to plant 75 acres which will be grown for seed purposes. These growers agree to deliver their crop to the exchange's local association at a price satisfactory to all concerned. This seed will be resold to growers of table stock for use in producing their 1928 crop.

BIG FUTURE SEEN FOR MOTOR BUS

Far from being a mere fad of the moment, the highway motor bus has come to stay, and represents the beginning of the great transportation of the future, in the opinion of Prof. W. W. Hitchcock, of the Michigan State college department of civil engineering, who bases his statement upon results of an extensive survey of bus operation in Michigan, just completed after six months' study and investigation.

With a yearly revenue of $5,482,312.45, highway motor bussses in this state operate more than 25,382,630 miles a year, carrying 19,266,415 passengers, his survey reveals. The data collected by Professor Hitchcock includes 108 companies and 541 busses and their records for the year 1925. A few lines have been added since. He found that 11 per cent of the bus mileage was under the management of railway companies in Michigan. In 1926, 35 per cent of the rail companies in the United States were running busses.

The tax per mile paid by the companies is $29.56, while the average cost to the state of maintaining highways over which the busses run, is $398, according to Professor Hitchcock's report. Seven and one-half per cent of the maintenance expenses are paid in through taxes.

In a comparison of rail and bus fares between terminals, the State college professor found that Michigan differs from most states. The average rates in this state were $1.38 for bus and $1.42 for railways, the latter being three per cent higher. A survey of eight eastern states, recently completed, shows that the bus fare was invariably higher than the rail fare.

The data collected by Hitchcock contains also the following interesting items: Total tax paid to state, $189,875.14, including $70,497.82 for license tags, $44,034 for permits, and $75,343.20 for yearly gas tax; total insurance paid by bus companies, $295,316.82; and total investment in business, $5,982,550.

Busses in the survey are operated over varying mileages, from 10 miles to 80. Most of them are kept within the boundaries of the state, although a few cross the border into Ohio. One company, which operates mainly around Detroit, has 702.9 miles of route, the record up to the present time.

DIVERS WORK TO KEEP SAND OUT CITY MAINS

Working 50 feet under water, divers are making repairs to the 48-inch intake pipe which carries Muskegon's water supply from more than a mile out in Lake Michigan. Every joint in the 6,000 feet of pipe is being repaired so sand will not be sucked into the breaks and then in the mains, and through the faucets to the homes.

Ice floes and other conditions have caused damage to the big pipe and as a result holes have developed at the joints. The result is that the fine Lake Michigan sand has been sucked into the mains and caused great damage to the pumps.

TRUCK TO TEACH CITY LUXURIES TO WOMEN ON FARMS

At a very small cost Mrs. Jones on the farm can enjoy the same home conveniences as her cousin, Mrs. Smith, in the city, according to the agricultural engineering and home economics departments of Michigan State College, which are arranging to operate a "home convenience truck" through 10 counties this year.

The truck will start from some point in Newaygo county, holding roadside meetings as it swings around through the state, displaying plumbing and furnishings for farm homes. The tentative itinerary, as announced by Larry J. Livingstone, follows:

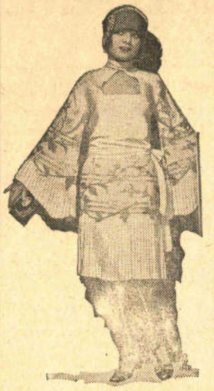
Newaygo county, May 31 to June 4; Mecosta, June 6 to 10; Barry, June 13 to 17; Allegan, June 30 to July 2; Kent, July 5 to 9; Ottawa, July 12 to 13; Muskegon, July 14, 15, 16, 19 and 20; Oceana, July 21 to 23; Midland, July 26 to 30, and Saginaw, Aug. 1 to 2.

HORSEBACK RIDING AT STATE CAPTURES CO-EDS

The favorite greeting from one co ed to another at Michigan State college is not "How's studying today?" or even "How is the boy friend?" but rather, "Have you ridden today?" Riding is the most popular co-ed sport, and applicants are constantly besieging the military department for permission to join the classes, which meet four hours a week under the direction of Captain Rose E. Larson, and Lieutenant C. E. Chace.

So popular has the sport become that for the first time in the history of the college, an advanced class has been formed.

DECIDEDLY ATTRACTIVE STREET COSTUME



Something new in the way of sleeves—also the high collar with an inverted "V" cut in the front of the blouse—are the unusual features of that pretty street dress worn by Marion Nixon, screen actress.

The dress is made of heavy crepe, embroidered in colors. A crocheted hat with grass-grained ribbon band in darker shade than the dress, makes the whole outfit decidedly attractive.

CALLES' DAUGHTER WEDS WOLVERINE

At Nogales, Sonora, the old home of President Calles, of Mexico, Senorita Ernestina Calles, eldest daughter of the executive of the southern republic, became the bride of Thomas Arnold Robinson, of Alma and New York, or "Tar," as he was affectionately known in his younger days when attending Alma High School and Alma College.

Robinson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Robinson, living at Alma. Mr. Robinson is a retired lumberman and sugar manufacturer, and still has large timber holdings in some of the southern and western states.

He met President Calles about three years ago and soon after was introduced to Senorita Ernestina. A year ago he met her again at Mexico City, when she was queen of the Mexico City carnival. Shortly after they traveled on the same train to New York, and after her return to Mexico Robinson found "business affairs" frequently demanding his presence in the republic to the south. Very often he was a visitor at the Calles palace, and a warm attachment sprung up between him and the Mexican executive, who gave his approval to the marriage.

BETSY IS SCENE OF SUCKER RUN AS CROWDS GATHER

The banks of Cold Creek, where the feet of thousands of fishermen trampled the first shoots of grass into the mud during the recent smelt run, are growing green again and the memory of Beulah's hour in the sun is growing dim. But for the past two weeks Benzie county has been host at another fishing party to which guests from all over neighboring counties have come to share in the best sport that follows the smelt run. And that is one way of saying that it's sucker time along the Betsy.

A little more than a mile from the paved surface of M-11 and not more than three miles from the village of Benzonia lies the Betsy river dam of the Lower Peninsula Power Company, which furnishes power for all the Benzie county villages and for northern Manistee county. Each spring when the sucker run begins, the bank of the river for more than a mile below the dam is lined with parties of fishermen with dip nets, for here the law permits the taking of the fish by that method

PRINTS STILL IN MILADY'S FAVOR

The vogue of printed fabrics last spring and summer led to many predictions that this season would find them in a position of minor importance. As so often happens, especially where fashions are concerned, rumors of this sort have little foundation in fact and at the present moment prints of all descriptions are notably "among those present" in every collection of smart new materials.

In design the new patterns are amazingly varied. They range from tiny conventional motifs, which have their inspiration in the quaint prim little designs of old-fashioned calico and the wee checks of gingham. Scrolly patterns, geometrical figures, varieties of the polka dot, striped effects, about all, in fact, that can be produced in materials.

For general wear few materials give better service than tweeds and now that they add smartness to their utilitarian qualities these fabrics are widely used. Black and white effects, which at a distance look grey, are particularly effective and the designs of geometric inspiration are unusually interesting. Others have small, very indefinite patterns in which two or three shades of a single tone are skillfully blended.

Although the modern bride bears little resemblance to the maid of three score years ago, when the long skirt and tight bodice was the reigning fashion, she experiences the same thrill in choosing her wedding gown and bridal trousseau, and despite her declaration of independence, she is just as lovely and as loving a bride as was mother or grandmother in the days when the clinging vine type was considered most attractive.

There are certain traditions regarding bridal finery that persist, regardless of all modern trends. These, together with newer ideas, combine to produce a most picturesque and charming outfit for the June bride. White is still the favorite color for the wedding gown and probably always will be in this country, despite the fact that some designers are endeavoring to introduce pastel shades for this purpose. While bridal satin continues a popular material for the wedding gown, some of the newest creations are fashioned of lovely, soft taffeta.

One of the later innovations is the all-white wedding, and when frocks and decorations are carried out in this scheme the effect is delightful and quite in keeping with the affair. For such a function the bride wears the proverbial all-white wedding gown and veil, and all of her attendants as well are garbed in all white frocks and white garden hats. The entire party carries bouquets of white flowers.

The delightful period frock is the style for the 1927 bride, and no matter what the material, vogue demands that the gown must be modeled after this design. Nor could there be a more charming costume for the lovely bride than this type of gown with its long, full skirt, sometimes longer in the back than in the front, and a close fitting bodice with either a plain or elaborate neckline.

As for the head dress of the bride, it may be the simple wreath of orange blossoms, or a cap of strung pearls may hold the veil in place. The veil may be of lace edged tulle. If the bride is so fortunate as to have the lace veil that mother or grandmother wore, so much the better. Or, she may have a lace veil of her own. Always, the veil of beautiful lace is appropriate, and a thing to cherish for generations to come.

BOX PLANT LAST IN WORLD'S ONCE BIGGEST LUMBER MILL CENTER

"When the others quit the saw mill business, I began," explained Fred Figge, 85-year-old veteran of the Civil war and one of the oldest lumbermen still living in Muskegon. "That's how I made my stake."

And the little box mill, which was erected in 1902 by Figge, is still in operation, making crates for the Muskegon celery grown along the banks and on the delta of the Muskegon river which teemed with rivermen in the late years of the last century. It is operated now by John C. Marquard, who purchased the mill several years ago from the old lumberman who built it.

It is the only mill in operation today on the shores of Muskegon lake, where in 1888 there was milled 800,000,000 feet of lumber, the greatest cut of lumber ever produced in one year by any city in the United States in the entire history of the country.

TUSCOLA MAN OLDEST NATIVE BORN IN MICHIGAN

Believed to be the oldest man in Tuscola county, John Nelson just has celebrated his 102nd birthday. He also is said to be the oldest native-born resident of the state, his birthplace being Mt. Clemens.

Nelson served for three years in the cavalry during the Civil war, during which he was picked in the detail assigned to "catch" Jeff Davis.

Snce the death of his wife, 38 years ago, he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. William Best, southwest of Vassar.

Steps are to be taken to provide fire protection to resorts in Western Michigan. The Development League of Western Michigan is back of the plan. The recent disastrous fire at Macatawa Park, near Holland, and at other resorts in this section resulted in the action. Several of the resorts have good fire protection during the summer months, when the cottages are occupied, but are without protection in the winter.

CAP NIGHT OPENS COMMENCEMENT

Starting with Cap night, June [illegible] and concluding with the annual Alumni day, June 11, commencement week ceremonies at Michigan State college will be unusually brilliant this year.

Following is the complete program for the 10 days:

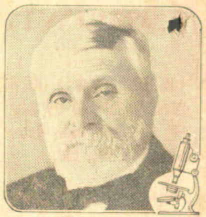
Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

I have been watching the results of constipation for 47 years, since I began the practice of medicine back in 1875, and though from time to time the medical profession makes some wonderfully interesting experiments and tests, the fundamentals of causes and relief in this common ailment are unchanged.

No matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time, regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. I believe in getting as close to nature as possible, hence my remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It cannot harm the most delicate system, and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written me to that effect.

Recently there has been a new wave of drastic physics. Calomel, a mercurial that salivates and loosens teeth, has been revised; salts, which draw vital fluids from the body and thin the blood, causing rheumatic aches and pains; coal tar (phenolphthalein) disguised in gum or candy form, that poisons and irritates the tissue of the stomach, intestine and bowel, causing skin eruptions. In a practice of 47 years I never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and damage to the system.



W. B. Caldwell MD
AT AGE 83

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take a teaspoonful that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. The cost is only about a cent a dose. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

The Sign of The Four

And the more I thought of what had happened, the wilder and darker it grew. I reviewed the extraordinary sequence of events as I rattled on through the silent, gas-lighted streets. There was the original problem: that at least was pretty clear now. The death of Captain Morstan, the sending of the pearls, the advertisement, the leter—we had had light upon all those events. They had led us, however, to a deeper and far more tragic mystery. The Indian treasure, the curious plan found among Morstan's baggage, the strange scene at Major Sholto's death, the rediscovery of the treasure immediately followed by the murder of the discoverer, the very singular accompaniments to the crime, the footsteps, the remarkable weapons, the words upon the card, corresponding with those upon Captain Morstan's chart—here was indeed a labyrinth in which a man less singularly endowed than my fellow-lodger might well despair at ever finding the clew.

Pinchin Lane was a row of shabby two-storied brick houses in the lower quarter of Lambeth. I had to knock for some time at No. 3 before I could make any impression. At last, however, there was the glint of a candle behind the blind, and a face looked out at the upper window.

"Go on, you drunken vagabond!" said the face. "If you kick up any more row I'll open the kennels and let out forty-three dogs at you."

"If you'll let one out it's just what I have come for," said I.

"Go on!" yelled the voice. "So help me gracious, I have a wiper in this bag, an' I'll drop it on your head if you don't hook it!"

"But I want a dog," I cried.

"I won't be argued with!" shouted Mr. Sherman.

"Now stand clear; for when I say 'three,' down goes the wiper."

"Mr. Sherlock Holmes—" I began; but the words had a most magical effect, for the window instantly slammed down, and within a minute the door was unbarred and open. Mr. Sherman was a lanky, lean old man, with stooping shoulders, a stringy neck, and blue-tinted glasses.

"A friend of Mr. Sherlock is always welcome," said he. "Step in, sir. Keep clear of the badger for he bites. Ah, naughty, naughty! would you take a nip at the gentleman?" This to a stoat which thrust its wicked head and red eyes between the bars of the cage.

"Don't mind that, sir; it's only a slow-worm. It hain't got no fangs, so I gives it the run o' the room, for it keeps the beetles down. You must not mind my bein' just a little short wi' you at first, for I'm guyed by the children, and there's many a one just comes down this lane to rouse me up. What was it that Mr. Sherlock Holmes wanted, sir?"

"He wanted a dog of yours."

"Ah! that would be Toby."

"Yes, Toby was the name."

"Toby lives at No. 7, on the left here." He moved slowly forward with his candle among the queer animal family which he had gathered round him. In the uncertain, shadowy light I could see dimly that there were glancing, glimmering eyes peeping down at us from every cranny and corner. Even the rafters above our heads were lined by solemn fowls, who lazily shifted their weight from one leg to the other as our voices disturbed their slumbers.

Toby proved to be an ugly, long-haired, lop-eared creature, half spaniel and half lurcher, brown and white in color, with a very clumsy waddling gait. It accepted, after some hesitation, a lump of sugar which the old naturalist handed to me, and having thus sealed an alliance, it followed me to the cab, and made no difficulties about accompanying me. It had just struck three on the Palace clock when I found myself back once more at Pondicherry Lodge. The ex-prizefighter, McMurdo, had, I found, been arrested as an accessory, and both he and Mr. Sholto had been marched off to the station. Two constables guarded the narrow gate, but they allowed me to pass with the dog on my mentioning the detective's name.

"Ah, you have him there!" said he. "Good dog, then! Athelney Jones has gone. We have had an immense display of energy since you left. He has arrested not only friend Thaddeus, but the gatekeeper, the housekeeper, and the Indian servant. We have the place to ourselves but for a sergeant upstairs. Leave the dog here and come up."

We tied Toby to the hall table, and reascended the stairs. The room was as we had left it, save that a sheet had been draped over the central figure. A weary-looking police sergeant reclined in the corner.

"Lend me your bull's-eye, sergeant," said my companion. "Now tie this bit of card round my neck, so as to hang it in front of me. Thank you. Now I must kick off my boots and stockings. Just you carry them down with you, Watson. I am going to do a little climbing. And dip my handkerchief into the creosote. That will do. Now come up into the garret with me for a moment."

We clambered up through the hole. Holmes turned his light once more upon the footsteps in the dust.

"I wish you particularly to notice these foot-marks," he said. "Do you observe anything noteworthy about them?"

"They belong," I said, "to a child or a small woman."

"Apart from their size, though, is there nothing else?"

"They appear to be much as other footmarks."

"Not at all. Look here! This the print of a right foot in the dust. Now I make one with my naked foot beside it. What is the chief difference?"

"Your toes are all cramped together. The other print has each toe distinctly divided."

"Quite so. That is the point. Bear that in mind. Now, would you kindly step over to that flap-window and smell the edge of the woodwork? I shall stay over here, as I have this handkerchief in my hand."

I did as he directed, and was instantly conscious of a strong tarry smell.

"That is where he put his foot in getting out. If you can trace him, I should think that Toby will have no difficulty. Now run downstairs, loose the dog, and look out for Blondin."

By the time that I got out into the grounds, Sherlock Holmes was on the roof, and I could see him like an enormous glow-worm crawling very slowly along the ridge. I lost sight of him behind a stack of chimneys, but he presently reappeared, and then vanished once more upon the opposite side. When I made my way around there, I found him seated at one of the corner eaves.

"That you, Watson?" he cried.

"Yes."

"This is the place. What is that black thing down there?"

"A water barrel."

"Top on it?"

"Yes."

"No sign of a ladder?"

"No."

"Confound the fellow! It's a most break-neck place. I ought to be able to come down where he could climb up. The water pipe feels pretty firm. Here goes, anyhow."

There was a shuffling of the feet and the lantern began to come steadily down the side of the wall. Then, with a slight spring, he came on to the barrel, and from there to the earth.

"It was easy to follow him," he said, drawing on his stockings and boots. "Tiles were loosened the whole way along, and in his hurry he had dropped this. It confirms my diagnosis, as you doctors express it."

The object which he held up to me was a small pocket or pouch woven out of colored grasses and with a few tawdry beads strung around it. In shape and size it was not unlike a cigarette case. Inside were half a dozen spines of dark wood, sharp at one end and rounded at the other, like that which had struck Bartholomew Sholto.

"They are hellish things," said he. "Look out that you don't prick yourself. I'm delighted to have them, for the chances are that they are all he has. There is the less fear of you or me finding one in our skin before long. I would sooner face a Martini bullet myself. Are you game for a six-mile trudge, Watson?"

"Certainly," I answered.

"Your leg will stand it?"

"Oh, yes."

"Here you are, doggy! Good old Toby! Smell it, Toby; smell it!" He pushed the creosote handkerchief under the dog's nose, while the creature stood with its fluffy legs separated, and with a most comical cock to its head, like a connoisseur sniffing the bouquet of a famous vintage. Holmes then threw the handkerchief to a distance, fastened a stout cord to the mongrel's collar, and led him to the foot of the water barrel. The creature instantly broke into a succession of high, tremulous yelps, and, with his nose on the ground and his tail in the air, pattered off upon the trail at a pace which strained his leash and kept us at the top of our speed.

The east had been gradually whitening, and we could now see some distance in the cold, gray light. The square, massive house, with its black, empty windows and high, bare walls, towered up, sad and forlorn, behind us. Our course led right across the grounds, in and out among the trenches and pits with which they were scarred and intersected. The whole place, with its scattered dirt-heaps and ill-grown shrubs, had a blighted, ill-omened look which harmonized with the black tragedy which hung over it.

On reaching the boundary wall, Toby ran along, whining eagerly, underneath its shadow, and stopped finally in a corner screened by a young beech. Where the two walls joined, several bricks had been loosened, and the crevices left were worn down and rounded upon the lower side, as though they had frequently been used as a ladder. Holmes clambered up, and taking the dog from me, he dropped it over upon the other side.

"There's the print of wooden-leg's hand," he remarked, as I mounted up beside him. "You see the light smudge of blood upon the white plaster. What a lucky thing it is that we have had no heavy rain since yesterday! The scent will lie upon the road in spite of their eight-and-twenty hours' start."

I confess that I had my doubts myself when I reflected upon the great traffic which had passed along the London road in the interval. My fears were soon appeased, however. Toby never hesitated or swerved, but waddled on in his peculiar rolling fashion. Clearly, the pungent smell of the creosote rose high above all other contending scents.

"Do not imagine," said Holmes, "that I depend for my success in this case upon the mere chance of one of these fellows having put his foot in the chemical. I have knowledge now which would enable me to trace them in many different ways. This, however, is the readiest, and, since fortune has put it into our hands, I should be culpable if I neglected it. It has, however, prevented the case from becoming the pretty little intellectual problem which it at one time promised to be. There might have been some credit to be gained out of it but for this too palpable clew."

"There is credit, and to spare," said I. "I assure you, Holmes, that I marvel at the means by which you obtain your results in this case, even more than I did in the Jefferson Hope murder. The things seems to me to be deeper and more inexplicable. How, for example, could you describe with such confidence the wooden-legged man?"

"Pshaw, my dear boy! It was simplicity itself. I don't wish to be theatrical. It is all patent and aboveboard. Two officers who are in command of a convict-guard learn an important secret as to buried treasure. A map is drawn for them by an Englishman named Jonathan Small. You remember that we saw the name upon the chart in Captain Morstan's possession. He had signed it in behalf of himself and his associates—The Sign of the Four, as he somewhat dramatically called it. Aided by this chart, the officers—or one of them—gets the treasure and brings it to England, leaving, we will suppose, some condition under which he received it unfulfilled. Now, then, why did not Jonathan Small get the treasure himself? The answer is obvious. The chart is dated at a time when Morstan was brought into close association with convicts. Jonathan Small did not get the treasure because he and his associates were themselves convicts and could not get away."

"But this is mere speculation," said I.

"It is more than that. It is only hypothesis which covers the facts. Let us see how it fits in with the sequel. Major Sholto remains at peace for some years, happy in the possession of his treasure. Then he receives a letter from India which gives him a great fright. What was that?"

"A letter to say that the men whom he had wronged had been set free."

"Or had escaped. That is much more likely, for he would have known what their term of imprisonment was. It would not have been a surprise to him. What does he do then? He guards himself against a wooden-legged man—a white man, mark you, for he mistakes a white tradesman for him, and actually fires a pistol at him. Now, only one white man's name is on the chart. The others are Hindoos or Mohammedans. There is no other white man. Therefor we may say with confidence that the wooden-legged man is identical with Jonathan Small. Does the reasoning strike you as being faulty?"

"No: it is clear and concise."

"Well, now let us put ourselves in the place of Jonathan Small. Let us look at it from his point of view. He comes to England with the double idea of regaining what he would consider to be his rights and of having his revenge upon the man who had wronged him. He found out where Sholto lived, and very possibly he established communications with someone inside the house. There is this butler, Lal Rao, whom we have not seen. Mrs. Bernstone gives him far from a good character. Small could not find out, however, where the treasure was hidden, for no one ever knew, save the major and one faithful servant who had died. Suddenly Small learns that the major is on his death-bed. In a frenzy lest the secret of the treasure die with him, he runs the gauntlet of the guards, makes his way to the dying man's window, and is only deterred from entering by the presence of his two sons. Mad with hate, however, against the dead man, he enters the room that night, searches his private papers in the hope of discovering some memorandum relating to the treasure, and finally leaves a memento of his visit in the short inscription upon the card. He had doubtless planned beforehand that should he slay the major, he would leave some such record upon the body as a sign that it was not a common murder, but, from the point of view of the four associates, something in the nature of an act of justice. Whimsical and bizarre conceits of this kind are common enough in the annals of crime, and usually afford valuable indications as to the criminal. Do you follow all this?"

"Very clearly."

"Now, what could Jonathan Small do? He could only continue to keep a secret watch upon the efforts made to find the treasure. Possibly he leaves England and only comes back at intervals. Then comes the discovery of the garret, and he is instantly informed of it. We again trace the presence of some confederate in the household. Jonathan, with his wooden leg, is utterly unable to reach the lofty room of Bartholomew Sholto. He takes with him, however, a rather curious associate, who gets over this difficulty, but dips his naked foot into creosote, when come Toby and a six-mile limp for a half-pay officer with a damaged Achillis tendon."

"But it was the associate, and not Jonathan, who committed the crime."

"Quite so. And rather to Jonathan's disgust, to judge by the way he stamped about when he got into the room. He bore no grudge against Bartholomew Sholto, and would have preferred if he could have been simply bound and gagged. He did not wish to put his head in a halter. There was no help for it, however; the savage instincts of his companion had broken out, and the poison had done its work; so Jonathan Small left his record, lowered the treasure-box to the ground, and followed it himself. That was the train of events as far as I can decipher them. Of course as to his personal appearance he must be middle-aged, and must be sunburned after serving his time in such an oven as the Andamans. His height is readily calculated from the length of his stride, and we know that he was bearded. His hairiness was the one point which impressed itself upon Thaddeus Sholto when he saw him at the window. I don't know that there is anything else."

"The associate?"

"Ah, well, there is no great mystery in that. But you will know all about it soon enough. How sweet the morning air is! See how that one little cloud floats like a pink feather from some gigantic flamingo. Now the red rim of the sun pushes itself over the London cloud-bank. It shines on a good many folk, but on none, I dare bet, who are on a stranger errand than you and I. How small we feel with our petty ambitions and strivings in the presence of the great elemental forces of nature! Are you well up in your Jean Paul?"

"Fairly so. I worked back to him through Carlyle."

"That was like following the brook to the parent lake. He makes one curious but profound remark. It is that the chief proof of a man's real greatness lies in his perception of his own smallness. It argues, you see, a power of comparison and of appreciation, which is in itself a proof of nobility. There is much food for thought in Richter. You have not a pistol, have you?"

"I have my stick."

"It is just possible that we may need something of the sort if we get to their lair. Jonathan I shall leave to you, but if the other turns nasty, I shall shoot him dead." He took out his revolver as he spoke, and, having loaded two of the chambers, he put it back into the right-hand pocket of his jacket.

We had during this time been following the guidance of Toby down the half-rural, villa-lined roads which lead to the metropolis. Now, however, we were beginning to come among continuous streets, where laborers and dockmen were already astir, and slatternly women were taking down shutters and brushing doorsteps. At the square-topped corner public-house business was just beginning, and rough-looking men were emerging, rubbing their sleeves across their beards after their morning wet. Strange dogs sauntered up, and stared wonderingly at us as we passed, but our inimitable Toby looked neither to the right nor to the left, but trotted onward with his nose to the ground and an occasional eager whine, which spoke of a hot scent.

We had traversed Streatham, Brixton, Camberwell, and now found ourselves in Kennington Lane, having borne away through the side streets to the east of the Oval. The men whom we pursued seemed to have taken a curiously zigzag road, with the idea probably of escaping observation. They had never kept to the main road if a parallel side street would serve their turn. At the foot of Kennington Lane they had edged away to the left through Bond Street and Miles Street. Where the latter street turns into Knight's Place, Toby ceased to advance, but began to run backward and forward with one ear cocked and the other drooping, the very picture of canine indecision. Then he waddled round in circles, looking up to us from time to time, as if to ask for sympathy in his embarrassment.

"What the deuce is the matter with the dog?" growled Holmes. "They surely would not take a cab, or go off in a balloon."

"Perhaps they stood here for some time," I suggested.

"Ah! it's all right. He's off again," said my companion, in a tone of relief.

He was indeed off; for, after sniffing round again, he suddenly made up his mind, and darted away with an energy and determination such as he had not yet shown. The scent appeared to be much hotter than before, for he had not even to put his nose on the ground, but tugged at his leash, and tried to break into a run. I could see by the gleam in Holmes's eyes that he thought we were nearing the end of our journey.

Our course ran down Nine Elms until we came to Broderick and Nelson's large timber-yard, just past the White Eagle tavern. Here the dog, frantic with excitement, turned down through the side gate into the inclosure, where the sawyers were already at work. On the dog raced through sawdust and shavings, down an alley, round a passage, between two woodpiles, and finally, with a triumphant yelp, sprung upon a large barrel, which still stood upon the hand-trolley on which it had been brought. With lolling tongue and blinking eyes, Toby stood upon the cask, looking from one to the other of us for some sign of appreciation. The staves of the barrel and the wheels of the trolley were smeared with a dark liquid, and the whole air was heavy with the smell of creosote.

Sherlock Holmes and I looked blankly at each other, and then burst simultaneously into an uncontrollable fit of laughter.

CHAPTER VIII

The Baker Street Irregulars

"What now?" I asked. "Toby has lost his character for infallibility."

"He acted according to his lights," said Holmes, lifting him down from the barrel and walking him out of the timber yard. "If you consider how much creosote is carried about London in one day, it is no great wonder that our trail should have been crossed. It is much used now, especially for the seasoning of wood. Poor Toby is not to blame."

"We must get on the main scent again, I suppose."

"Yes. And, fortunately, we have no great distance to go. Evidently what puzzled the dog at the corner of Knight's Place was that there were two different trails running in opposite directions. We took the wrong one. It only remains to follow the other."

PUTS CLAMPS ON LONG WINDED TALK

Pontiac, named for the great chief whose voice once ruled the councils of the Ottawas, today possesses an unusual organization of busy business men in which members learn how to make public speeches—and what is even more important, learn how not to make them. The hundreds of thousands of patient sufferers in the United States who do not deliver public addresses, but are forced to listen to them, probably would cast a unanimous vote for the establishment of similar clubs in every city in the land.

Simmered down to a few words, stripped of all camouflage and embellishments, the one big thought emphasized over and over again in this organization is that one of the best things a public speaker ever does is sit down. If for no other reason than this the Pontiac Gridiron Club may be put down as a benefactor of mankind. It seems little short of the miraculous to discover in this world men who, if called upon to make a 10-minute speech, will talk, not an hour, not 25 minutes, not 11 minutes, but 10 minutes. Yet, by virtue of their intensive training, the members of this club can be depended upon to do just that.

The history of the Gridiron Club really began three years ago, when A. L. Moore, prominent Pontiac attorney, was induced to undertake the direction of its destinies.

At the beginning of the year, early in the fall, Mr. Moore and officers of the club work out the entire five months' program, and on this program each member of the club appears at least three times for a scheduled address. These programs are given each Thursday evening, with only members of the club present, except on special guest nights, and the work of participants is criticised with scant mercy by Mr. Moore.

And it cannot be too greatly emphasized that Mr. Moore never forgets the time element. Unless otherwise directed, each man is expected to confine his talk to 10 minutes, and the preceptor listens with his watch before him. At the end of nine minutes he indicates to the speaker that one minute remains, and when the minute ends the speech ends.

TOURIST PERMITS SEEN AS CURB ON FOREST FIRE LOSS

Michigan might well take a tip from her neighbor, Ontario, in the matter of forest protection. Enforcement of a special travel permit to apply to tourist campers in Northern Ontario woods is being strongly urged in that province. Since a majority of forest fires are attributed to thoughtless campers and settlers, the plan of bringing tourists under official supervision would greatly assist in tracing the origin of conflagrations. Wardens would be informed of the whereabouts of tourists and act accordingly. During any particularly hazardous period all tourists would be barred from the woods. This is common practice in certain sections of the National Forests of the west, and will some time have to be enforced here if our crop of tourists increases. Despite a campaign of education carried on in the press and through other means, there is an increasing number of fires caused by carelessness only.

STATE-WIDE MOVE FOR REFORESTATION OPENS

A state-wide reforestation campaign, which will include the planting of at least 200,000 trees along Michigan streams in 1927, has been announced by Dan Karn, manager of the Consumers Power Company.

George Blair, company forester, already has started to the work in the Kalamazoo district. More than 30,000 seedlings, including 15,000 white pine, 2,000 Norway spruce, 1,000 European larch and 200 black walnut trees, are on hand for planting in this area. Most of the trees will be planted along the Kalamazoo River from Plainwell to Lake Michigan.

The trees are to be planted six feet apart in rows eight feet apart.

GOVERNMENT ASKS BIDS ON BREAKWATER WORKS

Work on $2,000,000 breakwaters at Muskegon and Frankfort will be started this year. The government will receive bids June 10 for the construction of the Frankfort breakwater, and it is expected that bids will be received for the Muskegon job about the same date.

The start of the breakwaters will bring to an end a long fight staged by the two cities to obtain the improvements. Frankfort has been seeking for 20 years to obtain the improvement, while Muskegon has been active for several years. Muskegon was forced to appeal to the United States Board of Appeals, after district engineers had held that the city should pay a portion of the costs.

Uncle Sam Still Pays For War of 1812!

It seems a far cry from the war of 1812—just 115 years—yet Uncle Sam is still paying for it. On his pension rolls are three widows of soldiers who fought in that conflict of long ago, each of whom is drawing a pension of $50 per month. They are all in good health and it may be some years yet before the account can be closed and the books balanced.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

If You Are a Poultry Raiser

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Lest Wa Forget

It is easy to forget details of events of even a decade ago. As regards the liquor traffic, it is apparent that some adults are forgetting what used to happen in the homes of thousands of drinkers, while youth sixteen years old or older have little or no personal experience of those days. For this reason, in one of the high school essay contests conducted by the W. C. T. U., pupils are this year to ask parents or older friends to revive some of these memories as to the harm that alcoholic drinks were doing before prohibition of the liquor traffic. The following actual occurrences picked out of observation or the experience of social workers of the first twenty years of this century may refresh memories grown dim of conditions due to drink which the sense of justice of the nation said must stop. No excuse is made for the bald misery of some of these details. It is worse that they were true. Not every drinker killed his wife or beat his child. But the volume of such experiences made the legalized liquor traffic intolerable.

Michael K—came home early Sunday morning, pockets empty of the money promised to his wife for clothing, for lack of which their children were suffering; answered her appeal with a blow to the floor; kicked her with his heavy boots; sat by for hours unmoved by her sufferings; brutally mistreated the children who would have brought her help. Michael was sentenced to state prison for life for this murder of his wife while "in drink." Thirteen years later, the sentence was reduced to a term of years so that he could be paroled. He was paroled. Within a month he was arrested for attempting to use a revolver on a saloonkeeper. He was returned to state prison to serve out his sentence.

Only twelve days before Michael killed Bridget, Vincent V—drunk in Pittsburgh, killed his wife and little children with a rail cutter. Thirteen days before, John D—of Detroit shot his wife, poured kerosene over her body, and stood with lighted match when the police broke in upon him. Just a month and a day before, a father in Indiana, coming home drunk, tried to kill his wife with a hatchet, and was shot dead by his son.

Samuel R—infuriated by liquor tied his boy to a post in the yard and beat him with a club of wood.

William G—a good workman if he kept sober, a good husband and father, was started on a round of drinking by a glass of beer at a wedding. He was found with a broken neck on the floor of his employer's barn, having rolled in drunken sleep from the haymow.

A sixteen months' old baby with back bruised and swollen by a drunken father's club, was taken in charge by the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Mary M—was found by the doctor apparently on the verge of insanity. A quiet mother had charge of a modest orderly home. No seeming reason was there for Mary's condition. At last the social nurse discovered that Mary lived in terror of the ugly temper of her drinking father. Removed to the peaceful home of a relative Mary regained her poise.

One of many such fathers having spent all his earnings for drink, "pawned everything he could get hold of, including his little boy's eyeglasses that a chartiable agency had helped provide, and at another time the baby's fur tippet."

It was a common occurrence for a woman to bring her family of little children to the city authorities, telling them that her husband had spent all his earnings for drink, that they had nothing to eat and asking for help.

There was the railroad engineer who had his drink the night before starting out with his fast train. He ran past the signals, and wrecked his train with serious loss of life and many injured.

Pupils were absent from school to "mind the house" or "the baby" while mother worked to earn money for the home, father intoxicated Often came to school without breakfast, untidy and improperly dressed.

These were but a few of the thousands of instances occurring throughout the land when the alcoholic liquor traffic was legalized. The Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Welfare estimated in March, 1918, that drink was responsible for 59 percent of the police cost; 70 percent of the cost of prosecuting crime; 65 percent of the expense of jails and houses of correction; for all the alcoholism patients, at least some 3,000 annually entering institutions; at least one-third of the care of 7,000 children; and of the relief given homes by overseers of the poor.

What prohibition did for many of these homes reveals by contrast some of the old conditions. Here is an extract from the report (1921(of a county secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"Better clothed, better fed, happier children have to be seen to be appreciated. We have been able to look in on fifty five of our old families in which drunkenness used to pull down and undo faster than we could build. Fathers, many of whom were powerless to resist the drink, show off victrolas and doll carriages. Extravagant? Yes, to the wise who see a hard winter ahead. But those who used to see John come home ugly drunk on Saturday night and hear the frightened children scamper under the beds to escape his kicks and maybe a hurled lamp; and those who knew how his wife, after he had fallen asleep, searched his pockets for a possible stray dollar for the Sunday dinner, will not begrudge him the joy of a welcome home by a flock of eager children who hold out their hands for new shoes and a toy and a stick of candy."

Here was part of the tragedy of drink. There were many "Johns" who were kind and loving fathers when not "in drink," but who found it difficult or impossible to resist the temptation of drink openly sold, or the invitations of his mates to "have a drink."

This is not all ended yet. The selfish drinker who encourages the illegal trade still makes it possible for some "Johns" to disappoint and bring tragedy to their wives and children. But will anyone who honestly searches his memory of the "old days" deny that with the vanishing of the legalized liquor traffic these tragedies have become fewer and that there are happy homes and well cared for children grateful for their protection thru the laws prohibiting the liquor traffic?—National W. C. T. U.

Eggs rank high in digestibility—whether you eat them raw or cooked. The advantage is probably on the side of the slightly cooked egg—especially in the case of the egg white.

HOW FAKE AUCTIONS GET YOUR MONEY

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

(This is one of a series of articles exposing the wiles of sharpers who are after your money.)

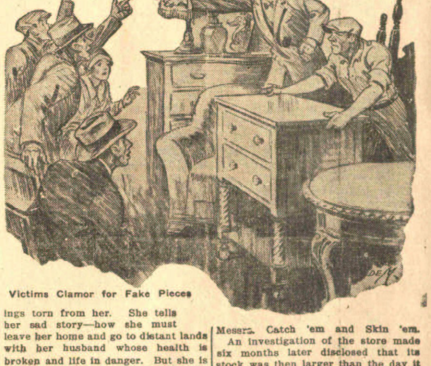
W. R. MOREHOUSE

NEARLY everyone is ready "to take a fling" at getting something for nothing or at least for less than it is worth. Because of this many are duped into paying more than regular market prices for things they buy. This class of people is especially susceptible to the appeal of anything resembling an auction. Fake auctions with the cards stacked against the buyer are very common. They rank high among the fraudulent schemes of the country.

The "here today and gone tomorrow" auction faker rents a fine looking house in some high-class section of the city in which he plans to operate. He furnishes this house with the cheapest imitations of high-class furnishings, with here and there a fine piece which is to serve for bait. Certain pieces are alleged antiques with a thread of glorious history behind them. Of others it is claimed that they have been handed down for generations, originating with some person noted in history or with some famous Southern family. Of other pieces it is maintained that they are made of rare and precious woods imported from far across the sea. The overstuffed furniture, it is claimed, is all high grade of standard manufacture.

Regardless of its superiority and antiquity, the furniture must be sold at once, for the owner is compelled to take an extended trip, the family physician having ordered travel and a change of climate as a means of saving his life. Nothing is to be spared and the deep slashings of the auctioneer's axe must go on with no price too low. Individual pre-auction sales, of course, will be arranged for persons who are unable to attend the auction.

The day of the sale is here. Purchasers are arriving. They are met at the door by the woman member of the outfit—a dramatic person who knows when to shed tears at the thought of having her happy home broken up and her valuable furnishings torn from her. She tells her sad story—how she must leave her home and go to distant lands with her husband whose health is broken and life in danger. But she is resigned to her "awful calamity" and will sell all her lovely furniture even at a great sacrifice.



Victims Clamor for Fake Pieces

As she directs attention to certain pieces of furniture her voice quavers. She almost sobs aloud as she names the price she is forced to accept. "Less than half the original cost, but price is no object. We must take the train tomorrow," and she wipes a tear from her eye. Fully convinced the sale is genuine, and sympathizing with the unfortunate woman, buyers clamor for the furniture.

But no sooner are the articles transferred from their setting in the slightly darkened rooms of their original owner and displayed in the sunlight of the purchaser's home, than the truth about the sale begins to dawn in the mind of each new owner. Close examination reveals that evidently this wonderful collection of furniture was but odds and ends and unsalable pieces picked up from second-hand stores by these fly-by-night fakers. Some proves to be the rankest of imitations of the cheapest grade, and the overstuffed is so poorly constructed that it squeaks and weaves under the lightest weight.

The Birds Have Flown

When those who have been cheated rush back to the house the next day, intent on making it "hot for the faker," they find hanging in the front [illegible]dow a sign, "For Rent." The birds have flown, without leaving any address.

Fake auctions are not exclusive to residences, but are sometimes staged in stores. We have reports of a certain furniture firm that failed, having on hand stock invoiced at $42,000. An auction sale was announced. As usual the stock must be closed out to satisfy creditors within a few days, regardless of cost. On the windows appeared glaring announcements of big bargains. Although represented as a legitimate sale, it had the earmarks of an auction by Messrs. Catch 'em and Skin 'em.

An investigation of the store made six months later disclosed that its stock was then larger than the day it announced the auction. Its sales in the interim had exceeded $600,000. The facts are that two trucks had backed up to the rear of the store nightly and unloaded new merchandise, principally odd lines and job lots picked up here and there at a bargain. Under the guise of a legitimate auction, or private sale at auction prices, fourteen times as much furniture was sold in the six months as the store contained at the time of the failure. Comparison of sale prices disclosed that victims were persuaded to buy liberally on the assurance they were getting sacrifice prices, when as a matter of fact they were actually paying from five to 25 per cent more than reliable stores were charging for better goods.

Fake auctions and private sales are used not only for furniture but also in the sale of jewelry and other merchandise. The lesson which this story teaches is that there is [illegible]ing to be gained by patronizing such sales. On the other hand, there is a better than 50-50 chance of sustaining a loss.

Not all auctions are fraudulent, for some are conducted fairly and honestly, but before you draw your savings from the bank and spend them for auction goods it will pay you to get the facts. For your own protection make it an unbreakable rule to confine your expenditures and investments to reliable firms and individuals. In dealing with them you are assured a square deal.

(A future article will present means to foil crooked promoters' wiles and tell how to separate good from bad investments.)

FACTS
about used car allowances

Most new car sales now involve the trading-in of a buyer's used car. More and more people are asking: "Why should my used car seem to have several values?.... Why should dealers in different makes of cars offer me allowances differing materially?.... Does the largest allowance offered mean the best deal for me?"

Here are basic facts:

1 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value: what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.

3 The largest trade-in allowance which is offered on your used car is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; but sometimes it is not.

4 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.

5 Judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

WHEN YOU are ready to trade-in your present car, remember that after all you are making a purchase and not a sale. You are buying a new car and simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of a new car.

The Prognostigators Are At It Again

The whiskered boys who usually stand on the loose corners of the village and air opinions are at it again, and this time it is the season—they are sure about it. According to some of the boys the summer of 1927 is about to be a Gehena. We shall be obliged to use our heating appliances the summer through, no crops will mature, fruits will be a failure, frost will appear each month, and a condition of famine will seize us next fall. The rather cold May has set the heads a-wagging and many are the dolorous forebodings we hear and experience on the corners. Above all, they tell us the cold summer will probably produce a good business for the coal man, the cows will freeze stiff in the pasture and instead of butter will produce ice cream. The hogs will contract inflammation of the lungs through the pores of the skin from contact with the damp earth, chickens will hump up and refuse to lay, small boys will be snowballing in July and apples will have to be harvested in a snow storm.

Corn if it grows at all, will assume the shape of a corn borer, become discouraged reverse itself and burrow into the ground, peas wont ripen until August and potatoes not at all. Snakes, lizards and frogs will overrun the land and whiskers will grow on grocery bills and a lot else which we dare not record. It is reasonably safe to predict however, if one wants to be conservative and sure, that next fall we shall know to a certainty what the summer of 1927 has been and until then, au revoir!

Prize Essay on "Old Ironsides"

Here is a chance for the students of our High School to show their literary ability and also help a worthy cause. Already students from 650 schools have announced plans to engage in this contest, and how many of our High School students have remembrance of reading the stirring poem of Oliver Wendell Holmes, father of Justice Holmes of the Supreme Court, in the old fifth readers? In the year 1836 Congress, finding the old frigate, "Constitution" had become rotten and unsafe with age, decided to scrap her for the copper she contained. News of this reaching the ears of the masses, a storm of protest was raised the length and breadth of the land. Then it was that Holmes seized the opportune moment to awaken millions with these immortal lines;

OLD IRONSIDES

"Aye, tear her battered ensign down
 Long has it waved on high
And many an eye has danced to see
 That banner in the sky
Beneath it rang the battle shout,
 And burst the cannon's roar,
The meteor of the ocean air—
 Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Her deck was red with Heroe's blood
 Where knelt the vanquished foe;
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood
 And waves were white below;
Nor more shall feel the victor's tread
 Or know the conquered knee,
The harpies of the sea shall pluck,
 The eagle of the sea!

Oh, better that her shattered hulk
 Should sink beneath the wave;
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
 And there should be her grave,
Nail to the mast her holy flag;
 Set every threadbare sail,
And give her to the God of the storm;
 The lightning and the gale."

Old Ironsides was built and launched at Boston Navy Yard in 1797 and her oak planking came from Georgia while her masts were cut from the forests of New England. Subject for the essay is "Why Should Old Ironsides be Saved." There is no limit to the number of words and write only on one side of your paper, place your name, address, age, name of the school you belong to, on the upper left hand corner of each sheet, and by all means send your MSS flat.

Contest closes July 4, 1927, and is open to every high school student in Michigan. First prize is $100 in gold, second prize $75 in gold; third prize $50, fourth prize $25 in gold; and fith prize $10 in gold and a bronze medal to first prize winner.

Report of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending Ma, 28th, 1927

Herman Altenbernt, of Jackson arrested and charged with driving while drunk after an auto accident on U. S. 112 last Sunday, plead guilty before Justice Fitzsimmons on Tuesday, and was fined $100 and costs, which he paid.

Charles Norton, held in the County Jail on a Liquor Law charge, was released on $1000 cash bail Monday, to appear at the October term of Court.

On Wednesday, Wm Ireland was arrested in Jonesville on a Body Warrant. He appeared before the Circuit Court on Friday and made satisfactory settlement and was released.

Orville Ostrander, late of Jonesville, was taken to Ionia to begin serving time on Thursday.

A. Cramer Pittsford Township alleged moonshiner arrested in a raid on his farm on April 30th, waived examination in Justice Court on Wednesday and was bound over to the October term of the Circuit Court. Bail of $1000 was continued.

Donald Nixon, of Jackson, arrested Thurday on a statutory charges appeared before Justice Fitzsimmons Saturday and was released on $500 bond, pending an examination, which was set for an early date.

A number of Hillsdale County truck drivers were hauled on the carpet during the past week for various infractions of the Motor Vehicle Laws, ranging from "switching" plates to driving without any whatever. Fines on these cases were from $5 and costs. Drivers of a number of heavy trucks and machines were haled into Court, but proceeding have been held-up, pending a decision of the Attorney General's Office. Meanwhile, however, the trucks are not operating.

Another race between an automobile and a train ended in a tie yesterday, with the usual results. The auto lost. Mrs. G. W. Sherburne and Glenn Sherburne of Richland, Mich. and Ernest Hartness, of Kalamazoo, driving in an Overland Six Sedan, raced the Lansing train to the crossing on the Litchfield road North of Jonesville yesterday afternoon. Spectators, both on the ground and on the train said that the driver was "stepping on it." with the result that train and car arrived at the crossing together The dead are Mrs. Sherburne and Glenn Sherburne, while Hartness was seriously injured. The moral of the above is—Stop, Look And Listen.

Later report states taat Hartness died Saturday evening.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail 4.

Casper J. Lingeman of Detroit gave one of his all-popular talks over the Radio Monday evening from W J R, and this time his talk was along the line of possibilities of Detroit as an airplane center, which is one of the mooted questions of the day. While Detroit is physically and ideally located to manufacture these machines and is practically the pioneer of the business and building airplane engines yet she is in the vanguard as to inter-air connections. For at least four years nations of Europe have been running air lines for both passengers and express, while we who were first to invent and perfect the aeroplane ought to be head and shoulders above them all. To Henry Ford belongs the credit for giving the air-plane industry an impetus by establishing a landing place and mooring mast for dirigibles. Mr. Ford was also first to establish a factory for all aluminum planes. and high powered engines. We understand the Cadillac people built aeroplane engines previous to the war, and during that time large numbers of them were built for foreign service. Henry Ford added valuable parts to the Liberty motor and as Mr. Lingeman very naively remarks, Detroit has the factories, the engineers, the money, the brains, and it is entitled to the business.

Septic Tanks Prove Boon to Farmers

Michigan farmers can build a septic tank which will adequately dispose of all household sewage at an expense of fifty dollars, according to the estimates of experts at Lansing agricultural college. To make it possible for farmers to look into these tanks, the College will build septic tanks in 13 different counties this fall. We have often wondered if the engineers were as successful building works for the farmer as they would be planning air planes and automobiles. They claim to have tested these septic tanks 15 years, and never found them wanting. The farmer who has one built, agrees to excavate before the day of demonstration, and to have all necessary materials on the ground The demonstration will take place in Jackson Co. July 12 to 15, probably at the farm of A. L. Noon. Nothing is scheduled for Hillsdale county, that we know of.

Announce Counlry Life Week

Michigan will play hostess this summer to the largest conference on rural life problems in history.

The occasion will be the country Life Week at Michigan State College July 31st to August 6th, when nearly 20 of the leading organizations and groups interested in rural life will gather. Representative farm men and women of the United States and Canada, together with nationally and internationally known leaders in the agricultural and country life fields, will lead discussion at the various meetings. Particular interest will be added by a group of distinguished European authorities. The Country Life week is expected to attract large numbers of tourists from all over the middle west, as well as from Michigan. Caravans of farmers will be organized for the trip, taking advantage of the opportunity of combining the state's summer vacation facilities with the conference program.

The Speed Bug

The horrible accident which occurred near Jonesville on Saturday afternoon last, ought to be a lesson to the drivers of this community who are more or less liable to "speed spurts". These people were probably as sober as it is possible to be, at least the intimation that there was any liquor in the car or its inmates, has not been received, bu. the driver failed to observe the laws of common ense. Witnesses of the accident ssayhe tried to beatthe locomotive o tbe crossing, and missed by afew feet only to be ground to death by the irrisistible force of the on-rushing train. It is more than likely thh engineer and fireman did not see the auto until it was too late to stop the train. Or even if they did see the machine right from the first, they supposed the driver was aiming to stop, as any sensible man would do. The day is past when the average driver thinks it smart to out-run the steam cars. Most of the boys have had their fling at it, and have learned there is no glory in it, even if theyget by Its too infinitisemal to care about, and surely no one is too hurried he or she cannot allow a fast train to pass first.

The real reason for the smash-up will never be known, as the victims were all strangers and came from Richland, Mich., tas was learned later, but why they deliberately flirted with death is a mystery.

Governor Green Fixed 'Em

By one stroke of the pen on Tuesday Gov. Fred Green relieved the city of Detroit of forty millions of dollars. The new law which is to go into effect at once, has been badly needed for some time. It provides that no city in Michigan can construct a sewage disposal plant anywhere within the limits of any other city without the consent of the voters of the latter city, hence the exceeding hard luck of Detroit which must take care of its sewage on the shores of Lake Erie eighty miles away. The sewer problem for the big city has received a serious jar for all time. It was intended to erect a sewage disposal plant on the River Rouge river front, a down-river suburb when this bill, sponsored by the "city dads" and Mayor Valois of Rouge came up in Lansing and was passed. It would have meant a much cheaper plant and more convenience, lighter taxes, but the officials of River Rouge said "No" so loud it was heard in Lansing. It is said to have cost River Rouge over $700 to get the law on the statute books but it would be cheap at twice this figure, since it has decided an issue for all the down-river municipalities which all have hopes at some fufure time of becoming large cities by reason of the coming of the Winsor International Bridge and St. Lawrence Waterway, and they must keep their river fronts clean.

Honey bees are not only valuable because they produce one of the choicest sweets. They also serve as pollinators to cross fertilize the flowers of our agricultural plants. This brings larger crops. Our great fruit orchards need literally millions of bees for pollinators. It is possible for bee keepers nowadays to earn a bit of extra money by placing a few of their hives in the big commercial orchards during the flowering season. That brings the orchard man bigger fruit crops and also the bee keeper more honey and larger colonies.

Chicks shouldn't be fed for about 60 hours after they are hatchedt The egg yolk supplies them with their best first nourishment. Wheh you do start to feed, however feed often—but very little at a time. And always be sure all the feeds you give your chicks are of the best quality. Green feed is particularly valuable. It tends to keep the chicks in good physical condition. Milk also has a decidedly beneficial effect.

After much mooting the question of a new state police post has been settled and the post will be placed at Tipton, Lenawee county. Just why this selection has been made the state authorities sayeth not. Tipton is not on the M-23, now U. S. 112, and seem as disjointed proposition, but the thing is settled and work of erecting barracks is under way. It is now more than likely that here and at Jackson will handle this entire territory pretty satisfactorily, but we note that seldom if ever, do the troopers appear in our community where we fancy they are as much needed as elsewhere. Most of the rum runners on M-23, are cornered right near us—not more than six miles away and while local officers are proving apt sleuths. it is quite necessary at times to ask the co-operation of state police Corporal Fred Jahr late of the United States navy will be in charge, assisted by two other men and will be ready for duty June 10th. Tipton is claimed to be ideally located in the network of pikes and transportation in all directions is guaranteed.

Marked progress has already been made by the railroads in an effort to provide greater protection at grade crossings. Safety devices of various kinds have been installed while obstructions which obscure a view of the tracks have been removed. In addition many other steps have been taken to increase the safety of the public at crossings Enginemen are also devoting more attention than ever before to the giving of adequate warning when their trains approach grade crossings and are doing everything possible to avoid accidents at these points. Greater realization on the part of the motorist, however, that he, too, must co-operate with the railroads and use increased care in approaching grade crossings is necessary.

Chicks get a good deal of their living off the floor of the house or off the ground. In other words, there is an excellent chance for them to pick up worm eggs and disease germs if there are many around. Not only should you keep the houses clean, but you should keep the soil over which the chicks range in a sweet and sanitary condition. Cultivate the soil often. Sow it to a green crop of some kind.

Successful Whaler

The British whaling industry reached its zenith at the end of the Eighteenth century; since that time whaling has been very largely in the hands of Scandinavian and American whalers. One of the biggest catches ever recorded was that secured, just over a hundred years ago, by a Scots whaler, which landed blubber and whalebone to the value of £11,000. At today's prices the whalebone alone would have realized not less than £120,000!

Food Preservation

Food may be preserved by freezing, such as fish and poultry; by refrigeration, such as meat, butter, milk, eggs; by canning, such as fruit; by sugar, such as fruit juices and condensed milk; by exclusion of air, such as eggs in lime water; by drying, such as prunes and peaches; by evaporation, such as ham, beef and fish; by pickling, such as cucumbers; by oil, such as sardines.

FRESHMEN SOAR TO HIGH PLACES IN ALMA ATHLETICS

Freshman is written in the plainest of terms all over the athletic success that Alma college teams are enjoying this year, a preponderance of the men on the championship football team last fall, the basketball team of the winter, and the promising baseball team of this spring being first year men.

Among the members of the title winning football team were Walter Pezet, Edgar Karpp, Ellsworth Simmons and Haurant Arozian of Detroit, Erickson of Newberry, Mueller of Manistique, Baurer of Saginaw, Wolters of Fremont and Angell of Hastings.

In basketball it was Harry Tiderington, Kippert, Jack Liephan, Edgar Karpp, Senge of Detroit and Wolters of Fremont that made Alma feared.

This spring in baseball Tiderington, Liephan and Kippert, LeBlanc, Yageman and Conlin of Bad Axe, Losey of Alma and Albaugh of Marshall are the backbone of the team that Alma believes has championship strength.

It is an unusul condition when such a number of new men enter college and make the teams their first year and to help make these teams title contenders or championship winners.

TELLS OF HOGS IN ST. PATRICK ROLE

Detroiters who believe that the story that snakes abounded on Belle Isle years ago and that hogs were placed on the island to kill them off is only a myth, can find living proof that it was all true in James Moore, who lives on a farm on Bar Point, four or five miles below Amherstburg.

Mr. Moore ought to know, for he worked in one of the fisheries on the island in 1866, before the city purchased it for a park.

"Whitefish abounded in the river in those days," said Mr. Moore, "and catching them for the market was an extensive business. I worked at the fishery at the lower end of the island. Our shanty was over the water 20 or 30 feet from the shore. We reached the shore by walking over a little plank bridge. It was nothing out of the ordinary to see rattlesnakes sunning themselves on the planks when we started to leave the shanty or go to it.

"Finally they became so numerous on the island that the Campaus, who owned it at that time, decided that something must be done to rid the place of them. It was decided to use hogs, but something better than the ordinary hog was desired for the work, so a herd of thoroughbreds was imported from Belle River avenue, and they did a thorough job."

He has a number of wild geese in an enclosure on his farm. He also has a number of interesting relics in what he calls his museum, which is in his barn. One of the relics is a flintlock musket, which he believes was used in the war of 1812. At one time most of Bar Point was under water, and the relics were picked up after the water receded. Even cannon balls have been picked up on the point in recent years.

6-FOOTERS MAKE LIFE "BEARABLE"

Six-footers at Michigan State College have joined forces to make life more bearable for the tall man and have established a chapter of the national organization of "Daddy Long Legs."

The campus is the scene of a great deal of rivalry between the tall men and the short. Recently the latter organized the "Little Green Devils," a club for men who are less than five feet and six inches in height. The first requisite for being a Daddy Long Legs is that one be at least six feet tall. The club favors:

"Longer beds."

"Longer bath tubs."

"Longer berths in trains."

"Higher awning and signs over sidewalks (at least 7½ feet clearance)"

"Higher doorways and telephone booths."

"More space between rows of seats in theaters, and more room at lunch counters."

"More space between the seat and steering wheel in automobiles."

"More reasonable prices and greater variety of clothing for tall men."

"Abolition of 'tall man' wise cracks and so-called jokes.

"Anything else and all else that will contribute to the comfort and convenience of tall men."

Dean John Phelan, Dean of the college, adds to the usual list of tall man grievances. "All umbrellas," he says, "should be provided with handles long enough so they could be held up in the air at least six feet, so as not to scratch out the eyes of the tall man. All drinking fountains should be built at least five feet and five inches high so that we tall men would not have to break our backs to get a drink."

KENT WOMAN, TEACHER HALF CENTURY, HONORED

Mrs. Therese Townsend, who is rounding out a half century in the teaching profession, has been given by the board of education of Grand Rapids the honorary position of assistant superintendent of schools emeritus. Her resignation as assistant to Superintendent Leslie A. Butler becomes effective at the end of the present school year.

Mrs. Townsend became connected with the Grand Rapids schools in 1890. Prior to that time she was employed in Battle Creek. After a year as teacher in the South Division school, another year at the Congress school, and two years as principal of Turner school, she was made principal of Central grammar school.

She was appointed assistant superintendent in 1897.

CORN GROWING CONTEST ANNOUNCED BY M. S. C.

A five-acre corn growing contest has been planned by the farm crops department at Michigan State College. The state has been divided into three sections for the contest, and identical prizes will be awarded in each section.

First prize winners in each section will receive a gold medal and a ton of acid phosphate. Winners of second place will receive a silver medal and a bushel of Hardigan alfalfa seed. Bronze medals and 50 pounds of binder twine will be awarded to winners of third place. A sweepstakes prize will be given to the best corn grower of the three sections. This prize will be 80 rods of woven wire fence and 80 steel posts.

The contest is open only to members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association. The entry list will be closed July 1.

BEAVER INCREASE FISHERMEN FIND, AID SPORTSMEN

In the upper waters of the Black River, the east and west branches gave evidence of a 50 per cent increase in beaver. As the fishermen waded the streams they came upon many traps evidently placed when the water was high, for they were above the water levels. In one trap a Cheboygan party came upon a dead beaver caught by the hind leg. Fearful of the warden's vigilance, the trapper did not return to his trap. It is very evident that beaver operations on trout streams works for the interest of the fish, for many pools are formed by their dams and fallen timber for beaver food helps aerate the water as well as affording more shelter.

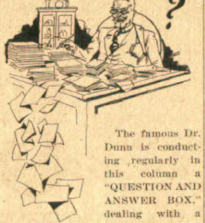
DO YOU KNOW?



The famous Dr. Dunn is conducting regularly in this column a "QUESTION AND ANSWER BOX," dealing with a large number of subjects of general interest to the readers of this paper. You are invited to send in your questions to "Dr. Dunn," care of this paper; and they will be given prompt consideration; and where deemed of general interest, will be answered through this column so far as space permits.

Dr. Dunn has for a long time been a member of the executive staff of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company of Detroit, and has become famous through this weekly broadcasting over WGHP. The doctor has had wide professional, commercial and sociological experience, and while the absolute accuracy of the answers to all questions is not guaranteed, the most authentic sources of information will be the basis of all replies.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn: What position does the United States occupy in the development of aeronautics?

A. The recent achievement of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh in making his non-stop flight from New York City to Paris, France, places the United States at the "top of the pile" in aerial achievement.

For many years this country has taken a prominent part in the development of aeronautics. As a matter of fact, the early work of the Wright brothers was largely responsible for the development of the heavier than air machine, and many millions of dollars have been expended in erection of factories, manufacturing of aeroplane engines and development of high grade aeroplanes.

The United States has furnished some of the most famous fliers known to flying history, including Captain Byrd, who flew over the North Pole in a heavier-than-air machine. But Lindbergh's magnificent flight is probably the most epoch-making event of the century, embodying as it does not only a splendid achievement but also that fine spirit of sportsmanship emblematic of America.

It is true that the development of commercial flying in the United States has been somewhat backward, notwithstanding the fact that the modern aeroplane has been largely developed in this country, and in spite of the fact that the United States has a long line of aerial achievements to its credit. It is hoped that Captain Lindbergh's world-stirring flight will give the needed impetus to commercial flying in this country.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn: Does the law usually favor the motorist or pedestrians?

A. Pedestrians have rights on the streets; so have automobiles and other vehicles. Because some pedestrians use the streets carelessly and incautiously there is no excuse for the drivers of motor vehicles not taking every precaution to avoid injuring pedestrians. The law is usually on the side of the pedestrian; and properly so, for he is usually the chief sufferer.

Dear Dr. Dunn:

Q. Is there any basis for the many superstitions concerning the effect of the moon upon the earth?

A. There is usually no basis for superstitions such as those that are current about the effect of the moon; but probably all of these superstitions are really based upon the well-known fact that science has demonstrated the power which the moon exerts over all fluids and solids on the earth, which effect is daily demonstrated by the action of the ocean tide. The saying that the killing of a hog during the waning of the moon affects the fat in the pan so that it unduly fries away when thus prepared is, of course, fallacious; but it can be demonstrated that vegetation grows more favorably at a time when the moon is in the full and the nights clear, because even that light, in addition to the sunlight, and the favorable weather necessary to disclosing the full orb of the moon, would indicate favorable growing conditions.

Dear Dr. Dunn:

Q. What is an inter-insurance exchange?

A. An inter-insurance exchange is composed of a number of persons who have delegated to an attorney-in-fact the power to arrange an exchange of contracts insuring each other. You sign an agreement to insure the other fellow, and he signs an agreement to insure you. You are liable for a proportionate share of his losses, and he for yours. You pay an attorney to arrange this exchange, and you sign an agreement giving him power to act in your stead. You are exchanging an agreement with one, ten, or a thousand unknowns to insure one another. You must share the losses, though having no voice in the management.

The cost of such insurance varies according to the proportion of premium retained by the attorney-in-fact, the general expense of maintaining such an organization and the losses incurred. The responsibility of the members to financially meet heavy losses is not limited, inasmuch as they are subject to assessment. This is pretty well exemplified by the large number of suits and counter-suits brought against Sherman and Ellis, a Chicago concern with ramifications throughout the central portion of the United States, which recently failed for more than $5,000,000.00.

Dear Dr. Dunn:

Q. Should people with bad tempers drive motor cars?

A. The exercise of kindness to others, consideration and true courtesy, will prevent any operator from getting a wrong attitude of mind for driving in traffic. Any operator who loses his temper, who becomes sulky, or is abnormal from any one of many different causes, is unfit to drive because his automobile provides a medium of expression for his personality. If that personality is upset, he is bound to make trouble for himself and for others, generally for both.

Please address all inquiries, criticisms and comments to "Doctor Dunn," care of this paper, or the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, General Necessities Building, Detroit.

Sitting Pretty--Atop Ten Bags of Gold!

This photo almost makes one want to rush out and take the first train for Weepah, Nevada, where many "struck it rich" recently in discovering huge gold deposits. Probably wouldn't do us much good, however, for it is reported that claims have already been staked for scores of miles around the original find. The young prospector above was one of the lucky boys. Sitting pretty—isn't he—atop his ten bags of the precious ore?

MOTHERLESS PAIR WIN HIGH HONORS

Twin sisters of Freeland, Miss Isabella and Miss Annabelle McKellar, just have achieved a record of performance which is not equalled by any Girls' club members in the state, it is believed.

Annabelle has completed her fourth year household management project, while lying in a cast in the University of Michigan hospital at Ann Arbor the greatest part of the winter. She made a bed spread, curtains, and dresser scarf for her room and completed a notebook that would have been a credit to a college graduate in home economics. Because of the splendid results of her efforts, she has been made champion of her club.

The other sister, while still in the fourth year of her project work, acted as leader of a club of 16 girls, all of whom completed their projects, making a 100 per cent group. The quality of the work was pronounced by State Girls' club leaders to be superior to the average. She had been a member of the state clothing judging team at the Chicago contests this year, winning sixth place in the national meet.

The two sisters are motherless.

FAMED HERD OF JERSEYS FOUNDED IN SEVENTIES, SOLD

The last of a group of farm show places established in Bay county in the seventies by "gentlemen farmers," became history with a sale of one of the nation's foremost herds of Jerseys recently. It is the Marston farm on the Kawkawlin river, a mile from the village of Kawkawlin. The farm, which has been operated by T. F. Marston, was established in 1875 by the late Judge Isaac Marston, in his lifetime prominently known as a justice of the Michigan supreme court. Judge Marston, long a resident of Bay City, spent his later years in Detroit.

Herschel H. Hatch, prominent Bay City and Detroit lawyer, and former congressman; William H. Westover, lumberman; H. P. Morrill, and Eugene Fifield, wholesale grocers, and R. P. Gustin, wholesale grocer, in addition to Judge Marston, established farms. Judge Marston began breeding Jerseys, and the others, excepting Gustin, bred Holsteins. The Gustin farm specialized in Berkshire hogs.

Naturally there was much good-natured rivalry between these business and professional men, and interesting and thrilling are the tales told of inspection tours to each of the farms by the entire group. Agricultural experts from all parts of the country were brought in from time to time to settle, if possible, the claims to superiority advanced by the competitors. Of course, the controversy was never settled, but the Marston farm was the only one that stood the test of time, the others having long since ceased to function.

When Judge Marston decided to breed Jerseys, he bought a tract of 87 acres on the Kawkawlin river. He erected a fine home and some up-to-date barns. The venture was referred to by associates and friends of the justice as "Marston's folly," "Marston's desert," and similar appellations. The sandy soil did not provide quite enough forage for the sustenance of one cow, and when the calf came the owner bought an adjoining 40. As the herd increased more land was acquired, until today the farm comprises 350 acres of fine pasture and producing land.

The Marston dairy had attracted national attention for years. Its producing cows have hung up many records and have won many ribbons at exhibitions.

POTATO SHOW OFFERS ATTRACTIVE PRIZE LIST

JUNGLE GARDEN IS NEWAYGO'S GLORY

In your high school days you must have had with you the perennial wit of the botany class who wanted to know "What makes the wild flowers wild?" Now the long suffering classmates might retort with the answer, "Go up to the Jungle Garden, and maybe you'll find out."

Michigan's unique wildflower refuge, a few rods from the railroad station of the metamorphosed sawmill town of Biteley, has a more serious purpose than answers to fool questions. It is the resort of scientists and student botanists and of nature lovers of all ilks. For it is one of the few spots upon which the foot of man has descended in venerated exploration, and over which hovers the hand of men only that he may affix to growing things the labels that identify them among the genera and the species into which the scientists have marshalled them in books of learning. And of varieties of trees and flowers there are hundreds. Two hundred and two have to this date been identified and named and the names affixed.

Charles E. Greening of Monroe made the discovery. He is nurseryman and landscape architect, a veteran in the art of growing things, and a veteran in years.

A few years ago his health declined. He came to one of the 50 lakes that lie within a three-mile radius of Biteley, to dwell on the high sand lands among the pines; for there are still some noble stands of pine around the lakes of Newaygo county. His health repaired, he began to extend his land holdings, to build and to explore.

In a hollow of the land two minutes' walk from the town he found a brook of clear, living water, flowing out of one little crystal lake into another, fed by numerous springs and widely bordered by a flat land of rich soil value, pure sand and slimy muck. Hereon he found growing the bewildering variety of vegetation, which is the Jungle Garden, the seeds of which the winds, the birds and the animals of the ages past deposited in this natural catch basin.

This area of about 25 acres and much land adjacent was owned by Dr. Bertram Welton Sippy, a Chicago resorter, who died in 1924. His widow deeded the Jungle Garden strip to Mr. Greening, with provisions. The land and its waters are to be "held and fostered for the purpose of promoting the spirit of conservation of wild plant life in the State of Michigan, and to provide adequate facilities for observation, recreation, study and research, especially in regard to the relationship of plants to their environments"; and it is further provided that the land shall not be used for any commercial gain.

TWO BAY CITY FIREMEN LAUDED FOR RESCUE

Fire Chief Charles H. Crampton of Bay City has written a letter to Firemen Arthur Ripsky and Harry Crum, commending them for their valor in rescuing James P. Firens, ladderman of No. 2 truck during the Hotel Kimbark fire. Firens was working in the basement endeavoring to locate the source of the fire and had placed a ladder in position to descend into a 12-foot hole. The ladder broke and he plunged to the bottom. He was overcome by smoke and was unconscious when discovered by Ripsky. The latter jumped without hesitancy to the rescue. He had Firens part way up and could get no farther. Crum then came to the rescue of the two men.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels, and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

STICKERS TO TAB MOTOR TOURISTS IN STATE PARKS

This year Michigan will adopt a "windshield sticker" system for state parks similar to that now in use throughout the national parks of the west. Each park will have its own sticker that will be placed upon windshields of tourists' cars for identification and registry purposes. The back of the sticker will carry the park rules. As tourists go from one park to the other, a new sticker will be placed upon the old so that at no time will the visibility be curtailed. Each sticker will bear on its face some distinctive design picturing a feature of the park.

ALMONT NOW IS CENTENARIAN CITY

Almont is 100 years old. Although the exact date of the arrival at the present site of Almont of William Allen, his son, George W., and James Thorington, has been lost, it is known that the trio arrived sometime in the spring of 1827, under the leadership of Levi Washburn, called one of the best hunters and guides in this section.

In 1827, the little hamlet of Washington, 16 miles south of Almont, marked the northern boundary of civilization, and it was from that point that the three men, piloted by the guide, pushed northward through the unbroken wilderness, in search of a location for a new settlement.

Allen arrived early enough in the year to permit a small tract of land to be cleared and planted with corn and vegetables for the coming winter.

From that time on the tiny settlement grew rapidly.

WOODS NEEDED TO BRING BACK TROUT

Twenty-five years ago nearly every lake and stream in Northern Michigan afforded good fishing. Twenty-five years ago a fisherman would fill his creel to bursting with big trout in an hour's walk from Dam Two on the north branch of the Au Sable to the High Banks. It was the same on all the other streams—the Pigeon, the Black, the Sturgeon, or any other good, fast trout waters. Today this is changed. We must journey far and be possessed of considerable knowledge, skill and patience if we are to obtain enough trout to make the pan sizzle. Since the hardwood and pine has been skinned off this northern country the water tables have been going down, streams and lakes have lowered at times. The temperature of trout streams and lakes has risen beyond durance of those noble fish that once thrived in the icy waters. Cedar savages ravaged the swamps for posts and poles. Fires followed the cutters and then the sun beat mercilessly down on a tortured land, and once cold streams were turned lukewarm, to the great detriment of the fish life. Near Wolverine lies a drear bed of half-made peat, a constant temptation to fire and of no value to agriculture. Nature knew what she was doing when she laid down the cool, deep swamps, covering the surface with thick, cold sphagnum moss and shading it all with green, fragrant cedars and balsam.

In the old days when trees clung to every hillside, holding an absorbent mulch with their feet, these deep swamps acted as monster sponges. The water from melting snow and spring rains was carefully hoarded to be liberated little by little during the heat of summer. Before destructive lumbering held sway, we caught trout in May and carried them back into the cedar swamps, where we found snow and ice in the depressions beneath the heavy green forest cover. Think of laying your fresh-caught trout on ice. The sun eventually warmed the ice, which added its trickle of water to the ice-cold springs seeping into the river from above. Go now and see what you find. The green hemlocks and pines have been cut, fire has run over the cutover land, and today dust storms swirl the dry ashes high over the banks.

ANN ARBOR COACH WANTS TRACK MEET INTERMISSIONS CUT

Stephen Farrell, coach of the University of Michigan track team, will suggest to the track coaches of the Western Conference that a time schedule of events be established for dual meets and possibly for other and larger meets. Coach Farrell is taking the side of the spectators in this proposition, admitting that at times track meets are too long drawn out.

Audiences at a theatrical performance would not stand for a 20-minute wait with nothing happening, says Farrell. He believes a part of the reluctance of people to attend track meets is due to the usual indefiniteness of their schedules.

The present Big Ten rules regarding dual meets are that events may not be run in less than five minutes nor more than 15 minutes apart. This rule is so indefinite that its only result is to fill space in the rule book.

Coach Farrell would like to see a committee appointed to draw up a time schedule for both track and field. The time the event requires should be taken into consideration, and only in unusual cases should more than five minutes be allowed between the finish of one event on the track and the beginning of the next.

It takes a man with a lot of brass to dispose of a gold brick.

WHITE SHEETS FOR JAILS IN LIEU OF BLANKETS

White sheets and white pillow cases are recommended for prisoners in the county jails of Michigan. E. C. Nicholson, secretary of the State Welfare Board, has filed a report with the Muskegon County Supervisors urging that sheets replace blankets at the jail. Mr. Nicholson says that the white sheets and pillow cases are more sanitary.

FATE OF CHINA SEEN UP TO U. S.

The United States, to use an old Chinese proverb, is "holding the ear" of the Chinese situation as regards the possibility of armed intervention by foreign powers, according to T. Z. Koo, Chinese diplomatist and apostle of the Celestial country's modern ideals, in an address at Detroit.

"We say that the man or nation who can sway the actions of others is 'holding the cow's ear,'" said Koo, "and in this case the United States can turn the cow's head either towards or away from military intervention. Those who are trying to establish a responsible government in China, representative of the people, fear such intervention at this time more than anything else, and we are living in hope that the United States will steer the other western powers away from that act and permit us to work out our plans and ideals."

Mr. Koo was introduced by Charles Beecher Warren, former ambassador to Japan and Mexico.

Mr. Koo, who was a prominent figure in the opium conference at Geneva, speaks with all the vigor of an American political campaigner, although his excellent English and grasp of western ideas was acquired wholly in China, and any doubt of what the conditions are in China that might be in the mind of an American business man as to trade conditions, political prospects and military activity in China, he easily cleared up.

"Before May 30, 1925," he said, "Chinese merchants in Shanghai did a cotton piece business with Manchester mills amounting to more than $6,000,000 a year. Now the indicated yearly business is about $500,000. It was not the result of a boycott, for none such was declared. It was merely a reflection of loss of confidence of the Chinese in British aims in China."

Discussing the activities of the Communists in China, Mr. Koo said the Canton government, which represents the ideal of Chinese democracy as set forth by Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first president of the Chinese republic, had recently disarmed labor brigades created by Communists, and had deported a group of radicals, chiefly Russian, from the country.

"There is little danger of Communism getting a firm hold in China," he said. "The Chinese is practical, and most of the land is owned by small farmers, and these hard-headed men are not easily won to the idea of sharing their small farms with the general community. In fact China has little general wealth to 'commune with,' and our chief aim and need is not so much the more equal distribution of wealth, as the creation of more wealth."

HAY SPECIALISTS VISIT 28 COUNTIES

New hay curing methods, showing how to retain the maximum number of leaves in the crop, will be demonstrated this year by Michigan State College alfalfa specialists at Hay Day meetings in 28 or more counties.

Demonstrations have tentatively been scheduled in Monroe, Washtenaw, Livingston, Macomb, St. Clair, Branch, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, Cass, Ottawa, Muskegon, Kent, Newaygo, Mecosta, Ionia, Clinton, Genesee, Saginaw, Barry, Sanilac, Alpena, Midland, Missaukee, Huron, Osceola, Emmet and Charlevoix counties.

The demonstrations will begin with the first cutting of alfalfa, probably about June 15 in southern Michigan.

SAGINAW MAY GET $12,500 SCHOOL FUND

Saginaw board of education expects to profit $12,500 by decision in the Ingham circuit court in favor of the city of Detroit, which won its case against retention of five per cent of the primary school money due larger counties, for distribution among the smaller counties. The law, passed by the 1925 legislature, was declared unconstitutional and the full amount of primary money ordered paid each county.

BOYS TAKE STUDENT HONORS IN HIGH SCHOOL

Two boys carried off honors for the highest scholarship records of the graduating class of 1927, E. B. Holden, principal of Greenville schools, announced. Luther Lyndrup won first and William Browne second. Miss Luville Thomas was third.

ANCIENT GIANTS' SKELETONS FOUND

Workmen on the Herman Lunden farm, near Lewiston, became curious as to the contents of seven peculiar shaped mounds on the farm, and two of them set to work to dig in the belief that they would find something interesting.

Their expectations were fully realized, for they came on human bones.

They ceased operations and got in touch with Mr. Lunden who, with his son Lester, went over to the farm.

Further excavation disclosed the bones of two monstrous men, the skeletons of which are nearly seven feet in length. The skull is much larger than men of today and of a different shape, as there is little forehead, the bones sloping back almost from the eyebrows.

Mr. Lunden took a jaw bone, a skull and a set of teeth and sent them to Ann Arbor for study. The bones in the mound were again covered.

Some 25 years ago this tract was lumbered off. The original forest growth is estimated to have taken more than 200 years to grow, so it is easily seen that the bodies had been interred for a much longer period than 200 years. The position of the bones in the mound examined show that the bodies were buried sitting down and facing the west. Mr. Lunden is confident they were not Indians, because they were much larger and, as far as they explored, no arrow heads, skinning knives or other implements were found. This is the first record so far as is known of mound builders in the section, and much interest is being evinced as to the contents of the remaining six mounds.

In Wisconsin are large numbers of mounds representing the forms of animals, while in Tennessee are smaller mounds which were used for burial purposes, as were the ones in Montmorency County. The custom of erecting mounds has been widespread; most primitive people are known to have erected mounds either habitually or in some stage of their development. Most of the mounds of the region in central North America are mortuary or sacrificial, the chief contents of which are skeletons with ceremonial and other objects buried with the bodies.

Whatever final disposition is made of the Montmorency mounds depends on the wish of the owners. It is to be hoped that excavation will be in the hands of expert archeologists who will be prepared properly to preserve anything of a fragile nature so that future generations may know what form of human life once roamed the plains and forests of our north country.

DETROIT GIRL TO WED U. OF M. FOOTBALL STAR

Announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Callan, of Detroit, to Paul G. Goebel, of Grand Rapids, captain in 1923 of the University of Michigan football team. Miss Callan is the daughter of Captain and Mrs. A. C. Callan, of Detroit. Goebel played on the Red Grange team, New York Yankees, in 1925 and 1926.

CHINA EXPLORER IS ON EAST LANSING PROGRAM

Upton Close, journalist and explorer, one of the most widely recognized authorities on China, will be a speaker at Michigan State College next year on the liberal arts entertainment course of lecturers and musical numbers being arranged by Professor W. W. Johnson, head of the English department.

Close is said to be intimately acquainted with conditions in China, where he has lived several years.

PONTIAC PASSES BILL FORCING D.U.R. CHANGES

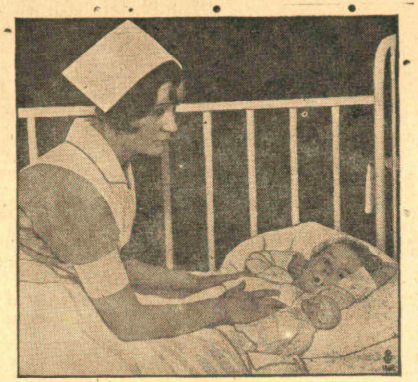
The Pontiac city commission passed an ordinance by which the D. U. R. is permitted to operate on a day-to-day basis. The ordinance has the approval of the master in chancery of the federal court. In effect the street car company promises to place 10 new cars in service, remove one of the three tracks on Saginaw and West Huron streets, give the city a strip of land in the middle of West Huron street at the west end of the line, and make other concessions.

DUCK HALTS TRAFFIC

Traffic on a busy main road near Bourne, England, was held up for 10 minutes while a duck laid an egg. A policeman had halted automobiles when the duck started to waddle across the road. Halfway over she sat down. After she had laid the egg, she continued her journey. The egg was salvaged and the procession of halted cars proceeded.

The average man is more polite to people he never expects to meet again than to those whose friendship is really worth cultivating.

Child--Believed Dead--Is Brought Back To Life



Medical circles in Chicago still are discussing the remarkable recovery of little 20-months-old Justine Braley, whose likeness you see in the crib above. Seriously ill of pneumonia, the doctors had given her up for dead when they decided to resort to one more possible method of reviving her—artificial respiration. All signs of life were extinct when Drs. A. J. Ehrlich, Joseph Sperl, J. D. Cain and Nurse Betty Rohrssen took turns at pressing the infant's lungs down to induce breathing. This they kept up for four hours, until the child could breathe of its own strength. Its recovery from then on was speedy.

FATHER OF WATERS AGAIN TRADE ROUTE

The chant of the river roustabouts greets the coming of summer on the upper Mississippi after a lapse of 40 years.

Hammers ring along the levees, and from St. Louis to St. Paul and Minneapolis there is such activity as the Father of Waters has not seen in this generation.

The river is coming into its own again.

A federal barge line begins operation this month after years of preparation and experiment, carrying freight up and down the mighty stream plied since the eighties only by ferryboats and an occasional excursion steamer.

Three towboats, two of them near completion in Dubuque boatyards, and 15 barges will inaugurate the river service between the Twin Cities and St. Louis. Another tow-boat and 45 more barges to be built this summer will complete a $2,000,000 fleet.

The government has tested the route with ballasted shallow-water barges and has pronounced it practical. Two million dollars have been spent on the channel from Minneapolis to Prescott, Wis., and congress has authorized a $3,780,000 navigation dam at Hastings, Minn. Minneapolis, St. Paul and Dubuque are spending another million for modern river-and-rail terminals.

The new river days may not match in picturesqueness the post-bellum era when the race of the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez between St. Louis and New Orleans was a great sporting event and when Mark Twain immortalized river life.

But the new days will be busier ones.

Last year ten times as much freight was hauled on the Mississippi as in 1884, when packets crowded the levees. Traffic has grown tremendously on the lower Mississippi since the war, with downstream barges from St. Louis, carrying agricultural commodities to Memphis and New Orleans, and returning laden with bauxite ore, sugar, coffee from Brazil, and burlap from India.

The northwest is watching the experiment eagerly, hoping to find in movement of grain by water the cheaper transportation heralded as one solution for agricultural ills.

500-MILE YACHT TRIP PLAN OF DETROITERS

Cruising by motor and sail yacht, owners, on the way to a revival for the last few years, will mark off a new stride forward in the season just now opening up.

Rivaling for distance the fast-becoming historic Mackinac Cruise for sail yachts, will be a 300-mile cruise to Georgian Bay for motor yachts flying the flag of the Detroit Yacht Club. This club cruise, along with one other, was decided upon at a meeting of the D. Y. C.'s board of directors.

The Georgian Bay Cruise will start July 30, and before the boats have traveled back to port again, a distance of 500 miles will have been covered.

BLACK HILLS SEEN FOR COOLIDGE

President Coolidge has tentatively selected the Black Hills of South Dakotah for his summer vacation home, it was announced at the White House.

The president believes the site there is good and he is making a careful investigation so adequate accommodations may be obtained for himself and staff. It was carefully pointed out that this decision is not final.

White House observers believe that, if satisfactory accommodations cannot be made in the Black Hills, Colorado Springs will be the president's eventual choice. This selection would be in line with advice of the president's physician to get a higher altitude than that offered by Wisconsin, where he first intended to go.

The president believes that added accommodations can be provided for his official retinue of about 50. He favors the spot because it offers him sufficient altitude for relief from a nasal disorder.

According to Senator Norbeck, Republican, South Dakota, it is 12 miles from the nearest railroad at Custer City, S. D.

More than 36 hours of travel by train would be required to reach the place from Washington.

At present there is only one telephone line in the immediate vicinity—one installed last winter in anticipation of a possible presidential visit.

Indications are that the president would leave soon after June 11, the date of the business meeting of the government.

The Black Hills are in the southwestern corner of South Dakota, at the western rim of the wheat region.

BATH TOWNSHIP TO BUILD NEW SCHOOL

Decision to erect a new school for Bath township to replace the structure wrecked by explosion, on a new site was arrived at a conference between Governor Fred W. Green and members of the Bath school board.

Governor Green said that architects who prepared plans for the school building which was destroyed have volunteered to prepare plans for a new building. Funds are being received by the committee appointed by the governor to have charge of the relief funds for the stricken township and several offers of aid indicate that the school may be built without financial hardship to the community.

The inquest into the school tragedy, continued with Monty Ellsworth, oil station attendant, testifying that Andrew Kehoe was fond of explosives of all sorts. The witness stated Kehoe and he frequently indulged in target practice and that on occasions Kehoe carried as high as 1,000 rounds of ammunition in his car.

David M. Harte stated Kehoe appeared normal the day before the explosion.

VANDALS KILL DEER AT GOGEBIC FAIR GROUNDS

The youngest of the three deer at the Gogebic county fair grounds was killed the other day by unknown persons who entered the pen and hit the animal on the head with an ax or hammer.

The deer was found dead by J. H. Riddle, caretaker at the fair grounds. The carcass was lying in the shed and there evidently had been no attempt to carry it away.

The other two deer at the park were found to have been lamed. One of them has an injured foreleg and the hind leg of the other had been hurt. Police attribute the death and injury of the deer to vandalism.

SPURNS RICHES ON SON'S SEA FLIGHT

"To exploit the great achievement of my boy and to capitalize my love for him—these are the things they ask. You don't think they are measurable in dollars, do you?"

This was the reply of Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh, mother of the world famous aviator, when asked if she would be tempted by the numerous contracts tendered for her public appearance. Mrs. Lindbergh has been offered a movie contract running well into six figures, and theatrical interests have sought her services. She has refused all offers and intends to continue her teaching of chemistry at Cass Technical high school, Detroit.

Mrs. Lindbergh is hoping that her son will not sign any contracts until he returns to the United States. Her only fear is that some selfish interests may seek to exploit his accomplishments in making the non-stop flight to Paris. She is confident that he will remain under the guidance of Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France.

John C. Lodge, acting mayor of Detroit, and grand uncle of the intrepid flyer, was overjoyed at the manner in which Captain Lindbergh is "selling" good-will in France. He believes that his flight is to accomplish much toward the cementing of relations between this country and France, and also is of the opinion that when he visits England, as he believes he will, that he will again play an important role in the diplomatic game of concreting friendly relations between America and the countries abroad.

But as far as Mrs. Lindbergh appearing in public or in any way capitalizing on the fame of her son, that is forever out of the question.

SHIELDS SAWBILL AS FOE OF TROUT

At last the American merganser, the sawbill duck that trout fishermen hate and conservation officers kill on sight, has found a defender and one whose findings and opinions on its economic status will hand the bird's enemies quite a wallop.

Dr. A. G. Ruthven, zoologist of the University of Michigan, who has charge of the biological investigations for the department of conservation, has examined a number of stomachs of merganser ducks killed on the Boardman river in Grand Traverse county by conservation officer Mark Craw. It is here that the campaign of merganser extermination has been pressed with all the hatred that could be found in the trout fisherman's heart. The birds were accused of eating everything except the bridges that span the river, and the death penalty was inflicted without trial or evidence.

In his report Dr. Ruthven says: "Of nine stomachs examined, one contained only crayfish and the remains of a small bird. Eight stomachs were crammed with fish which, when identified, proved to be four common suckers, three rainbow trout and seven brown trout. We are of the opinion that the slaughter of these birds is not justified except about hatcheries and nursery streams."

It takes a man with strong will power to listen to reason when he is angry.

HEROIC HISTORY IN DUSTY TOMES

Tucked away on the upper shelves of a large vault in Detroit police headquarters is a library of heavy tomes, dusty and little used. Ordinarily one would not find their contents of particular interest, and their references to some of our former citizens would not make good copy for a genealogist, for they are the first records of the metropolitan police force of Detroit.

"Book A" records in the furbelowed penmanship of M. V. Borgman, the first superintendent of police, the organization of the police department.

In the days chronicled in this dusty library, the life of a policeman was not one to be envied. Besides patroling a beat for 10 hours a day, there were few furlough days and each officer had to sleep 10 out of the 30 days of the month at the station, in anticipation of emergency. Then too, elections then were bitterly fought battles, as proved by General Order No. 4, dated November 6, 1865, which in part announced that "in order to preserve the public peace and good order throughout the city tomorrow—election day—officers will be assigned as follows." This was continued by a list of curtly written instructions as to the patroling of the city. "Book A" includes within its covers the record of formation of the city's first police sanitary squad and the first detective bureau.

Another general order which brings a smile is that of May 4, 1869, which declares "Numerous complaints against patrolmen have been made by hackmen of the city that favor is being shown to omnibus agents and drivers at the railroad stations and steamship landings. Officers should treat all alike."

Gambling, then, as now, seems to have been one of the leading factors of law violation with which the police had to contend. One order of June 21, 1870, instructs members of the force to raid the place of "William Huff, keeper of a gambling house at 214 Jefferson avenue, and arrest all persons engaged in gambling and all idle spectators."

DETROIT MAN ELECTED HEAD OF STATE LIONS

Unanimous choice of W. Leroy Hooper, of Detroit, as district governor was made by delegates attending the eleventh district convention of Lions clubs at Jackson. Hooper was elected without opposition. Saginaw was chosen as the 1928 convention city. Kalamazoo and Pontiac were strong bidders.

A committee on major activities, of which Dr. Phillip A. Callahan, of East Detroit, is chairman, offered three recommendations to the convention: first, that the work of assisting blind children and adults be continued by the Lions International; second, that the district adopt as a major activity a plan to aid treatment of drug addicts; and third, pledging the support of the district to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project.

Geraldine Cox, Teacher

Aana Hoyt is writing an Essay about the Early Settlement of Hillsdale County.

Miss Geraldine Cox was the recipient of two May baskets filled with popcorn, candy and fruit hung by the children during May.

Three Eighth Graders of the Fowler District: Anna Hoyt, Kenneth Woodby and Theron Post passed the Eighth Grade Examination.

Visitors during the month of May were Verle Bleech, Mrs. Jay Carney, Mrs. Stuart Doolittle, Mrs. Katie Wheeler, Mrs. Will Post and daughter Gladys.

John Iveson, Richard Iveson, Pearl Beveridge and Ilah Groom are to be congratulated, having received perfect attendance certificates for the year.

Those neither absent nor tardy during May were Theron Post, Harlie VanEtten, John Iveson, Richard Iveson, Pearl Beveridge, Ilah Groom Richard Woodby, Joe and Helen Haydu.

The little folks have enjoyed the "Olive and Oliver Books", published by the Palmolive Company. The books contained coloring and cut out work besides a very instructive story telling how the soap is made.

A little party was very much enjoyed May 6, when Anna Hoyt's mother surprised the pupils and teacher by bringing a large Birthday Cake and a quantity of homemade candy in honor of Anna's birthday.

Gilbert Carney, Charles Doolittle, First Grade; Ilah Groom, Pearl Beveridge, Richard Iveson, Second Grade; Joe Haydu, Third Grade, received pencils this month having received the most merit cards in Reading. Ilah, Pearl and Richard have received pencils every month during the entire year. They have read two Second Grade Readers and over one hundred pages in a Third Grade Reader.

Friday May 27, was well celebrated at the Fowler School when the patrons, children and teacher, 69 in number, enjoyed a picnic dinner and ice cream. Mrs. John Reimschisel brought a large birthday cake in honor of Miss Cox's birthday. After dinner, the entire school took part in a play, "The Good Health Elves". Gilbert Carney sang several songs. At the close of the program, the nineteen pupils, standing in a semicircle, were presented Promotion Diplomas by the teacher. Four Perfect Attendance Certificates were awarded at this time. Mrs. Fred Miller presented Miss Cox with a beautiful three piece Console Set and a Salad Dish, in behalf of the district. Charles and Betty Doolittle also presented her with a beautiful embroidered library scarf.

The Outstanding Feature

Of Modern Optometry is the ability of the Doctor of Optometry to successfully handle cases that heretofore were considered impossible. Within the past two weeks this office has been consulted by two cases, both of whom have made the rounds and been examined by the most renowned eye specialists of Ann Arbor and Toledo. In every instance glasses alone were prescribed to correct conditions that no glasses in existence would cure. One of these cases in particular, Warren Delcamp of Fayette, Ohio, has gradually grown worse since childhood until binocular vision finally became impossible. He has consulted a number of specialists and every time been given a pair of glasses which gave no relief and was finally advised to go to the hospital at Ann Arbor. He did so, and his case was diagnosed as "one that would not respond to glasses"' and advised an operation was the only chance left of assisting in the restoration of his sight.

In six weeks time by the use of Modern Optical Equipment and Methods, Mr. Delcamp enjoys normal vision in both eyes with glasses proscribed by this office. Nothing startling about it.—Results that were obtained by the Application of the New Principles of OPTOMETRY by one thoroughly trained in their use.

If you are in need of glasses or lenses it will be to your advantage to consult a "Modern Doctor of Optometry" whose specialty is the conservation of sight. With such fitting of glasses is a profession, not a side line. If you have a child suffering with cross eyes, bring it in for examination and we will tell you frankly what can be done toward correcting them. There will be no charge for consultation.

22 GRADUATES

With the largest class in the history os the North Adame High School the graduation exercises were held last evening before a packed house. To the prelude of the orchestra the class marched in and took their places on the rostrum. Rev. Wylie delivered the invocation The Salutatorian of the class, Miss Margaret Shambaugh. chose for her subject "Wisdom in Wealth" to which she did ample justice Following music by the orchestra came the Valedictory delivered by Miss Edith Bohn and we must say it was very creditable. Prof. Fisher of Ann Arbor delivered the speech of the evening and Supt. Young with fitting remarks presented the diplomas. Tht benediction by Rev. Wylie drew to a close one of the most notable Commencements of the season. It would be hard to discover a more cosmopolitan bunch or a wider divergance of temperments than these 22 young people and we have high hopes for their future. We gave their names last week.

The fire alarm was sounded in North Adams on Wednesday afternoon about 4 o'clock when the farm buildings of George F. Gray north of Half-moon Lake, were found to be on fire. The main barn of Mr. Gray and one other building burned but near-by buildings were saved. Some inconvenience resulted from scarcity of water on the premises, but the chemical outfit gave good service Although Mr. Gray is not a subscriber to the association, he agreed to pay the expenses of the trip. We understand the barn was insured for a small amount only.

The annual Alumni Banquet of the North Adams High School takes place to-night (Friday evening) with the following program: Toastmaster, Everett Williams, '15; invocation, Rev. Get the Big Value in the Fence Post Field

STEEL fence posts are no longer all alike. The RED TOP Double Strength Studded Tee has set a new standard. It is a stronger post of longer life, easier and cheaper to set and easier and cheaper to fasten fencing to.

Greater Strength—due to adding more metal in a reinforcing rib (see illustration) and also due to the fact that there isn't a single hole punched in the post either for staples or anchor plate. No rivets required to attach anchor plate. (See illustration.)

Easier, cheaper setting—with the One Man RED TOP Driver one man without a helper can set 200 to 300 posts per day.

More efficient fence fastening—RED TOP Handy Fasteners makes it possible for one man to attach fencing to posts. And fastener holds fencing tighter.

The Sign of The Four

By A. CONAN DOYLE

There was no difficulty about this. On leading Toby to the place where he had committed his fault, he cast about in a wide circle and finally dashed off in a fresh direction.

"We must take care that he does not now bring us to the place where the creosote barrel came from," I observed.

"I had thought of that. But you notice that he keeps on the pavement, whereas the barrel passed down the roadway. No, we are on the true scent now."

It tended down towards the riverside, running through Belmont Place and Prince's Street. At the end of Broad Street it ran right down to the water's edge, where there was a small wooden wharf. Toby led us to the very edge of this and there stood whining, looking out on the dark current beyond.

"We are out of luck," said Holmes. "They have taken to a boat here." Several small punts and skiffs were lying about in the water on the edge of the wharf. We took Toby round to each in turn, but, though he sniffed earnestly, he made no sign.

Close to the rude landing-stage was a small brick house, with a wooden placard slung out through the second window. "Mordecai Smith" was printed across it in large letters, and, underneath, "Boats to hire by the hour or day." A second inscription above the door informed us that a steam launch was kept—a statement which was confirmed by a great pile of coke upon the jetty. Sherlock Holmes looked slowly round, and his face assumed an ominous expression.

"This looks bad," said he. "These fellows are sharper than I expected. They seem to have covered their tracks. There has, I fear, been preconcerted management here."

He was approaching the door of the house, when it opened, and a little, curly-headed lad of six came running out, followed by a stoutish, red-faced woman, with a large sponge in her hand.

"You come back and be washed, Jack!" she shouted. "Come back, you young imp; for if your father comes home and finds you like that, he'll let us hear of it!"

"Dear little chap!" said Holmes, strategically. "What a rosy-cheeked young rascal! Now, Jack, is there anything you would like?"

The youth pondered for a moment. "I'd like a shillin'," said he.

"Nothing you would like better?"

"I'd like two shillin' better," the prodigy answered, after some thought.

"Here you are, then! Catch! A fine child, Mrs. Smith."

"Lor' bless you, sir, he is that, and forward. He gets a'most too much for me to manage, specially when my man is away days at a time."

"Away, is he?" said Holmes, in a disappointed voice. "I am sorry for that, for I wanted to speak to Mr. Smith."

"He's been away since yesterday mornin', sir, and, truth to tell, I am beginning to feel frightened about him. But if it was about a boat, sir, maybe I could serve as well."

"I wanted to hire his steam launch."

"Why, bless you, sir, it is in the steam launch that he has gone. That's what puzzles me; for I know there ain't more coals in her than would take her to about Woolwich and back. If he'd been away in the barge I'd ha' thought nothin'; for many a time a job has taken him as far as Gravesend, and, then, if there was much doin' there, he might ha' stayed over. But what good is a steam launch without coals?"

"He might have bought some at a wharf down the river."

"He might, sir, but it weren't his way. Many a time I've heard him call out at the prices they charge for a few odd bags. Besides, I don't like that wooden-legged man, wi' his ugly face and outlandish talk. What did he want always knockin' about here for?"

"A wooden-legged man?" said Holmes, with bland surprise.

"Yes, sir; a brown, monkey-faced chap that's called more'n once for my old man. It was him that roused him up yesternight, and what's more, my man knew he was comin', for he had steam up in his launch. I tell you straight, sir, I don't feel easy in my mind about it."

"But, my dear Mrs. Smith," said Holmes, shrugging his shoulders, "you are frightening yourself about nothing. How could you possibly tell that it was the wooden-legged man who came in the night? I don't quite understand how you can be so sure."

"His voice, sir; I knew his voice, which is kind o' thick and foggy. He tapped at the winder—about three it would be. 'Show a leg, matey,' says he; 'time to turn out guard.' My old man woke Jim up—that's my eldest—and away they went, without so much as a word to me. I could hear the wooden leg clackin' on the stones."

"And was this wooden-legged man alone?"

"Couldn't say, I am sure, sir. I didn't hear no one else."

"I am sorry, Mrs. Smith, for I wanted a steam launch, and I have heard good reports of the—— Let me see, what is her name?"

"The Aurora, sir."

"Ah! She's not that old green launch with a yellow line, very broad in the beam?"

"No, indeed. She's as trim a little thing as any on the river. She's been fresh painted, black with two red streaks."

"Thanks. I hope that you will hear soon from Mr. Smith. I am going down the river; and if I should see anything of the Aurora, I shall let him know that you are uneasy. A black funnel, you say?"

"No, sir. Black with a white band."

"Ah, of course. It was the sides which were black. Good-morning, Mrs. Smith. There is a boatman here with a wherry, Watson. We shall take it and cross the river.

"The main thing with people of that sort," said Holmes, as we sat in the sheets of the wherry, "is never to let them think that their information can be of the slightest importance to you. If you do, they will instantly shut up like an oyster. If you listen to them under protest, as it were, you are very likely to get what you want."

"Our course now seems pretty clear," said I.

"What would you do, then?"

"I would engage a launch and go down the track of the Aurora."

"My dear fellow, it would be a colossal task. She may have touched at any wharf on either side of the stream between here and Greenwich. Below the bridge there is a perfect labyrinth of landing place for miles. It would take you days and days to exhaust them, if you set about it alone."

"Employ the police, then."

"No, I shall probably call Athelney Jones in at the last moment. He is not a bad fellow, and I should not like to do anything which would injure him professionally. But I have a fancy for working it out myself, now that we have gone so far."

"Could we advertise, then, asking for information from wharfingers?"

"Worse and worse! Our men would know that the chase was hot at their heels, and they would be off out of the country. As it is, they are likely enough to leave, but as long as they think they are perfectly safe they will be in no hurry. Jones's energy will be of use to us there, for his view of the case is sure to push itself into the daily press, and the runaways will think that everyone is off on the wrong scent."

"What are we to do, then?" I asked, as we landed near Millbank Penitentiary.

"Take this hansom, drive home, have some breakfast and get an hour's sleep. It is quite on the cards that we may be afoot to-night again. Stop at a telegraph office, cabby. We will keep Toby, for he may be of use to us yet."

We pulled up at the Great Peter Street post office and Holmes dispatched his wire. "Whom do you think that is to?" he asked, as we resumed our journey.

"You remember the Baker Street division of the detective police force whom I employed in the Jefferson Hope case?"

"Well," said I, laughing.

"This is just the case where they might be invaluable. If they fail, I have other resources; but I shall try them first. That wire was to my dirty little lieutenant, Wiggins, and I expect that he and his gang will be with us before we have finished our breakfast."

It was between eight and nine o'clock now, and I was conscious of a strong reaction after the successive excitements of the night. I was limp and weary, befogged in mind and fatigued in body. I had not the professional enthusiasm which carried my companion on, nor could I look at the matter as a mere abstract intellectual problem. As far as the death of Bartholomew Sholto went, I had heard little good of him, and could feel no intense antipathy to his murderer. The treasure, however, was a different matter. That, or part of it, belonged rightfully to Miss Morstan. While there was a chance of recovering it, I was ready to devote my life to the one object. True, if I found it, it would probably put her forever beyond my reach. Yet it would be a petty and selfish love which would be influenced by such a thought as that. If Holmes could work to find the criminals, I had a tenfold stronger reason to urge me on to find the treasure.

A bath at Baker Street and a complete change freshened me up wonderfully. When I came down to our room I found the breakfast laid and Holmes pouring out the coffee.

"Here it is," said he laughing, and pointing to an open newspaper. "The energetic Jones and the ubiquitous reporter have fixed it up between them. But you have had enough of the case. Better have your ham and eggs first."

I took the paper from him and read the short notice, which was headed, "Mysterious Business at Upper Norwood."

"About twelve o'clock last night," said the Standard, "Mr. Bartholomew Sholto, of Pondicherry Lodge, Upper Norwood, was found dead in his room under circumstances which point to foul play. As far as we can learn, no traces of violence were found upon Mr. Sholto's person, but a valuable collection of Indian gems, which the deceased gentleman had inherited from his father, has been carried off. The discovery was first made by Mr. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, who had called at the house with Mr. Thaddeus Sholto, brother of the deceased. By a singular piece of good fortune, Mr. Athelney Jones, the well-known member of the detective police force, happened to be at the Norwood Police Station, and was on the ground within half an hour of the first alarm. His trained and experienced faculties were at once directed toward the detection of the criminals, with the gratifying result that the brother, Thaddeus Sholto, has already been arrested, together with the housekeeper, Mrs. Bernstone, an Indian butler named Lal Rao, and a porter, or gatekeeper, named McMurdo. It is quite certain that the thief or thieves were well acquainted with the house, for Mr. Jones's well-known technical knowledge and his powers of minute obserbation have enabled him to prove conclusively that the miscreants could not have entered by the door or by the window, but must have made their way across the roof of the building, and so through a trapdoor into a room which communicated with that in which the body was found. This fact, which has been very clearly made out, proves conclusively that it was no mere haphazard burglary. The prompt and energetic action of the officers of the law shows the great advantage of the presence on such occasions of a single vigorous and masterful mind. We cannot but think that it supplies an argument to those who would wish to see our detectives more decentralized, and so brought into closer and more effective touch with the cases which it is their duty to investigate."

"Isn't it gorgeous!" said Holmes, grinning over his coffee-cup. "What do you think of it?"

"I think that we have had a close shave ourselves of being arrested for the crime."

"So do I. I wouldn't answer for our safety now, if he should happen to have another of his attacks of energy."

At this moment there was a loud ring at the bell, and I could hear Mrs. Hudson, our landlady, raising her voice in a wail of expostulation and dismay.

"By heaven, Holmes," I said, half rising, "I believe they are really after us."

"No, it's not quite so bad as that. It is the unofficial force—the Baker Street irregulars."

As he spoke there came a swift pattering of naked feet upon the stairs, a clatter of high voices, and in rushed a dozen dirty and ragged little street Arabs. There was some show of discipline among them, despite their tumultuous entry, for they instantly drew up in line and stood facing us with expectant faces. One of their number, taller and older than the others, stood forward with an air of lounging superiority which was very funny in such a disreputable little scarecrow.

"Got your message, sir," said he, "and brought 'em on sharp. Three bob and a tanner for tickets."

"Here you are," said Holmes, producing some silver. "In future they can report to you, Wiggins, and you to me. I cannot have the house invaded in this way. However, it is just as well that you should all hear the instructions. I want to find the whereabouts of a steam launch called the Aurora, owner Mordecai Smith, black with two red streaks, funnel black with a white band. She is down the river somewhere. I want one boy to be at Mordecai Smith's landing-stage, opposite Millbank, to see if the boat comes back. You must divide it out among yourselves, and do both banks thoroughly. Let me know the moment you have news. Is that all clear?"

"Yes, guv'nor," said Wiggins.

"The old scale of pay, and a guinea to the boy who finds the boat. Here's a day in advance. Now off you go!" He handed them a shilling each, and away they buzzed down the stairs, and I saw them a moment later streaming down the street.

"If the launch is above water, they will find her," said Holmes, as he rose from the table and lighted his pipe. "They can go everywhere, see everything, overhear everyone. I expect to hear before evening that they have spotted her. In the meanwhile, we can do nothing but await results. We can not pick up the broken trail until we find either the Aurora or Mr. Mordecai Smith."

"Toby could eat these scraps, I dare say. Are you going to bed, Holmes?"

"No; I am not tired. I have a curious constitution. I never remember feeling tired by work, though idleness exhausts me completely. I am going to smoke, and to think over this queer business to which my fair client has introduced us. If ever man had an easy task, this of ours ought to be. Wooden-legged men are not so common, but the other man must, I should think, be absolutely unique."

"That other man again!"

"I have no wish to make a mystery of him—to you, anyway. But you must have formed your own opinion. Now, do consider the data. Diminutive footmarks, toes never fettered by boots, naked feet, stone-headed wooden mace, great agility, small poisoned darts. What do you make of all this?"

"A savage!" I exclaimed. "Perhaps one of those Indians who were the associates of Jonathan Small."

"Hardly that," he said. "When I first saw signs of strange weapons I was inclined to think so, but the remarkable character of the footmarks caused me to reconsider my views. Some of the inhabitants of the Indian Peninsula are small men, but none could have left such marks as that. The Hindoo proper has long and thin feet. The sandal-wearing Mohammedan has the great toe well separated from the others, because the thong is commonly passed between. These little darts, too, could only be shot in one way. They were from a blow-pipe. Now, then, where are we to find our savage?"

"South America," I hazarded.

He stretched his hand up, and took down a bulky volume from the shelf. "This is the first volume of a gazetteer which is now being published. It may be looked upon as the very latest authority. What have we here? 'Andaman Islands, situated three hundred and forty miles to the north of Sumatra in the Bay of Bengal.' Hum! hum! What's all this? 'Moist climate, coral reefs, sharks, Port Blair, convict-barracks, Rutland Island, cottonwoods——' Ah, here we are. 'The aborigines of the Andaman Islands may perhaps claim the distinction of being the smallest race upon this earth, though some anthropologists prefer the Bushmen of Africa, the Digger Indians of America, and the Terra del Fuegians. The average height is rather below four feet, although many full-grown adults may be found who are very much smaller than this. They are a fierce, morose, and intractable people, though capable of forming most devoted friendships when their confidence has once been gained.' Mark that, Watson. Now, then, listen to this. 'They are naturally hideous, having large, misshapen heads, small, fierce eyes, and distorted features. Their feet and hands, however, are remarkably small. So intractable and fierce are they that all the efforts of the British officials have failed to win them over in any degree. They have always been a terror to shipwrecked crews, braining the survivors with their stone-headed clubs, or shooting them with their poisoned arrows. These massacres are invariably concluded by a cannibal feast.' Nice, amiable people, Watson! If this fellow had been left to his own unaided devices, this affair might have taken an even more ghastly turn. I fancy that, even as it is, Jonathan Small would give a good deal not to have employed him."

Vacation!

"But how came he to have so singular a companion?"

"Ah, that is more than I can tell. Since, however, we had already determined that Small had come from the Andamans, it is not so very wonderful that this islander should be with him. No doubt we shall know all about it in time. Look here, Watson: you look regularly done. Lie down there on the sofa, and see if I can put you to sleep."

He took up his violin from the corner, and as I stretched myself out he began to play some low, dreamy, melodious air—his own, no doubt, for he had a remarkable gift for improvisation. I have a vague remembrance of his gaunt limbs, his earnest face, and the rise and fall of his bow. Then I seemed to be floating peacefully away upon a soft sea of sound, until I found myself in dreamland, with the sweet face of Mary Morstan looking down upon me.

CHAPTER IX

A Break In The Chain

It was late in the afternoon before I awoke, strengthened and refreshed. Sherlock Holmes still sat exactly as I had left him, save that he had laid aside his violin and was deep in a book. He looked across at me as I stirred, and I noticed that his face was dark and troubled.

"You have slept soundly," he said. "I feared that our talk would wake you."

"I heard nothing," I answered. "Have you had fresh news, then?"

"Unfortunately, no. I confess that I am surprised and disappointed. I expected something definite by this time. Wiggins has just been up to report. He says that no trace can be found of the launch. It is a provoking check, for every hour is of importance."

"Can I do anything? I am perfectly fresh now, and quite ready for another night's outing."

"No; we can do nothing. We can only wait. If we go ourselves, the message might come in our absence, and delay be caused. You can do what you will, but I must remain on guard."

"Then I shall run over to Camberwell and call upon Mrs. Cecil Forrester. She asked me to, yesterday."

"On Mrs. Cecil Forrester?" asked Holmes, with the twinkle of a smile in his eyes.

"Well, of course, on Miss Morstan, too. They were anxious to hear what happened."

"I would not tell them too much," said Holmes. "Women are never to be entirely trusted—not the best of them."

I did not pause to argue over this atrocious sentiment. "I shall be back in an hour or two," I remarked.

"All right! Good luck! But, I say, if you are crossing the river you may as well return Toby, for I don't think it at all likely that we shall have any use for him now."

I took our mongrel accordingly, and left him, together with a half sovereign, at the old naturalist's in Pinchin Lane. At Camberwell I found Miss Morstan a little weary after her night's adventures, but very eager to hear the news. Mrs. Forrester, too, was full of curiosity. I told them all that we had done, suppressing, however, the more dreadful parts of the tragedy. Thus, although I spoke of Mr. Sholto's death, I said nothing of the exact manner and method of it. With all my omissions, however, there was enough to startle and amaze them.

"It is a romance!" cried Mrs. Forrester. "An injured lady, half a million in treasure, a black cannibal, and a wooden-legged ruffian. They take the place of the conventional dragon or wicked earl."

"And two knight-errants to the rescue," added Miss Morstan, with a bright glance at me.

"Why, Mary, your fortune depends upon the issue of this search. I don't think that you are nearly excited enough. Just imagine what it must be to be so rich and to have the world at your feet."

It sent a thrill of joy to my heart to notice that she showed no sign of elation at the prospect. On the contrary, she gave a toss of her proud head as though the matter were one in which she took small interest.

"It is for Mr. Thaddeus Sholto that I am anxious," she said. "Nothing else is of any consequence; but I think that he has behaved most kindly and honorably throughout. It is our duty to clear him of this dreadful and unfounded charge."

It was evening before I left Camberwell, and quite dark by the time I reached home. My companion's book and pipe lay by his chair, but he had disappeared. I looked about in the hope of seeing a note, but there was none.

"I supose that Mr. Sherlock Holmes has gone out," I said to Mrs. Hudson, as she came up to lower the blinds.

"No, sir. He has gone to his room, sir. Do you know, sir," sinking her voice into an impressive whisper, "I am afraid for his health!"

"Why so, Mrs. Hudson?"

"Well, he's that strange, sir. After you was gone he walked, and he walked, up and down, and up and down, until I was weary of the sound of his footsteps. Then I heard him talking to himself, and muttering, and every time the bell rang out he came on the stair-head, with, 'What is that, Mrs. Hudson?' And now he has slammed off to his room, but I can hear him walking away the same as ever. I hope he's not going to be ill, sir. I ventured to say something to him about cooling medicine, but he turned on me, sir, with such a look that I don't know how I ever got out of the room."

"I don't think that you have any cause to be uneasy, Mrs. Hudson," I answered. "I have seen him like this before. He has some small matter upon his mind which makes him restless." I tried to speak lightly to our worthy landlady, but I was myself somewhat uneasy when through the long night I still, from time to time, heard the dull sound of his tread, and knew how his keen spirit was chafing against this involuntary inaction.

At break-fast time he looked worn and haggard, with a little fleck of feverish color upon either cheek.

"You are knocking yourself up, old man," I remarked. "I heard you marching about in the night."

"No, I could not sleep," he answered. "This infernal problem is consuming me. It is too much to be balked by so petty an obstacle, when all else had been overcome. I know the men, the launch, everything; and yet I can get no news. I have set other agencies at work, and used every means at my disposal. The whole river has been searched on either side, but there is no news, nor has Mrs. Smith heard of her husband. I shall come to the conclusion soon that they have scuttled the craft. But there are objections to that."

"Or that Mrs. Smith has put us on a wrong scent."

"No, I think that may be dismissed. I had inquiries made, and there is a launch of that description."

"Could it have gone up the river?"

"I have considered that possibility, too, and there is a search party who will work up as far as Richmond. If no news comes today, I shall start off myself tomorrow, and go for the men rather than the boat. But surely, surely, we shall hear something."

We did not, however. Not a word came to us, either from Wiggins or from the other agencies. There were articles in most of the papers upon the Norwood tragedy. They all appeared to be rather hostile to the unfortunate Thaddeus Sholto. No fresh details were to be found, however, in any of them, save that an inquest was to be held upon the following day. I walked over to Camberwell in the evening to report our ill success to the ladies, and on my return I found Holmes dejected and somewhat morose. He would hardly reply to my questions, and busied himself all evening in an abtruse chemical analysis which involved much heating of retorts and distilling of vapors, ending at last in a smell which fairly drove me out of the apartment. Up to the small hours of the morning I could hear the clinking of his test-tubes, which told me that he was still engaged in his malodorous experiment.

In the early dawn I woke with a start, and was surprised to find him standing by my bedside, clad in a rude sailor dress, with a pea-jacket, and a coarse red scarf round his neck.

"I am off down the river, Watson," said he. "I have been turning it over in my mind, and I can see only one way out of it. It is worth trying, at all events."

FARM BOYS TO GET OUTING IN AUGUST

Believing that farm leaders are made, not born, the Western Michigan Agricultural Teachers' Association is making plans to hold a farm boys' training camp at Barlow Lake, southwest of Middleville, next August.

Camp Man-I-Tou-Lin, owned by the Grand Rapids Y. M. C. A., will be used by the boys from Aug. 20 to 27. Instruction in leadership will be given by prominent business men, farm leaders, faculty members at Michigan State College, and professional men.

The camp will consist mostly of farm boys who are taking agricultural courses in Central and Western Michigan high schools. Any farm boy in the state, however, will be eligible.

SUNDAY MOVIE BAN BEATEN BY VOTERS

East Lansing will have Sunday movies.

Voters defeated, 520 to 398, a proposed charter amendment which would have prohibited Sunday theatrical productions or moving pictures. The amendment, supported by a group of women, was aimed principally at a new motion picture theatre which was giving Sunday shows.

An indication of the interest shown by the residents in the fight on the Sunday picture shows was given by the size of the vote, which was half again as large as the normal vote at a regular election. The argument over Sunday movies split the town, with Michigan State College students, who were not eligible to vote, showing the most interest in the outcome. The students were lined up almost solidly in favor of Sunday movies, but the faculty of the school split over the proposition, two groups issuing statements on the subject before the election.

AIR LINE OPENS, LINKS DETROIT AND SAGINAW

Aerial express and passenger service between Detroit and Saginaw, operating on a schedule calling for three trips a week, was started by the Detroit-Saginaw-Northern Airway Company. The first plane of the new service, a Travel Air, landed at Rouge Park, the home field of the 107th Observation Squadron.

The schedule of the new line calls for round trips between Saginaw and Detroit every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The plane will leave Saginaw at 9 o'clock and arrive at Rouge Park at 10:15. On the return flight the take-off is scheduled for 4 o'clock.

GIRL MAKES TOP MARK IN HIGH SCHOOL CAREER

Choosing a valedictorian for the Manchester high school graduating class this year was an easy matter. In fact, the selected was almost a "cut and dried" affair, for school records showed that Adalina Marie Kiebler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Kiebler, living near the village, had received "A" marks in all her studies during her four years in high school.

CAMP CUSTER HOSPITAL SOON TO BE COMPLETED

Many improvements now under way at the veterans' bureau hospital No. 100, when completed, will make the big institution at Camp Custer one of the finest of its kind in the country, according to Dr. William M. Dobson, medical director in charge.

Probably the most outstanding of the improvements now started is the clearing of a farm section on the hospital grounds, the work being done by the patients of the hospital. This work will give the institution an agricultural unit which will supply eggs, milk, meats and other foods.

STATE GEOLOGY TOUR TO LEAD CANADA TOUR

William A. Kelly, instructor in the geology department of Michigan State College, has been selected to direct a party, under the Canadian geological survey this summer, to work in an area west of Calgary, Alberta, in search of a northern extension on the proven oil field of Turner valley.

NEW MT. SINAI TABLETS FOUND

Discoveries which are expected to shed sensational light on Biblical history have been made by Professor Kirsopp Lake, head of a Harvard-Michigan expedition to Mount Sinai, Arabia.

From Professor Lake at Cairo, Egypt, comes word that he has found new fragments of the mysterious "Sinai inscriptions."

These inscriptions, according to Harvard authorities, are stone carvings, the first of which were dug up more than 20 years ago on Mount Sinai, the ancient peak where Moses received the twelve tablets.

If Professor Lake's "fragments" should make the inscriptions as a whole readable, it is possible, say archeologists, that the baffling characters would throw new light on the life of Moses, the history of the Bible and the origin of modern languages.

Professor Lake, backed by the Universities of Harvard and Michigan, left this country last autumn to delve into ancient manuscripts stored in the library of the monastery of St. Catherine, high up on a shoulder of Mount Sinai itself. He was accompanied by his assistant, Dr. Robert Henry Blake.

The original discovery of the inscriptions was made about 1904 during the excavation of the temple of Hathor on Mount Sinai. Hathor was an Egyptian goddess usually represented in the form of a cow. She was also the goddess who was particularly fond of turquoises, hence her temple's presence in the Sinai hills, where the ancient Egyptians did their mining for turquoises and copper.

The Sinai inscriptions were on stone tablets and stone images, all found among the ruins of the temple. They are in a language never before encountered. Its characters are strangely allied to the older Egyptian hieroglyphics and the later Semitic alphabet, yet are not identical with either.

Ten shoots of the Japanese walnut, a rare tree in the United States have been presented to Albion by B. E. Ludwig, field agent for Olivet college. They have been planted in Victory and Water Works parks.

OLDEST ON 'U' STAFF RESIGNS

The resignation of Professor Frederick Newton Scott, head of the rhetoric department of the University of Michigan, and oldest member of the faculty has been announced. He has held the position for more than 50 years.

Known to thousands of Michigan alumni throughout the world, and famous as the tutor of authors and journalists who have gained international fame, Professor Scott has long been one of the most renowned of the many Michigan teachers. He was the dean of one of the first university schools of journalism to be established in the United States and has been a pioneer in the teaching of this form of work in addition to his regular instruction in other forms of writing.

VALUABLE LIBRARY GIVEN TO ALBION BY PROFESSOR EMERITUS

Dr. Frederick Lutz of Highland Park, professor emeritus of modern languages of Albion college, for many years head of the department, has given to the college a valuable collection of more than 2,000 books, gathered by him through his lifetime. The collection covers the fields of German, Romance, Latin and Greek literature and philology and represents many excellent editions. Included in the books are text books for the study of 18 languages, giving some indication of Dr. Lutz's wide range of interest. An extensive collection of German and Romance grammars and several valuable works on Sanskrit and Semitic languages also are included in the lot. Among the outstanding titles is "German National Literature" by Kurschner, which is in 250 volumes and represents the entire range of German literature. Dr. Lutz came to Albion from the faculty of Harvard university more than 40 years ago and was one of the men instrumental in building the present day Albion.

WOMEN EXCEED MEN IN POPULATION OF WEALTHY PARIS

Woman is the child of wealth and idleness. This is the conclusion of sociologists after a glance at the new census report which shows that Paris, with a population of almost 3,000,000, has 300,000 more women than men, and most of these are in the fashionable districts where the wealthy lead a gilded existence.

In the old aristocratic neighborhoods around the Invalides, the smart Passy quarter and in the Avenue de Wagram district, there are almost 200,000 more lady fashionables than men. The feminine surplus, in fact, averages 20 per cent in the Paris west end, while down in the eastern quarters, where the plain folk litter the narrower and darker streets and live mostly on bread, the feminine surplus is only one-sixteenth of the neighborhood population. In some workingmen's suburbs, the men hold their own, the census reports.

That this over-stocking of women is the direct result of the war, everybody admits, but the peculiar concentration in the parts of town where life is easy is attributed to biological factors.

FRANCE'S LAST KING AGAIN TO REST IN ITALY

The bodies of Charles X., the last king of France, and of the Comte de Chambord, who very nearly ascended the throne, and of other Bourbon princes are to be restored to their tombs in the monastery of Castagnevizza, near Gorizia, Italy. The tomb of the monarch in this monastery was by a strange vicissitude of fortune placed in the first line during the fighting between Austria and Italy in the Great War.

The Italians firmly cemented the doorways of the tomb to save them from shell-fire, but after the capture of the district by the Austrians in 1918, following the Caporetto retreat, the Empress Zita had the bodies of her ancestors brought to the Vienna district, where they lie at present.

Now, at the request of the Franciscans, the Bourbons will be returned to their Italian resting places.

BALLOON BURSTS, CHILD TRIPS OVER DOG, KILLED

The explosion of a toy balloon and a stumble over a dog caused the death of 3-year-old Clayton Belvin in Hamtramck.

The boy was blowing up the balloon when it exploded and he swallowed the tattered fragment. At the same time probably excited by fright, he tripped over a dog playing with him, suffering a broken cervical vertebra in his fall.

TUSTIN BOY CAPTURES ILLINOIS SCHOOL HONOR

Clute Jensen, of Tustin, a junior in Northwestern university, at Evanston, Ill., was one of five students in a class of 200 to be elected to the honorary fraternity, Beta Gamma Sigma, of the School of Commerce. Membership is based upon scholarship, character and business ability. Jensen formerly was a student at the Ferris institute, Big Rapids, and a member of the Sigma Alpha Delta fraternity.

He is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Jensen, of Tustin, and graduated with the class of 1923 of the Tustin high school, being valedictorian of his class.

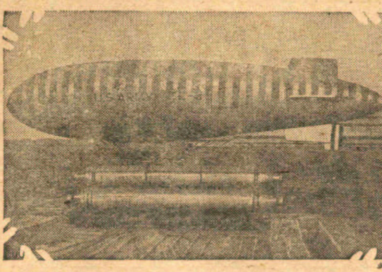
Filling Army Airship With Helium From Tank Cars



Rare helium gas is now used as largely as possible in American army and navy airships. Because of its scarceness and the fact that it's very expensive, special precautions are taken in its transportation.

HERO LEARNS OF OLD WAR HONOR

Nearly nine years ago, Miles Casteel risked his life in France, rescuing two comrades under heavy shell fire. It was all in the business of war, and he forgot about it as soon as possible.

The other day Casteel, who is assistant track and football coach at Michigan State college, visited the state war record offices at Lansing to look up his honorable discharge record. There he discovered that he had been cited by the federal war department for bravery in action.

For eight and one-half years, Casteel had been ignorant of the recognition paid to his heroism. The citation reads as follows: "Miles W. Casteel, first lieutenant, 104th field artillery, cited for gallantry in action during operation in the vicinity of Brabant Furmeuse, France, November 6, 1918, in rescuing two badly wounded comrades under heavy enemy shell fire."

Casteel is known widely in Michigan for his athletic career in Kalamazoo college, which he attended both before and after the World war. He was football star in the M. I. A. A. under Coach Ralph Young, who later came to State college as head of the coaching staff, was all-M. I. A. A. quarterback, and held the state record in the pole vault.

A student at Kalamazoo college, Casteel enlisted when the United States entered the war, and went to France with the twenty-seventh division.

QUITS AFTER 48 YEARS AS BAGGAGE "SMASHER"

At the age of 19 years, Engel, who was born in Nosendorf, Germany, became a baggage porter for the old Grand Rapids and Indiana Railway company, at Fisher station. In June, 1893, he was promoted to agent, a position he has held since that time.

When he was transferred to the old Union station, four men were employed in the baggage department and the passenger schedule called for 15 trains daily. This work has increased until, at the present time there are 60 employés in the department and the daily schedule contains a list of 70 calls for trains.

JAPANESE NEWSPAPER DEFENDS U. S. YOUTH

"It is our impression, based upon impartial observation, that the American—especially the American youths bred in wholesome families, which fortunately abound in America, and educated in universities—are on the whole stronger in moral grip and more earnest and sincere in their attitude towards life, than other peoples situated in similar circumstances."

With this statement the powerful Japanese daily Osaka Mainichi has come forth in editorial defense of the much-abused youth of the United States.

One evidence of the strength of American young manhood, says the Mainichi, "is the incomparably more sober relations which Americans, particularly those of the younger generation, sustain with Christianity."

MILLION WALL-EYED PIKE PLANTED IN MUSKEGON

Planting of 35 cans, or 70,000 wall-eyed pike fry in the backwaters of the Muskegon river brought to nearly one million the total of fish fry planted in the county since March.

BLACKBOTTOM MAY CHANGE COSTUME OF FILIPINO WOMEN

Filipino women have held out for generations against the wiles of Paris fashion dictators, but Mrs. Lucilli Bunuan, wife of the Philippines press director, wouldn't be surprised to see the American "black bottom" fad make an impression on the native costumes of her people.

The starched and billowing native dresses would lend themselves well to the mode, she thinks, pointing out that black embroidery could be inserted in the sweeping trains of the skirts with attractive effect. The "black bottom" stockings, with the heels in sharp contrast to the flesh-colored upper part, aren't likely to find much of a vogue in Manila, however, for there, she explains, many women do not wear hose in the hot months, if at all.

She is convinced that the Filipino women will never shorten the skirts of their native dresses. If they ever go in for the short skirt, she says, they will discard their typical costumes entirely and adopt the American styles.

ORE EXPERT IS AT HOUGHTON

Arthur W. Fahrenwald, expert in ore dressing for the United States bureau of mines, who has been in charge of the field office of the bureau at the Idaho School of Mines at Moscow, has been assigned to make an exhaustive study of milling practice in the Michigan copper district, in co-operation with the Michigan College of Mining and Technology. Already having made a preliminary survey of the mills, he will go to Houghton the first of July to continue his studies, which will probably require two years or longer.

Fahrenwald is the leading expert of the bureau of mines on the classification of ore concentrates and flotation and is the author of a number of valuable reports on these subjects. He also is the inventor of a classifying machine which has been the means of saving large sums of money for mine operators in the Idaho district.

BUSINESS MEN FIGHT HALT IN TREE CUTTING

Washington business men with establishments in Connecticut avenue northwest, between Dupont circle and Florida avenue, communicated with the commissioners protesting against the halting of the widening of that part of the thoroughfare.

They said the trees that will be taken down if the street is widened, and to save which the work was halted, are "dilapidated and not worth saving, inasmuch as practically three-fourths of their roots were cut away during the excavation for laying sewers."

U. S. VISIT OF ROYALTY TAKES GUM TO RUMANIA

The habit of chewing gum was almost unknown in Bucharest until the couple returned home from their tour of the United States. Shortly afterwards they visited a kiosk which carries foreign newspapers and other knick-knacks demanded by tourists and visiting business men, and bought a whole box. Since then, the dealer says, his sales of chewing gum among the natives have increased many-fold.

It doesn't take a very large man to make a big boast.

It's easier to do the things we shouldn't do than it is to avoid doing the things we should do.

DUCK DEAD DUE TO DRAGON FLY

Discovery in Michigan of a new fluke or flatworm disease of poultry and migratory water fowls, carried by the dragon fly, will undoubtedly throw light upon a question that is baffling sportsmen, the rapid disappearance of the mallard duck, in the opinion of Dr. W. L. Chandler, parasitologist in the Michigan State College bacteriology department.

This discovery was evolved after six years' study on the part of Dr. Chandler and Dr. Alexander Kotlan, of the Royal Hungarian Veterinary College at Budapest, Hungary, who was formerly exchange professor at State College.

The two scientists are still working on the problem, seeking some means of controlling the spread of the disease.

First cases of the fluke disease were reported in 1921, when Dr. Chandler discovered it in a wing-pinioned mallard coming from Duke Lake, near Muskegon. In 1925, a description of the disease, scientifically termed "Prosthogoniasis," was published by Dr. Chandler and Dr. Kotlan in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

It is now definitely determined that carriers of the disease are adult and larvae of the dragon fly. Dr. Chandler has worked with the ducks and chickens at Duck Lake, and since leaving East Lansing, Dr. Kotlan has been conducting extensive research in Europe. When it was found that both the poultry on a ranch near the lake and the mallard ducks had the disease, a search was made for the different insects, snails, and frogs which might harbor the flukes in the infective stages.

Dragon flies were proven by the experiments to be carriers. Four out of five chickens fed with naiads of the flies were infected. Birds fed the adult flies also were shown to harbor the flukes.

In the cases of both chickens and ducks, the first effect was to stop egg production, and in many cases death resulted.

CHICAGO BUILDS BRIDGE BEFORE RIVER DIVERTED

Chicago is spending $1,700,000 to build a bridge beneath which no river runs.

When it is finished a channel will be dug under it, and presently the Chicago River will flow where now are only railroad tracks.

Plunging into the $9,000,000 task of straightening a bend in the river to create more land for trackage and to open numerous streets out of the business district, Chicago discovered that Roosevelt road would have to be closed to traffic for many months if the bridge were not built until the river was in its new bed. So it was decided to build the bridge first and move the river under it later.

$40,000 RESERVOIR TO BE BUILT AT YPSILANTI

Work on a reservoir which will store a million and a half gallons of water will be started by the city of Ypsilanti. The old water tower with capacity of a quarter million gallons is insufficient during summer months. While the old type was designed to equalize the load on the pumps, the new reservoir will also equalize the load on the wells. The new reservoir will cost approximately $40,000. The top will be sodded over and give the appearance of a huge inverted bowl. The reservoir will be constructed on land owned by the Ford Motor Company, on Race street, and leased by the city. The area included in the lease also allows for a sewerage disposal plant and the remainder will be converted into a park.

People are seldom on time; they are either early or late.

KENT DOCTORS TO TREAT POOR FREE

Recommendations that each Grand Rapids clinic giving free service shall have a trained social investigator and that the records of the investigators shall be accessible to a committee of the Kent County Medical Society, are contained in a pronouncement of the Kent Society, recently issued as a statement of its policy with relation to free clinics.

The society has given several months' attention to the free clinic problem. At the conclusion of this investigation, the society has announced its members stand ready at all times to give free medical services to the needy.

"The interpretation of the needy shall be not only the paupers, but also those individuals who in the opinion of a trained social worker are worthy of that service," stated the society.

It believes, however, that the society should have, through its committee on clinics, a representative on the staff of every organization giving free clinic service and that so far as possible this representative should be chosen from such of the members of the society who are at the time serving on clinics.

MICHIGAN STATE'S RUNNER IS HAILED AS WORLD CHAMP

They are saying that Fred Alderman, of Michigan State, is one of the greatest natural sprinters the middle west has ever developed, and Alderman is bringing in more evidence to support that belief with every race he runs.

Not long ago he ran the 100-yard dash in 9 3/5, which was the world's record until Charley Paddock got an A. A. U. 9 5/10 last season. Alderman has run the 220 in 21 flat and has been timed lower than that, but not in competition. He has tied the world's indoor record of 31.2 for 300 yards and he has not been pushed to his best efforts by really great competition.

Coaches who have watched his work and who have an eye on the Olympic games of 1928 say that Alderman is a natural quarter-miler and that he will do better at that distance than at 100 yards or 220 when he has perfected his style and taken on two or three more years of hardening.

GYPSIES GET GOLD THEY TELL WOMAN CAUSED ILL LUCK

Fear that her home was bewitched and exerting an evil influence over its occupants was responsible for Miss Ida Geschke, of Detroit, being mulcted out of $1,883, her life savings.

Ill fortune has dogged Miss Geschke for years. Her mother, sister and brother-in-law died recently, leaving five orphaned children for her to support. Two women, clad in the garb of gypsies, appeared at her home recently, according to the police, and told her that the money she had saved by hard work was casting an evil spell on her. This money the gypsies directed she place under her pillow. The women in some way then abstracted it, Miss Geschke said.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell is Right

When a man is in the 83rd year of his life, there are certain things he has learned that only time can teach him. The basis of treating sickness has not changed since I left Medical College in 1875, nor since I placed on the market the laxative prescription I had used in my practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of my Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

New medicines are constantly brought out for constipation that contain calomel (which is mercury), salts of various kinds, phenolphthalein (which is acid and coal tar), and minerals. These are all drastic purges, many of them dangerous, and the medical profession is warning the public against them. Certain coal tar products which are offered to people so much nowadays, irritate and poison the tissue of the stomach, intestine and bowel. Most salts thin the blood and carry off the vital body fluids, making you aenemic and rheumatic.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs which are usually disguised as candy or chewing gum.

W. B. Caldwell MD

My remedy, too, costs less than most others; only about a cent a dose. A bottle of it will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

$1,000 IN REWARDS for Poultry Thieves!
The Michigan Business Farmer

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

Why Prohibition Has Come to Stay

A noted English ignoble, who violated our law in every city through which he traveled by seeking out bootleggers and buying intoxicants, asked facetiously on leaving the country, "When does this prohibition begin?"

A little thought would have revealed the fact that the colossal liquor trust had already been outlawed and is now under the ban; that the commonest thing in American life, namely the manufacture, sale and drinking of intoxicants, has become "news." What went on without the notice even of the police now gets on the front page of the daily.

Legalized and organized temptation has been removed from the streets and pathways of men. A man can get liquor if he hunts it, but liquor hunts him if he wants to quit.

The liquor power has been broken. The days when Presidents were threatened; judges were corrupted; state and national conventions dominated by the liquor interests; the faithful men in office defeated and bad men elected to take their place—these are almost forgotten.

The liquor traffic is now a cringing bootlegger, "raging because it hath but a short time."

You know, if you cut a chicken's head off you increase its activity—but not its longevity.

We used to spend Two and One Half Billions of Dollars for liquor every year. When the war was over, the nations of Europe doubled their liquor bill. If we had doubled ours, we should be spending Five Billions for booze. The women took to drink just as the men had been following the public bars. We had the abnormal excitements and tendencies of the war just like other counties. Why did we not double our liquor bill and have our women and boys ta ke to drink? Prohibition saved us. It came in the nick of time. The Providence of God timed it for America.

Prohibition has absolutely transformed the social customs and life of the poor, of the millions. If a man takes a drink of wood alcohol and goes blind or dies, we all hear of it. To the most remote corner of the land it is published. In the old days, 7,800 saloons could ply their trade in Chicago all night and all day Sunday without note or hindrance. They were never mentioned unless they had a murder or two to publish. Now one man with a hip pocket flask can sell one drink and get front page space. That will be published, but not one word has been said about the millions on millions who took the occasion in 1920 to quit drinking.

There are men who could not get by a saloon, who have never been in one or sought one or taken a drink of intoxicants since the nation went dry. Everybody knows some of these, but we never hear of them. They do not break into the press. They are loyal and sober American citizens. A few bootleggers are more talked about than all these millions.

Yes, prohibition is here and it has wrought marvels before our eyes. It has not finished its work and that work has not been perfect but prohibition at its worst has been better than license was at its best, and we propose to see that it has as fair a chance and as long a trial to show what it can do as the license system had. That was tried out for about one hundred and fifty years.

Some people speak of prohibition as an experiment. The truth is that everything else was experimented with first.

We tried moderation but found that alcohol liquor as a beverage was a narcotic habit-forming drug; that moderation fed the ranks of the immoderate.

We tried using mild liquors but every drink of the mild created a craving for the strong—the distilled.

We tried total abstinence from intoxicants in all forms but found the evil was a social matter and that our safety depended almost as much on what the other man did as in what we did.

We tried restrictions. The liquor traffic violated every law for its regulation, its restriction or its local prohibition.

We tried local option. It was too local and too optional.

We tried it by States but the Federal Government by Interstate Commerce laws broke down the State restrictions and permitted any outside State to import its liquor across the dry lines, and Missouri and Nebraska broke the morale of Kansas.

Under this handicap we went on until we had thirty one States dry.

It was time to make it a national policy.

We had the vast majority of the people and the vast majority of both Houses of Congress, but we never asked them to vote the nation dry. We took the most difficult mode possible, namely that of amending the Constitution, which requires three-fourths of all the States in both Houses of their legislatures.

Prohibition did not come until ninety-two legislative bodies out of a possible ninety-six had ratified the amendment. This is the most overwhelming expression of the American people that has ever been given to any one proposition since the government began, and those who ignore it and violate this law make the most excuseless attack not only upon our reform but our mode of Government and upon orderly government wherever found. Disloyalty will not win this fight but the law-abiding and loyal citizens will.

PROBATE ORDER

STATE OF MICHIGAN, The Probate Court for the County of Hillsdale.

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Hillsdale in the said County, on the 13th day of May A. D. 1927.

Present, Hon. Arthur L. Guernsey, Judge of Probate.

It appearing to the court that the time for presentation of claims against said estate should be limited,

It is Ordered, That creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court at said Probate Office on or before the 16th day of September A. D. 1927, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, said time and place being hereby appointed for the examination and adjustment of all claims and demands against said deceased.

It is Further Ordered, That public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the North Adams Advocate, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Arthur L. Guernsey
1t3 Judge of Probate

The Rev. Fr. David L. Dillon acted as toastmaster at the dinner and William J. Smith of Battle Creek, presented the deed of the hospital to Bishop Gallagher who received it on behalf of the Sisters. Bishop Gallagher declared that for him the occasion was unique.

"In the past 10 years I have dedicated many hospitals, laid many cornerstones," he said. "But always the Sisters have had the burden and care of how to pay for the building. Here things are different. The Sisters have from Mrs. Montgomery a clear deed to the property. She has desired to share in the high merit of caring for the sick and injured. And in proportion to what she has done will be her reward. Christ said that a cup of cold water given to the thirsty should not be without its reward. How much more to one who has given nearly three-quarters of a million."

The necessity of hospitals in every community was stressed by Gov. Green, who declared that along with churches and schools, they are among the most important adjuncts of municipal life. He also stated his belief that the span of life in Battle Creek would be increased because of the new hospital.

Bookcase in Hall

In place of having the conventional console table and mirror in the hall, a bookcase with either an etching or wood cut will prove very effective. It is not necessary to fill the cabinet with books; instead, pieces of brass, pottery and pewter will look attractive in the shelves.

Easter Sunday this year, April 17, will be repeated according to date, in 1938, 1949 and 1960. The earliest date it can possible fall on is March 22 and only once does that date appear in the period referred to. That was in 1818. In 2008 Easter will be on March 23, the next earliest date.

Easter Sunday, according to ecclesiastical reckoning, is the first Sunday after the full of the moon following the vernal equinox; in other words, the first Sunday after the ecclesiastical full moon on or after March 21. The first efforts to bring about a uniform date were taken at a council of the Roman Catholic Church at Nicaca called by Pope Constantine in 325. It was decided then that Easter would be on Sunday and on the same day throughout the world. The correct date was to be reckoned at Alexandria, then the home of astronomiccal science, and announced yearly.

At first the reckonings were based on an 8-year cycle, when the changes of sun and moon more or less exactly repeat themselves. Later an 84-year cycle was used, until the year 457, when a cycle of 532 years was used. Ultimately the 19-year cycle was adopted, which accounts for the table of 228 years referred to as being 12 cycles of the moon.

A CASE WHERE YOU LOSE IF YOU WIN

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

(This is one of a series of articles exposing the wiles of sharpers who are after your money.)

EVERY person who takes part in one of the many fake real estate raffles that are going on wins because there are no losers, regardless of the numbers they hold. The numbers, in fact, are only the bait to entice people into the scheme. The raffles are what might be termed "come-on" traps to catch investors. If you have ever tried your luck with a real estate raffle you doubtless felt like giving three cheers when advised that you had won, not knowing that in winning you had taken your first step toward being caught in the trap. You were momentarily overcome with joy over your success which looked to you like the "luck of a lifetime."

W. R. MOREHOUSE

Puffed over your good fortune, you hastened out to inspect your newly acquired piece of property. A high-pressure salesman representing the syndicate that was "giving" you the lot walked by your side. After a tiresome trip through an undesirable district the salesman pointed out your new real estate holdings,—a narrow, shallow lot, unimproved, uneven, and with no conveniences such as water, sewer, gas and electricity. Not even graded streets or sidewalks. Not worth its taxes!

Before you were fully awake to the fact that you had been tricked your attention was directed away from the unattractive landscape before you to another picture. You were shown another lot, ideal in its location with all modern conveniences soon to be installed, and told that if the lot you drew in the raffle was not entirely satisfactory you would be allowed a credit of $250 for it on one of the more desirable lots being sold "to a few selected people as a special inducement and for a short time only," at the bed-rock price of $950. You were urged to take advantage of your further good fortune at being thus selected and to seize the chance to buy one of these specially priced lots.

"I've won a building lot."

"Think of it!" exclaimed the high-pressure salesman. "It will take only $700 cash as we are willing to allow you a credit of $250."

Where You Begin to Lose

Perhaps, as you stood there, you began to suspect that other "winners" had come to view the same lot you had won. If you reached the conclusion that it was being repeatedly used as "bait" you were right. You realized that after all there is nothing free about so-called free things. But others, fortunately less suspicious than would be impressed by the glowing statements of the high-pressure salesman as to the value of the $950 lot and his assurance that it must double and treble in value, and would pay over the additional $700—to secure lots worth less than half the price they paid for them! The few who would insist on receiving title to the lot won in the fake raffle would soon be silenced by the statement that it would be delivered to them upon payment of certain expenses in connection with the transfer, which, however, would exceed the actual value of the prize lot.

There is nothing to be gained in participating in fake real estate raffles. There are plenty of legitimate sales. Raffles usually are only bait used to trap you. Of course, you win, but in winning you lose if you go through with it. Before drawing your money out of your savings account to go into a real estate scheme consult your banker or a Better Business Bureau to find out whether it is a bona fide plan. Spend time to save money!

RICE
PINEAPPL

A Hint From the Chinese Cook

ONE sometimes wonders when walking down the streets of a large city just what would happen if all the Chinese cooks were called back to China and all the Chinese restaurants were closed. At present their numbers seem endless, and it goes without saying that their methods have affected American ideas in cookery. Women who employ Chinese cooks in their homes say that they display a wonderful earnestness and adaptability to their work. Yet when they make a distinctively French or American dish it never seems quite French or American; it has the Chinese touch somewhere about it, and occasionally this difference is an improvement. As for the purely Chinese dishes, they have come without doubt to stay. Who, having once tasted a well-made Chow Mein or Chop Suey, would be willing to omit the occasional appearance of these in their dietary?

Adapting Chinese dishes to American appetites has been an admirable achievement. One of the means these Oriental cooks have used to this end is the pineapple, a fruit much favored by Americans. For instance, in the somewhat unusual recipes which follow, the introduction of pineapple adds greatly to the choiceness of the Chop Suey and the oriental chicken and pineapple.

CHOP SUEY A LA AMERICAN: [illegible] the breast meat of an [illegible] into strips one [illegible] for 2 minutes [illegible] butter. Add ¾ [illegible] sliced cross- [illegible] ed onion, 6 [illegible] Cook [illegible] chicken [illegible] spoons Shoyu Sauce, ½ green pepper thinly sliced, 1 teaspoon cornstarch mixed with 2 tablespoons cold water, and lastly ½ cup sliced Hawaiian pineapple cut in small pieces. Bring to boiling-point and let simmer 3 minutes. Serve with plain boiled rice.

ORIENTAL CHICKEN AND PINEAPPLE: Heat 1 cup drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple in 4 tablespoons hot butter. Blend smoothly into this 6 tablespoons flour. Add 1½ cups chicken stock. Season with salt and pepper. Stir until boiling and thickened, then add 3 cups diced cooked chicken. When very hot pour on platter garnished with toast. Sprinkle with salted almonds.

Professionals in domestic science have for several years experimented with pineapple in combination with other foods and have found among other things that pineapple helps to bring out the delicate, easily elusive flavor of eggplant, whether baked or stuffed; that it counteracts the mealiness of sweet potatoes; that it is excellent as an ingredient in stuffing for fowl, fish, or even tomato; and that it provides a desirable tartness with starchy foods such as rice and tapioca. The following recipes illustrate some of these interesting combinations.

BAKED EGGPLANT: Pare an eggplant, cut in slices crosswise and cook in salted water until tender. Drain and mash. Add 1 cup butter, ½ cup stale breadcrumbs, 2 well-beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste, ½ cup crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Fill individual moulds sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake in hot oven 15 minutes. Garnish with parsley.

STUFFED EGGPLANT WITH PINEAPPLE: Cook eggplant in boiling salted water for 15 minutes. Cut slice from top and with spoon remove pulp, taking care not to work too closely to the skin. Chop pulp and add 1 cup breadcrumbs, ¾ cup crushed Hawaiian pineapple, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon grated nutmeg, and a beaten egg with enough cream or milk to make a good stuffing consistency. Season with salt and pepper, and stir. Refill eggplant, cover with buttered crumbs and bake 25 minutes in hot oven.

SCALLOPED SWEET POTATOES: Put in 4 alternate layers, 2 cups cold boiled sweet potatoes cut in ¼ inch slices, and 1½ cups crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Sprinkle each layer with salt, brown sugar, and dots of butter, amounting in all to ½ cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons butter.

STUFFED SWEET POTATOES: Bake 6 even-sized sweet potatoes, cut in halves lengthwise and scoop out most of the contents. Mash, and season with 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, and ½ cup well-drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Beat in ¼ cup chopped nuts and fill the potato shells. Put 2 marshmallows on top of each filled shell and brown under the broiler flame.

TOMATOES WITH PINEAPPLE DRESSING: Scoop the centers from 6 tomatoes. To make the dressing chop 6 slices of fried bacon, 1 onion, the tomato centers, and add to 2 cups crushed Hawaiian pineapple, enough breadcrumbs t make the right amount to fill the tomatoes. Cover with crumbs and grated cheese and bake in hot oven 20 minutes.

HOW TO LOSE WEIGHT AND KEEP VITALITY

HOW to reduce weight and increase energy is the problem not only of the woman who would be fashionably slim, but also of the man who likes to boast of being "in good condition."

No one likes to deny himself continually. For this reason diets, which will bring one's weight back to normal, in a comparatively short time, have become increasingly popular. But the unfortunate thing is that most diets which reduce weight also reduce energy. And there is a very simple reason for this.

Most foods which supply something toward the building and repairing of tissues, supply as much to the fat cells as to the lean tissues. And on the other hand, those foods which do not supply any starches, sugars or other fat-making properties to the body, do not always contain the food elements necessary to keep the body functioning properly.

A prominent physician, whose office had been filled with people seeking a scientific way to reduce weight without reducing vitality, offered, not so long since, what he considered an ideal diet for reducing. It is simply a combination of lamb chops and pineapple. Both are known to have lean-tissue building properties, both contain protein, lime, (needed for bone building and repairing,) mineral salts, a large proportion of liquid, fiber which supplies bulk and roughage, essential to elimination. Neither pineapple nor lamb chops have fat-producing properties. And, very important is the fact that lamb chops combined with pineapple make an appetizing and satisfying food.

Canned pineapple is preferable to the fresh fruit, in this diet as it is available at all times, and because fresh pineapple usually has to be picked green and allowed to ripen in ships en route, whereas the canned pineapple is the only really ripe pineapple exported. The fruit to be canned has ripened to full maturity in Hawaiian fields under tropical sun, and therefore contains more vitamins and natural fruit sugars.

Also, canned pineapple is full of "readily usable" energy, because it is preserved in cane sugar, and contains both the natural sugar of the ripened pineapple and the pure cane sugar added when the fruit is canned. And sugar is converted into energy within twenty minutes after it enters the stomach. Fat people who are accustomed to eating an amount of energizing sugar invariably feel their energy decreasing on beginning a diet. They have acquired the habit of eating sweets. But by including pineapple, so rich in both cane and fruit sugars, the craving for sweets is partly satisfied, and at the same time there is energy necessary for the usual activities of the day.

It is very important that the person who is reducing feels energetic enough to take a normal amount of exercise, because exercise hastens the breaking of fat cells and reduces weight. Physicians warn us against a diet which saps our energy to the extent that we feel weak and unfit for our customary duties.

Ways of serving the lamb chop and pineapple diet may be varied so that the two foods will not become monotonous. Both may be broiled, or roasted, or the pineapple may be eaten as it comes from the can.

One woman who lost weight consistently on this diet, adhered to the following method of serving.

Breakfast: One lamb chop broiled and two slices of pineapple; coffee, preferably plain, but one lump of sugar may be added if one wishes the morning cup sweetened.

Luncheon: Place one lamb chop on a broiler and cook for eight minutes without turning. Turn and cover with a slice of Hawaiian pineapple. Broil eight minutes more and serve on hot platter. A glass of pineapple juice may be served with this luncheon. (This is available now in cans.)

Dinner: Roast two lamb chops and two slices of pineapple in a self-baster, which allows the juice of the chops to permeate the pineapple; coffee without cream or sugar.

Physicians advise that reducing be done slowly so that the body may accustom itself gradually to the changes. One-fourth of a pound a day is sufficient to lose, so if after a few days on the diet, it is discovered that weight is being lost too rapidly, it would be well to add other foods temporarily so that one-fourth of a pound a day will be the average loss. A pound of fat is equal to about 4,000 calories. Therefore in losing a fourth of a pound each day we are decreasing our diet 1,000 calories, which is sufficient.

From the physiological standpoint, it is suggested that one weigh every other day, so that one can keep "tabs" on the pound so that the restrictions involved by the diet, will seem worth while.

Coolidge Will Not Visit Michigan

At last the much mooted question of where President Coolidge will spend his vacation has been settled to the satisfaction of himself and possible disgruntling of a number of propaganda peddlers who were almost certain he was bound for Northern Michigan. Of course it would have been splendid if our good president had decided to arrange his vacation so as to come to Michigan but it seems he wanted a more altitude country so he has chosen the Black Hills of Dakota. There in that wild and woolly western country no doubt he will receive a wonderful relaxation from the blistering cares and heavy responsibilities of the office. A large state building in the Hills has been dedicated to his use and telegraph connections with Washington no doubt will be rigged up at once with a private line. This we imagine would be exceedingly up-hill business as conversation unless in code would be very hard to protect. This locality is the state game reserve of South Dakota and consists of 125,000 acres covered with rough timber and a virgin growth of underbrush. It is in the mountains and the lakes and streams are abundantly supplied with fish; all kinds of wild game are plentiful and it is expected the Coolidge fishing rod will be very busy. It is 14 miles from the nearest railroad (Chicago and Northwestern) and practically isolated from the world. This is the Sioux Indian country and full of legends of the days of bloody Sitting Bull and his tribesmen. Here the President's party will consist of approximately fifty people, and along with the rest the secret service men will have to dog his footsteps night or day. A big Lincoln automobile is being prepared for him with the United States coat of arms on its side, and there will be other machines for his use. Verily the United States takes good care of its chief executive.

Be Careful About The Flag

In using the old flag of this country it is quite important how you use it and for the benefit of those who might be interested we wish to say the national colors should never be used for advertising purposes although we often see cases where it looked that way.

The flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset, or between such hours as may be designated by proper authority. It should be displayed on national and state holidays and on historic and special occasions. The flag should always be raised briskly and lowered ceremoniously.

When carried in a procession with another flag or flags, the flag of the United States should be either on the marching right, i. e., the flag's own right, or when there is a line of other flags the flag of the United States may be in front of the center of that line.

When displayed with another flag against a wall from crossed staffs, the flag of the United States should be on the right,, the flag's own right, and its staff should be in front of the staff of the other flag.

When a number of flags are grouped and displayed from staffs the flag of the United States should be in the center at the highest point of the group. When flags of state or cities or pennants of societies are flown on the same halyard with the flag of the United States, the national flag should be always at the peak. When flown from adjacent staffs the flag of the United States should be hoisted first. No flag or pennant should be placed above or to the right of the flag of the United States.

When the flags of two or more nations are displayed they should be flown from separate staffs of the same height and the flags should be of approximately equal size. (International usage forbids display of the flag of one nation above that of another in time of peace.)

When the flag is displayed from a staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from the window sill, balcony or front of building, the union of the flag should go clear to the head of the staff unless the flag is half mast.

When the flag of the United States is displayed in a manner other than being flown from a staff it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or out. When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union should be uppermost and the flag's own right; i. e., to the observer's left. When displayed in a window it should be displayed the same way; that is, with the union or blue field to the left of the observer in the street. When festoons, rosettes or drapings of blue, white or red are desired, bunting should be used, but never the flag.

When displayed over the middle of the street, as between buildings, the flag of the United States should be suspended vertically with the union to the north in an east-and-west street, or to the east in a north-and-south street.

When used on a speaker's platform, the flag should be displayed above and behind the speaker. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk nor to drape over the front of the platform. If flown from a staff it should be on the speaker's right.

When used in unveiling a statue or monument, the flag should not be allowed to fall to the ground but should be carried aloft to wave out, forming a distinctive feature during the remainder of the ceremony.

When flown from half staff, the flag is first hoisted to the peak and then lowered to the half staff position, but before lowering the flag for the day it is again raised to the peak. On Memorial day, May 30, the flag is displayed at half staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset, for the nation lives and the flag is the symbol of the living nation.

When used to cover a casket the flag should be placed so that the union is at the head and over the left shoulder. The flag should not be lowered into the grave nor allowed to touch the ground. The casket should be carried foot first.

When the flag is displayed in church it should be from a staff placed at the congregation's right as they face the clergyman. The service flag, the state flag, or other flag, should be at the left of the congregation. If in the chancel, the flag of the United States should be placed on the clergyman's right as he faces the congregation and other flags on his left.

When the flag is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should not be cast aside or used in any way that might be viewed as disrespectful to the national colors, but should be destroyed as a whole, preferably by burning or by some other method in harmony with the reverence and respect we owe the emblem representing our country.

Final Borer Survey Commenced In State

Final inspections of corn land throughout the borer infested area of the state were commenced this week by inspectors in the 23 counties affected to determine those farmers who are eligible for the extra labor award and in what amount. Under the provisions of the Federal Corn Borer Act, farmers who comply with the control regulations will be compensated for their extra labor in an amount not to exceed $2 per acre.

Preliminary surveys of premises in the area have been made by inspectors during the past few weeks to advise farmers what further work, if any, was necessary to meet the requirements. Final inspectors will continue until every farm in the quarantined region where corn was grown last year is passed on. The test for successful inspection is a clean surface.

Application forms for payment have been supplied to the inspectors which will be filled out in conjunction with the farmer in each case. The number of acres in corn last year which were cleaned up and the extra cost per acre will be stated on the blank. By extra cost per acre is meant the labor and expense, not to exceed $2 per acre, which the farmer incurred incident to the clean-up above the normal cost of his usual farm operations.

The form will be certified to by the farmer and sent in by the inspector for payment. Payments will be made with a minimum of delay from Washington.

Hay Days To Tell Better Crops Story

The method of handling hay which has been found to be most efficient in saving the leaves and finer stems will be shown in 30 Michigan counties this summer, through a series of special hay days sponsored by the M. S. C.

This method also saves a great deal of labor in handling the crop, according to the college crops department. The ordinary machinery used in haying is used in the demonstrations, and sweet clover and red clover hay may be handled this way as well as alfalfa.

Occasionally with good weather hay that is cut in the forenoon of one day may be hauled the afternoon of the next day, and in nearly every case the hay is ready to put in the barn the second day after cutting. If rain falls on the hay, the swaths are rolled over with a side delivery rake and curing goes on rapidly.

The schedules for Hay days is: June 17, Kalamazoo, Livingston, Branch, and Monroe counties; June 21, Kent, Barry, and Washtenaw; June 23, Ionia, Clinton, Genesee, and Macomb; June 28, Newago, Muskegon, Saginaw and St. Clair; June 30, Mecosta, Bay Huron and Sanilac; July 5, Missaukee, Alpena, and Manistee; July 7, Charlevoix; July 8, Emmet August 2, Hillsdale and Cass; August 4, Calhoun; and August 10 Ottawa and Midland.

HIGHWAY TO TOP GREAT HORSESHOE SAND DUNE

Great Horseshoe dune is the only piece of Lake Michigan frontage between Black Lake and Port Sheldon that is still undeveloped. Five years ago there was not a summer home between the famous Lakewood farm of George Getz, and Port Sheldon. Today the owners of Great Horseshoe dune are contemplating a plan of development that will complete the row of cottages along Lake Michigan's shore covering the several miles between Black lake and Pigeon lake. Not only is the dune unusual in shape, but a trail leading across its top affords an excellent view of Lake Michigan and surrounding country. When developed the trail will be made into a highway.

PATRICK HENRY DESK IS RELIC

According to tradition the desk is none other than the speaker's stand that once occupied the place of honor in the Virginia House of Burgesses, in Colonial days.

And how in the world did it get to Lansing? Oh, that's a real story! Originally it is said to have been an Episcopal pulpit at Williamsburg. The House of Burgesses was meeting in a church there until the Virginians built their first capitol. The wardens, not thinking they needed the old pulpit any longer, sought means of disposing of it. It was too good a piece of cabinet work to destroy—one can see that. Dispose of it they did. Now the Virginians would like to get this old relic back—only they can't!

Many Virginian families were settling Ohio about that time, and it was quite natural that through their influence the old canopy desk should be brought to Marietta, then capital of the Northwest Territory, for governmental use.

History repeated itself in 1805. After statehood, the Ohioans, in turn, fitted up a new capitol. They didn't need the old canopy desk any more. Now, that was the very year that the Michigan territorial government was made homeless by the Detroit fire. The heart-strings of the Ohioans vibrated in sympathy for the fire sufferers. Among many other things, so goes the tradition, that they donated the fire sufferers, they sent along this old dais, to be used in the council-house. It served the Legislative Council and the House of Representatives in Detroit for more than 40 years. As the sessions were annual, the old hair-cloth chair that went with it got a lot of wear. It shows it, too.

Then the desk and chair were brought to Lansing.

Under the Patrick Henry scarlet canopy, majestic as the Gaeckwar of Baroda upon his throne, sat Alexander W. Buel, Speaker of the first House of Representatives in Lansing. And over the desk of William Fenton, then Lieutenant-Governor, was suspended the famous "golden" spread-eagle. This old golden eagle—made of wood—is also preserved in the museum. It perches above the old canopy desk.

CZECHS HONOR WOMAN AT WESTERN NORMAL

Dr. Nancy E. Scott, professor of European History at Western State Normal school, has been distinctly honored by the Czecho-Slovakian government in the granting of a fellowship for research in Charles university at Prague. Under the direction of the department of education of Czecho-Slovakia, Dr. Scott will make a study of some phase of the government of this progressive state. Dr. Scott is one of five persons in the United States to whom these fellowships have been granted.

ALL LAKES BUT ONTARIO BELOW AVERAGE LEVELS

Below-average levels for all the Great Lakes, except Lake Ontario, is noted in the report of the United States Lake Survey office here, headed by Col. G. B. Pillsbury.

Lake Superior is 0.03 feet below the average stage of April of the last 10 years and 1.28 below the high stage of April, 1860.

VIGILANTES ORGANIZE TO GUARD OAKLAND BANKS

Oakland county banks have organized a body of vigilantes. Each man will be provided with a $115 outfit, including two rifles, a revolver and ammunition. Each bank will have the protection of from three to six vigilantes. Rewards of $1,000 are offered for capture of a bandit.

AUTOS JINX FOR LAKE STEAMERS

Arrangements are being made in the copper country for the salvaging of the steamer City of Bangor, which went aground on Keweenaw Point in the storm of November 30, 1926, when 50 seamen were saved by the Eagle Harbor coast guard. The Bangor was loaded with 250 automobiles bound from Detroit to Duluth. The cars were removed during the winter at great expense to the underwriters, and the ship will be removed from her position high on the beach.

A large hole, pounded into her stern by the winter's storms, will be patched and the ship lifted from her fastenings, so that she can be shoved into deep water and floated. A guard has been standing over her all winter, and visitors at the site report there still is considerable ice on her decks.

Automobile cargoes are beginning to be looked upon as jinx cargo by marine men. Early this season the steamer Westland went aground with a cargo of automobiles on Spectacle reef. Tugs removed the automobiles from the ship, which suffered a huge rip in her cargo hold. The steamer Parks Foster was commissioned to take the Westland's place, and she, too, met with trouble, running aground near Cheboygan.

Unless the Foster can be released in the near future, her cargo, too, will be removed by tugs.

KEWEENAW WATERWAY IMPROVEMENTS ARE PLANNED BY U. S.

Extensive improvement of the Keweenaw waterway is planned for the current season. The breakwaters at both lake entries will be strengthened and considerable dredging will be done at various places in the channel.

At the canal entry, an extension of 240 linear feet will be added to the rock work already done on the east breakwater, and about the same number of feet to the west breakwater. The work on the west breakwater will be done under contract, but on the east breakwater by government workmen and equipment. During the last few summers, the rock work on the west breakwater has been extended 1,700 linear feet and on the east breakwater 789 feet.

The breakwater improvements at the Portage river entry will consist of a new concrete top on 912 linear feet of the breakwater. This work also will be done by the government.

DECLARES CIVILIZATION OF WEST IS NOT FOR ORIENT

"East is East and West is West, and ne'er the twain shall meet."

In these famous and oft-quoted lines, Rudyard Kipling raised a barrier against the successful co-operation of western civilization and the Orient, adding to the difficulties already existing because of fundamental differences in temperament.

This is the view held by Yeshwantaro P. Bhosale, a student from central India, who opposes the advance of western culture in his native land. Although he has come to Michigan State College as a studen,t and intends to return to India after his graduation, he believes that the Occident would do better not to force its own civilization upon a race not suited for it.

The painted slicker has descended upon the University of Michigan campus. TRAVERSE CITY STUDENT MAKES RECORD IN CLASS

Completing his high school course in three years and finishing with a three-year average of 95.6 in his class room work, Ernest Townsend has been declared valedictorian of this year's senior class at Traverse City high school. Following close behind him is Ruth Green, salutatorian, with an average of 94.4. Honorable mention goes to Elizabeth Carey, with a 93.9 average, and Dave Aaron, 93.1.

Townsend gained this honor under an unusual handicap. Entering high school at an age when most students are through, he stuck to his work, carrying six or seven subjects each semester. Besides doing his class room work in a most creditable manner, he found time to engage in almost every activity the school had to offer.

He is editor-in-chief of the annual, a member of the student council, belonged to the 1925 football team, took part in the senior play, and was elected mayor in the recent boys' week activities.

BLIND GIRL WHO WON DIPLOMA SOON TO SEE SAY DOCTORS

Blind since birth, Jeanette Maris, Junior College freshman, of Grand Rapids, soon will be able to see, in the opinion of the specialists who have been treating her. They are confident the use of her right eye is about to be accomplished.

Under the treatment of Dr. Perry Heath, of Detroit, and Dr. Walter R. Parker, professor of ophthalmology at the University of Michigan, the young woman has submitted to six operations on the eye, three of them in the space of a year. Now her vision has been pronounced perfect, and the long process of creating visual memories, by which every person is enabled to see, remains as the final accomplishment.

Despite the handicap, Miss Maris succeeded in obtaining sufficient credits, except one, at the end of her fifth semester in high school, to receive her diploma, having completed work which customarily requires four years.

BRAVERY MEDALS URGED FOR 3 MEN

Answering a chattering cry for help, three employees of the Muskegon Continental Motors Corporation plant risked their lives in the icy waters of Muskegon Lake two years ago last February to rescue John Kooyer from drowning, and application has been made for Carnegie medals for the act.

D. O. Alverson, C. E. DeWolf, and Foreman James Delaney, of the heat treatment department, responded to the cry of a man who had fallen through an air hole in the ice. Procuring planks, they ran to the lake and in the first hurried rescue attempts Delaney also broke through. DeWolf, after slipping through several times, finally swung a plank into position, and with the aid of a rope he and Alverson finally brought both men back on to solid ice. With the water freezing their clothing into a stiff mass, DeWolf and Alverson carried the unconscious men to the Continental first aid room.

RAG RUG WEAVER MAKES FLOOR COVER FOR HENRY FORD

H. L. Harden, of Ypsilanti, has woven more than 400 yards of old-fashioned "hit and miss" rag carpet for Henry Ford, 90 yards of which went to the latter's Wayside Inn in Massachusetts. At present he has ready for delivery a large roll of rag carpet for Ford's home at Dearborn. The last time Henry Ford called at Harden's little shop behind his home on East Cross street he declared it was the best equipped shop of its size he ever had visited and that Harden did more fancy weaving and more patterns than he ever had seen on a hand loom.

Harden, who was born in Mercer county, Ohio, has woven rag carpet since he was 13 years old. An old neighbor lady gave him his first loom and helped him with his first order, which was for 30 yards. Carpet warp in those days came in skeins and had to be spooled. He learned how to pick the lease, warp the carpet and put it through the gears, and the same customer ordered 30 more yards. From that time on, for 48 years, Harden says, he has been busy.

DROP IN MINT OIL PRICE FAILS TO CURB CROP

Although the price for mint oil slumped last fall to about three dollars a pound, which is under production costs, and Cass county growers suffered heavy losses, they still have faith in the industry. It is believed that even a larger acreage than in 1926 will be harvested in the coming fall. In 1925 growers received the unprecedented price of $25 or more a pound, bringing wealth to a large number in this vicinity. Mint oil was so valuable that year that it was carefully guarded in special bank vaults, some banks having as high as $250,000 worth on hand at one time.

DOWAGIAC AGED NEGRO IS WRITER OF SCENARIO

As familiar as the old landmarks that dot Dowagiac's business district—seeming almost a part of them—is "Fabe" Martin, a Negro who is beginning to show his more than 80 years. A fair day finds him seated or leaning in a place of vantage in the center of the business district, and to everywhere he is known as "Fabe," a friendly, interesting, kindly soul.

Many have read his poems, which have been published rather widely over the nation, but few there are who know that this man, now slightly stooped, and who must be nearer to 90 years than 80, still writes movie scenarios that are being accepted.

JERSEY BREEDERS TO SET SHOW DATE

Breeders and agricultural agents from 10 counties boosting western Michigan's first Jersey cattle parish show, will meet June 27 to set the date for the exhibition which will be held in Kent county, probably at the West Michigan State Fair grounds.

The breeders may accept the offer of the fair association for use of its buildings providing the show does not conflict with the fair, but some of them believe the cattle and other exhibits would attract more attention if the show could be held in a building nearer the center of the city.

4 BROTHERS IN IRON ARE WED TO FOUR SISTERS

Four brothers of the George Borns family of Iron River, are married to four sisters of the A. Olson family. All four marriages were performed since 1924 at the same place and by the same justice of the peace, J. P. Curley, at the city hall. The families are neighbors in Iron River township. The sisters are Dora, Amy, Ruth and Effie Olson, who married Theodore, Archie, Charles and Oliver Borns.

Miss Effie Olson and Oliver Borns, who were married a few days ago, are the youngest of each family.

HUGE GAIN MARKS ELECTRICITY USE

Again breaking all previous records for the use of electric energy in the state, the industries and homes of Michigan required an average of 10,682,000 kilowatt hours—or 14,100,000 horsepower hours—every day in March for light and power, according to a report from the United States geological survey. This represents an increase of 12 per cent over the daily use of electricity in March, 1926.

Each succeeding month of this year, for which reports are available, has witnessed the establishment of a new record for the employment of electricity in the state. In January, the daily consumption figure crossed the ten-million kilowatt hour mark for the first time, and in February the record became ten and one-half million.

The spring floods, which used to carry great numbers of logs to the sawmills, coursed through the water turbine wheels of the hydro-electric stations to produce more electricity than ever before was produced by water-power in the state in a similar period. High voltage transmission lines, interconnecting the water power plants with steam generating plants, and the communities served, made possible the use of an average of 3,154,000 kilwatt hours of hydro-electricity a day during March. This is 36 per cent greater than the production of electricity by water power in the same month in 1926.

As a result of this inter-connection of the two sources of electric power supply, the steam plants generated less electricity in March than they did in February. The daily steam production average was 7,428,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 7,855,000 for February.

POLISH WOMAN AGED 101 WILL VISIT IN MUSKEGON

Mme. Frida Ribaloff, 101 years old, a resident of Velosk, Grodna, Poland, will visit this country in the near future as a guest of her grandson, Sergeant William Stern, U. S. A., recruiting officer stationed at Muskegon. Mme. Ribaloff was denied passage two months ago because of her advanced age. Sergeant Stern returned recently from Chicago, where he secured a six months' visa for his aged grandparent and also the consent of the steamship company to allow her passage on one of its liners.

ALBINO MINK WORTH $5,000 IS ADDED TO FUR FARM GROUP

A pure white, or Albino mink has been added to the collection of animals at the Mt. Forest fur farm, 30 miles northwest of Bay City.

This adds to the variety of muskrat, common mink, chinchilla rabbits and foxes which make up the population of this tract of natural wilderness.

The mink has not the slightest trace of color about him, his pink eyes being the only offset against the pure white. He is about two and a half years old and is larger than any of the other mink.

Milton S. Bangs, manager of the farm company, has the mink insured for $2,000, but says he would not take five times that amount for him, and that he will gladly pay $5,000 for another white mink.

COPPER MINE SUNK IN 1846, REOPENED

The extensive mining exploration inaugurated on the Keweenaw peninsula is rapidly taking shape, and another mine, closed since 1905, is being reopened. This is supplementary to the work on lands where the first dividend paying mine in the Michigan copper fields opened in the late 40's. The most recent venture is the reopening of the old Crocker shaft, originally put down in 1846. Of late years this region has won fame as a tourists' haven, but seemingly it is destined to return to the ranks of important copper fields.

The mining of silver never has received the serious attention given copper here, though millions of dollars' worth of this metal have been marketed from the region in the past decade. All of the mines contain more or less silver.

4 FROM STATE CHOSEN FOR WASHINGTON TRIIP

Four Michigan boys and girls, champions in various lines of club work, have been chosen as delegates to the national Four-H club congress, to be held in Washington, D. C., the latter part of June.

The delegates are: Leona Gale, Ypsilanti, Washtenaw county; Anna Flaschberger, Iron River, Iron county; Erwin Williams, Sault Ste. Marie, Chippewa county; and James Meek, Hillsdale, Hillsdale county.

SUMMER HOME BOOM ON IN ANTRIM COUNTY

Antrim county has within its borders now 460 summer homes, and this number will be increased to 500 before the end of the summer, according to a count just finished by the Development League of Western Michigan.

Of the 460, 65 were occupied for the first time in 1926, and 40 more already are contracted for, many of them completed, to be occupied for the first time this year.

3 WOMEN OCCUPY PULPITS IN CHURCHES OF CHARLOTTE

As the home of women pastors, Charlotte enjoys a unique position in the religious world for a city of its size. Three women ministers, actively in charge of pastorates, are residing in Charlotte, and one of these is a descendant of British aristocracy.

Mrs. Eva M. Ickes, pastor of the United Brethren church, has been an ordained elder for about 20 years. Her girlhood home was in Hastings.

Mrs. Ickes has had a varied experience in missionary and evangelistic work, being located for 11 years in Alberta, Canada.

STATE GOES TO 5TH IN EXPORTS

The transition of Michigan from an agricultural state to an export manufacturing state is best shown by figures of exports from Michigan for 1926, furnished by the Detroit District office, United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Total exports for 1926 from Michigan included 61 different items, valued at $262,594,218. This is an increase of more than $15,000,000 over the 1925 export figure of $247,210,727, and nearly double the 1924 exports, which were valued at $177,876,654. From eighth place in 1924, Michigan has jumped to fifth place among exporting states in 1926.

Nearly 80 per cent of Michigan's total exports is credited to the automobile industry. Passenger cars, automobile parts, trucks and buses, and tractors and parts valued at $109,024,187, were exported in 1926. The bulk of this was Detroit production. Practically all of the electrical apparatus, including electrical refrigerators, valued at $2,896,986, came from Detroit.

Detroit being the center in this state for the manufacture of medicinal and pharmaceutical preparations, can claim credit for practically all the export of these commodities, valued at $2,968,859. The manufacture of adding and calculating machines can also be credited to Detroit. This item amounted to $2,390,546. Rubber tires valued at $1,804,723 are exported from Michigan. This amount can be credited to Detroit alone.

Detroit is rapidly assuming importance as a meat packing center, and it is safe to credit 50 per cent or $587,282 of the state's total export of hams and bacons.

BUD MOTHS MAKE RAID ON BLOOMING ORCHARDS

Fruit growers in Western Michigan report considerable damage this spring from bud moth, a pest which attacks the buds and blossoms in the larvae stage.

Prof. R. H. Pettit, Michigan State College entomologist, says the presence of the pest is first observed when small brown worms are found eating the buds. These worms are the larvae of the bud moth. Arsenical sprays applied as "pink" or "pre-pink" sprays are effective in controlling the pest, Prof. Pettit said.

Members of the Detroit Chapter, Izaak Walton League, went on record as being opposed to the proposal to permit the use of gill nets on inland lakes in Michigan, which is now before the state conservation commission at Lansing.

An attempt will be made to dissuade the commission from passing the regulation, as it is believed it will greatly diminish the number of game fish in the lakes.

PRINTER MUSES OVER OLD DAYS

Kokomo Philips, freeman, vagabond, 72 years behind him, sat in a Detroit office coughing and baffled.

There was a stir when he went into the composing room. Old printers nodded. Apprentices stared. Kokomo examined the bulletin board. Much of what was on it could have meant but little to him now, but the bulletin board to a veteran printer is as the stage mail box to an actor. It is the first thing he heads for.

His cough had not responded to six months' treatment in a hospital. His bafflement was physical.

"You know," he said, querulously, "I couldn't climb into a box car now even if the door was wide open. I might get a ride in an automobile, but I can't walk out as far as the open road."

It wasn't always like that with Philips, tramp printer extraordinary and known in the United States wherever men join type to tell Smith, of New York, the queer thing that had happened to Jones, of Los Angeles, or the other way around.

Kokomo has been reducing the news to type for almost half a century. He has worked briefly in nearly every newspaper shop in this country, and at times in Mexico and Canada.

But never was he fettered by regularity. Never was he within arm's length of permanence. Some men are content to make their choice from the same case for year upon year, but not Philips. Kokomo forever and successfully dodged the chains.

A night was enough in some shops, a week in others—long enough to gain a stake and a rest. Then the everlasting fever would drive him on until the smell of inked rollers from a passing window would draw him indoors again.

San Antonio, in Kokomo's opinion, beats all the towns in America he has seen.

"Of course, we got paid in those days on Saturday, and on Monday we never had a dime," Kokomo mused. "There was a lot of liquor then, but I thought I had found a way to beat it.

"One Saturday when I was working in Montana, I took $5 out of my pay, put it in an envelope and mailed it to myself so that I would get it Monday. Well, sir, Monday came, and I went to the postoffice. The letter wasn't there. I went to the favorite saloon, and there I found a pal of mine setting up the last round of drinks and pushing my $5 across the bar. I had told him about my plan, and he had gone to the postoffice and claimed the letter before I got there."

MEN COMPETING FOR HONORS IN COOKING ART

Do women possess some inherent skill that makes them mistress of culinary arts and excludes men from the province of the kitchen?

Quite the contrary, men students at Michigan State college claim. And they are undertaking to prove their theory, six of them, by enrolling in one of the cooking courses offered under the home economics division at the college. According to Miss Irma H. Gross, instructor, the men are developing into quite as accomplished cooks as their co-ed classmates, and show no indications of inferiority as they invade the domain long held sacred to women.

RICH COPPER DEPOSITS FOUND IN OLD MILL SAND

Old sands washed from a copper mill 50 years ago on the outskirts of Calumet were assayed recently and found to contain from 35 to 40 pounds of copper to the ton of sand. As a result of the assay, preparations are being made to remill the sand and extract the copper. The mill was the first one ever built to take copper from the rock brought out of Calumet's mines. It was abandoned when mills were built at Lake Linden. Similar copper-bearing sands in the vicinity of Lake Linden and Tamarack Mills are being reclaimed for their copper, but the average per ton is not as high as the old Calumet sands.

DEAN OF DUTCH CHURCH PASTOR KENT RESIDENT

The dean of ministers of the Christion Reformed Church of America, in which 21,681 families are affiliated, is Rev. Jacob Noordewier, of Grand Rapids, a self-styled "pure Dutchman."

Rev. Noordewier, who came to Grand Rapids in 1867, 10 years after the Christian Reformed church was established, was ordained in Grand Rapids as one of the first five ministers of that denomination, of which he is the sole survivor. The Christian Reformed church was founded in 1857, when it separated from the Reformed church.

LAST DAUGHTER OF REVOLUTION

A daughter of a Minute Man who crossed the Delaware with Washington and witnessed the surrender of Burgoyne and Cornwallis, Mrs. Helen Barrett, of Richland, is believed to be the only living actual Daughter of the American Revolution. Mrs. Barrett is celebrating her ninety-sixth birthday.

Unless Mrs. Mary Arnold, of Natchez, Miss., whose father came to the United States with Lafayette, is still living, Mrs. Barrett can claim the honor of being the last daughter of a Revolutionary War soldier. Last year she shared that distinction with the Southern woman.

Her father, Johannes Van Dolson, born in 1752, was 78 years old when she was born, the last of his 27 children. He died when she was only seven, but she still remembers when he took her by the hand and led her to the village church. Her grandfather, Johannes Van Dolson, born in 1694, lived to be 111.

1,000 ARE ORGANIZED TO FIGHT FOREST FIRES

Three organizations in Muskegon county will enlist a total of 1,000 fire fighters as part of the national "forest week" observance. The 25 Boy Scout troops of the county will provide 600 volunteers, with the Walton league chapter and the farm bureau recruiting the remaining 400 members.

BRAVE COLD OF RIVER FOR FORBIDDEN DRINK

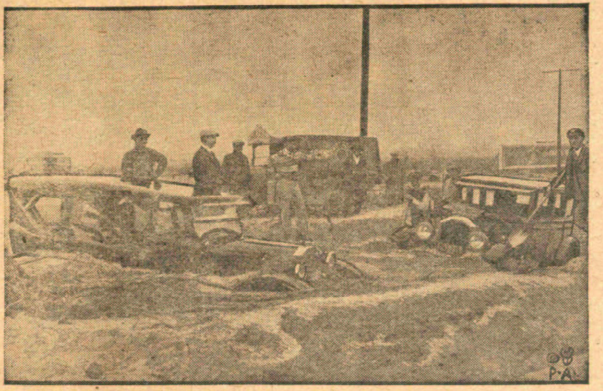
Bottles of Canadian beer, dumped in the St. Clair river at Port Huron by prohibition agents, tempted two men to brave the cold waters of the stream without even bathing suits. That the men had no commercial ideas was evidenced by the fact that each diver drank his beer when he brought it to the surface.

When arrested the pair admitted they were diving for beer. The men, John Sockey, who gave his residence as Ireland, and Moses Rodney, who said his home was in England, were taken to jail.

Mrs. Emma Lang, pastor of the Pentecostal Church of God, was ordained 27 years ago and came to Charlotte last July. She held pastorates for several years each in Detroit, Port Huron and Gladwin, Mich. Mrs. Lang is descended from English royalty, her father's mother being a cousin of the late Queen Victoria.

Miss Fern C. Wheeler is serving her fourth year as pastor of the Gresham charge of the Methodist Episcopal church. She had the pastorate of the church at Camden, Mich., for two years.

"Freak Storm" Hits California



Residents of Southern California are just about recovering from the effects of a "freak storm" which, accompanied by terrific hail and lightning, did considerable damage. The storm was general from San Francisco to the Mexican border but seemingly spent its fury on the immediate coast sections without traversing very far inland.

The picture above shows tourists with their autos marooned in a flood of mud between El Centro and San Diego.

FARM INCOME ISSUE RAISED

How the farmer's income may be increased and the standards of rural life raised, will be considered from every possible angle during Country Life Week, July 31 to August 6, when more than 17 different state, national and international organizations will convene at Michigan State college, bringing several hundred delegates to the Campus.

President Kenyon L. Butterfield characterizes the occasion as "the most notable gathering ever held by those interested in rural life." William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture; Judge Florence Allen, of the Ohio supreme court; Professor H. C. Taylor, rural economist at Northwestern university; Dr. C. J. Galpin, rural sociologist of the United States department of agriculture, and Father Edwin V. O'Hara, of Oregon, noted leader in rural life betterment, will be the American speakers.

Foreign nations will be represented by delegates to the International Country Life conference, who will come from Europe to speak at East Lansing. Among those already scheduled on the program are Henry Morris of England, Paul DeVuyst of Belgium, Dr. V. Lindquist of Germany, Entienne Wiess of Hungary, and Jacob Lange of Denmark.

TRICK WHISKY SHIELD IS FOUND WHEN 3 NABBED

With the arraignment of three men before United States Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd, of Detroit, the existence of a specially constructed wholesale liquor warehouse in Ecorse, fitted with sliding panels and steel doors, barbed-wire protections and specially constructed boat wells, became known.

The men arrested gave their names as Floyd Wilson, Henry Sroth and Jack Gattin.

More than 400 cases of beer and 52 half barrels of the same fluid were confiscated. The three men were released on $1,000 bail each.

DETROITER ASSIGNED TO CUBAN DIPLOMATIC POST

Leo J. Kenna, of Detroit, now United States consul at Liverpool, Eng., has been commissioned consul general and assigned to Havana, Cuba. Another Michigan man in the foreign service, Joseph C. Satterthwaite, of Tecumseh, who is at present on duty at the department in Washington, was assigned as vice-consul at Guadalajara, Mexico.

AGED BACHELORS TWINS

William Jeremiah Clark and James Azariah Clark, 75-year-old bachelor twins, residing near Jamestown, are among the oldest of Ottawa county's pioneers.

"Bill" and "Jim" as they are known popularly, were born in Erie, Pa., but while quite young were brought to Grandville, Kent county, their father taking up the farm on which they now reside.

BOAT INVENTOR'S SON IS HEAD OF HUGE MERGER

Permission to incorporate and issue securities aggregating $9,100,000 with which to finance a merger of warehouse, railroad and water-front terminal facilities held by corporations in four states and valued at $17,000,000 was asked of the public utilities commission by the Terminals & Transportation Company of America.

Headquarters and general offices of the new company are in Detroit, where approximately $8,000,000 of the property affected by the merger is located.

A. Miller McDougall, of Detroit, son of the inventor of the Whaleback freight boat, is president of the new company.

ASSESSED VALUATION BOOSTED AT MARSHALL

The board of review completed the fixing of assessed valuation in Marshall. The figures show an increase of $91,925 over last year. The personal valuation is $988,675 against $953,650 last year, and real estate, $3,232,875, against $3,175,975 last year.

AQUARIUM FISH PROVE PROBLEM

Of all the living exhibits in captivity on Belle Isle none are so difficult to keep alive, or require so much care in handling as the fish.

Take this statement from Jack Timmons, curator of the city's zoo and aquarium, who is charged with obtaining and caring for all the animals and birds, and 2,600 members of the fish family in the fish house.

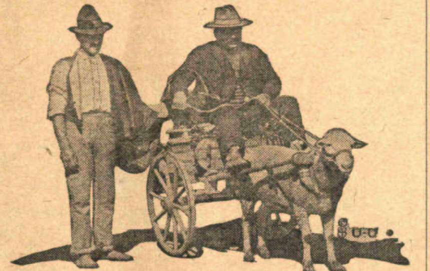
Fish, he says, are so constituted and are of such fixed habits, that they must have extremely delicate care and must be placed in containers as near alike as possible to their natural environment, or they cannot long survive.

In the Belle Isle aquarium, which was built in 1904, the fish are housed in an as life-prolonging manner as is possible under the circumstances. Yet, the exhibits die off rapidly, and Mr. Timmons and his assistants must travel far and near to replenish the supply.

The problem of supplementing the fish from time to time is not the only bothersome duty connected with operating an up-to-date aquarium. The water, in which the fish swim about, must be nurtured and nursed, and tempered to a degree to make the piscatorial guests feel as much at home as possible. Salt water specimens naturally require salt water, and Mr. Timmons makes an annual trip to the Atlantic ocean to procure it. He just returned several days ago from Woods Hole, Mass., with a 10,000-gallon carload of it. Two 10,000-gallon underground reserve cisterns in the back of the fishery are kept filled with this salt water at all times.

Two trips a year are made to the Atlantic seaboard to replenish the Detroit aquarium's supply of salt water specimens. One of these is made in the spring and the other in the fall. The fish are netted and brought to Detroit in a number of small tanks specially fitted with air pipes and installed in a special car. The fresh water variety are, of course, supplemented with fish from the waters of the Great Lakes, and rivers of Michigan, as well as the state hatcheries at Harrieta and Paris, Mich. Many of these are turned loose in the Belle Isle canal, which is closed at both ends, and allowed to enjoy comparative freedom, until an immediate need of replenishment arises, then fish traps are brought into use to procure them.

No "Speed Birds" In The Azores



Traffic in the Azores needs no speed laws to regulate it. Of course, that's due to the fact that the natives there are quiet and easy-going, preferring to "stick to" primitive methods of transportation rather than risk their necks on our modern "gas-buggies."

MICHIGAN MAN IS INVENTOR OF MACHINE TO PLUCK COTTON

An electric cotton picker has been invented by C. J. Winter, a Big Rapids newspaper man, and a patent has been applied for. Winter traveled through the south for years as a salesman and during that period saw the great need for a mechanical cotton picker. He had heard of several inventions along that line, but none that were successful. So he analyzed the picking operation, the peculiarities of the plant and of those who must do the work. He made several models that partly satisfied, but not till 1926 did he perfect the present machine.

Winter reasoned that since cotton ripens over a period of two or three months, blossoms and ripe bolls being found on the plant at the same time, only a picker by which the operator could harvest such bolls as were ready to pick would be successful. Then, too, it must be inexpensive and light, so a man could walk between the rows of cotton carrying the picker.

Power to operate the picker is supplied by a small automobile, truck or tractor that will run between the rows of cotton, or that will straddle the average row.

Winter estimates that his picker is more than five times as fast as hand-picking, and claims to have ended the need of stooping, now the bane of cotton picking.

PILLARS ARE MEMORIAL

Four beautiful pillars of field stone have been placed at the entrance to Duncan park, Grand Haven, by the Women's club in memory of the donor, the late Mrs. Martha Duncan.

This park of natural hills, old pines, beeches and other native trees and shrubs, contains about 10 acres in the heart of the city. Especially interesting are its dunes and native flowers. One of the stipulations of the gift was that it must forever remain in its natural state.

To make the most of the juice in roasted fowl, turn the fowl on its breast instead of its back when roasting. By doing this the juices run into the breast instead of the back, making it deliciously moist.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

The Baccalaureate Sunday evening at the Congregational church was delivered to the Class of twenty-two members before a packed house by Rev. Jandy and his subject was "The Spirit of the Builders". speaking to the class with particular interest, since he himself is a Senior at Hillsdale College. He mentioned as an example the spirit of the builders of the Tribune Tower in Chicago, which is to stand for centuries, built on the solid rock of industry. He urged the class to fashion their life work along this line and to exercise temperance in all things. Excellent music was furnished by a picked choir from two churches with Mrs. Laura Meeks at the piano.

This issue of the Advocate is the second week of our 32nd year, and we hope the sheet will continue to be a little better as years go by. In September the present management will have concluded nine years of service as newsgatherers in this community. While the prospects for a small country paper are not what they once were, we are still optimistic, and we trust our friends who have helped to keep up the home paper by contributing news, will continue to do so. As to the linotype proposition, in some places it has not worked out as expected, and we find some linotype equipped papers have shrunken, which shows conclusively that so large an investment might not be safe here. This means an investment of over two thousand dollars which looks like thirty cents to the average farmer who has several thousands invested in implements, but the farmer is often obliged to make this sacrifice, whether the farm pays or loses We are not.

Death of Mrs. Kate Mosher

Mrs. Kate N Mosher of Hillsdale passed away on Wednesday, June 8th, at the late home on South Howell street from a second shock of paralysis sustained a few days previously. She would been 69 years of age in August and had resided in Hillsdale 30 years, having been born in Somerset Centre. Her husband Orrin Mosher, died in 1899. She is survived by one brofher, W. H. L. McCoutie of Jackson, one sister, Mrs. Jay Chandler of Jackson, one son, Hubert Mosher, at home, two grand-children, Marilyn and Virginia.

Funeral services are to be held Saturday, June 11th, at the late home at 1:00 p. m and at 2:30 p. m. at Somerset Centre church, Rev. Pellowe officiating and burial will be in the Randolph cemetery.

Mrs. Mosher was for years a prominent member of the W. C. T. U. and Pomona Grange, and for 20 years secretary of the Womans' Congress of the Hillsdale Fair.

Teachers Hired Here

At a meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday evening the following people were hired as teachers in the High School for the coming school year: Mrs. Lorene Jandy, who has an A. B. degree, from Maryville College, Tennessee. She has had one year's experience in High school work and for two years preceding her coming to North Adams, was secretary of President Spencer of Hillsdale College, and Assistant Registrar. She will have charge of the English.

John Agnew, who will receive an A. B. degree from Hillsdale College this Commencement, will have charge of the Mathematics. His home is in the southern part of this county.

Rudolph Cada, who has had 3 years in the University of Illinois and the present year in Hillsdale College, will receive a B. S. degree from that institution this commencement. He will have charge of the social studies. Mr. Cada's home is in Chicago. These three young people all come highly recommended, and this makes with Supt. R. C. Young four degree teachers, comprising the entire Junior and Senior teaching force of the High School.

M. S. C. Marking Its Seventieth Birthday

Turning back through the pages of history to trace development of the state's agricultural and industrial institutions, as well as the M. S. C. itself, M. S. C. is making its seventieth anniversary commencement this week with exercises of particular interest to all Michigan.

The oldest agricultural college has expanded it commencement program to provide material of state wide significance, taking the entire state into its "birthday party".

A pageant of historical background, under the title of "The Beginnings", will be shown on the campus on Friday and Saturday afternoons, June 10 and 11. This historical drama, as it is called, will review Michigan's story as a state, with particular reference to the agricultural side.

Commencement exercises proper are booked for Friday morning, June 10, with the other special features scattered over the entire week. More than 350 Seniors, the largest class in the history of the college, will receive degrees this year. Senator Simon D. Fess, of Ohio, noted statesman and lecturer, is to deliver the commencement address.

Friday was a busy day for the Sheriff's force, with activity divided between the Circus and the Corn Borer case in the Circuit Court. It has been said by those who should know, that no case in recent years has brought forth the number of interested spectators as did the case referred to. The case will require another day.

Wendell Hewitt, charged with petty larceny, was brought into Judge Guernsey's Court. Wendell, who is not yet 12 years of age, is not a stranger to the Judge. It is only the tender years of the defendant which kept him from the State School at Lansing.

John Mattson and Tony Caduto, runaways from the State School at Coldwater, were apprehended at Jonesville on Friday, and after spending one night with us, were returned to the school authorities on Saturday.

25 Years of the 20th Century LIMITED

June 15 marks the silver anniversary of the world's most famous train—the 20th Century Limited.

Operated continuously since 1902 on the restful water level route between New York and Chicago, the Century has become a national institution.

It has long been recognized as a great asset to American industry and commerce because its overnight service saves a business day in travelling between the nation's largest business centers.

The Century in a peculiar way typifies the spirit of American railroad achievement. It is the pride of the New York Central men who operate it and guard it night after night in its thousand-mile flight, and the standard bearer of a service known the world over as the highest development in railroad transportation.

Art Hoffman who is building roads on contract in Florida, reports that under arrangements made with him by the Marmon Company, auto manufacturers, he made a test run recently from Jacksonville to North Adams a distance of 1,105 miles to demonstrate the Marmon Six, and it has been proved that he lowered the record of the crack fast train between Jacksonville and Detroi by hours. Here is the schedule: Left Jacksonville at 4:30 a. m. June 3rd. Drove to Knoxville, Tennessee, a distance of 553 miles, arriving the same day at 7:00 p. m. Left Knoxville at 4:00 a. m. Saturday, June 4 drove to North Adams, a distance of 552 miles, arriving at 8:30 p. m. same day, actual running time 31 hours. Previous record 36 hours. The fastest time of the trip was from Jacksonville to Atlanta, a distance of 365 miles in 9 hours, total elapsed time. Remarkable run from Cincinnati to North Adams, 240 miles in 5½ hours. The trip from Florida required 95 gallons of gas averaging 11 to 12 miles per gallon which is a high average considering the hilly nature of the country in Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee.
